The prejudices of Dixon, Talmadge, Bilbo, Rankin, and all other race baiters are just as detrimental to the welfare of this country as are the eight saboteurs fighting for their lives.

AUG 1 1942

Yes, the Federal Government is attempting to break down the principle of segregation. It is attempting to do so by resorting to reason and America's sense of patriotism. So we must find sterner methods of causing them to conform.

There is no peace in the Southland and there will be no peace until racial bigots and all their ilk have been completely exterminated.

It is still early. We have been at war seven months, but they have been months of preparation for a distant and gigantic task ahead, rather than months of grim death and destruction. We have not yet begun to suffer as have most of the others in this war. Any estimate, then, of what total war will do to this country, is "extrapolation" of the most risky sort. Nevertheless American democracy has stood the strain well.

It is true there are bad spots and dangerous trends. But they have often been countered by even more democratic trends.

AUG 1942

Take race feeling. In time of war, with all its emphasis on brutality, a bullying attitude is likely to prevail toward racial minorities. There are signs of rising anti-Semitism and anti-Negro feeling. But there never was a time when the country's conscience was more aroused to the shame of the white man's treatment of the Negro. Odell Waller, the Negro sharecropper who killed his landlord in a dispute over his miserable share of income, won sympathy from one end of the country to the other as a symbol of oppression, and, though he was executed, his name will be a landmark in the history of the struggle for human equality.

It was said that there would be no elections in November, and that our political system could not survive total war. Again there are ominous signs. Congress has never been lower in public esteem, and "politics" never seemed as uninspiring as in this crisis of national survival. Yet there never were fewer "radicals" aiming at overthrow of the government than today. If Congress is no longer the "Citadel of our liberties," as it was once thought to be in the constitutional scheme of things, that does not mean we are losing our liberties. It merely indicates that the function of Congress is changing and its importance, perhaps, lessening.

The Civil Liberties Union issued an encouraging report at the end of the first half-year of war: despite the brutal business on which we are engaged, the tolerant habits of democracy have not yet been seriously affected. The Fortune survey, most detailed of the opinion polls, asked last month what Americans expected of the future: apparently they expect a better America with less inequity, more opportunity for all, a government which will offer more services (74% thought the government should provide medical care out of taxation) without changing its essential methods and standards.

The news on the democratic home front isn't bad—so far.

Starnes Blames North In Latest Racial Issue

GADSDEN, Ala., Aug. 19 (AP) — Charging that persons in Washington and the North are forcing a racial equality issue in the South, Rep. Joe Starnes (D-Ala) said they "are serving the Axis powers."

"This thing is made more vicious by the fact that those who are pushing the race issue from the outside," he added, "have the monumental impudence to try to place the blame upon the South.

"It is a common Axis trick to try to use minority groups in stirring up strife," Starnes, vice-chairman of the Dies committee, said in an interview, "and that is what is being done now as persons outside of the South try to create strife between the peaceful peoples of the section."

On his return to Washington, he said he would undertake to investigate the sources of money.

Batesburg, S. C. News
August 7, 1942

At a meeting of a colored people's society in Charleston one of the speakers said that "hundreds of white people have become interested in our fight to end inequalities." What "inequalities?"

The colored people have equalities with the white people in voting.

The white people have the same right to hold conventions and primaries, excluding negroes from them, that colored people have to exclude whites from one of their fraternal societies or from a church called "African."

The negroes surely have that right. The "fight" of negroes and their white political associates in Northern states to force their admission into a Southern white political party would, if it should succeed, be a preliminary step to forcing their admission into white lodges of the Woodmen of the World or of Free Masons.

The "fight" that is in progress to compel white people to receive negroes in their societies is a fight to break down separation of the races.

The News and Courier advocates justice to negroes and to all races. Any race, sect, order, has the right to engage in political or other lawful activities and to exercise exclusion from membership of it.—News and Courier.

HATRED FOR WHITES

DR. JAMES W. THORNTON, prominent dentist and civic leader of the 17th Assembly District, has written Captain James Pritchard of the 28th Precinct Police Station, taking exception to the police officer's reported statement with regard to Harlem crime situation. Dr. Thornton's letter in part is as follows:

"When you state that propagandists have instilled hatred in young Negroes for whites, this is not true and I believe you are in a position to know better. You probably have in mind such movements as the current March on Washington Committee and the Harlem Labor Union.

"While I am not a member of either of these organizations, I do know that they have not been guilty of such action as you describe. They have only used their influence to bring to light the many discriminations and exploitations of the people and have succeeded in crystalizing public opinion. No where in Harlem will you find a genuine hatred for white people; there never was and never will be any hatred in the hearts of colored people for whites, I hope.

"Having recently come through a Democratic primary campaign for leadership in lower Harlem, where white leadership was in control and was ousted, I can truthfully say I found no hatred for whites in that campaign and I used no race issues.

"The people of Harlem are simply tired of being ruthlessly exploited and not given a chance to live as decent human beings like others. This the younger Negroes are opposed to."

We agree with Dr. Thornton, whatever bitterness Negroes exhibit toward whites is due to the indifference, patronizing attitude or conscious cruelty exhibited toward them by their fellow white Americans. In New York the proscription of Negroes in jobs, as well as high rents, are major causes of racial clashes.

Refighting The Civil War

Editor's Note—Some weeks ago, Westbrook Pegler, columnist, charged certain Negro papers with inciting Negro soldiers. Last week, converted from Saul to Paul in the course of a few weks, he wrote a piece which may have the effect of inciting both the white and the Negro press—for the better. An example is reproduced below, an editorial written by Stanley Chapman, news editor of the New Haven (Conn.) Journal-Courier, and published July 18. The Courier has long contended that the North lost the Civil War, that the South is in control of our political, social, economic life, imposing on the rest of the nation its prejudices. In the subjoined editorial, entitled, "Refighting the Civil War," Mr. Chapman supports The Courier theory and yields to incitement by Mr. Pegler.

We lost the Civil War—North and South. We are losing this war. The War Between the States could not win because our national economy had passed beyond the point where slavery could be the recognized basis of one important section of the country. But slavery under new names (poll taxes, debt servitude, lynching) has persisted. In failing to prevent the continuance of any vestige of the legal institution of chattel slavery, the United States lost the Civil War.

In "This Above All," Joan Fontaine and Tyrone Power illustrate dramatically the lesson that England has learned from her two World Wars. England has learned that there can be no immutably privileged classes supported by a degraded lower class—not if the country in which they live is to continue to persist.

We are losing this war because we have a Jim Crow Navy, because we have a Jim Crow Army, because we have a Jim Crow Air Force. We are losing this war because we learned nothing from the shameful treatment of Marian Anderson in Washington some time ago. We are losing this war because it is possible for such a world-famous artist as Roland Hayes to suffer indignity from poor white trash in such a place as Rome, Georgia.

A country that can stomach a Waller case in Virginia is not free. The Hartford Courant recently headlined the Texarkana lynching with "The Japanese Win in Texas." It concluded: "If Americans like the mobsters in Texas don't get on to themselves, the war for the support of the Asiatics may never be won." That is masterful understatement.

Our Negro citizens have proved themselves to be as good as white snobbery will let them, and much better than deserved by the country they love—God knows why. In unconscious echo of Richard Wright, a California group of hate-breeders have organized themselves into the Native Sons of the Golden West to disfranchise Japanese, Chinese, and Korean citizens. It is not by chance that the foremost organization for the defense of American Negroes is called the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. It Can Happen Here.. It has happened to American Negroes ever since the Civil War. It is happening to loyal American citizens of Oriental extraction.

The problem of Americanizing this country is our first front. All others are secondary. If we lose the home front, the others will not be worth winning. The problem is one that is peculiarly significant for New Haven, with 5,302 of its 162,655 residents in 1930 Negroes. So long as there is nationality or color segregation in the armed forces of our country, New Haven is not doing all it might in this war. So long as American or New Haven employers discriminate against Negroes, or any other minority group, New Haven has cause for worry and shame.

Our community and our country enjoy a loyalty from minority members that is not deserved. In criticizing the treatment accorded loyal aliens in this country, the Hartford Courant warns: "Discrimination against our proved friends can help no one but our enemies." This is doubly true of discrimination against our citizen minorities.

It is a sad commentary upon the quality of our democracy that pleas for tolerance, for inter-racial and inter-faith co-operation, for brotherly practice of Americanism need be put upon a basis of what is to be got from observing the spirit of our Constitution, from practicing the teachings of the religions we profess to follow, from behaving like civilized human beings.

Westbrook Pegler wrote yesterday something that is an earned indictment of us as severe as anything that can be said against the Nazis:

"The injustice to the Negro people of the United States is more a matter of superstition, tradition, ignorance and indifference than of conscious cruelty in the hearts of the white man. They live among us, but we do not know them. Except when they erupt and riots result, we ignore their existence. We accept foreigners from Europe and organize leagues to protect their rights, we welcome them into all our residential districts with no more restraint than that of snobbery and all our professions and trades are open to them. But the Negro who was born among us and fights for the United States when war is up is told to stand aside because he is a Negro."

This shabby report from the home front does not cover conditions that are unremediable. It details actions and attitudes that are negative. We can and we must replace the shameful negative faults with positive and constructive behavior and thought. Thoughtlessness, selfishness, greed, vulgar brutality are habits that can be overcome.

We can begin winning the home front by making sure that all New Haven men and women in the service of their country — armed or civil — are treated as Americans and New Haveners should be. We can complete the reformation of labor unions which are still lily-white. We can reject as un-American and Axis-minded the employers, products and services which are tainted with jim-crow denial of Negro rights. When New Haven and New England have set their own house in order, they will then have earned the privilege of completing the work that was badly finished to the South.

This is harsh analysis of a festering and dangerous situation. Nice words, polite condonement, false delicacy are out of place. New Haven can as little afford the barbarous luxury of minority discrimination as can the country. We can win on all fronts if we have the decency and the courage.

SUBVERSIVE ACTIVITIES

Ever so often we hear from some white friend an expression of fear, lest the Nazis or the Japs get ahold of Negroes and stir them against whites. But in practice it doesn't work that way; it looks like the Japs and the Nazis get ahold of the white people, or certain elements of them, in the South. We have yet to find any noteworthy instance where Negroes have been tampered with by Fifth Columnists to the injury of the country or their white neighbors.

SEP 12 1942 The Informer

But look at the attempt to revive the Ku Klux Klan movement, reflected by a widely advertised campaign through the South and some parts of the North. Look at the efforts of the Governors of Georgia and Alabama to array race against race for their political benefit. Witness the frequency with which Negro civilians and soldiers are being shot and beaten by policemen and other citizens in various sections of the country, including Texas and Louisiana.

Houston, Tex.

If any subversive activity among Negroes has been at work or has been going on, it certainly has not reflected itself by any concerted, overt or substantial acts of hostility on the part of Negroes. But as to whites in many sections of the South, there is indication of their having been disturbed or stirred, either by Axis agents or by their own cussedness, and the hoodlums who would not scruple at even strafing our war effort to gain some personal end through stirring up racial hatred. The whites don't need to be guarded against any possible uprising from Negroes, it is the Negroes who need to be guarded against the bullying, brutalizing injustices of the lawless Ku Klux Klan element of whites.

WHITE MAGAZINE DISCUSSES FUTURE OF NEGRO

SEP 5 1942

Informer Houston Texas

56K

The Negro has been the subject of more extensive and intensive discussion during the last twelve months than the total five preceding years. We do not know any specific reason for the variety and number of articles that are being written about the Negro, but discussion very often promotes understanding.

An editorial in the Advertising Age (July 27, 1942), is a new type of discussion. It makes an analysis of the market that the Negro represents with his improved educational opportunities and educational advancement. The author states that: "The Negro should be given a chance to advance along educational and industrial lines because of enlightened self-interest which realizes that educated, prosperous Negroes make better neighbors, better tenants and better customers. The Negro's improved ability to produce, to earn and to consume will make sounder markets and a stronger nation."

This paper is glad to commend to its readers any article that makes a non-paternalistic analysis of the Negro's problems and instead makes the same as would be made of those of any American citizen under similar circumstances.

The Dirty Shame

No obligation rests on The News and Courier to defend Mr. Eugene Blease, a gentleman with whom no one connected with it has had five minutes personal acquaintance, beyond an obligation to defend any respectable South Carolinian from an apparent conspiracy of insinuated slander. An effort has been made and continues on the part of writers for the "Liberal", or "Liberalite", press to brand this former chief justice of South Carolina as a blatherskite, to pillory him before the American public as an insensate persecutor and hater of the negro race, as a vulgar, loud-mouthed "agitator".

If ever as a member of the state's highest court bench he was accused of prejudice in cases before him to which a negro was a party, it did not reach the ears of The News and Courier. If ever he was charged with unfairness, or with immodesty, or demagogy, or with inciting anger and ill feeling between races or within a race, the information of it was hidden from The News and Courier. It is not for us to set him on a pedestal of the virtues and talents, we scarcely know him; it is for us to resent and dispute the defamation of a decent man.

The latest to cast a slur upon Mr. Blease is Mr. Clark Foreman, described as "a Southerner now working for the navy", as an "author", as "president of the Southern Conference on Human Welfare" and as "Nine years ago the first adviser of the government on negro affairs". (How long he has been in the employ of the federal government and how much he has been paid by it is not disclosed.)

Mr. Foreman writes that "Blease tried to become senator on the issue that South Carolina needed someone in Washington to fight for white supremacy", and that he introduced this issue is the common saying of the Liberals—as if Senator Smith did not raise it for South Carolinians when he walked out of the Philadelphia convention in 1936, as if the president's friend, Mr. Byrnes, did not raise it on the floor of the senate in 1938; as if it was not raised when a negro sought admission to the law department of the state university and when the federal courts handed down decisions as to negro service on juries; as if it were not now, one month after the South Carolina primary, raised anew by the pending poll tax bill in congress which the governor of South Carolina denounces as contrary to the federal constitution and by the effort of negroes to break into white primaries by resort to the courts. There is no informed Southern man who does not know that a campaign on a dozen fronts to destroy the rights of Southern states to manage their affairs has been in progress the last seven or eight years and that an important part of the White House family is a national leader in it.

Further, Mr. Foreman and the rest of them carefully omit to mention that Mr. Blease in his campaign denounced the use of money to elect in primaries and lived up to it. On that in great part he placed the emphasis in his utterances. It was a service to the people long needed in South Carolina, and E. S. Blease is the South Carolinian who stands out for the reform.

They slander Mr. Blease because he recognized the presence of danger to the South and pointed it out to the South Carolinians. It is well that one man in the state does not hide it from himself and from his people.

The worst of dangerous symptoms is that the South Carolina politicians and their press are trying to hide the danger from the people.

Meanwhile, not Mr. Clark Foreman or others of his prominent associates in "human welfare" will say explicitly that they advocate equal and exact justice under the law for negroes and white people and separation of the races in schools, colleges, eating houses, transportation. That, The News and Courier advocates and advocates besides that the election laws be administered impartially, regardless of race. Any set of men have a right to hold caucuses or primaries, to admit and to exclude from them as they choose. If the right of assembly guaranteed by the bill of rights means that any and all persons must be admitted to all assemblies, the bill of rights is a farce. If Mr. Foreman and his associates will say as much as that without equivocation, without "weasel words", these ruffians in the South who hate negroes will be silenced. Mr. Foreman and his fellow wellfarers won't say it.

That is why Mr. Blease has made himself heard, and the seeming conspiracy to hold him up before the American people as a demagogue and a self-seeking blatherskits is a dirty shame.

Jews Have

SEP 5 1942

Gifts Have Provided Millions for Welfare

NEW YORK — American Jews have made numerous noteworthy contributions to the well being of colored Americans through such foundations as the Rosenwald Fund, the John S. Guggenheim Foundation, the New York Foundation and the Samuel S. Fels Foundation.

Individual contributions toward the elimination of injustices against colored as a minority group have also been significant. Among these have been the financial and personal service benefactions of Arthur and Joel E. Spingarn, Louis Marshall, Samuel Leibowitz, Herbert J. Seligman and Abraham Flexner.

Began During Slavery

The earliest recorded instance of Jewish effort in behalf of colored dates back to the opening decades of the nineteenth century, according to a pamphlet issued recently by the American Jewish Committee which treats a multiplicity of Jewish contributions to the [illegible] of [illegible] Americans.

Judah Touro, a prominent New Orleans Jew, was this early benefactor. Residing in the city which was then the nerve center of slave traffic, Mr. Touro assumed the role of emancipator, freed his own personal servant, trained him for business and furnished him money and valuable advice.

He negotiated the freedom of numerous other slaves and in all his benefactions to hospitals, orphanages, etc., the underlying condition was that no discrimination be made on account of race or creed.

Individual Abolitionists

German Jewish immigrants of 1848 were also violently anti-slavery, the committee pamphlet points out. Active in the "underground railway" and champions of the abolitionist cause, this group included: Sabato Morias of Philadelphia and Rabbi Bernhard Felsenthal and Lebmain Adler of Chicago, who preached against slavery; Rabbi David Einhorn of Baltimore, who was compelled to give up his ministry because of his anti-slavery sentiments.

Michael Heilprin, writer, who converted many to abolition by brilliant articles in a New York paper, and Leopold Bluemenberg of Baltimore who left a good business to organize the Fifth Maryland Regiment and whose efforts in behalf of abolition almost cost him his life.

Jews in NAACP

Since 1908, many Jews have been actively engaged in the work of the NAACP. Most noteworthy among them have been the Spingarn brothers. Joel E. Spingarn, a professor at Columbia University, was president of the organization for nearly ten years, 1930-39.

Upon his death in 1939, he was succeeded by his brother, Arthur, who still retains that post. Another Jewish member of the board of directors was the late Louis Marshall, who argued and won several cases regarding the civil rights of colored people before the Supreme Court.

Governor Lehman, a Friend

Others, past and present, who have been active in the NAACP include Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York, Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter, Morris L. Ernst, Charles [illegible] Studin, Benjamin Kaplan, Arthur Garfield Hays, the latter four all members of the legal committee.

The New York Civil Rights Law which guarantees equal accommodations regardless of race, creed, or color, was the result of the work of Aaron Levy, a Jewish meber of the legislature in 1913. Samuel Leibowitz is best known for his work as chief counsel in the Alabama Scottsboro case.

Rosenwald Fund

By far the outstanding contributor to the educational and general welfare of colored people was Julius Rosenwald, creator of the Rosenwald Fund in 1917 for the betterment of race relations and the furtherance of education.

His first gift of any size was $25,000 toward the establishment of a YMCA for colored in Chicago. His offer to duplicate this gift to any city that raised $75,000 toward a YMCA building for colored resulted in twenty such buildings being established for colored in eighteen cities.

$25,000 to Tuskegee

He subsequently gave $25,000 to Booker T. Washington toward the improvement of education of colored in the South and became a trustee of Tuskegee Institute—a charge he held until his death in 1932 and now held by his son, William Rosenwald.

The first, greatest and most characteristic activity of the Rosenwald Fund has been its cooperation with Southern States and local districts in building schoolhouses for colored, 4,977 of which have been erected along with 217 teachers' homes and 163 workshops.

Million to Universities

Other contributions by Rosenwald and the fund to colored welfare until 1936 are as follow:

| To university programs ... | $1,276,508 |
| To colleges and high schools | 822,083 |
| Fellowships and scholarships | 437,615 |
| Hospitals and personnel training .................. | 857,507 |
| Other activities, including apartments in Chicago .... | 257,860 |

From 1936 to 1940, the Rosenwald Fund, under the chairmanship of Lessing J. Rosenwald, donated approximately another one and a half million dollars to colored universities, fellowships, health and race relations.

Non-sectarian foundations established by Jews benefiting colored include the Guggenheim Foundation, which grants fellowships for general research; the New York Foundation, which maintains charitable and educational institutions, and the Fels Foundation, which contributes to the prevention of crime and the training of youth for good citizenship.

Spingarn Medal

The will of Joel Spi 1939 established a trust f $20,000 for the perpetuat the Spingarn Medal, a each year by the NAACP colored American making the highest achievement in any field of human endeavor during that year.

Officers and members of the executive committee of the American Jewish Committee, with headquarters at 366 Fourth Avenue, New York, are:

Officers

Louis E. Kirsten, chairman; Irving Lehman, honorary vice president; Abram I. Elkus, honorary vice president; Maurice Wertheim, president; Lessing J. Rosenwald, vice president; Carl J. ## Junking Old Automobiles

The proposal to scrap all old cars, beginning with those ten years of age or over, will provide another confirmation of the ancient saying "Them that has gits," if it is carried into practice.

Anybody who has a car that is ten years old or older, has it because he needs the convenience but cannot afford a new or modern car.

To take away from such persons, who stand at the bottom of the economic heap, the poor cars that they possess, and leave the rich and more favored in full possession of their automobiles, would certainly do violence to the theory of equality under the law and also to the idea that this is a government peculiarly attached to the under-dog.

The 12-year-old tin can of the farmer, who must come to town occasionally, is just as vital to him as is the finest automobile of the richest man in town, and if cars are to be confiscated, it should not begin with those to whom old cars are more priceless than are new cars to the well-to-do.

As a matter of fact, the thing that needs to be junked in this country more than anything else is political monkey-business, like the war on the poll tax, a tax in relation with which the nation has no right whatever; the continual currying of favor with pressure groups, the struggle to put over racial equality in the South, and all such activities that have no relation to winning the war but serve to hinder because of the internal friction that is created.

To junk such political maneuvers would be worth far more to the nation than all the ancient tin cans that may be found upon the scattered farms of the land.

Hitler In Attempt To Stir Negro, Jew Against Each Other

NOV 7 1942

By MABRAY KOUNTZE

56K

BOSTON—(ANP) — The once supposed dormant threat of Jewish-hate propaganda has made an axis landing in the East Never before has this reporter heard so much anti-semitism "truth" as is being given lip service today by a surprisingly placid people in a surprising repetition of the European folly.

The entire sum and substance of the clever Nazi ruse is to blame the Jews for everything; every ache, every pain, every failure, anything at all. Hitler's war against democracy is amazingly justified by the German Jews who never at any time numbered even half as many colored as live in America today.

Many Germans (now securely employed in this country) are dishing out the Jewish-hate propaganda freely. But there are other nationalities, too. And, one and all, they are directing their broadcast to the Jew's best friend who happens to be the colored man. Hitler seeks to split friends!

Last March, issues of the Saturday Evening Post contained a not too helpful story by Milton Mayer entitled, "The Case Against The Jew."

Father Coughlin and a number of other supposedly good citizens have not contributed toward a more tolerant attitude. There are consequently a number of people both here and elsewhere who have as a result swallowed the anti-semitic propaganda hook, line, and sinker. It is a feeling of well-being to be able to blame our own mistakes and failures on some specific goat. That is the Jew's unenviable position in Germany and that is what some are seeking to make it in America.

Nevertheless, to the average intelligent Negro who knows there were no Jews in the "Aryan" Ku Klux Klan the propaganda which brands the Jewish people our worst enemies simply does not ring true.

To the average colored man, a Jew is no worse, and perhaps is not as bad as any other man of any other race, creed, or color. True, the Jewish merchant wants his money. But in most cases it is due him. And many of us would dodge our debts unfairly if we could. Some of us do and still can not see why the finance men are so insistent. An Irishman, Italian, a colored man, or a man of any other race would be just as tough on bills, due. Hitler would be much tougher.

STUPID EGO

Simply because it may make a few of us feel "superior" to prod the Jew as we would a goat is of course indicative of the most stupid ego when displayed by any one of a race only recently risen from human bondage. Nothing could be more stupid than a colored man fostering race hatred.

Moreover, the ego of certain supposed American "Aryans" in their fellow countryman—whether Jew or Negro; Catholic or Protestant, is only based on a forgotten memory of slavery in their own history; a slavery which they may experience once again unless they become united as one against the axis. What Booker T. Washington said about keeping down the colored man may be equally applicable to keeping down the Jew.

HELPED JOE LOUIS

This is no whitewash of the faults of the Jews which are primarily the maintenance of the "established practices" which they find existing in lands they occupy. This is also true of other races. If some Jews look upon colored as inferiors in this country, it is merely because that is the way they found us when they arrived here. So one Jew told me.

This tragedy is not so much the fault of the Jew as it is the fault of the non-Jewish who established the infamous color barriers. It is equally our own fault for not bettering our position. Even so, the Jew in a good many fields of endeavor, has blasted "color convention." In our advancement in business, education, and on stage, scren and radio, our back- have been of the Jewish race.

Proof of this is not difficult. In sports, it was a man of Jewish ties, Mike Jacobs, who made the world's heavyweight title available to Joe Louis when other men of other nationalities had stood firm against a colored man winning the crown.

WE WOULD BE NEXT

This, the "Case Aganist the Jew" is not one to be presented by the colored American. It is folly for any gullible colored people to fall into axis hands by supporting anti-semitism doctrines

NOV 7 - 1942

Because, just as there may be a so-called "Case Against the Jews," is there anyone so smugly superior as to believe that the next Nazi inspired program will not be "The Case Against The Negro?"

And finally, "The Case Against the Catholics."

These are the steps that will certainly be taken if the first one is successful. Insofar as our own race is concerned the "Case Against the Negro" is already being in certain parts of the nation with plenty of practicing disciples here in the north.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 5, (ANP)—Apparently confusing the terms, "civil liberties" and "social equality," Rep. McGehee (D. He added: "The good Negroes do not want this situation and the good white people are not going to have it." The Mississippi congressman concluded: "If the administration does not correct it, it is going to cause more trouble and bloodshed than was spilled during the Civil war."

Generalizing About Negro Americans Often Leads To Wrong Conclusions

56K

A SPEAKER at a meeting said: "Negroes take a long time to warm up, but after they are hot they fight and go places."

Another speaker at the same meeting said: "The trouble with Negroes is not that they take a long time to get 'hot'—they get 'hot' quick enough—but they cool off too quickly."

All of which proves that any general statement about all Negroes is wrong. Unfortunately, Negroes are just like other people and, being a minority group, they cannot afford to have the weaknesses of the dominant group.

All Negro people cannot be poured in the same mold any more than any other class of people. Those who try to classify all Negroes according to a preconceived pattern are due for a rude awakening.

A Good Example

NOV 12 1942

The state of Georgia has received a great deal of unfavorable publicity, what with the beating of Roland Hayes, the Talmadge campaign and the recent organization of the Vigilantes, Inc., but there comes to our desk regularly a little leaflet, "The Georgia Observer," issued by the Georgia Committee on Interracial Cooperation, which always brings some very good news about things in Georgia. It proves what we have known all the time, that Georgia is not half as bad as some of its so-called "protectors" lead us to believe.

Because we think it sets a fine exam-e for many other repeatedly much more liberal states, and communities, we pass on to our readers, this story which appeared in the last edition of the Georgia Observer.

An Experiment In Community Interracial Cooperation

By R. L. Russell

Griffin, Georgia, is a community of some 20,000 souls, made up of business, professional people and retired farmers, and a large industrial population. In these groups there is a pretty large number of Negro people, many of whom are above the average. Some of us have felt they were not getting what was due them in the way of schools, and social advantages. We organized a local Committee on Race Relations and set out to see what we could do to remedy the situation. We have met with the finest possible encouragement. We now have a park of 54 acres, the most of which is covered w lovely trees. A swimming pool as fine as we have for the whites has been completed; bath houses have been built; streets have been cut, and soon the park will be graded, swings, tennis courts, etc., will be installed. A director of recreation will be employed so that the Negro and his family will have a good chance to develop their play and recreational life.

Besides all this, a movement for their library has brought forth the finest results, and as soon as it is possible a $25,000 high school building will be erected. All this has been done in the "friendliest sort of way" and so far as I know without any criticism.

A nine-year-old Negro boy, C. L. Curry, of Rochelle, Georgia, does not lack determination and patriotism. Having no means of transportation other than by foot, he made ten trips into the county agent's office bringing in 30 pounds of scrap each trip.

Attorney General Biddle Gives AFRO a 3-Point Formula

Special Civil Rights Section Protects Voters and Citizens; Will End Peonage "Forever"

Attorney General Francis Biddle flatly refused to answer the AFRO's thirty questions. He was very, very polite about it, but he declined direct questioning.

He readily understood the importance of the issues and offered to make a statement to the AFRO-AMERICAN. The statement, which he typed himself, is exclusive.

Implicit in the publication of the statement is the agreement that it will be published in full. Here is the word of M. E. Gilfond (Biddle's secretary) on that: ". . . It (the statement) has to be published in full or not at all."

Since our interest is served only in truthful reporting, that is not a difficult promise to make.

The big difference is this: In an ordinary interview in this AFRO series, a question and answer method is used. The colored people, through their AFRO spokesman, are always pinning the man down, getting an answer or checking his evasions. A prepared statement does not admit that sort of action.

So, in accord with our implied promise, we print the statement in full, and without interruption. Here is Attorney General Biddle's statement to the colored people of America via the AFRO-AMERICAN. To our knowledge, it is the first time in the history of America that an attorney general has made such a statement to any minority group.

WASHINGTON.

Part 1—What We Fight For

The colored people of America know what we are fighting for—and this "we" includes the 130 millions who make up the nation's people.

They know what is happening to the peoples of the conquered countries who are being shipped into Germany today. They know what Japan has been doing to the Chinese for years in occupied territory.

No amount of Axis propaganda can now cover up the grisly picture. The same prospect, unless we win, faces us all. Among our citizens there would be no "exempts."

Part 2—Equal Opportunity

To the questions of equal economic opportunity and equal rights which have arisen out of the war program, I do not think the colored people want specious answers, smooth words.

They are not fooled by anthropological myths, Axis style, which are sometimes cited to explain away undemocratic attitudes, nor are they satisfied with mere lip service promising a post-war adjustment.

They want facts. They want to know what is being done now. Intelligent persons do not expect perfection in a day. They want to know the trend. In what direction are we going?

Part 3—Three Point Formula

Within the field of civil rights, on which I am qualified to answer, I can report that the progress made within the past year in erasing racial inequality from the American scene has been greater, more rapid, than in any other period of the nation's history since the Civil War.

We have, in the Department of Justice, a Civil Rights Section. It has been active in matters of great importance to the colored population, especially in the accomplishment of three objectives:

FIRST—To make sure that laws governing both primary and general elections protect qualified voters against devices adopted locally to bar them from the polls;

SECOND—To end involuntary servitude—"debt slavery," or peonage—forever, and

THIRD—To act in cases of illegal action taken against citizens by local officers, so that such actions may not go unpunished when they violate rights guaranteed by the United States Constitution.

Part 4—Removing Racial Inequalities

Along all three of these lines important cases have been successfully prosecuted during the past year. These are long strides towards the removal of existing race inequalities, strides with an effect that will be more apparent in years to come.

Part 5—Poll Tax and Jobs

The progress of America along this road has been more rapid in the past twenty years than many people realize. In the years ahead, I predict further gains.

Recent enactment by Congress of the Soldiers' Vote Bill, together with the amendment eliminating the poll tax as a requirement, is a case in point.

So is the steady improvement now being shown in the widening of job opportunities open to colored people in war industries.

So is the determination to provide better housing and other community facilities for the colored population.

Like any other forward step of a whole people, these things are not accomplished merely by passing laws. Ill-advised or ill-timed factional pressures which recklessly disregard the danger of disunity in time of war are not the most effective method.

Part 6—Speeding the War Effort

For a long time I have been interested in the advancement of the colored man. The war has opened new possibilities to him of serving both his country and himself.

I hope and believe our colored citizens will make the most of this opportunity by doing everything in their power to speed their country's war effort. For the colored man, like the white, must make his choice: whether to live in a democracy which does progress, or to become a slave to the Axis. We all, colored and white, must work hard if we are civilians and fight hard if we are soldiers.

~~Negroes Commend~~ Racial Relations

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — A Group of Demopolis, Ala., Negroes deplored today "outside interference by people of any color who do not or will not understand the spirit of respect and mutual helpfullness between" white and Negro residents of the Alabama black belt.

The position was taken in a resolution adopted at a Negro mass meeting held recently to celebrate over - subscription of their quota in the State War Chest campaign. Governor Dixon's office disclosed the resolution yesterday in a letter from the Demopolis Chamber of Commerce.

White and Negro workers were called on in the resolution to "cease this sabotage" of strike in war industries.

Appreciation was expressed for "the privilege of being able to carry our share of the burden in this (War Chest campaign) and other all-out war efforts." The group said it considered "it a distinct honor to have been given this obligation" and added:

"x x x We are grateful for the fine spirit of mutual respect and mutual confidence which exists now, and has existed for so many years in this part of the Southland between the white and colored races."

The "Coons" Are Still Here

Westbrook Pegler has won a national reputation as commentator on many subjects. His writings are today read in many lands, and in the halls of the mighty, everywhere his notions about things provoke discussion.

This week, Westbrook Pegler took for his subject "Racial Good Will" and in this discussion the noted columnist seeks to give the American Negro some information regarding the improvement that has come in race relations in the United States of America during the past forty years.

This writer thinks there has been marked improvement in race relations in the United States during the past forty years, but we are not guided in our view and opinion on this subject by the same processes which seem to dominate Mr. Pegler. As a matter of fact, the comment made by this high-priced white columnist on the most important subject in American life seems to this writer puerile and childish.

> "I can't remember when I last heard or read the word 'coon,' which was in common use when I was young, and the word 'nigger,' almost as offensive, has been dropping out of the vocabulary of intelligent white men and women. In fact, although the word 'colored' seems stilted, I observe that it is now more commonly used in conversation, at least than 'Negro,' and I attribute all this to the white man's good will and good manner and a sensitive respect for the colored man's feelings. He doesn't like the word 'Negro,' so we avoid it, even when there are no colored men about. We still use it in the newspapers, but only because we insist that it is the more correct word and not lacking in dignity."

Evidently Mr. Pegler never rides in the chair car or he would not have been guilty of making such a statement. Only last week returning from Kansas City, the Negro porter on the Rock Island requested a young Negro girl to leave the seat where she was sitting at the Oklahoma line and take one of the two seats in the rear, marked "Colored."

Immediately following this incident, in the train walked three uniformed white soldiers. Two of them took seats immediately behind me and for at least five minutes all this writer could hear was:

Another one made a comment I had made to myself without designating the pretty colored girl as a coon. The other one said:

MAR 7 - 1942

> "Yes, but hasn't that coon got pretty eyes?"

We have never met Westbrook Pegler and there is a possibility the man has a physical affliction. Perhaps the man is deaf. There is no other way we could charitably approach the conclusion he has reached in his above statement that "coon" and "nigger" have dropped out of the white man's vocabulary. We suggest that Westbrook Pegler rush back to more familiar fields of discussion or tune in on current discussion of the black worker in white labor unions, for if he makes many more foolish comments on racial questions, the folk are going to get the notion he does not know big wood from brush.

And as soon as friend Pegler got through delivering this hunk of misinformation, he squealed like a hot brake telling about white folk who "about the start of the century . . . blacked up with cork which would be a ridiculous device today." Pegler says that's stopped now.

Why just the turn of last week daily papers in Oklahoma City published pictures of white people "blacked up with cork," who were staging a minstrel exactly like the one Brother Pegler says white folk staged at the "turn of the century." And in addition, there are a lot of white folk today who black up when they are going to rob a bank or rape a woman. It would have been far better for Negroes if the folk who black their faces had confined their activities to the field of ministry. They then only made "coons" and clowns out of American black men. The folk today who smut their faces smear us with the badge of criminality.

And then Mr. Pegler, in his brief for progress, begins to tell of the white man's acceptance of W. C. Handy, the blues writer; but he totally overlooks the fact that Marian Anderson, the black girl, possessing the voice of the century, is denied the right to sing in Constitution Hall by the Daughters of the Confederacy. We wonder whether Bro. Pegler has noticed any improvement in the screen version of the American Negro? Why is it that the motion picture industry still refuses to take the Negro seriously, and as a human being?

We might go on and on to expose the silly and lengthy diatribe of this writer who exposes the main thought nestling in the backside of his mind, when he begins comparing the German and the American attitude towards Negroes. Says Mr. Pegler:

> "We may be sure of one thing. The Germans have declared themselves very flatly on the colored man's status in the world and, if victorious in this war, would degrade him to the position of a beast.
> "The error is often made by saying that the United States is no less oppressive toward the Negro than Hitler toward the Jew and the feelings of colored men have been churned up by this thought. But it is a declared policy and purpose of the Nazi government to dehumanize the Jew and deprive him of all human rights, whereas our constitution and laws pointedly recognize the colored man as a human being and citizen."

Anti-marriage laws which permit white men to approach Negro women without requiring white men to give Negro women their names, or give half-white children their names and property are all forgotten by Columnist Pegler in his haste to perfect his case. Beasts must flee in the forests from their pursuers, and have far more chance than did the black boy at Sikeston, Missouri, who was recently burned to a crisp, on Sunday morning, between two Negro churches, and in full view of the communicants of these two churches. Hitler may have had some other method of dehumanizing the Jew, but we utterly fail to see any progress attached to such incidents as Mr. Pegler notes in American life, and points towards while shyly peeping from behind the Constitution of the United States.

We fail to get any relief whatsoever from this Pullman car observation of Westbrook Pegler. He has abstracted himself too far away from Negro life to know anything about it. There are other signs which suggest a better day but quite evidently Westbrook Pegler is as far away from these signs as a college boy's socks from his B. V. D.'s.

Improvement in social relationships here in America has come from sources in American life which Mr. Pegler warns against. He says in his article "Communists have imposed shamelessly upon our colored people," when as a matter of fact, Communists in the United States are the only unit in American life having gone far enough in the realm of brotherhood to demand for Negroes social, economic and political equality.

What we say here is not intended as a brief for Communism, although that political ideal is not the Frankenstein for this writer it seems to be to Westbrook Pegler, but we do want to stop here and now to very solemnly announce that the Constitution of the United States will not be worth the paper it is written on, so far as the black man is concerned, until Westbrook Pegler and the group he represents, decides to take the same and identical attitude toward Negroes as adopted by Communists.

Listen to this insane statement: MAR 7 - 1942

> "The Communists have imposed shamelessly on our colored people, for Communism, if it is to be a revolt of the masses against the few, must throw the Negro into conflict with the masses because, in our country, it has been the ignorant and prejudiced white man who has most jealously and suspiciously opposed the rise of the dark man.
> "Until very recently, even the more enlightened workers who formed the labor aristocracy in the craft unions rejected the colored man on racial grounds and the improvement in relations has come from the higher levels of intelligence while prejudice persisted further down."

In the past twelve years the white man who has stood in the WPA line with impoverished black workers has come to stern realization of the fact that his plight is identical and the same as that of the Negro. It is only among the aristocracy of white labor (labor unions) that prejudice still exists. Today on WPA the white and black

In the past twelve years the white man who has stood in the WPA line with impoverished black workers has come to stern realization of the fact that his plight is identical and the same as that of the Negro. It is only among the aristocracy of white labor (labor unions) that prejudice still exists. Today on WPA the white and black worker toil side by side in peace. In cotton fields and everywhere the white worker has at last come to the realization that he can never obtain succor unless he fights for his rights side by side with the destitute black man. The problems of an empty white belly and an empty black belly are identical and the same.

The thing that is wrong in America and that with which the ordinary white man has no relationship, is our laws. If the daily newspapers in the South were to agitate for the repeal of Jim Crow, segregation and other restrictive measures, and say in their news columns what is written in the constitution ("all men are created equal") we would have good race relations in the United States in six months.

Those of us who know something about the history of this continent and the history of the world, know the mass of white people do not carry a natural grudge and ill feeling against their black brother. They are victims of propaganda manufactured by the ruling class whites.

The past week this writer rode to Fort Smith on the same seat in a bus with a white farmer. We leaned our elbows on my brief case and talked peanut raising for almost 100 miles. Another man, who lives, he said, in Birmingham, joined this writer in conversation after the old farmer got off the bus, and we talked like two human beings should right into the city of Fort Smith. We rode through two Jim Crow states violating the laws of these states in an effort to be companionable. It's the laws on our statute books preventing Americans from being democratic. Let's not let Westbrook Pegler mislead us about causes.

Common, ordinary white people come over in the Negro neighborhood and will eat and sleep with black folk. Common, ordinary white people will work with Negroes in the ordinary capacities white people employ laboring black people. They think nothing of it until somebody higher up mentions some law or custom which must be observed. Recently a white girl who learned we needed a linotype operator, called up and pleaded for two days to be given work. We badly needed a linotype operator and the young woman said unless she received work immediately she would be in desperate financial straits. We followed the custom and the unwritten laws of the few: WE DID NOT GIVE HER EMPLOYMENT. Law and custom halted progress for a hungry white girl and the Black Dispatch.

We are conscious of the fact that Mr. Pegler is more disturbed regarding the loyalty of the American Negro than he is in racial good will. One thing of which we are certain: Columnist Pegler knows more about black loyalties than he does about the subject under discussion. We think the whole difficulty develops out of an unwillingness to recognize that the Negro has grown up in this country. He no longer is the playboy and buffoon as pictured in song and story. The seriousness of the black man today excites friend Pegler.

When this war is over the Negro's record as an American citizen is going to remain unchanged; the thing we are hoping is, that Westbrook Pegler and his crowd will undergo a change. The black man will again fight for the Stars and Stripes, lengthening the trail of black blood that started at Boston Commons when Crispus Attucks fell.

Sheriff Attacks Howard U. Dean

NASHVILLE, Tenn.—Leon A. Ransom, member of the national legal committee of the N. A. A. C. P. and acting dean of Howard University Law School, was attacked in the hall on the sixth floor of the Davidson County courthouse here at four o'clock in the afternoon of Thursday, February 26.

Dick Fessey, a former deputy sheriff who made the assault, was arrested on charges of aggravated assault and battery and released February 27 on $1,000 bond. The trial on the attack is set for next week.

Slugged in Hallway

The attack came when Ransom walked out into the hall from the courtroom where he was sitting with Z. Alexander Looby, local N. A. A. C. P. attorney, on a case involving the exclusion of colored citizens from a jury. As he stepped out, Fessey rushed at him and knocked his glasses off. When the scuffle began, persons who would have aided Ransom were held back by a former constable (white) named Hill who drew his gun and shouted: "We are going to teach these northern Negroes not to come down here raising fancy court questions."

Ransom suffered a swollen jaw, bruises about the head and face, and a skinned nose and temple. He was at the time not engaged in the University of Tennessee case, for which he went to Nashville, but was assisting Looby in a hearing. There was no bitterness during the hearing, the N. A. A. C. P. said, and Fessey had no connection with the case.

The N. A. A. C. P. has sent telegrams protesting the attack to Governor Prentice Cooper, the attorney general of the state, and the mayor of Nashville.

Madison Square Mass Meet Urged by Randolph

FEB 28 1942

At a large and enthusiastic meeting of the New York Division of the March-on-Washington Movement, A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March-on-Washington Movement and international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, Thursday, February 18, described the terrorism, discriminations, segregations and humiliations to which colored citizens and soldiers are being subjected throughout the nation.

Despite this fact, said he, this is the hour of the race's greatest opportunity to win his democratic rights in America.

He pointed out that to this end the colored people of Harlem—should join in an all-out public mass meeting in Madison Square Garden to protest these outrageous and Hitleristic conditions.

Why Don't They?

White people who are in authority in this country and especially those in the south could well afford to take seriously the timely and wise advice of Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, if they would strenghthen democracy and give the masses of us cause to be more enthusiastic about the present war.

Speaking before the members of a white educational association in Birmingham recently, Editor Agar declared:

> "In God's name, why don't we do something about the Negro, instead of yapping about why England does not do something about India? Mistreatment of underprivileged people is at the base of the cause of this war."

This is the question in the minds of the millions of colored Americans. In comparison with the complicated Indian problem with its social, racial, political and religious aspects, the Negro question here is simple. In fact, there would be no race question if those in power would recognize their duty under the constitution and quit permitting discrimination based on race. Not only should we be permitted to freely vote in all elections, yes, including the primaries, but in view of the past, we should be encouraged to participate in the selection of all public office holders. The free exercise of the right to vote without regard as to race or religion is essential to American democracy.

In the meantime let us not sit supinely by waiting for complete democracy to be brought to us on a silver platter because this will never happen. Let us keep vigorously and more persistently pressing our claims.

Every man and woman in Fulton County who has not done so since last September should go immediately to the courthouse and get registered and stay registered!

15 Bishops, 500 Ministers, Laymen Urge Gov't Permit Full Activity

FEB 26 1942

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BALTIMORE, Md., Feb 25.—Fifteen bishops and 500 ministers and laymen attending a conference of the African Methodist Episcopal Church here urged that the government give Negro Americans full opportunity to participate in all activities in defense of the nation.

A resolution passed by the conference pointed out that Negro rights must be guaranteed in order "to make safe American democracy and the American way of life."

The resolution also pledged full support to President Roosevelt and the war program.

Fannie Hurst Fears Rising Tide of Color

Oppressive Race Feeling Menaces U. S. Unity, Says Noted Writer

Speaking before the annual meeting of the New York Urban League, at St. Mark's Methodist Church, Sunday, Fannie Hurst, noted author, told her audience that "we have too many colored Americans who have nothing to lose by switching their allegience and the United States should take note of this fact."

A participant in a symposium on "How to Mobilize Resources Behind the War Effort," which was discussed by James H. Hubert, director of the league, Dr. Channing H. Tobias, Mrs. Sara Pelham Speaks, Assemblyman William T. Andrews and Henrietta Buckmaster, the author advocated legislation as the only means of destroying discrimination against colored Americans.

"We have the psychology of a rising tide of color facing us. I fear for that psychology. I am afraid of the implications that go with the psychology. I do not think Hitler or the Asiatics have anything to offer you any more than what your rights are here and we must see that you get them," she declared.

Citing the reason for race hatred, Miss Buckmaster said, "Let there be no criminal over-simplification in imagining that white men are against black men on account of race. Race hatred always has been an artificial stimulus. Rather it is a deep paralyzing fear of economic insecurity, the need for the poor man to be given the concept of someone lower than himself in order to keep him quiet.

"Emancipation did not end this effort and the poor white man only managed to keep his head above water by standing on the shoulders of the blacks. That such an effort has failed is proven all over the world by the fact of this war."

The group adopted a resolution directed to the President of the United States stating in part:

"Despite the artificial and undemocratic handicaps flung thoughtlessly at best, contemptuously at worst, into our faces, we do not believe that democracy has been weighed in the balance and found wanting.

MAR 7 - 1942

"We do not believe that democracy has failed, for the simple reason that we do believe that true democracy, like true Christianity, has never yet been tried; thus, though pledging our whole support in defense, as against the Axis, of American democracy as it is practiced, we shall nonetheless continue to hope, work and fight for American democracy as it is preached, and as it should be practiced."

Disillusionment of White Youth

MAR 14 1942

Last week a kindly white lady brought her son to the Black Dispatch office for a conference. The young lad is a member of a race relations class in one of the churches of the city, and the mother was anxious for her son to hear something of what Negroes suffer from the lips of a Negro.

"I think it would be well for you to know something of what white people suffer here in America because of race prejudice," we said to the young man, just as E. C. Colclasure, father of the unfortunate young woman, slain at Fort Towson two years ago, passed through the office.

"That is Mr. E. O. Colclasure," we said to the young man, as the sad-eyed father of a murdered white girl passed on his way out. "That man has been here two days waiting for the trial we have just had in the Criminal Court of Appeals. Just before you came he sat in this office and made a very significant statement, and I think it is an illuminating picture of race prejudice to take back to your race relations class. Tearfully, that old gentleman said:

> "Mr. Dunjee, race prejudice, and race prejudice alone, prevents me from apprehending the murderers of my poor, poor daughter."

We then told the story of the Fort Towson killings as it was disclosed at the Hugo trial. We pointed out that race prejudice had forced a white man to join the organization we headed, the N. A. A. C. P., in an effort to secure redress, and that he recognized the N. A. A. C. P., and not state government, as making the only honest attempt to apprehend and secure conviction of the murderers of Mrs. Elmer Rogers, his daughter.

The young man and his mother sat there in stark amazement as we pointed out the danger to government itself, when hypocrisy crept in, as in the Lyons case, placing the state in position where it protected murderers, and leaving innocent white citizens menaced by red-handed brutes, still roaming at large in Choctaw county.

Well," said the young white man, "I never knew that race prejudice reacted in that sort of way upon white people. I have been laboring under a wholly different impression."

We think in a certain race relations class in Oklahoma City there is soon to be a revealing and illuminating discussion regarding the greatest curse that could come to civilization—the damning curse of race prejudice.

We sat for more than an hour and told this young white youth of other evil consequences resulting from race prejudice, that directly damaged white people more seriously than are the blacks.

The crux of the whole tragedy down in Choctaw county rests in the fact that Negroes and whites are together fighting against established government in an attempt to secure law enforcement. Is this not an ugly picture in this day and hour when we preach about democracy?

Was it not Booker T. Washington who warned us about the fate of the man who attempted to hold another in the ditch? And is it not true that every evil has within itself the seed of its own destruction?

COL. M'CORMICK PRAISES WEEK OF BROTHERHOOD

1942

Asserts Character Is Basis of Nation's Unity.

FEB 15 1942

A tribute to the Americans who brought National Brotherhood week into being was paid by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, in an address by radio last night. His speech, broadcast by W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system, was a feature of the Chicago Theater of the Air.

Col. McCormick praised the National Conference of Christians and Jews, which is now observing its ninth annual Brotherhood week, as "one of the most American things in America."

Describing brotherhood as the great spiritual force which gives the American republic strength thru unity based not on uniformity, but on diversity and character, he said:

"Our republic is a nation of nations. Persons of all creeds and of all races live side by side in peace and coöperation because they have chosen to do so in the spirit of Lincoln and Washington."

"Let us be grateful to the National Conference of Christians and Jews in its ninth annual Brotherhood week.

"The conference is one of the most American things in America."

APPEASEMENT OF FASCISTS IN DETROIT HOUSING ROW SCORED

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

I HAVE THIS to say about the Detroit Housing situation—where the Administration vacillated and bungled the job until they provoked a race riot—it was an appeasment of an incipient American fascist group. Now a housing project intended for Negro occupancy remained temporarily vacant because the Klan didn't want Negroes to live in it.

It remained vacant in spite of the fact that the Negro workers who were to occupy it and who are working at defense industries to save democracy, had to remain in over-crowded apartments and pay exorbitant rents for rat-infested hovels. If this is the method which is going to be employed to build up Negro morale—to protect democracy—we might as well quit. If this is the example which we are to show to Asia and to South American Republics of "democracy in action," if this is the way we are going to complete with "the New Order" we might just as well call it a day.

Pittsburgh

Mr. Cayton

If you want to know how Negroes feel about it read the quotation from TIME, where a Detroit Negro defense worker stated, "The Army is about to take me to fight for democracy, but I would as soon fight democracy right here. When you fight in the Army for democracy, you fight for something that is a long ways off, "knida," but when you fight for democracy here, we are fighting for ourselves."

ON the other side of the fence, two quotations seem to typify those white Americans who have no thought of allowing the Negro to participate in our democratic institutions. Police Inspector Chester Cox was quoted as saying, "My men are naturally in sympathy with the white mob because some of them live over there." A white rioter stated, "Let them stay on their side of the street."

FASCISTS SPROUT IN MOTOR CITY

It has been pretty celarly shown that the Klan was behind the movement—the Klan, and strangely, a Catholic priest. Detroit was the home of the Black Legion. It is the stronghold of the present Klan movement in the north. It is the bivouac of Father Coughlin and Gerald Smith. Detroit is the danger spot of the nation for all of the incipient fascist movements in the country have some roots in that sprawling industrial city.

THAT the city, state and federal administrations vacillate even for a moment and changed from side to side in the contest for this housing project, and finally, at a time when defense housing is almost imperative for our social security, allow it to remain vacant is inexcusable. It is appeasement of our American fascist as shameful as was the appeasement of Germany and Italy by England and France at Munich. Fascism should be stamped out whether in Germany or Detroit—whether it is the Nazi party or the Klan.

NOW IS TIME TO ACT

Negroes want democracy and want to fight for it and the Ku Klux Klan does not. Why then, was not martial law declared in Detroit? Why were Negro defense workers, struggling to produce arms for China, for Russia, and for the United States, deprived of a project which was built for them to appease fascists. I think the President should have taken action immediately to stop this appeasement of internal fascists in the same vigorous fashion that he stopped the appeasement of the Japanese, German and Italian fascists. As far as the struggle for democracy in this country is concerned, Detroit was another Munich—and sooner or later American democracy will have to face it with shame.

NOW is the time for the people who have been talking out loud about our internal problems and the Negro to act. How about Robert Maynard Hutchins and Westbrook Pegler forming a committee to investigate the Detroit affair. They seem to have been disturbed about Negro rights and spoke about how much better off Negroes are in America than in Germany.

THESE ARE TIMES THAT EXCITE MINDS

Now is the time for all persons who believe in democracy to fight for the rights of Negroes in order to preserve their own freedom in the long run. We can't win a war for freedom and democracy and appease fascist mobs and lynchings at home. We've got to have an all out war against fascism at home and abroad. This may seem like excited writing but if these are times that try men's souls they are also times that excite their minds. It's time that we got excited about democracy.

The Folly Of White Americans

WHITE Americans were forced to see the folly of their action in the attitude they took toward the colored people of this country but it took a war to change their minds.

A few years ago when the times were hard for most American citizens and particularly so for all colored citizens, many white bigwigs fired their Negro servants to bring into their homes the services of Orientals who couldn't become citizens even if they wanted to.

Some of the railroads followed suit and discharged the colored help and secured Japanese employees. Japanese chauffeurs were substituted for Negro chauffeurs. Japanese maids were used instead of colored maids. The colored workers were evicted from many of their traditional jobs by these Orientals.

Now that the Japanese are characterized as the "slit-eyed yellow devils" instead of the "intelligent and diplomatic" people of the Orient the employment of these aliens is no longer a thing to be desired. The whites want their Negro servants.

Every day is the beginning of a new lesson in life. Each morn new thoughts are born. Pity the man who does not realize that as he grows so should he learn, and that in learning he should become wise. We cannot escape the responsibility of our properly caring for our own being. That is why each new day presents new opportunities for one to absorb wisdom and knowledge. We should grow with the trees.

White Blues Singing Heiress Takes Stand Against Prejudice

MAR 14 1942

Pittsburgh Courier

BOSTON, Mar. 12—Libby Holman, the blues singing heiress who has made all sorts of news for the white press, struck a note for tolerance here for the colored press last week. Pittsburgh, PA

Headlining in the Balinese Room of the Hotel Somerset, the white lady of song came within words of terminating her engagement before her contract expired when a dispute arose with the management regarding her colored guitarist-accompanist.

In a press interview, both Miss Holman and the hotel manager had their own versions of what caused the tiff. According to the blues singer's manager, she became angry when her accompanist was barred admission to the latter's room in the hotel. It was further stated that the management objected to Miss Holman using a colored accompanist, insisting that she use Harry Marshard's band, a standby at the hotel. In refusing to do that, the singer explained that White, who has played at the White House, had taught her how to sing the blues and was vital to her performance.

Giving his version, the resident manager of the hotel claims that guests in the establishment complained when White and others held after hour rehearsals in Miss Holman's room until 3 a.m. He further stated that there is no objection to colored people in the hotel as there are a number of them on its working staff.

Treasury Literature Now Features 'Negro Mammy'

MAR 21 1942

The accompanying illustration has been sent out by the United States Treasury department, presumably for the purpose of "including the Negro in the campaign for selling defense stamps and bonds." It is significant that the only idea which the Treasury department thought would interest Negroes in buying stamps was a picture of what southern people generally called a Negro "mammy." Previously some publicity matter issued by the Treasury department carried the picture of a group of children, none of whom had the appearance of being colored. The Chicago Defender complained about this.

Is this new cartoon with a "mammy" the only idea that the Treasury department could think of as a means of interesting one tenth of the population in defense bonds and stamps? William Pickens and Jesse O. Thomas are on the payroll and are supposed to help the sale of stamps and bonds. Pickens says that the publicity material is prepared by some other "department," and he is not consulted before it is drawn up. Under any circumstances the mammy advertisement will not make Negroes enthusiastic about buying defense stamps and bonds.

CLARKE FOREMAN LOSES HEAD FOR US—WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO TO PROTECT OUR FRIENDS?

JAN 17 1942

BY P. L. PRATTIS

JAN 17 1942

56K

SURELY you haven't forgotten old Judge Horton and his precedent-shattering decision on the appeal in the Scottsboro case. He was a Southerner, an Alabama judge, who took the facts in that case, extracted the element of color, and rendered a judgment based on justice. For doing that, the voters of his district kicked him out of office. He was our friend. We never moved a peg to protect or reward him after he had gone out on a limb for us.

Years have passed, but our friends are still catching the devil. Lester Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban league, struck a grave note at the Conference of National Negro Organizations in New York City Saturday when he referred to the deliberate attacks which are being made by a clique of Southerners in Congress on friends of the Negro in government service. Several heads have been chopped off because the owners believed in fair play. One of those, a friend of ours, who was forced out was John Carmody, former Public Works Administrator. Another more recent head to fall was that of Nathan Straus, formerly head of the United States Housing Administration. The most recent is that of Clark Foreman, white Georgia friend, in Defense Housing. There are several others. Each of these men took his stand for what was right, the result being that he found himself on our side. Another result was that he found himself in controversy with reactionary white Southerners.

SOUTHERNERS FIGHT OUR FRIENDS

JAN 17 1942

HERE is the play, what's happening: Defense housing is a great need. Appropriations for defense housing must come from the Congress. The same is true of low-cost, or slum clearance, housing, which was the big job of Straus. The Southern clique in Congress feels that some of the men in defense housing and low-cost housing have been too darned fair with Negroes. They don't want the Negro citizen to have the homes. They resent the proportion of homes given to Negroes. Above all, they don't want Negroes and whites living in the same projects, North or South. Their trick is to refuse to vote for any appropriations as long as our friends are in a position to have any voice in the use of the money.

This Southern clique is quite willing to hold up the program for all defense housing so long as our friends remain in power. That is the situation in which Nathan Straus found himself. He was an excellent administrator. The President and everybody else knew that. But so long as he stayed, the Southern clique in Congress was determined not to give him any money. As a consequence, Mr. Straus stepped out so that the program of defense housing might continue.

DETROIT KILLED FOREMAN

CLARKE FOREMAN was crucified last week on the cross of defense housing in Detroit. The Public Housing Administration decreed an area in the Conant Gardens section of Detroit for a defense housing project to be shared by Negroes. Immediately almost, there were strenuous protests from whites, Polish Catholics, in the section. They did not want Negro citizens in the project. A priest organized and incited opposition. He was aided by a Congressman and by Senator Prentiss Brown of Michigan. On one day 1,000 protests from whites reached Washington. Investigation disclosed that most of the whites whose names had been signed to letters and telegrams did not know what they were doing. The priest had merely gone around collecting quarters and had sent the wires in the names of his parishioners.

Counter protest was organized among Negroes by Senator Diggs of Detroit and by Representative Horace White. This put Washington in the middle. It was the duty of Clarke Foreman to make a decision. He did. The project had been built for occupancy by Negro defense workers. Foreman wired White, a member of the Detroit Housing Authority, to begin accepting Negro applications. Within three hours, White received another wire not to accept Negro applications. In the meantime, all in the course of a day, Foreman had lost his job. He had been fired by the deputy of the new Public Works Administrator, Col. Fleming, who took John Carmody's job.

OUR INTERESTS SACRIFICED

IN answer to protests, the deputy said that he knew Foreman had right on his side, but his office was faced with a practical situation. The deputy is a Northerner. The Southerners have him in the clutch. He wants the program to go on. He is ready to sacrifice the rights and interests of Negro citizens in the face of the prejudiced challenge of these Southerners.

The point of all this is that: regardless of the war with Japan, Italy and Germany, these Southerners have not called a truce in their war against us. We can't afford to ignore the challenge they offer. We must organize to protect our friends. We have power, too, if we act concertedly. The real challenge to us is in how far we will go to protect our friends.

What does it mean that Carmody should have been sacrificed for us? Or Straus? Or Foreman? Shall we forget them as we have Horton? What will our other friends in Washington do if we do not take action against our enemies who are beheading our friends?

It is the duty of every Negro man and woman in Detroit to let his representatives in Congress and Senator Brown know how he or she feels about the axe which struck Foreman's neck. It is the duty of every Negro man and woman in the United States to seek organization, political organization, to be used in behalf of the race and of its friends who are being blitzed by the terrorist legions of prejudice despite the challenge to existence which this nation faces.

Negro Has No Strong African Past

JAN 9 - 1942

Gary American

THE MYTH OF THE NEGRO PAST, by Dr. Melville J. Herskovits, professor of anthropology, Northwestern university, Evanston, Ill. Published by Harper and Brothers, 374 pages, $4.

Gary Indiana

(Reviewed by Frank Marshall Davis for ANP)

It is generally believed that the American Negro has no African background worth mentioning. Some students of the racial problem ahs advantageously used this premise to show that the Duskymerican is the same as all other Americans except for color. Such distinguished men as Dr. Alain LeRoy Locke of Howard university and others have accepted this gelief and amplified it. To such persons — and that obviously includes most of us — Dr. Herskovits' new volume will come as a shock.

The distinguished professor belongs to that small group of scientists who are both friends of the Negro and seekers after truth. For more than 20 years Herskovits has paintakingly studied the Negro in both the new world and Africa. Results of his significant research have appeared previously in books and articles. This new volume, the first of a series on the Negro in America and sponsored by the Carnegie foundation under the editorship of Dr. Gunnar Myrdal, is his greatest achievement to date where the black man is concerned.

What Herskovits disproves are such widespread beliefs as these: (1) that Negroes are naturally childlike and adjust easily and happily to the most unsatisfactory social conditions; (2) that only the poorer stock of Africa was enslaved; (3) that Negroes were brought from all parts of Africa and so mixed up in their American distribution as to lose tribal identity; (4) that even if Negroes of a given tribe had been able to live together and had the desire to continue tribal customs, their cuture was so low and savage that it would have been lost in contact with superior European civilization.

Briefly, the anthropologist has the data to show, in answer: (1) the complex economic and social character of African civilizations permitted the Negro to fit into strong traidtions and behavior patterns. An understanding of this background should mean as slavery, but even this was under protest. Slave uprisings, revolts and escapes plagued the new world. Slaves killed themselves and consistently practiced a work "slow down" which gave rise to the popular fallacy of the race's "inherent" laziness; (2) slavery engulfed every strata of native African life; (3) most slaves came from areas near the west coast of Africa. These west coast people consisted mainly of four large tribes which perpetuated their cultural outlines through being numerically superior to slaves from other African tribes and assimilating them, and (5) west coast African civilization ranks high among the world's nonmachine cultures, is in some ways more practical and realistic than European civilization which in certain aspects it resembles, and its patterns are today found in varying degrees of strength in North and South America and the Caribbeans.

Why is the Baptist church the most popular of faiths among Negroes? What causes the strong interest in big funerals, burial societies and ritualistic fraternal orders. Why do many Negroes turn their heads when they laugh and refuse to look a person of higher position or authority in the eye? Why is the mother instead of the father so often the head of the family? These and many other questions have their answers rooted in African customs and habits.

JAN 9 - 1942

Dr. Herskovits makes ~~the~~ omportant observation that a people with a past of which they may be proud cannot be called inferior. The Negro has such a past with much to the Duskymerican as does an appreciation of his homeland to the Irish-American or the ItalianlAmerican. America has knowingly accepted many of their traditions in becoming the melting pot of all peoples; all unknowingly certain patterns of African custom have been woven into the national life. An American is a blend of many backgrounds.

The Myth of the Negro Past should be required reading in schools everywhere. Let such books as this become the intellectual fare of the nation's young and a major victory will have been won against race prejudice and intolerance.

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

No Cultivation of Hitler's Fifth Column

JAN 10 1942

• Charles Lindbergh, according to a story in the New York Post yesterday, is still spreading Nazi racialism and working for a Hitler victory.

Then days after the treacherous attack upon Pearl Harbor, which Lindbergh never condemned, he expressed the view to America First members that Britain should have assisted Germany in conquering the Soviet Union, the staunch ally of this country. He embroidered this fascist position with typical "Aryan" talk that this is a "racial" war of white against colored peoples. Such views stem straight from Goebbels on the one hand and the Japanese rulers on the other. Nor is it surprising since Lindbergh still wears the medal from Hitler and a decoration from the fascist Tokio regime.

Meanwhile, a press dispatch reveals that General Wood, another recalcitrant America Firster, has been appointed to the staff of the Army's Chicago Ordnance District. However, people like Lindbergh are to be sharply distinguished from patriotic Americans, including some rank-and-file members of the America First Committee, who have abandoned it and are now honestly and sincerely backing the government's war effort.

But these disclosures of America First members meeting ten days after our country is at war with the Axis, shows that a certain group of them, who are fascist by conviction, have never given up their pro-Hitler ideology. They are still lurking for the first opportunity to stab the nation in the back, to promote war against our Soviet allies, and to break up the unity of the 26 nations joined against Hitler.

As the Daily Worker and other progressive voices stated from the outset, such outright fascists as Lindbergh cannot be trusted in the armed forces of our country, let alone in high Administrative posts. The appeasement of these Hitler sympathizers is cultivation of the same kind of Fifth Column which played a powerful role in the conquest of France and Spain. Such a policy followed in the United States, can have a dangerous, if not disastrous, effect upon our war for national independence and security.

Preparedness 70 Years Ago

In the early 1870s it was feared the inflamed negroes from James and other islands would land at the foot of King street, or along South Bay and run amok in the lower part of town. The men of the Carolina Rifle club were on patrol, or subject to sudden call. The men included boys in their early teens.

5-CK

In a dwelling in Ladson court were congregated women and children. They had a supply of axes and pokers and on the wood stove many gallons of boiling water. If evil doers had broken into that house that night they would have been fatally scalded, The besieged would have won.

There is a lesson to be drawn from this for the things of the moment. Women of Charleston in 1942 have as much courage as women of Charleston had in the early 1870s. Living has been softer of late years, but chins can, and should, be held up! A time of sacrifice by loyal and patriotic American women is here again.

PRAYER IS URGED BY NEGRO JUDGE

Closer Co-Operation of the Negro, White Man Needed, He Tells Howard High

A need for Negroes and white people of this nation to get closer together and "get on their knees and pray earnestly to God," was expressed to the students of Howard High school yesterday by Judge Edward Henry, Philadelphia magistrate, in an address in the school auditorium at the morning assembly.

The judge, here for a brief visit with relatives and conferences with local colored Elks, painted a gloomy picture of the outlook during and following the present world crisis. He said students should make the most of what opportunities they have at the present time, because "no man can prophesy the future of any of us in this country following this war."

5-GK

"We are pretty well fortified religiously as regards churches and preachers, but the need most urgent now is to get the spirit of God in our hearts, and when this is done men will be in better position to live the type of fruitful lives He intended that they should live," Judge Henry stated. "There is no way to legislate morals into people, nor is there any way to legislate prejudices out of any of us. It must be done through prayer and a change of heart of the whole group that makes up our nation."

Jurist Since 1925

Judge Henry has been on the bench in Philadelphia since 1925. He is the brother of the late James A. Henry, former principal of Howard High school, and after whom the school on Grove street adjoining the College Hill Court project, and the Negro branch Young Men's Christian association are named. He is en route to Hot Springs for a forty-two-day rest.

On the specially arranged program also was Attorney Earl Howard, Washington, D. C., public relations director for a large Negro manufacturing concern.

Attorney Howard spoke from the topic, "The Time Is Now," and urged students to "a keener development of the cultural side of life." "Politeness is not a mark of servility or humility, but one of the finest traits any individual can cultivate," he said, and added, "it costs so little but pays such big returns."

"There must be no procrastination. Whatever we are going to get or hope to get for ourselves must be done now. We must make sacrifices, but remember, nothing sacrificed, nothing gained, is as true now as when first uttered.

In speaking of common courtesy, he called attention to the loud raucous talking of students on the streets, street cars, corridors of public buildings, and said, "this type of low-brow effort to attract attention is a sure mark of ignorance of the worst kind."

"Juke" Origin

Every so often, some columnist, etymologist or what-not trots forth an explanation of what he thinks must be the origin of the little word "juke," which sprang up in Florida about three or four years ago, and has since swept to the four corners of the nation. Outside Florida it is usually applied to those tune dispensaries known as "juke organs." However, Deputy Sheriff Claude High of Sheriff D. C. Coleman's force comes satisfyingly close to naming the origin of the word. He remembers the negroes on his grandfather's West Florida plantation used the word ever since he can remember. In the early days it was applied to little refreshment places they frequented, usually a building the outfittings of which consisted merely of a counter, a tub of "soda pop," a few bottles of "white lightnin'" tucked in a convenient spot and something, sometimes, on which music was made. He is convinced the word is African in origin, brought to this country by slaves and was probably colloquial even among the savages. White people did not start use of it until about four years ago.—Miami News.

THE SPIRIT OF TALMADGE

The implied threat of the city attorney of Atlanta, Ga., in advising the school board of that city to discharge Negro teachers attempting to sue the city for equal salaries with white teachers, reveals that the spirit of Talmadge is far from dead in that commonwealth.

Governor Talmadge engineered the recent discharge of able educators from the University of Georgia system allegedly because they advocated racial co-education; and now Atlanta officials want to discharge competent and intelligent teachers because they want the salaries due them.

This will disillusion those who might have believed that Talmadge was speaking only for himself.

The United States Supreme Court has decided that education and everything pertaining to it, including teachers' salaries, must be equal though separate, and nothing Georgia can do will alter that opinion.

Georgia itself wrote this proviso into its constitution in order to regain admission to the federal Union, and it cannot legally go back on it now if it wishes to stay in the Union.

It has rigidly enforced the provision of seperation but, like its sister Southern states, has honored the equality provision only in the breach.

Negroes in general and Negro teachers in particular are determined that both provisions shall be enforced, and this is evidenced by the action of the more advanced Negro teachers associations in several states, including Georgia.

Attorney A. T. Walden who is representing the Atlanta Citizens' Committee which is sponsoring the action leading to equalization of teachers' salaries has declared that "we should file action as soon as a definite and final answer is received from the board of education."

This voices the new spirit of Negro teachers in all parts of the country, whether in Louisiana, Florida, Missouri, Virginia, Georgia, Kentucky or Tennessee.

This spirit, rinforced by money, intelligence, legal ability and mass solidarity will win in the end, no matter what the Talmadge-minded officials may say or do.

Lack of Training Handicaps Negro's Progress, Leader Says

Benjamin F. Hubert, President of Georgia State College at Savannah, Outlines Problems Faced by Race in 1942.

JAN 4 - 1942

By BENJAMIN F. HUBERT.
President of the Georgia State College.

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 3.—(AP) During the past year, President Roosevelt has enunciated the four freedoms for which the democracies of the world are contending—"freedom of speech and expression, freedom of every person to worship God in his own way; freedom from want, and freedom from terror."

Negroes, forming as they do, more than one-tenth of the total national population, and from 40 to 50 per cent of the population here in the southeast, are vitally interested in any kind of program or movement that promises freedom of economic opportunity.

Thinking Negroes are grateful for the increasing number of expressions that have come from national and social leaders, evidencing their understanding that in the fight to sustain democratic ideals, there must be clear recognition of the fact that all men must be provided an equal chance to achieve.

One of the difficulties confronting Negroes who seek employment in industry is the lack of training for the particular job requirements.

An attempt is being made by the vocational national defense fund and by the National Youth Administration, to train Negroes for industry. In Georgia, a total of 944 Negroes have had training under the vocational defense program. These training centers are located in Atlanta, Augusta, Columbus, Macon, Marietta, Newnan and Savannah. Much of the training is in woodwork, including cabinet making, bricklaying and cement work, auto mechanics, blueprint reading and some sheet metal work and trade cooking.

The field of agriculture offers employment to the largest number of Negroes. According to the United States Census report for 1930, of the 10,472,000 persons employed on the farms, 1,980,000 or 19 per cent are Negroes.

This means that out of every five persons farming in this country, one is a Negro. When it is realized that Negro farmers are located largely in the southern states, it will be readily apparent that in states like Georgia, where there are approximately 70,000 Negro farm operators, farming is dependent largely upon Negro labor.

But farming today is not as it has been in the past. Successful cotton farming in Georgia and the southeast offers, at best, a doubtful future. The Negro finds himself confronted with the keenest kind of competition. The one-horse plow is forced to compete with the tractor, and the scythe with the mowing machine and the reaper and binder.

In Georgia, the Negro Extension Service, vocational schools of agriculture, and other agencies, are at work seeking to better equip the Negro farmer for the long pull that lies ahead.

In spite of handicaps that have tended to discourage Negroes in their outlook in both urban and rural life everywhere, we find them still optimistic and hopeful.

A defense training program will be established at old Clark University campus by the Fulton county board of education. Georgia State College is expanding its program with over $10,000 worth of technical equipment to provide training in the technical arts for Negro youth. The National Youth Administration and many of the public vocational schools are providing opportunity for our youths to improve themselves for jobs that are just around the corner.

In business, in professional life, and in farming, 1942 can only mean more enlightened progress for an underprivileged group in a gradually enlightening world.

NEGRO LEADERSHIP MOVES NORTH

JAN 1 - 1942

By JONATHAN DANIELS
In The Southern Frontier

In Gaston County, North Carolina, early this year three or four white hoodlums on a drunk got into a row with a Negro man. They went off and got guns and killed him. Justice moved promptly. The men were convicted and all of them sentenced to prison for long terms. Then suddenly, as it seemed to me, the case turned up in the lynching statistics. That seemed crazy to me. It seemed crazy to some Negro leaders in North Carolina. Here private murder, promptly punished by orderly justice, was called lynching. Of course, if it was a lynching the same people who called it one should have been the first to strike off a medal in honor of Gaston County which had promptly convicted and imprisoned every member of the "lynching mob." But the action stopped with what seemed to me the absurdity of stigmatizing the country and the State in the statistics.

Does Geography Determine Leadership?

Asking explanation, I was told that Northern Negro leaders who had been urging Federal anti-lynching legislation were unwilling to accept the statistics which showed the approach of disappearance of lyinching in the South. Southern Negro leaders were unwilling to resist the demand for a definition which would tag more killings as lynchings for fear of being denounced from north of the Mason & Dixon line as Uncle Toms or Handkerchief Heads. I may have been misinformed. But the case itself definitely seemed to be one in which lack of understanding of the facts seemed to so shape the statistics about lynchings as to reduce their effectiveness in the campaign against lynchings in the South. It made me wonder whether the most dynamic figures in the leadership of the Negro people have not ceased to be indigenous to the South and therefore unable to give the Negroes where most of the Negroes remain a leadership which will really help them where they are.

As the war spirit changes all things, this may be an important ear in race relations as in everything else. This year stands before war and such a time makes it easy to forget everything but war. Big changes in the life of the American Negro were set almost secretly into motion in 1915 and 1916 when a new pull was given to migration. Also in 1915 Booker T. Washington died. Undoubtedly some more hurried advocates of the Negro's advance might in these more hurried times regard him, if he still lived, as an Uncle Tom. Certainly as a man of the past, he would not be the man for the present. But it is easy for anybody to see that in the South then he represented a Southern Negro leadership which had things to say to the nation and which received a national hearing. I am not aware of any such Negro leadership in the South today.

Results of Absentee Leadership

Now sometimes it seems to me that, as Negro leadership has migrated North along with the migrating thousands of Negroes, the gradual but consistent result has been that almost every time the Negro has expanded his legal rights he has lost more of his economic opportunity. Like every other Southerner, I have seen Negroes pushed out of the jobs which once were thought to belong to them in the towns. As a Southerner, too, I am aware of the newer figures which show that he is also being pushed out of his place on the land. Sometimes it seems to me that the Negro's advance has moved largely into the realm of theory and law, of logic and official declaration and out of the actual lives of the great submerged majority of the colored people themselves. I wonder sometimes, as a white man honestly interested, if Negro leadership like some other things in the South has become increasingly absentee, and sometimes, as absentee, increasingly theoretical and impractical.

Progress May Be on Paper

This can be dismissed as a white man's opinion. I do not pretend to the knowledge about their leaders and their directions which educated Negroes inside and outside of the South should possess. It is, of course, undoubtedly true that the Negro in the North has a freedom of expression which makes it possible for him to speak for his race with a direct vigor which might be impossible in the Black Belt of Alabama. Certainly an able novelist may remain a Mississippi Negro even if he writes about Chicago and New York. Of course, a racal crusader in New York may still be the Georgia boy he was born. I know that every Negro in the North who seeks to protect and serve his people in the South may de well to ask for extremes, as some consider them, in the hope of getting a little for his people. It seems to me, nevertheless, that there is needed a Negro leadership in the South able to speak in it without fear that they will be denounced as Uncle Toms for facing the practical facts which confront and surround real people—even with the courage to face being called Cncle Tomse if necessary—in order that the Negro's progress may be among people and not merely on paper.

Prominent White Minister Answers Editor On Observance Of Race Relations Sunday

An editorial entitled "National Holiday" in The Christian Review, Philadelphia, of November 27, criticised the observance of Race Relations Sunday by the churches of America, terming it "a strained sort of worship" and commenting that "the event is soon identified with the past."

Replying to this editorial the Rev Philip C. Jones, associate minister at the noted Madison Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City, who is chairman of the Church Activities Committee of the Department of Race Relations, Federal Council of Churches, which sponsors the observance, pointed out that the Day has for twenty years been of large educational value to thousands of churches in our country.

"The observance is in no sense a 'national holiday,'" wrote Mr. Jones this week to the editor of The Christian Review, but "a time when Christian people of all races in America might well 'take stock' of their own interracial practices in the light of their Christian professions. The results show that as an educational process in our churches it has furnished the basis for much progress toward interracial justice in America. .. Through many activities white and Negro people have learned more about each other in the churches, on college campuses and in community organizations. This has led to year-round interracial activities in scores of instances. These experiences, new in many communities, have opened many avenues of opportunity for the minority racial groups."

With reference to the editor's statement that 'both groups are critical," and "wherever the races are thrown together it is always by some special arrangement," Mr. Jones replied that "There is still much to be said and done about the critical opinions and attitudes which members of the races have toward each other. We all realize that neither in the church nor outside of it has America fully awakened to its responsibility in this regard; but we are also mindful of the value of the continual educational process such as Race Relations Sunday stimulates. In this we ask all our editors to join with those ministers and other church people who are at work in changing racial attitudes so that not only this observance but every other effort for better race relations in America may continue to flourish until Brotherhood shall be a reality in our country."

The Federal Council has just issued its annual Message calling the churches to the 20th Anniversary of Race Relations Sunday, February 8, 1942, marking Brotherhood Month. Initiated in 1922 by the Department of Race Relations, George E. Haynes, executive secretary, and Katherine Gardner, associate, the observance is national in scope, a regular promotion through the principal Protestant church bodies of America and has the cooperation of allied religious, educational and civic agencies through out the country. Special program helps and posters are in circulation for the celebration. The Department's co-chairmen are Mrs. Lucius R. Eastman and Bishop J. A. Gregg.

America Wake Up

America wake up! How long will you sleep like a sleek over-fed giant, while pygmies sow all around you the seeds that will sprout, seemingly over-night, and destroy just the thing you think you are saving? Everywhere men mouth the phrase "Democratic Way of Life"; machines and factories have at last discovered the secret of perpetual motion and run ceaselessly making arms—arms—arms. But in this World War II governments do not capitulate to arms alone. And the pygmies, working like moles, know this. They know that governments are overthrown from within because of unrest, dissatisfaction, and lies.

Here in America the seeds have for years been scattered as thick as dew on a spring morning. For where else in the world do there exist conditions that make it possible for one man to rise from a splitter of rails to the presidency of a nation—while another, even after seventy years, has to be a "Handkerchief Head" in order to hold the job that barely pays enough to keep body and soul together? Do not extremes breed unrest and dissatisfaction? There is no quarrel with the premise that any individual may rise to whatever heights his inherent powers permit. But there most emphatically a protest against the determination of any one group to band itself together to bring about the economic stunting of another. There is a cry raised to high heaven against exploitations that grow worse rather than better.

The whole world still shudders at the mere mention of the Black Hole of Calcutta into which one-hundred forty-six Englishmen were packed so closely that only twenty-three were still alive the next morning. But one hundred ten million people look on with detached indifference at those among the more than twelve million Negroes who die like flies of tuberculosis and syphilis in the filthy black holes of tenements in American cities. For the Englishmen at least death was swift.

In Harlem a single block between Seventh and Lennox Avenues houses more than 3,871 black people. But the problem is closer than Calcutta, closer than Harlem. It is right here around us. It is right here in the alleys behind alleys where Negroes live like animals because they are Negroes. It is right here where 45.7 per cent of all deaths of Negroes between 15 and 19 years are due to tuberculosis.

It is a known fact that tuberculosis and syphilis are the white man's diseases. No traces of these scourges were found among Negroes until they came in contact with whites. Since then these diseases have lecherously fixed themselves on this racial group, and thrives and spreads in the so termed "nigger property" to which Negroes are relegated. If then, the white man is responsible for the spread of tuberculosis and syphilis, his, too, should be the responsibility for eliminating it. Perhaps the reply comes back that there are provisions for just this. Maybe the recently established Servants' Clinic is cited as a case in point. But is it? While it is a commendable thing to have a clinic of this sort, does this get at the root of the evil? Is this not more an indication of fear and group selfishness? Any family would be willing to support an institution that would assure them a disease-free cook or nurse. But these same public-spirited persons are unwilling to go a step beyond and take the measures necessary for the elimination of slums that are the breeding ground of disease; or to pay wages that would assure their servants milk, eggs and fresh fruit to sometimes augment the customary diet of corn bread, greens and too many starches.

Some people—who don't know any better—ask the question, "Why don't Negroes help themselves?" There is no Negro in the world who can do anything for himself unless he has the "right permission". Who owns the tools of production? Who controls the educational and legal systems? How, then, can any Negro scale the barriers that can be—and are—placed in his way unless he is permitted to do so? Why has there been one Booker Washington? one George Carver? Is it possible that in 12,000,000 people their equals do not, and never have existed?

A Study In White And Colored

The most important matter in our political situation at the present is the race question. We cannot be told too often that no question is settled until it is settled right. With an earnest desire to do my little bit toward a right solution of this problem, I write these lines.

First, I wish to call attention to the points of friction. When we see these points clearly we will be able to see the direction toward which we are to look for light to enable white and colored to live together in peace and harmony. To that end there must be a recognition of the facts that there are two elements in both races: THERE ARE GOOD WHITE AND GOOD COLORED; THERE ARE BAD WHITE AND BAD COLORED. A further fact must be recognized: THE WHITE NEED THE COLORED AND THE COLORED NEED THE WHITES.

After we have these fundamentals fixed in our minds, we must know where to look for our trouble. Our trouble does not lie between the good whites and the good colored, but between the bad whites and the bad colored. The good whites dealing with the bad colored will have trouble; the good colored dealing with the bad whites will have trouble; but the worst trouble comes when the bad whites deal with the bad colored. When this comes about both parties must suffer.

When we study this question carefully we will see that both whites and colored must realize in what respects we need each other. Speaking in general terms, the whites need the colored as laborers. We understand colored labor better than any other kind of labor and appreciate them more. To that end both whites and colored must know that labor is not slavery but liberty. That no one can go any higher or do any better than to be a servant, for Jesus himself said that he who would be greatest must be servant of all. Once we get into our minds the nobility of all honest work, we have gone a long way toward the solution of the entire labor question. Then the colored must realize as never before that they need the whites as employers. I can conceive of no more serious economic revolution than that whites should cease to employ colored. We have seen some indications of this already in the mechanized farm and in modern domestic equipment. Should this become universal, widespread suffering must come to our colored population. No government on earth could survive caring for all our unemployed colored people. Nor could the whites survive with no outlet for the products of the mechanized farm. If this should come to pass both the whites and the colored would thus destroy themselves.

Let me insist that this is the time for some cool and careful thinking on the part of both the whites and the colored. I can conceive of no greater enemies to their country than whites who foment hate for the colored or the colored who listen to the seductive voices that would lead them to sullen and spiteful hatred for the whites. I can conceive of no greater patriots than the whites who recognize the principle that the laborer is worthy of his hire and who do all in their power to improve the living conditions of the colored both physically and spiritually. Equally as great are the colored patriots who become better servants and gladly and happily cooperate with their white neighbors and employers in making this a better and more prosperous community.

What this country will be in a thousand years from now only God knows. We must leave the issues of the far distant future to the people who live at that time. Of one thing I am sure that the whites and the colored of THIS DAY must work out their present problems in the atmosphere of respect each for the other. Our best leaders, like our vegetables, are home grown, both the whites and the colored. The whites and the colored in this country have grown up together. This country is OUR country. We MUST oppose with all our might all divisive elements in both races. We MUST strive as best we can to produce the best whites and the best colored in the whole round world.—N. H. Williams in The Camilla Enterprise.

Spartanburg, S. C., Herald
August 17, 1942

“He Had Done a Wicked Thing”

Judge Eugene Blease apparently backed water in his radio speech in Spartanburg when he explained that he had not injected any racial issues in the South Carolina campaign, but had sought to suppress agitators. Attacking outside agitation, he said:

“I have said and I repeat that the people of South Carolina, white and colored, can get along peaceably. I have said and I repeat that these meddlers cannot do in South Carolina what they have been doing in other states where they are trying to put the Negro on an equal political basis with the white people.”

Judge Blease also said that if the editor of the Spartanburg Herald (please take notice that he no longer called it the Maybank Herald) would visit the section where he lives he would find that virtually all the Negroes in that section “will tell him that I am a friend of the colored people.”

We think that what the Judge intended to say was that if the visit had been paid to his section before he began his campaign for the Senate it would have been found that the Negroes of his community trusted him and believed in his friendship. As a citizen and lawyer and the distinguished Chief Justice of the supreme court of South Carolina Judge Blease had never antagonized any element of his county. He had not been in politics that inveigled him into drawing, the color line. As a member of the supreme court he was supposed to be the friend of all classes, and we think that he justly and fairly represented all.

But there came a time when Judge Blease yielded to ambition to be a United States senator. That came after that marvelous vision he described when the campaign was launched at Lexington. That was the vision when Judge Blease, after reading Jonah, saw a great fish with three fins in which were concealed “more devils that vast hell can hold.” After seeing that fish he just had to enter the race for the Senate, however much he disliked to do so. And so he announced his candidacy.

What do the Negroes of Judge Blease's section think of him now? Doubtless they are not talking since the incidents that have taken place at Greenwood. But what do his colored friends think of Judge Blease's statements made in his speech at Spartanburg on July 30 when he demanded that more Negroes be accepted for Army service. He said “A negro does not have to be educated to use a razor; if they haven't got enough education to go into the Army, they've got enough education to go to the cotton fields and dig ditches.”

How do the colored friends of whom Judge Blease boasted feel about that unkind cut from their friend. That wasn't the way he had talked to them and about them before he became a candidate for the Senate. They probably are asking, “What's come over the Judge? What have we done to make him say those hard things of us. Our opinion of and good will for him have not changed in all the years. He has been kind to us. He has been friendly. We have felt proud to know him and to welcome him when he came home from Columbia where he served on the big court. What has changed our respected friend that he has suddenly hurled the harpoon of criticism at us?”

As this newspaper sees the situation Judge Blease is the victim of a vaulting ambition that couldn't take the hurdles and fell on the other side. That fish vision was too much for him. Those fins loaded with “treason, strategems and spoils” was just too much for his nerves. Some unwise advisers probably suggested that the race issue would win some votes, and he “took the bait, hook, line and sinker.”

The Herald has said and it repeats (to borrow from Judge Blease's speech in Spartanburg) that the Judge should be ashamed of hurling this question of the races into South Carolina politics. To quote a line from the Ancient Mariner “He had done a wicked thing and it would work him woe.”

That applies to the state of South Carolina as well as to Judge Blease. He has sown the seeds of discord that will bear bitter fruit. Already they have begun to bear. This newspaper wanted to remain on the sidelines while this race was being run, but when Eugene Talmadge's Man Friday, Col. Camp, declared that South Carolina was threatened by racial disturbances, The Herald resented it and will continue to do so to the end of this campaign.

We repeat that Judge Blease has done a wicked thing. He will regret it the remainder of his life. The incidents at Greenwood should lead him to change his campaign speeches. That might prove embarrassing and he may not have the courage to do it. He has “cut his patchin'” and may feel it a duty to his advisers to keep on firing, regardless of its effect upon the peace, prosperity and happiness of the people of his state.

Working in league with the "White Supremacy" gang of Eugene Talmadge, Governor of Georgia, David Clark, editor of a textile manufacturer's paper in Charlotte, N. C., has:

(2) Called upon white Southern soldiers to "kill" those who try to force them into a "social equality" movement.

(3) Branded our war administration fascist.

(4) And sabotaged the war effort.

56K

Irrefutable evidence of Clark's seditious writings and activity were given to the Daily Worker by prominent trade union leaders in the South.

This man is guilty of treason.

Quoting pro-fascist Eugene Talmadge in an editorial on Aug. 15, Clark added to Talmadge's malicious attack on the Negro people by stating that:

"The most damnable of all is the movement to force army blood banks to mix Negro blood with that of whites.

"Southern boys who are going to fight for their country are told that if they are wounded in the service of their country, they must, in spite of the traditions of the South, submit to having Negro blood put in their veins."

Then in one of the most flagrant calls to murder, Clark editorially says, "Most of them would kill those who forced them to submit to any such infusion."

In the same editorial, David Clark gives the cue to the Ku Klux Klan, the "White Supremacy" mob and other bourbon Fascist group.

"That the movement for the promotion of social equality is well organized is shown not only by the publicity such as Mrs. Roosevelt was induced to give, but by incidents which are happening here and there."

Calling for open rebellion against the nation's war effort, he states that: "Southern people should be alive to the fact that there is a definite and well organized movement to take advantage of the war emergency and force social equality upon the South."

Clark shows his admiration for Negro-baiter Talmadge and Gov. Frank Dixon of Alabama by quoting them liberally.

He liked Dixon's attack on the Federal government. He gave it a prominent place in his editorial. It follows in part:

"The U. S. Employment Service has adopted policies, the effects of which are to break down the principle of segregation under which white and Negro races have lived in peace in the South all the years since reconstruction.

"The thinking people of the South want Negroes educated and trained and their man power used for war and industry, but this must be done within the framework of the existing social structure.

"I will not permit the State of Alabama to be subject to the whims of any Federal committee."

In a threefold assault on trade unions, President Roosevelt and our war effort, Clark asserted that the President was a dictator working in conjunction with the unions to bring "the Hitler System" to America.

ATTACKS ROOSEVELT

While Clark's talk sounds like the rantings of a madman, it has been instrumental in unleashing a reign of terror against both union members and Negroes. His ravings are being taken up by appeasers and obstructionists in an effort to sell us out to Hitler.

He declared, for example that "President Roosevelt's unwillingness to take any position, not favored by union leaders, has resulted in far less war goods being produced that would have been produced by free men."

By free men, he means members of company unions. Clark is a notorious labor-baiter. His Textile Bulletin is the mouthpiece of the most reactionary spokesmen of the Textile and Dye industry.

The Negro-baiting, labor-baiting, and insurrectionary declarations in his publication show him up as a Hitler mouthpiece of the Coughlin, McCormick, Patterson ilk.

In a mythical conversation titled "Freedom Terminates" in the May issue of the Bulletin, in which a worker speaks to an employer, he brands President Frank Gorham, of the University of North Carolina, and member of the National War Labor Board, a dictator. He further declares that Graham and the Administration have imposed the "order" of "Hitler" on America.

A NEW 'RACKET' SPRINGS UP— PREJUDICE IS BEING SOLD!

Black Dispatch 9-[illegible]-42

The Black Dispatch has discovered this 'racket' to be "The Alabama Women's Democratic Club, Inc.' which is seeking $1.00 memberships from all white people who dislike Negroes.

Chief qualification for membership in the organization is a belief in race prejudice. The only requirement for membership is the $1.00 fee.

According to reports from the deep South, many white people are taking out memberships by flooding the organization's office with money.

We publish below the membership card of the club which speaks for itself.

I am opposed to white people and Negroes being seated together on street cars or public places.

I am opposed to white girls working under Negro supervision in government offices.

Believing in the above named principles, I desire to become a member of said club and pay thereto membership fee of $1.00 to be used in promoting the objects of the club.

[illegible]ers of the Black Dispatch will recall that the Ku Klux Klan [illegible] heyday was an organization with a similar program whose [illegible]ers waxed fat financially by selling race prejudice to gullible white people.

In the course of time the klan was exposed as a 'racket', its strong hold in the South was broken, and many of its leaders ended in jail and disgrace.

The klan came on the scene under the cloak of a sheet and a pillow case. It emerged under cover of darkness to carry out its deeds. It lived to prove the theory that an entangling alliance contains enough power to destroy itself.

Judging from the above membership card for "The Alabama Women's Democratic Club, Inc." the klan and its spirit is coming back on the scene—this time shielded behind the skirts of women—which is a more cowardly disguise than wrapping a sheet around the body and a pillow case around the head.

Believe it or not, the above plate is the exact reproduction of a page from an English work book, published by the Webb Publishing Co., Oklahoma City, Okla., and used in the public schools of Texas and other states. Note the 15th sentence, an exercise in English: "The mob hanged the negro on the seventh limb of the sycamore tree." This is a good example of how democracy is taught in our schools. Young immature minds are conditioned to the rightness of an old American custom, "They lynched him on a tree." What price democracy?

CRITICISM OF MEN AND CONDITIONS WHICH MAKE OR MAR THE FUTURE OF A RACE

IN December, a Washington, D. C. district judge ruled in a restrictive covenant case that the purchase of a home in a restricted area from the federal Home Owners Loan corporation did not cancel the covenant. As the covenant in question restricts a section of the city to only white people as tenants or owners the decision places indirectly a governmental stamp of approval on such covenants. As associations throughout the country are developing these covenants in all states of the union and Negroes must face the possibility that it could happen that a state might get every piece of property signed up under a covenant and Negroes could no longer live in that state. If the energetic Nordic organizations extend their effort far enough and wide enough the Negro would be facing the situation that there was not a single piece of land in the grand old United States where it would be legal for him to live. This would then legally deny him a place to live. Africa here we come.

No one has taken what amounts to a Gallup Poll on the present attitude of the Negro towards his native land. Following the recent lynching, with all the Hitler trimmings of oil cans and burning flesh it was not amazing to observe that the morale of the Negro dropped. With complete spontaneity a number of Negroes in different parts of the country coined the phrase—"Remember Sikeston." They mumbled this phrase when they saw flashed before them the national slogan—"Remember Pearl Harbor." It was to many the perfect retort. This situation does not make for national unity, but it must be remembered that the daily lynching of the patriotic spirit of the Negro by discrimination of kinds can create no other frame of mind. If the law of physics that says that every action has an equal reaction and in the opposite direction may be applied to social forces, America is building some forces in America which will in the end be hard to combat.

Much has been made of Sister Kinney's treatment of infantile paralysis. Financial grants from the national federation started by the President may be made to permit Sister Kinney to extend her experiments and to train personnel in her method of treatment. But all seem to have forgotten that Dr. George Washington Carver has also originated a treatment for this dread disease. Dr. Carver's method uses oil. No mention is made of his contribution to the battle against poliomyelitis. Would it not be still another of those strange American happenings if Dr. Carver's treatment turned out to be the one treatment that marked the beginning of the end of the battle against this disease? Sister Kinney is white. Dr. Carver is a Negro. Even American scientists might permit blind prejudice to defer the day when a medical battle is won.

"Parade," the weekly picture newspaper, which is a feature of more than a dozen daily newspapers simply had to refer to some young colored children as "pickaninnies" in the issue of January 25. It is to be noted that a large number of the dailies which uses this syndicated feature are southern newspapers. However, The Detroit Free Press, the Chicago Sun and the Syracuse Herald-American, northern papers, use this picture supplement as part of their Sunday editions. These northern newspapers will give anwser to all protests. They will say "we did not know about it," and add that they do not edit this part of their paper, but merely insert it in the Sunday edition. These answers will not hold water! If they have a policy that does not permit the use of such words they will pass on this policy to every syndicate if they have any respect for their Negro readers. The only answer that will register is to show our resentment by not buying the papers which let the word slip through under any circumstances.

"White Race A Minority In World," Says Walter White

JAN 31 1942

NEW YORK, Jan. 29—"There is no hope whatever for an enduring peace in the world until the right to full participation in government and to equal justice is accorded black, brown, and yellow peoples, as well as white," declared Walter White, secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People last week, in a broadcast from Freedom House at its formal dedication. Recognition of this fact by the sponsors of Freedom House was hailed by Mr. White as a hopeful sign.

Mr. White pointed out that the white peoples of the world should remember that they are the minority; and that the majority, composed of non-whites, would not forever accept a world in which color relegated dark people to inferior status.

"Lynchings, discriminatiton in the defense program, and other manifestations of racial bigotry are being used by anti-American propagandists to label the United States as a hypocrite. Twenty-four hours after white military police attacked Negro soldiers at Alexandria, La., on January 9. Japanese shortwave broadcasts were heard in the United States citing the Alexandria riot as proof of what would be done to colored peoples if the democracies won the war. White America and white Britain must, in enlightened selfishness, wipe out every vestige of racial discrimination within their own borders or they may suffer defeat and humiliation."

Mr. White was one of a number of persons who spoke at the dedication of Freedom House which is designed to be a center of activities against totalitarianism thruout the world. Wendell Willkie declared that, "Free men know how to be tough, free men know how to win." Others broadcasting were Dorothy Thompson, columnist; Dr. Frank Kingdon, co-chairman with Miss Thompson of Freedom House; Richard G. Casey, Australian Minister to the United States; Herbert Agar of the Louisville Courier-Journal; Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, Mexican Ambassador to the United States; Validimir Hurba, Czechoslovakian Minister to Washington, and others.

The Direction

Edwin R. Embree, student of American racial problems, author of Brown America and a lecturer whose words are familiar in the South, writes in the March American Mercury that the Nazi trick of comparing German treatment of Jews with American treatment of Negroes is entirely unjustified. "What Hitler tries to cover up," Mr. Embree writes, "is the difference in direction. While he has crassly reversed the clock of civilization, we in America have been slowly moving toward more tolerance and freer opportunity for all peoples."

Mr. Embree cites the rise in Negro literacy from 5 per cent to 85 per cent since emancipation. The death rate has dropped from 32 per thousand to 14 per thousand. Negroes have accumulated more than $2,500,000,000 in wealth and their total purchasing power approximates two billion dollars annually. The constantly increasing importance of the Negro in American arts is widely recognized and accepted.

Mr. Embree is wise to point out the direction in which our development lies. For it is in this direction that American people must, and will, see their hope. While he mentions the achievements of, and increasing opportunities for, Negroes in America, Mr. Embree would be among the first to call attention to the discriminations and pressures on Negroes and the poor opportunities for Negro education, recreation and industrial skills which now widely exist.

Hitler, indeed, fools no one in America with his comparison. But, it seems to us, it is greatly desirable that fair-minded Americans refuse to place too much stress on arguments to the Negro that he is, here in America, much better off than he would be if Hitler controlled this and other democratic nations. Negroes, we believe, realize this. Their pronouncements indicate strongly such awareness. Indeed, the major Negro plea now being raised in this country seems to be for greater opportunity to work in the war effort. And, too, to place too much stress on the Negro's situation here in America as compared with what it would probably be under Hitler seems to us to serve indirectly and unintentionally as basis for some satisfaction with the Negro's place in American life today. Such satisfaction, we believe, would, in the long run, retard the education of Negroes for constructive citizenship and might undesirably tend to curb the development of opportunities for Negroes.

Another answer to Hitler's comments on the American Negro is to be found on this page in a letter under "Forum of the People." Americans, in this spirit of humanity and fair play, provide the answer to Hitler and the promise of this land's future.

Georgia Teachers' Colleges Taken Off Accredited List

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 21.—(A.P.) Both teachers' colleges of the state of Georgia were stricken today from the accredited list of the national association of teachers' colleges.

Members of the association, in convention here, said the action was taken because Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia had interfered with administration of school affairs.

The dismissal of a teacher who was represented as advocating greater extension toward Negroes of certain principles of equality, was blamed on Talmadge. The incident stirred a widespread furore several months ago.

How Would Colored Americans Fare Under Hitler-Ruled U. S. A.

By GEORGE HARRIS

"A German official once said to an American journalist, who had protested against German treatment of the Jew, "in America you lynch the niggers. We're too cowardly to do as much with the Jew." But, the American objected, In America people who lynch Negroes are sent to jail if they are caught. Here they seem to get all the plumbs."
(Mein Kampf-Editorial Footnote

Does Hitler plan world conquest? His world-crashing obsessions have answered on a thousand bloody battle fronts from the arctic to the Tropics. His fanatical objectives are Nordic Does Hitler plan the return of the race purity, Nordic race superiority and German domination. Black race to slavery?

Monstrous as has been the policies and hideous as have been the practices of Japan in her cruel conquest of the weaker Colored races of the Far East, the Japanese in America for the last decade have sung a siren song of brotherhood to Colored Americans. Plain as had been the demonstration of their brutal contempt for the Chinese, the Filipinos and the Malayans, yet somehow there had persisted a considerable body of sentiment among smoked Yankees that they could fare no worse a fellow subjects of the Divine Ruler, the Mikado. When Japan joined the Axis, however, the last vestige of that sentiment vanished. Now that the Nipponese have become the eternal partners of the vicious Alliance, with its gangrenous tail in Rome, even those embittered wishful thinkers have realized the fate of their people would be the common fate of all, should Japan win. They now know, that under the land of the Rising Sun, theirs would be the setting sun.

How Heiling Hitler

Should Germany win, how would Colored Americans fare heiling Hitler. Just as General and Premier Tanaka fore laid down the pattern for the treatment of the Dark Races in his memorial to the Emperor, just so did Adolph Hitler blue print his program, in relation not only toward Jews but Black people, in his "Mein Kampf" (my fight). For them he plotted the seventh most inner most circle of perdition. Space will herewith permit only the bald quotations of the cardinal points of his race relations textbook. In a succeeding issue the blood-curdling accounts of his Black Race practices among the conquered French Senagalese prisoners and the North Africans will be related. Suffice it to say today that he has kept faith fully to his text.

At the prison of the Fortress Landsberg on the Lech, on October 16, 1942, here dedicated in a blood oath the first volume of Mein Kampf. His dedication reads as follows:

Hitler's Oath in Blood

"On November 9, 1923, at 12:30 in the afternoon, in front of the Feldherrnhalle as well as in the courtyard of the former War Ministry, the following men, steadfast in their belief in the resurrection of their people were killed: (here are named sixteen imprisoned members of his Revolutionary Movement against the German Republic. Which followed the collapse of the Hohenzollern monarchy and Germany's defeat in World War 1).

"Socalled National Authorites," he continues denies these dead heroes a common grave "Therefore I dedicate to them, for common memory, the first volume of this work, as blood witnesses of which they may continue to serve as a brilliant example for the followers of our Movement."

What Price High Office!

When any political master-genius goes muckraking, he can always find tools, stooges, vassals and what-not to back him up—even in Georgia! They don't necessarily have to be paid "coin of the realm" to join their Leader in wallowing in the mire of race prejudice and sordid efforts to stir up hatreds, sleeping passions and narrow bigotry. But most of them get favors, one kind or another. The others are just ornery by nature.

Down in Quitman, one C. M. Hitch has joined with Governor Talmadge in trying to create a race issue in Georgia politics as a toboggan slide for him to ride again into the Governor's seat or go to the United States senate. Hitch has written a letter, which was reproduced in large, open-faced type on the front page of the Governor's political weekly, The "Statesman." It follows:

"Dear Governor: I have just heard a good one, and I think you will be as much interested in hearing it as I was.

"Mrs. Royal Daniel, Editor of the Quitman Free Press, and her assistant, Mrs. Beth Williams, have just returned from the annual convention of the Georgia Press Association, which was held in LeTourneau's Hotel, near Toccoa. I see from the newspapers that you were at the Convention and delivered an address.

"Well, the story is this: One of the lady delegates went up to her room. The door to the room directly across the corridor was open, and lying across the bed, in full view, was a buck negro and a negro woman. The lady delegate was naturally horrified, and immediately protested to the manageress of the hotel. The manageress told her that the negro, and his wife were very respectable people, and had frequently stopped at their hotel. Not satisfied with this answer, the lady delegate protested to John Paschall, of the Atlanta Journal, whereupon Paschall, went on the 'prod' and informed the Hotel Management that if the negro and his wife remained in the that room until nightfall, it was quite possible that a mob would be formed by some of the younger newspaper delegates, and if so he would not be responsible for their safety. It seems that this threat had the desired effect, and the negro couple soon disappeared from the hotel.

"Mrs. Daniel intimated that she would have something to say about it in the next issue of the 'Free Press,' which will make its appearance on Thursday, the 28th, and if so I will send you a copy of it.

"The Journal and The Constitution have been very loud in their denunciations of you for attacking social equality and co-education of the races, but they see it in a different light when it comes to sleeping in the same hotel with negroes, which is infinitely less harmful than sending white children to the same school that negro children attend.

"I felt that if you had not heard the story you would be interested.

"Very sincerely yours,
"(Signed) C. M. HITCH."

"P. S.—Since writing the above I have had another talk with Mrs. Daniel, and she tells me that it was Mrs. Roy Emmett of Cedartown, Georgia, who occupied the room across the corridor from where the negro man and his wife were stopping, and that it was John Paschall, the editor of the Atlanta Journal, to whom Mrs. Emmett appealed, and who made a vigorous protest to the hotel management."

As the Hotel Lake Louise near Toccoa, the one referred to, is under the management of R. A. Fisher, a Virginian and Southerner who understands the tradition and perspective of the South in regard to such matters, we took the pains to write to Barge Shi, a dependable young man employed at Toccoa in the LeTourneau organization, as to the truth of the above allegations. His reply is of interest:

"As far as I can determine," he writes, "the affair seems to be based on the whims of a chronic letterwriter and a newspaper woman. It so happened that as I read your letter this morning, Mr. Fisher entered the main office.

"As it was my first account of said incident, I re-read it. Then I quizzed Mr. Fisher, who said that the publicity was a lot of hooey, since the negroes were only hired help, forced to say there for lodging, etc.

"He is of the opinion that the complaining party 'touched up' and expanded the circumstances, with which I concur (from my knowledge of the hotel).

"I am forced to the belief that the whole matter was trumped up and exaggerated."

Is this the type of mouth-foaming and wolf-crying necessary to place a man in high office in our fair commonwealth?

God forbid! But if so, then we earnestly pray for a better day, a cleaner slate, a more intelligent electorate, and a less sordid schedule of politics, with more of the above type of filth left out!

O let us mourn—for a little more genius in our politics!

A Panorama of American Indian Life Today

THE Indian is no longer the "vanishing American." The "domesticated" Redskins who do "old war dances" for tourists at holiday resorts are not the last sad remnants of their race. The trend toward extinction has been stopped; Indian population in this country has increased to 361,000, from its low point of 270,000 at the turn of the century; in fact, the increase in the last eight years has been so rapid that the Indian birth rate "is almost twice that of the United States white population as a whole." And as population is growing, so is life among the Indians improving in its necessarily paradoxical fashion: in the preservation of ancient ways and the adaptation to new conditions. The text and pictures of this exceedingly interesting book show no roseate scene; but it is a scene no longer pitiful and hopeless. Here is vigor and movement and variety.

Variety is one of the first points stressed by Mrs. Macgregor's text. It could have been better stressed in her photographs. "There is no standard Indian type," either in physical make-up, customs, beliefs or modes of life. The Sioux have high cheekbones, straight noses, thin lips, like the Indian on the nickel; but Shoshone faces are round, with full lips and broad noses.

Housing ranges from the picturesque reed-woven lodges of the Kickapoos to the sturdy adobe dwellings of the Pueblos; among the semi-nomadic Navajo people there are eight different kinds of conical hogan. But although these photographs present a variety of distinctive and sometimes very comfortable looking painting trip. That free, stron spirit, Moente, let time-worn cus tom have its way in the farm lands and lived in a fine zest c lonely contemplation and cor tentment. Katrien's 16-year-ol enthusiasm and uncertaintie met squarely the problem of th German boy. Mr. DeJong's nove has the permeating virtue of be ing always a novel: these peopl are not saintly, they are people this life is not perfect, it is life this story is not the presentatio of a thesis but the evocation c human beings, in the variety an struggle and question and inher ent self-respect of free individu als. Thus naturally are the ban ners raised for freedom and hu manity, tolerance and courag and truth, as we look throug eyes of old intimacy at men an women and progress and tradi tion in an ancient beloved land.

So Moente looked down fron his dikes "upon the immaculatel green meadows with their clea black-and-white cattle, at th long-armed mills like alert watch ers by the confluence of straigh wide-blue waters." So Margarie found her love of life someho met and pointed in the remot singing peace of the dunes, an in the people she talked wit there. So Mevrouw Haming sa the city that she and her hus band loved: "Old and wet, incred ibly placid, endlessly human, i had never bowed to any tyran It had survived storms, plague evils; it had withstood pillag and invasion. Its people sough only peace, ate their daily brea

In education generally, as in the whole attitude of the government and informed and responsible white men, there has been in recent years a change which amounts practically to reversal. "The tactics used in the past, in which everything possible was done to turn Indian children away from all things Indian and to draw them into a new kind of civilization which was in so many ways alien to their own philosophy of life, drove them back to their reservations confused, discontented and bitter. These devices, it is to be hoped, are definitely of the past. Indian boarding and day schools are now striving to fit the Indian child for the life he will follow as an Indian."

So in these enlightened and often beautiful photographs we see Indian children in a modern American schoolroom and on modern American farms; studying motors and tractors, too; but also a Navaio bov relearns the silver craftsmanship of his people, another boy works at his painting, women revive tribal pottery and basketry. It is regrettable that Mrs. Macgregor's book gives insufficient attention to the Indians of the Plains tribes, both in text and pictures. The latter, though excellent, do not show a sufficient diversity of physical types.

Pearl Buck's Notable Plea For Justice To Negro Is Backed By Mrs. Roosevelt

First Lady Says Author's Challenge Should Be Read By All Americans Who Want Democracy To Survive

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29 (ANP)—Pearl Buck's forceful statement on the Negro question, originally published as a letter to the New York Times, was issued this week in pamphlet form for widespread distribution throughout the country.

The eight page pamphlet, "Pearl Buck Speaks for Democracy," includes an incisive foreword by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt in which the First Lady declares:

"We have probably come to a point where we have to make up our minds either to live in a democracy and make it a reality or to accept the fact that we are not capable of meeting this challenge."

Although the publication is officially sponsored by the Common Council for American Unity, 222 Fourth avenue, New York City, the project was initiated by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, chief of the Negro employment and training branch of OPM and financed by the Julius Rosenwald fund at the suggestion of Dr. W. W. Alexander, chief of the minority group branch of OPM.

Miss Buck consented to publication of the pamphlet after Dr. Weaver informed her that widespread dissemination of her statement would aid materially the two OPM bodies and the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice in their effort to integrate Negroes into the employment phase of the nation's war effort.

The project was executed by Theodore R. Poston, public relations counsellor on Dr. Weaver's staff and Henry Lee Moon, regional senior racial relations advisor for the U. S. Housing authority. Poston and Moon also persuaded Mrs. Roosevelt to write a foreword for the pamphlet which declares:

"This statement by Miss Pearl Buck, the substance of which appeared in a recent letter to the editor of the New York Times, is one which I hope will be read by every American citizen in every part of the country, not only read, but thought over deeply and prayerfully.

"Most of us, no matter what religion we may belong to, accept as standards for daily living approximately the same principles which were set before us in the teachings of Christ. And yet we deny these principles in our daily living, over and over again. I hope we will ponder on this statement and read these sentences:

"The colored American, thanks to an education in democracy, now really wants to see his country as a democracy. When he defends the United States of America he does not want to do so segregated and limited. This contradicts his idea of a democracy. He has grown up a great deal since the World war. And he has not forgotten that war. He is willing to fight and die again, but not for something he does not possess anyway.'

"I have long felt that many of the things which we deplore, the prevalence of tuberculosis, the mounting record of crime in certain sections of the country, are not due just to lack of education or to physical differences, but are due in great part to the basic fact of segregation which we have set up in this country and which warps and twists the lives not only of our Negro population, but sometime of foreign born and even of religious groups.

"We have probably come to a point where we have to make up our minds either to live in a democracy and make it a reality or to accept the fact that we are not capable of meeting this challenge.

"I see some hope that this question is resolving itself more happily than Miss Buck thinks, through the coming of age of a younger generation which is accepting this challenge much more realistically than has ever been true before. If we older people have the courage that Miss Buck has had perhaps the next generation will have the courage to make this country a real democracy."

The Common Council for American Unity has announced that it will furnish single copies of the pamphlet free on request, and additional copies at cost price of two cents each. Requests should be addressed to the council's office at 222 Fourth Ave., New York City.

American Association Of University Profs. Rebukes Governor Talmadge At Annual Meet

JAN 3 - 1942

CHICAGO, Ill.—The American Association of University Professors roundly rebuked Governor Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, for his political interferences in the University of Georgia. The protest was made at the closing session of the association's annual convention on Sunday.

Governor Talmadge fired Dean Walter D. Cocking from the University of Georgia, last fall because, he charged, the dean favored a graduate school for Negroes and whites. At the time Talmadge said:

JAN 3 - 1942

"There'll be no Negroes in the same schools with white folks in Georgia, and there'll be no men in our system who advocate it."

Professors representing universities throughout the country approved a formal statement protesting the Governor's action.

It read: "The association views with unqualified disapproval the recent interference by Governor Talmadge in the university system of Georgia. Arbitrary action and political considerations in educational affairs are not in accord with sound education administration and are inimical to the welfare of education. They are particularly harmful when they involve an attempt to arouse racial prejudices, especially at a time when it is imperative that the races learn how to live together in accord with each other."

The Inimitable Talmadge

JAN 5 - 1942

Gov. Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, once boasted that he could carry any county that didn't have a street car. He didn't say what the probable effect of a bus line might be. Presumably he intended to suggest that voters who were not exposed to the debilitating influences of newspapers, radios, electric lights and vitamin B would naturally vote for Talmadge. It is certain that to the extent that civilization prevails Talmadge loses ground. Urban newspapers in Georgia will have none of him. His removal of distinguished educators from the State University System last Summer has resulted in Georgia's higher institutions of learning being dropped by the Southern University Conference and romoved from the accredited list of the Association of American Universities. Recently the American Association of University Professors added its condemnation, declaring that "arbitrary action and political considerations in educational affairs are . . . particularly harmful when they involve an attempt to arouse racial prejudices, especially at a time a time when it is imperative that the races learn how to live together in accord with each other."

JAN 5 - 1942

The sage of Sugar Creek, with his red suspenders and his clownish mannerisms, is not a danger to this republic. But it is a bad symptom that he could be elected three times, as he has been, to the governor's chair. One hopes that next Fall Georgia will contribute its mite to the spirit of the times by throwing Mr. Talmadge into the political ashcan.—The New York Times.

Henry Ford's Words— And His Deeds

JAN 13 1942

• In the common war against Hitlerism, the American people are more than ever opposed to the revolting anti-Semitism and "Aryan" poison identified with the Nazis.

For that reason the public has every reason to be skeptical of Henry Ford's latest repudiation of anti-Semitism. Ford still wears the Nazi medal presented to him by the Hitler regime. His chief publicity man and spokesman over the Ford Sunday Evening hour, is William J. Cameron. Cameron is head of the publications of the Anglo-Saxon Federation of America, a fascist outfit which spreads anti-Semitism and distributes the forged and discredited libels against Jewish Americans. All of this has continued since Ford made his first repudiation of anti-Semitism 14 years ago.

The people will believe Henry Ford on this score when he makes his deeds conform to his words.

A VOICE IN CONGRESS

JAN 31 1942

The greatest tragedy of this war, so far as the American Negroes are concerned, is, by general admission, the absence of forceful, intelligent, uncompromising, genuine representation in the halls of Congress. At this most crucial period in American history when all the sacred human principles for which this nation has fought, when all the democratic ideals to which the Negro has made sacrificial offerings in blood, when all these things are faced with destruction, the Negro—the largest single racial minority in this country—is without a forceful spokesman of his own in the legislative council of our government.

This must be remedied. Our democracy and our national security are in the balance. Without the broadest extension of civil liberties and constitutional rights which will completely integrate black men and women into the armed forces and the machinery of production, there is every reason to believe that victory cannot be won. An all-out war means the functioning of every item of the manpower of our nation as well as every factory. No man can be allowed to use his petty prejudices to retard the utilization of all of America's resources. Where Negroes are excluded a blow is now struck at the liberties of all.

The noble words uttered by the President of our country against discrimination in his state of the nation speech, must be implemented through the mobilization of every force in Congress and out to strike against the subversive, Jim-Crowing, segregating stooges of Hitler who still remain in power in our industrial apparatus. The Fair Employment Practice committee established by the President has pointed an accusing finger at these men. It is necessary that legislation be enacted to remove them from power, unless they change their ways.

For this black America must have its own spokesman in the halls of Congress. It is not unlikely the time is far distant when we shall be demanding a Negro in the cabinet of our country, that the integration of our people into the armed forces and into our industrial apparatus be expedited. Advisers to cabinet officers we have now. But the time is passed when the Negro must be only advisers to those who are formulating the policy of our country. This war endangers the lives and the future of all of us. This is our country. We have contributed in great measure to its political, economic and cultural development. It is time now that we too, spoke with authority concerning measures to be taken for its security. There is room in the cabinet of the United States for a representative of 15,000,000 of loyal black citizens.

But it is not of this that we speak now. The congressional elections stand immediately ahead. They will be the most significant congressional elections through which we have ever passed. Chicago bears a great responsibility to the nation. Here alone have we the power to send to Congress a true representative of Negro America. The most serious and deliberate thought must be given in the selection of this man. Mistakes now are matters of life and death. It is equally essential for the success of the war program, as well as for the security of Negro citizens that President Roosevelt and local political leaders throw their influences behind the election of a true representative of the Negro people in Congress where the voice of a black solon would counter any disruptive and subversive element seeking now to alienate the loyalty of the American black man.

Let's Aim for Permanent Gain

JAN 23 1942

The objectives of the United Nations as sponsored by President Roosevelt and Premier Churchill are printed elsewhere on this page. Along with them is the heart's desire of American Negroes as set forth in the current issue of the Crisis, the publication of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. A comparison of the two shows that the peace program, if carried out without discrimination, will put us on equality.

The record is against these latest objectives being carried out without fear or favor. No matter how nobly men plan, somewhere along the way they take counsel of their fears and give themselves insurance against not getting their share. Of this extra, inequality is born, and with it the tit-for-tat that turns into war.

Editor Wilkins of the Crisis holds that this emergency is the time when the American people will hear and heed demands for justice. We agree that it is justice which he asks. But we fear that given us under duress, it will be taken away when the outside enemy is overcome. For that reason we would persuade rather than force white America to extend citizenship without limitation on account of race and color.

Events fight for us today. Hitler is a greater argument against "race superiority" than Bilbo can make for it. With every color of man under the sun fighting for liberty, the American people are urged by both sentimental and practical considerations to live by the golden rule and give as good as they get.

We agree that this is the time for Negroes in the United States to make their drive for equality, but not on the tit-for-tat basis that has never yet produced lasting accord. If there is not now in the American white man enough sense of justice to share with us what we help defend, he is not cowfrightened into sharing by 13 million. frightened into sharing by our 13 million.

FCC Gets Protest On Station WWDC For Insulting Negroes

Washington NAACP Points To Use of Obscene Epithets

JAN 26 1942

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP) — The Federal Communications commission has been advised by the local NAACP this week of repeated instances in which objectionable terms have been used in various radio programs over station WWDC despite protests to this station concerning such insults.

Several weeks ago, the branch protested to the station when Congressman Luther Patrick of Alabama used the word "nigger" in a news broadcast. The station program manager maintained that the congressman's southern accent had led to the general misunderstanding on the part of radio listeners.

Last week, the branch received complaints against the program "Tropical Moods," at 11:30 p. m., on January 3.

JAN 26 1942

In writing the general manager of the station, John Lovell, secretary of the D. C. branch, stated, "We regret to have to remind you that this is not the first time we have received almost identical complaints. It seems that persons appearing on WWDC have distinguished themselves from those on other Washington stations by such practices.

"In your letter to us, you assured us that you did not subscribe to these insulting epithets. We must ask, however, that you investigate your system of broadcasts once more to assure yourself and us that offensive and insulting terms as this shall not at any time be visited upon the people of Washington."

At the same time, Mr. Lovell also wrote James J. Fly, chairman of the FCC as follows

"We enclose a letter which we have just dictated to the manager of station WWDC, Washington, D. C., concerning what we believe is a very serious matter. We are sure that no radio station can tolerate programs of this kind without bringing into jeopardy its role as a public servant.

"In view of the care which the Federal Communications commission takes to see that obscene and improper statements do not go out over the air, we believe that the Commission will be interested in the repeated use of terms which are insulting to a large percentage of the population.

"May we have an expression from you in this regard?

Paul Robeson Stops His Concert To Protest Racial Segregation

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 18 (AP).—Paul Robeson, negro baritone, prefaced the second half of his concert last night with a lecture against race segregation and told his audience he was continuing under protest.

Some white listeners immediately left the auditorium and others followed throughout the remainder of the program. There was no estimate of the number to walk out.

The singer made his talk without warning, either by word or manner, in the first half of the program. As he opened the second half he said he regretted to interrupt a concert to make a speech, but:

"I have made a life-long habit of refusing to sing in Southern states or anywhere that audiences are segregated. I accepted this engagement under guarantee that there would be no segregation.

"Since many local leaders of my own race have urged me to fill this engagement, I shall finish the concert, but I am doing so under protest."

Eugene Zachman, manager of the auditorium, said the management had entered no contractual obligations which prohibited segregation. Seats were available for negroes in all price ranges and locations, he added.

He said he considered it strange that Robeson made no protest until the concert was half over.

Earlier Robeson's attorney, Robert Rockmore, said in New York that the singer had called off a scheduled appearance in Santa Fe, N. M., Friday after a hotel cancelled his reservations because other guests objected to presence of a negro.

After the concert, Robeson denied this was the reason and said his action was forced by commitments in Hollywood and elsewhere on the Pacific coast.

Negro Interrupts Concert To Voice Racial Protest

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 18. (AP)—Paul Robeson, Negro baritone, prefaced the second half of his concert last night with a lecture against race segregation and told his audience he was continuing under protest.

Some white listeners immediately left the auditorium and others followed throughout the remainder of the program. There was no estimate of the number to walk out.

The singer made his talk without warning, either by word or manner, in the first half of the program. As he opened the second half he said he regretted to interrupt a concert to make a speech, but:

So, This Is White College Girls' View On Negro Problem!

Read It and Boil!—They Agree that Your Intellectual Capacities Are Equal!

They Even Would Permit a Negro Professor to Teach Them!

FEB 7 - 1942

But They Wouldn't Eat With You or Even Live Next Door!

Courier Pittsburgh Penn.

THE EDITOR of this department is submitting this article for your information. It is the result of a poll on the Negro problem conducted at Connecticut College for Women, New London, Connecticut, a popular and high-class white college of higher learning! It is only fair to give the statement of the conductors of the poll, the Misses Irene Steckler, Jean Wallace and Hope Castagnola, to wit:

> "One of the most hopeful results from the poll was our discovery that the great majority were willing to meet the Negro on an equal intellectual basis. More than 77 per cent realized that the Negro and white intellectual capacities are equal. Eighty-six per cent said that they would be willing to have a competent Negro scientist teaching here; 60 per cent of the students were willing to work under a Negro supervisor, as is possible under Civil Service. We realize that not as many people will meet the Negro on an equal social basis, due to irrational prejudice resulting from their upbringing. Thus it is a national problem which we must combat in all our communities, and it is what we are trying to erase here."

We would like to present to the college a report on the poll that was taken on Negro intolerance. This survey was run by a committee composed of members from the Student-Industrial Group and the Religious Council, of which the chairmen were Irene Steckler '43, Jean Wallace '43, and Hope Castagnola '43, who are members of the Student-Industrial Group. The committee wishes to thank both students and faculty for their fine co-operation, and their frankness in answering the questionnaire.

Sixty-eight per cent of the questions were answered tolerantly, 32 per cent intolerantly. The following are the most frequent reasons given for unwillingness to associate with Negroes: admitted ingrained prejudice, fear of social disapproval, belief that Negroes are physically unclean. An analysis by question follows:

56K

1. Do you think that Negroes are intellectually inferior to white people?

Twenty-three per cent answered "yes," but we feel that this figure is not truly representative since most people explained that Negroes are inferior merely because they haven't had the opportunity that white people have had. We realize that such a qualification admits that the Negro intellectual capacity is not inferior.

2. Would you object to eating with a Negro in a dormitory?

Twenty-two per cent answered "yes." They gave as reasons: social inequality, creation of embarrassment on parts of both Negro and white, uncleanliness of Negroes.

3. Would you object to having a Negro wait on you?

This was unanimously answered "no." We included this question because we wondered if most people realized that bioligically there is no difference between being served by, and eating with, a Negro. It was interesting to observe that all those who objected to eating with Negroes for reasons of cleanliness were willing to be served by them. Is this logical?

4. Would you be willing to have a resident Negro student rooming next door to you, here?

Fifty-one per cent answered "no." More people were unwilling to associate with the Negro in this way than in any other way mentioned on the questionnaire. Most of the reasons were social ones, although some people thought that the situation would cause an emotional strain for both the Negro and the white person. Since many people thought that this was an impossible situation, we would like to point out that there are three Negro resident students at Mt. Holyoke, and many people we have interviewed say the arrangement is very successful.

5. Would you be willing to invite a Negro guest to your home?

Forty per cent were unwilling. Many inserted qualifications as to culture, cleanliness, and length of visit. Several people mentioned having entertained Negro guests in their homes, and having enjoyed their company immensely.

Only 14 per cent were unwilling.

This brings to mind the fact that most people are more willing to accept the Negro on an intellectual basis than on a social one.

7 and 8. Would you be willing to be equally associated in business with a Negro? and, Would you be willing to work under a Negro as is possible under our Civil Service?

About 40 per cent were unwilling in both questions. The usual reason for unwillingness was admitted prejudice.

9. Do you think there should be any race discrimination in the draft?

Eighteen per cent said "yes." There was an ambiguity, for which we apologize, in this question. It was interpreted either as meaning segregation by companies, or excluding them from the draft entirely. We now realize that there should have been two questions. It was rather ironic to observe that some people who are not at all willing to associate with Negroes firmly believe that they should play their part in the draft to protect their "rights and privileges."

Discrimination Against Colored People Worse Than Anti-Semitism

VINCENT SHEEAN wrote an article in the January 27th issue of "Look" magazine captioned: "Anti-Semitism Is a Danger to the Nation." The sub-head reads: "This prejudice is a dangerous weapon in the hands of an enemy seeking to divide us. We must destroy it at its roots — in the native, social variety."

There is an editor's note which proclaims: "With America at war, anti-Semitism becomes a danger on the home front no longer to be tolerated."

We select one statement from Mr. Sheean's article: "But the moment you allow vague feelings against Jews to crystallize into business or 'social' discrimination, you are in danger of creating a reactionary force in our national life."

56K

There exists in America a prejudice against Jews which, in some ways, is worse than the prejudice against colored people. It is of a different brand, however. The prejudice against Jews is exhibited in social matters. It is based on the belief that Jews skim the cream from the milk without producing the milk.

Colored Americans endure discrimination of a worse kind, if it is possible to distinguish between the varying degrees of discrimination. Not only do colored people have to endure social ostracism, but they are barred from working except in jobs of a restricted type. Even industries and businesses operated by Jews bar them.

Jews, a persecuted group, refuse to cooperate with colored people. This is not so much because Jews do not like colored people as it is because they feel that they would suffer a worse fate if they would associate too largely with a group at the bottom.

The point we would like to make at this time is this: If anti-Semitism is dangerous to America, and it is, how much more dangerous is prejudice and discrimination against 15 million colored Americans? Perhaps Mr. Sheean and "Look" Magazine will crack down on this danger to American democracy.

Racialism

By Hodge Kirnon

IT is doubtful that there are any races or peoples who have not at some period of their history developed and promulgated some kind of racialism. Hand in hand with the design to conquer and dominate other groups is the inculcation and spread of the doctrine of racial superiority—partly as a justification for the act and partly as a mental stimulus and sustenance for the sacrifices such actions entail. This is obviously true of all imperialist powers.

Subject and oppressed groups also develop a racialism adapted to their conditions and needs. Theirs is mainly of a defensive and protective nature. It is a counter measure against the harmful effects of the teachings of their masters and oppressors; for any educational system reflects and upholds the ideas and ideals of the dominant class or race. The race-conscious leaders of subject groups within the social order, while availing themselves of its culture, will at opportune times resurrect and disseminate the history and achievements of their people.

A race without knowledge of its history is in a state of historical amnesia. Racial pride and aspiration must be rooted in racial history. To preserve and diffuse the knowledge necessary for the revitalization of the consciousness of inherent racial worth is a task for those in whom the feeling of race pride has not been dulled by social oppression. No national or racial group ever remains passive to the threat of its extinction, physically or culturally. Sooner or later, a spirit of assertiveness, proportionate to the forces bent on its destruction manifests itself to meet the challenge. Racialism is the collective feeling and philosophy of a race to preserve and perpetuate its racial identity.

There Are Many Examples

History abounds with examples of vigorous expressions of race or group consciousness. One striking example is that furnished by the English after the Norman conquest. Norman educators were brought to teach and imbue the conquered English with Norman ideas and social patterns. The aristocratic classes on the whole conformed to them and aped Norman mannerisms and social ways. The other classes stubbornly refused. Some carried on guerrilla warfare while the cultured elements held to the English tongue, recited English folk tales and the heroic deeds of their people. They kept the national history and traditions alive, thus keeping intact their national consciousness.

No race is more in need of a creed of racial pride than is the Negro. He is still a victim of forces and circumstances destructive to his racial self-respect and initiative. Our thinking naturally tends to follow along the lines of our social position. Another result of a subordinate position is the willingness to make a virtue out of that condition and to accept any doctrine—religious or secular—which does likewise.

RACIALISM

WE MUST HAVE PROGRAM TO STAMP OUT EXPLOITATION JUST AS LABOR UNITED TO DO

Pittsburg Courier — Pittsburg, Penn

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

LAST week Charles S. Johnson of Fisk university gave me an idea which I am going to pass on to you. It seems to me that his notions places our problems and present struggle for status and greater participation in the American scene, in a frame of reference and gives it greater perspective which affords much more insight.

There have been two fundamental principles which from the beginning of our history have directed the channels in which our institutions and our way of life developed. In a virgin country with great wealth and natural resources capitalism, with its emphasis on free competition and the exploitation of both resources and men, seemed to be the quickest and most efficient method of developing the country. The opportunities which the Western Frontier provided made it possible for individuals with ingenuity, strength and courage to escape from the Eastern wage system and become in turn trappers, then farmers, and, finally, business men. With the closing of the frontier, after it reached the Pacific Ocean, this same type of free and unrestrained competition led to the development of huge fortunes and through a period in the 1800's it received its greatest expression in the ruthless economic behavior of the "robber barons."

SOCIAL CONTROL IS RECOGNIZED

But in time it became evident that unrestrained competition lead to the aggrandizement of wealth and power into a few hands, and allowed the exploitation of the great working population by a few powerful economic barons. As this concentration of wealth and power developed, there also came a consciousness on the part of the masses of the people that some social controls must be enforced.

BEGINNING back in the early part of the last century, a series of social legislations, which controlled the conditions under which women and children would work, were begun. There has been a constant development of such social legislation in regard to labor which finally culminated in the National Labor Relations Act—labor's Magna Charta. This legislation established legal mechanisms to enforce collective bargaining and to protect the rights of working people.

RACIALISM TO THE FORE

The control of our economic system has been pushed even further and in addition to safeguards for labor, we have in recent years determined the conditions under which the most competitive of all of our economic institution, the stock market, should be operated.

THE SECOND fundamental force in our national life has been racialism. This is evident when we realize that slavery played the important role which it did in the development of entire sections of our country. The subordination of darker people was just as important in our early history, and to an extent now, as was the economic principle of free competition. Indeed the two are not unconnected.

LAXITY IN CURBING RACE EXPLOITATION

We have similarly had a history of social legislation which has attempted to curb the racialism in this country. This movement has paralleled the development of social legislation to curb unrestrained economic competition, but has not developed to the same extent. Both were embarked upon because these two forces seemed destined to destroy the country if left unregulated.

THE PASSAGE of the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments was one great step which raised the Negro to the legal position of a full citizen. Since then, though there has been some small progress, there has not been the recognition on the part of the people and on the part of the government, that it was necessary to continue to curb racialism by legislative means. This has been true, perhaps because economic competition is easier to control by law, or perhaps because the pressure groups for labor are stronger than those fighting racialism, or perhaps because the acceptance of racialism was more deeply planted in the mores of our culture. In any case, from the period of the Civil War until present administration, we have not had much of a development in this direction.

NEED LEGISLATION

From time to time this column has stated that we must have a legal bed rock and that we must fight for a whole program of legal protections to stamp out racialism in this country. Although in many respects we have had a democracy, we know that in the case of the Negro it was not existent. Now it is becoming evident to whites as well as to Negroes that to preserve anything of our democracy it is as necessary to legislate against racialism as it is to control the relations between employers and employes and the operation of the stock market.

LEADERS SUCH as Randolph and Walter White, as well as many others, should see our problems in this historical perspective. They should realize that we, as a racial group, are beginning the fight to achieve our rights which labor embarked upon a hundred years ago. Now, because of the fluidity of the social structure due to the impact of the war, enormous gains can be made.

MUST HAVE PROGRAM

We must conceive of and develop a program of legal protection to stamp racialism just as labor united upon a program of legislation which would protect them against exploitation. We are fortunate in that an increasing group of white people recognize the fact that continued racialism will destroy even the veneer of democracy which we have had in the past and will prevent any expansion and strengthening of this concept in the future.

DISCRIMINATION AGAINST NEGROES

To Editor, The Age-Herald:

Your comment in today's paper on the Negro and their treatment in this emergency is appreciated.

FEB 24 1942

I am wondering how many Americans have paused to compare the discrimination which we consciously or unconsciously make toward Negroes with the tactics Hitler employs on Jews and other non-Aryans.

As Southerners we have been ridiculed for clinging tenaciously to antiquated emotional attitudes while the skirts of fellow Americans remained spotless. Time and circumstance will not permit an emotional paternalistic treatment of this question which is anchored to the roots of our democratic way of life.

As a farmer I know but one home; my ancestors knew but one home—the South. The South they died to preserve has gone and today I am sure their spirits join ours in proclaiming, "I am an American."

We, the farmers, are the conservative sons of slow change; yet, we believe in fair play and fair treatment of fellowmen. We stand upon but one platform, "the Golden Rule," the foundation of American democracy, and say in our usual way, "Friends, let's play fair. In the first place, it is the only way; in the second place, it is good business."

I would like for the South to take the lead, as in the days when we fought the Revolution and drew up the constitution, and demand as gentlemen that the Negro receive a democratic deal. Speechmaking-sentimentality and legislation will not suffice. The hearts of Americans must answer this question.

Lindbergh Deplored 'Split of White Race'

Asked about reports that Charles A. Lindbergh had deplored division of the white race in this war during a recent dinner party here, the host, Edwin S. Webster, Jr., today said "he did say it was too bad that we were divided on the question of the yellow race."

Mr. Lindbergh, Mr. Webster said, had told guests at the dinner party, held at the Webster home, 35 Beekman Pl., on Dec. 16, that events had justified the America First campaign for "strong national defense" before getting into a war.

Mr. Webster, former secretary of the New York chapter of the America First Committee, which before Dec. 7 was one of the strongest isolationist groups in the country, said the party had been an informal farewell for former street speakers of the now disbanded America First movement.

Informal Opinion.

Mr. Webster said Mr. Lindbergh had voiced his opinion only informally to members of the dinner party, and both he and one of the guests, Douglas Gregory, former chairman of the national speakers bureau of the movement, said the aviator had addressed the entire gathering for only about two minutes.

N.Y. World-Telegram N.Y., N.Y.

"The only thing he said," Mr. Gregory reported, "was to congratulate the kids on the fight they had put up, against the tough odds they had faced. He thanked them for their efforts, and said he appreciated their struggle and how hard it had been.

"He said certainly the principles for which America first had stood, a strong national defense, not giving away everything to everybody in the world, had been borne out.

One Serious Note.

"The only serious note struck was the reading of a letter from Robert Riley of New York, former head of the street speakers' bureau, who, among others, could not be present at the dinner because he had enlisted in the armed forces. Riley is in the navy."

Since the dinner party, which took place nine days after the outbreak of the war, Mr. Lindbergh has volunteered his services for the war in a letter to Secretary of War Stimson and there has been controversy over whether his offer should be accepted.

Mr. Webster was reluctant to discuss the gathering and said he was "retiring," terming the whole affair a farewell which was "unimportant and completely informal." He is to be married tomorrow to Jean Bennett, Hunter College graduate and former street speaker for the movement. He is a broker.

Mr. Gregory, more vehement in denouncing reports which had been circulated about the meeting, declared "everyone of us is 100 per cent American, the great majority of us are from old American stock. I myself am English on both sides and my family has been here 300 years. How has anybody got the right to shout against my Americanism?"

Also at the party, according to Mr. Gregory, were Vincent Giaquinto, chairman of the former Bronx chapter; Ethel Taylor, former chairman of the New York speakers committee, and Horace Haase, Mrs. Catherine Larkin, Frances Zimmer and George Smith, street speakers.

NEW YORK CITY, Tuesday.—I went last night to speak at a patriotic rally held in one of the large churches in Washington. Those present reiterated again their willingness to fight and die for the United States, and recounted the part that the colored people had played in the history of our country during every war.

I never like to have us remember only our contributions as military contributions, because there are so many things which people have given in times of peace which are just as important to the development of the country, even when these horrible days of war are upon us.

All of our racial groups have made a vast contribution to the development of the United States. Many of them have worked in our fields and have developed our agriculture. Without them the cotton fields of the South would never have been tilled and the wheat fields of the West would not have produced their abundance.

Our mines would not have been developed. Our factories would not have operated without the labor of the countless people who, once upon a time, came to these shores from Africa, Europe, the Near East and the Far East.

It is not only in these material ways that people have contributed to the development of this country. Think of what has been given by writers, painters, actors, dancers and musicians to the general culture of the nation. No country is fully civilized which can not appreciate its artists. They make a contribution not just to the entertainment side of life, but to the educational, economic and spiritual sides.

The First Lady Speaks

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, possibly the most traveled woman in America today, spoke at the City Auditorium in Atlanta Tuesday night. As usual a large crowd turned out to hear the First Lady of the Land and to do her honor.

First, Mrs. Roosevelt is a lecturer of gift and power. She really has punch in her methods and does not mince words. She drives her points in the true Rooseveltian style and is never compromising in her pressure of the claims of her fellow countrymen.

Many of us recall her preachments for justice and fair play over the country for all. We recall the move she made when the refusal in Washington was made regarding Marian Anderson singing in Constitution Hall. She feared no repercussion.

Her speech, fresh from the nation's capital, was brim full of news, wit and humor. She is truly a disciple of democracy and should be heard by every one in the land.

This great woman, who has refused to live the gay life of societydom, in her exclusive sanctum, is a wonderful example of real American life. She travels day and night, preaching the doctrine of goodwill and carrying the eternal message of courage that fortified our people at Brandywine, Yorktown, Ticondaroga, Crown Point and Fort William Henry in the daring days that tried the souls of great and brave people.

By Roy Wilkins

I see by the papers that Papa DiMaggio, father of the great Yankee outfielder, has been ordered away from the San Francisco waterfront by the United States Government. All aliens are barred from waterfront activity by the new Government order and Papa DiMaggio is an alien. The elder DiMaggio came to the United States in 1905—37 years ago—but he has never become a citizen of this country. He made a good living for his growing family as one of the army of fishermen working out of San Francisco.

Mr. Wilkins

Four sons bring him joy in his old age, Joe, Dominic, Vince and Tom. The first three are stars on major league baseball teams. The fourth now manages the Grotto, Joe's fancy restaurant on the waterfront.

This news of the DiMaggio family is of special interest to colored Americans because it brings instantly to their minds the many restrictions under which they live in this, their native—not adopted—land.

Don't Have Opportunities

The first lesson of the DiMaggios is that America is indeed a land of opportunity for people from every land even if it does not accord its black citizens those same opportunities. The news states that 1,300 of the 2,200 fishermen who operate from San Francisco's famous fisherman's wharf are aliens. America was good to these people. It welcomed them. It let them make a living at their trade. It let them buy property anywhere they had money enough to buy. It gave their children a chance in schools, in jobs, in the professions, in sports.

But after all these years, and with all these opportunities, these people remained so close to the land they had left behind them that they did not bother to become citizens of the country that was doing so handsomely by them.

Joe DiMaggio could get a chance with the New York Yankees. But no black boy, even if he could smack homers like Joe, could get a chance with the Yanks. So with Dominic and the Boston Red Sox, and with Vince and the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Jolter Made Much Cash

Joe made so much money with the Yankees that he opened a restaurant on the waterfront. And so thoroughly have the DiMaggios absorbed American ways that no Negro can eat in Joe DiMaggio's Grotto on the San Francisco waterfront. It is not likely that the great slugger is personally responsible for this insult to black Americans who worked and fought for this country before Papa DiMaggio sailed here from his native Italy. But he could stop the practice if he wanted to. He could say that his restaurant would serve anybody who conducted himself properly in public. He could show by that act that he is first of all a good sport and second a good democrat.

Because all this talk about democracy does not make democracy. Action makes democracy. The United States acted to make democracy work for the DiMaggios. Joe can act now and show that he appreciates the great principles on which his country and ours was founded. There is no better time to act than now when all the world is being called upon to declare itself for or against freedom for all mankind.

It is an irony of this war that Papa DiMaggio, founder of the clan, is now barred from the area where his son's restaurant is located. He cannot drop in for a bowl of fish chowder. Neither can American Negroes. We do not gloat over this circumstance. In sorrow we state merely that now Papa DiMaggio knows just a little bit of how it feels to be black in this country.

At least two great newspapers, The Star-News and The Courier misread the Roberts' report on Pearl Harbor. The report said the 24th and 25th Infantry DIVISIONS, not regiments, were in Hawaii on December 7. There is still no authentic information that Negro troops are in the Far East.

Her speech, fresh from the nation's capital, was brim full of news, wit and humor. She is truly a disciple of democracy and should be heard by every one in the land.

This great woman, who has refused to live the gay life of societydom, in her exclusive sanctum, is a wonderful example of real American life. She travels day and night, preaching the doctrine of goodwill and carrying the eternal message of courage that fortified our people at Brandywine, Yorktown, Ticondaroga, Crown Point and Fort William Henry in the daring days that tried the souls of great and brave people.

By Roy Wilkins

I see by the papers that Papa DiMaggio, father of the great Yankee outfielder, has been ordered away from the San Francisco waterfront by the United States Government. All aliens are barred from waterfront activity by the new Government order and Papa DiMaggio is an alien. The elder DiMaggio came to the United States in 1905—37 years ago—but he has never become a citizen of this country. He made a good living for his growing family as one of the army of fishermen working out of San Francisco.

Mr. Wilkins

Four sons bring him joy in his old age, Joe, Dominic, Vince and Tom. The first three are stars on major league baseball teams. The fourth now manages the Grotto, Joe's fancy restaurant on the waterfront.

This news of the DiMaggio family is of special interest to colored Americans because it brings instantly to their minds the many restrictions under which they live in this, their native—not adopted—land.

Don't Have Opportunities

The first lesson of the DiMaggios is that America is indeed a land of opportunity for people from every land even if it does not accord its black citizens those same opportunities. The news states that 1,300 of the 2,200 fishermen who operate from San Francisco's famous fisherman's wharf are aliens. America was good to these people. It welcomed them. It let them make a living at their trade. It let them buy property anywhere they had money enough to buy. It gave their children a chance in schools, in jobs, in the professions, in sports.

But after all these years, and with all these opportunities, these people remained so close to the land they had left behind them that they did not bother to become citizens of the country that was doing so handsomely by them.

Joe DiMaggio could get a chance with the New York Yankees. But no black boy, even if he could smack homers like Joe, could get a chance with the Yanks. So with Dominic and the Boston Red Sox, and with Vince and the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Jolter Made Much Cash

Joe made so much money with the Yankees that he opened a restaurant on the waterfront. And so thoroughly have the DiMaggios absorbed American ways that no Negro can eat in Joe DiMaggio's Grotto on the San Francisco waterfront. It is not likely that the great slugger is personally responsible for this insult to black Americans who worked and fought for this country before Papa DiMaggio sailed here from his native Italy. But he could stop the practice if he wanted to. He could say that his restaurant would serve anybody who conducted himself properly in public. He could show by that act that he is first of all a good sport and second a good democrat.

Because all this talk about democracy does not make democracy. Action makes democracy. The United States acted to make democracy work for the DiMaggios. Joe can act now and show that he appreciates the great principles on which his country and ours was founded. There is no better time to act than now when all the world is being called upon to declare itself for or against freedom for all mankind.

It is an irony of this war that Papa DiMaggio, founder of the clan, is now barred from the area where his son's restaurant is located. He cannot drop in for a bowl of fish chowder. Neither can American Negroes. We do not gloat over this circumstance. In sorrow we state merely that now Papa DiMaggio knows just a little bit of how it feels to be black in this country.

At least two great newspapers, The Star-News and The Courier misread the Roberts' report on Pearl Harbor. The report said the 24th and 25th Infantry DIVISIONS, not regiments, were in Hawaii on December 7. There is still no authentic information that Negro troops are in the Far East.

SENTENCE REVIEW

Classify the following sentences as simple, complex, or compound. Underline the subjects once and the verbs twice.

1. If it RAINS, I SHALL STAY at home. ......Complex......
2. The little girl looks as if she were ill. ............
3. You need a picture in this room. ............
4. "The Blue Ghost" is a mystery story. ............
5. The robber knew that his efforts were futile unless he could catch the policeman off guard. ............
6. The poor old man was not able to do much, but he did try to help. ............
7. I object to your going; however, you may do as you please. ............
8. Doesn't the clock tick merrily? ............
9. I think that you ought to go. ............
10. It does seem unfair; still, it may not prove to be so. ............
11. I followed him into the house, because my curiosity had been aroused. ............
12. You must concentrate in order to do your work in as short a time as possible. ............
13. Our first attempt to solve the mystery brought no results; nor was the second effort any more fruitful. ............
14. Will you bring some butter as you come through town? ............
15. The mob hanged the negro on the seventh limb of the sycamore tree. ............
16. Our car is small, but there is always room for one more. ..........
17. I shall fail in the contest; nevertheless, I shall do my best.

Believe it or not, the above plate is the exact reproduction of a page from an English work book, published by the Webb Publishing Co., Oklahoma City, Okla., and used in the public schools of Texas and other states. Note the 15th sentence, an exercise in English: "The mob hanged the negro on the seventh limb of the sycamore tree." This is a good example of how democracy is taught in our schools. Young immature minds are conditioned to the rightness of an old American custom, "They lynched him on a tree." What price democracy?

LINCOLN WAS REALLY GREAT

During the past week much has been said and written about the life and work of Abraham Lincoln, the sixteenth President of the United States. One writer has said that none as great as he went before him to the presidential chair, while others have predicted that none will come after him who will leave their impression upon the people as he did.

Lincoln was a great man, but it was we, the Negroes of America, who made him great. Lincoln would have been just another President had it not been for us. He took advantage of the opportunity which we gave him to demonstrate his greatness of heart and soul. He was not great because he was an orator, statesman or President of the United States, but because he had a human heart and the will to attack the thing which he saw was a curse to the nation at that time. And the position of the Negro today is almost on a parallel with that of the Negro of seventy-five years ago. We are free from the shackles of slavery, but are bound with the ropes of racial prejudice which robs us of our economic, civil and political rights.

And today, we, the Negroes of the United States, are ready to make some fair-minded, redblooded American statesman great....yes, even greater than Lincoln if such a man can be found at this time. We are standing on the sidelines watching the acts and the conduct of our statesmen, trying to find a new Lincoln. We have sized them up with an open mind and with scrutinizing thought. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, of course, shows symptoms of being a great leader with a human heart, but he has failed to meet our expectations and we still search for the man whose human sympathies can reach our case. We have been watching the conduct of Attorney General Francis Biddle, who looms as a great man. Judging by his conduct in high office, it may be that the hand of Fate has been laid upon his brow. He voluntarily entered the Mitchell-Jim Crow car case on our side, and has expressed interest in the Sikeston lynching. We mention these two instances because they are outstanding in his brief career as a high government official that should be considered in evaluating the case.

Education on Race Urged

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

In the name of defense the public is being educated on all kinds of subjects, from South American culture to food values.

FEB 21 1942

In the name of defense let us have education, a lot of it, on the subject of race. Let experts enlighten the girls in the mills and the cadets in Annapolis. America at war cannot afford to let any citizens enjoy the luxury of feeling themselves superior to other citizens by the accident of birth. It has always been a costly luxury.

The war will teach us things which we were unwilling or unable to learn before. It can teach us that no people, not even white people, are ~~the "superior race." If~~ every State Council of Defense would see the importance of the issue, this education could be pushed forward.

Mrs. Roosevelt Says the Race Issue Makes Demands of Congress in the Name of Human Needs. Mayors Oppose WPA, CCC, NYA "Cuts"

THE spirit of Dr. Booker T. Washington, that famed saint and resident of Tuskegee, Alabama, must have rejoiced as it no doubt hovered in the sacred precincts of the House of Representatives Banking and Currency Committee during the sessions last week of the Tolan Special Congressional Committee Investigating Migrants and the effect on the national economy and security.

Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, first in the hearts of the inarticulate masses was the distinguished witness before this group on Wednesday. She had as one of her most intensely interested listeners, Congressman Henry Bascom Steagall, Democrat, Cropton, Ala., the chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee, who just happened in. The Tolan Committee had been invited to hold its session in these commodious quarters by the Alabama salon, Mr. Stegall, a graduate of Alabama University and an able lawyer. He was elected to Congress in 1914, one year before the death of Alabama and the nation's most illustrous colored citizen and educator. We doubt if Congressman Steagall, nearly 30 years ago, ever expected to prepare the setting and as a result of his seniority to be in a position to make available for the First Lady of the Land a forum for the cause of Negro rights. It happened here in 1942.

"Must Meet Human Needs"

Dr. Washington

Mrs. Roosevelt, January 14, declared in this man's committee, "Human needs must be met, so that people not only feel they have something to fight for, but would have the strength to fight regardless of race or color." Mrs. Roosevelt in response to further questioning from the broadminded chairman, Congressman John H. Tolan, Democrat, Oakland, Calif., seemed to relish the subject as Congressman Steagall, of Alabama, leaned forward to see her as well as listen. The fearless wife of the President raised her voice and spoke clearly into the amplifier so that all in the crowded House committee room as well as the Southern Statesman could not mistake her words: "The colored people must be given an opportunity to participate in the defense of the country. You cannot continue to give them only the lowest paid jobs, the poorest housing and keep them standing in line at restaurants right here in the nation's capital until all the white people are served first if we are to protect civilian morale and assure all out unity." This is the same champion in the halls of Congress, who stood by our Marion Anderson against the D. A. R.

Mrs. Faceset

We watched the face of Congressman Steagall. it became a little redder. The ghost of Booker T., the race's greatest advocate at the bar of justice seemed to be delighted at the discomfiture of this living Alabaman, elected to Congress, most likely without the vote of a single colored person, sitting there condemned by the fairest flower of his own womanhood in full view of his colleagues and hundreds of his fellow Americans.

Strong Plea for Justice

Almost as interesting a sidelight on this public meeting of the Tolan Congregational Committee at the capital was, the all but merest mention in the daily press of Mrs. Roosevelt's strong plea for justice and immediate guarantee to the colored people of their civil rights in Washington as well as elsewhere.

The two leading D. C. Republican morning newspapers, one a former isolationist sheet, completed censored the statement. One covered up the omission by a subterfuge. Its new Georgia woman reporter assigned to cover the committee hearings evidently tried to divert attention from her own guilty conscience. Over her account was a front page headline as well as a picture of the President's wife which read: "To Follow LaGuardia? Tired by Work and Tiffs, Will First Lady Quit OCD?" Not one word was mentioned by either publication as to Mrs. Roosevelt's condemnation of the discrimination against colored people in public places, restaurants, theatres, Constitution Hall, and the Capitol dining rooms of Washington—denial of jobs on national defense to colored people in and outside of Gvernment service where they are almost exclusively stymied in the lowest paid jobs because of prejudice and discrimination. This was the burden of Mrs. Roosevelt's testimony and she returned to it again with increasing emphasis.

It got in the records of Congress just the same. All persons may secure a copy of Mrs. Roosevelt's ringing challenge by writing for the hearings of the Tolan Committee on Investigation of Migratory Labor, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

Congressman Absent

JAN 24 1942

The race owes a vote of confidence and thanks to Congressman John H. Tolan, (Dem.), Oakland, Calif., John J. Sparkman, graduate of Alabama University, A. B., LLB., M.A. and Phi Beta Kappa, another congressional representative of this committee, who was absent from the hearings during the half hour testimony of Mrs. Roosevelt for only about five minutes. He listened attentively for the most part, but failed to ask the First Lady any particular questions as was his wont with other witnesses. Congressman Osmers, Jr. (Rep.), of New Jersey, and owner of the jewelry firm in New York, which carries his name was absent. He has joined the Army. Congressman Carl T. Curtis, Republican, Neb., likewise, was present, but asked no questions, but expressed pleasure with Mrs. Roosevelt's coming.

In a conversation with one of these Congressmen as to his reticency in asking any questions, his answer was this, "You could see our position, in deference to the First Lady. If I had a question I would not probably have asked it. She came and we were happy to have her. She told her story and that was that."

The many questions asked by Chairman Tolan of Mrs. Roosevelt, clearly indicated he was in complete agreement with her point of view. As a matter of fact he prefaced his statement in the beginning by saying, "You know we see eye to eye on these matters affecting the American people and their security."

Congressman Lawrence Arnold, Democrat, of Illinois, the other member of the committee who represents the district in which William Jennings Bryan was born, listened most attentively and by his pleasant facial expression seemed in rather happy accord with the sentiments expressed by Mrs. Roosevelt. Again, we repeat it was a noble gesture by these Congressmen in sanctioning the plea of Mrs. Roosevelt for inclusion of colored people as human beings with the identical human needs of all Americans regardless of race as a part of the official record of the legislation being advanced by the third session of the 77th Congress. It was an inspiring moment, this forthright deed, 150 years since Crispus Attucks, a colored man died striking the first blow for liberty and independence in the defense of our homeland. It came as an angury of ultimate victory. Unanimous an added expressions of eternal gratitude to Mrs. Roosevelt.

Mrs. Roosevelt, also hung up another unprecedented first by including in the dozen executives who accompanied her to the Congressional hearing, her special colored assistant, Mrs. Crystal Byrd Fauset, of OCD, and also a colored man and woman member of Mrs. Fauset's staff of the Office of Civilian Defense.

Want Agencies Retained

This resolution urged, further, that "the Director of the Budget recommend and the Congress appropriate such funds to the WPA, NYA and CC and other agencies as may be necessary for the immediate employment of workers displaced in civilian industry as a result of the defense production program." Other resolutions also passed were: That since tuberculosis is a disease the damage of which to the "health and morale of our citizenry" is comparable to that caused by syphilis, the proper Government officials take "immediate and appropriate measures" to fight the disease and that the necessary funds be appropriated to start a comprehensive attack against it on a national scale.

The conference of the Senate and House agreed to appropriate $100,000,000 on Wednesday to the Office of Civilian Defense shortly after the testimony of Mayor LaGuardia, Mrs. Roosevelt and Dean Landis before the Tolan Committee.

Driving the Negro To Suicide

The ugly growl of lynchers roared out above all Nazi accusations of brutality and "fight for democracy" cries this week after having taken the life of a Negro up in Missouri. Up in Washington Secretary Knox is said to have made the statement that it would be hell to admit the Negro to any place in the Navy and Marine corp outside that of a mess attendant or words to that effect.

All along the line, barring few exceptions, it seems there is a wholesale effort afoot all over the country to drive the Negro to distraction and into committing suicide or into a spot where he can be destroyed and the matter whitewashed with the claim of self-defense.

According to the Associated Negro Press, all Negro lawmakers in Washington are bringing pressure to bear on all fairminded men in the United States Housing Authority, WPA and Social Security Boards to the end that they may be moved out because of their efforts for fairplay for the lowly Negro.

And while the Negro is called upon to pay his share as a citizen for the defense of his country, every effort seems to be to the end that everything may happen to the Negro which would drive him into the arms of communism and all other forms of isms.

Students of the situation, for the most part, take the position that there is a desire sweeping the country, to the end that the Negro be driven into things which would place him in the same position Jews occupy in Germany, in order that he too may become the object of unadulterated persecution here at home. And so the plight of the Negro, despite his loyalty, would seem to be getting worse and worse all the time, except for the effort being made by the few social-minded whites of power and position, who try as best they can to stick out for a square deal and gradual progress for the Negro based upon merit and sound Christianity and Americanism.

So, we may expect more lynching,—actual and by law, we may expect no let up in all forms of injustices suffered so long by the Negro, but we must remain as wise as serpents and harmless as doves. We mut be on guard against being taunted into foolishly lifting our hands and thus giving those who hate and want to destroy us, a chance to shoot us and say they did it in "self defense."

We must protests against the wrongs perpetrated against us for no other reason than we are black as God has made us, but protests must be made as intelligently and in keeping with the constitution of the United States. We must unitedly make every effort to get along without conflict if possible. When that fails, we must unitedly take our pleas to the bar of public opinion, to the highest courts of the land and to our God.

If ever the Negro did need a Booker T. Washington and a Fredrick Douglas it is now. They tell me all crises produce a leader. We need a leader for this dreadful hour as we have never needed one before. Oh, dear God, give us a leader NOW.

I recall the Moses and Pharoah affair—Moses pleading for the liberation of the children. Pharoah's heart softening and then hardening again and again. Pharoah persuading the children of Israel—Pharoah and his host being swallowed up in the Red Sea. I would to God that the lambs and the lions, among us, could lay down together and study war no more—here at home—here between all whites and all blacks—beat their swords of hate into plough shares and their instruments of oppression and ungodly prejudice into pruning hooks.

Finding just a few more people imbued with the desire to do this, would be like God saying unto His servant, "Go into Sodom and Gomorah, if you can find a few righteous I will spare the city." Too many of us admit that greed, hatred, desire for a Lord and slave way of life is what has brought about this dreadful world conflict. Too few of us on the other hand, are willing to relinquish any of our hatreds, prejudices and oppressive ways, even if our reluctance so to do, means the destruction of ourselves and our civilization. And destruction is what I think we are rushing into a mile a minute.

There is something radically wrong with our thinking and way of life, otherwise there would have been no Pearl Harbor. We would have seen ten years ago the things which now descend upon us like the Locus and frogs upon the Pharoah. It seems to me, that unless we can adjust ourselves sanely, rightly and inwardly, we are headed for doing a good job of destroying ourselves.

All around me, I see the cost of food, fuel, shelter and the opportunity to make a living being put further and further out of the reach of those who have heretofore had only the bare possibility of existence—all in an effort to prepare for a fight we must make, but which if those who have been in the driver's seat, had been half as wise as they pretended to be by getting into the driver's seat, we would have been prepared for a victorious war five years ago. I remember, how when my father stood over me in the cotton field and yelled at me about leaving the roots of the grass, fear gripped me and I not only failed to hoe well, but cut up the best stalks of cotton, which did neither me nor my father any good. No nation can save itself with one tenth of its citizens fearful of death behind or on the front.

He that controls his own spirit is greater than he who takes a city, is the substance of a time tested biblical truth. The Negro people must guard against being driven to suicide or into a position where they can be "justifiably" destroyed behind the "self defense" scapegoat. The wolves are after us. They may kill many of us, but let's don't help kill ourselves by losing our sense of real values.

Racial Study At Vassar

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Jan. 31 —Adopting a suggestion made by the National Conference of Christians and Jews, the Social Museum of Vassar College has created a graphic exhibit to illustrate the American principle of freedom for all races, nationalities and religions

Under guidance of the museum director, fifty students have collected statistics and other data, translated these into charts, pictographs, maps and posters and set up this material together with a large number of photographs to present some significant economic, social, religious or psychological aspects of a nation composed of groups who had their origins in many countries.

The keynote is struck by a mural painting which dominates the outer room of the museum. Against a symbolic background of farm, factory, church and school stand half a dozen Americans of different racial origins.

A poster balance sheet of democracy on which assets of freedom of speech, of religion, of the press and other constitutional guarantees adding up to opportunities for individual development are set over against instances of oppression and discrimination against minority groups which typify the liabilities totaling limits to individual development. The exhbit proper shows the varied peoples in this country, the problems they face, the opportunities they find and the contributions they make to American life.

Outgrowth of the course in cultural history of the United States is a series of maps, each tracing the family history of a student as regards national origin, geographical movement, occupation and religion. One of the graphs which the National Conference of Christians and Jews plans to use in its work for racial and religious understanding correlates economic conditions, immigration and anti-foreign feeling.

Photographs contrast Polish and Yugoslav villages with American city streets, European peasant farms with large-scale agriculture in the Midwest, handicrafts with mechanized mass production, colored slums with model housing projects for Negroes, the many foreign born who struggle for existence with the few who reach success.

The Direction

Edwin R. Embree, student of American racial problems, author of Brown America and a lecturer whose words are familiar in the South, writes in the March American Mercury that the Nazi trick of comparing German treatment of Jews with American treatment of Negroes is entirely unjustified. "What Hitler tries to cover up," Mr. Embree writes, "is the difference in direction. While he has crassly reversed the clock of civilization, we in America have been slowly moving toward more tolerance and freer opportunity for all peoples."

Mr. Embree cites the rise in Negro literacy from 5 per cent to 85 per cent since emancipation. The death rate has dropped from 32 per thousand to 14 per thousand. Negroes have accumulated more than $2,500,000,000 in wealth and their total purchasing power approximates two billion dollars annually. The constantly increasing importance of the Negro in American arts is widely recognized and accepted.

Mr. Embree is wise to point out the direction in which our development lies. For it is in this direction that American people must, and will, see their hope. While he mentions the achievements of, and increasing opportunities for, Negroes in America, Mr. Embree would be among the first to call attention to the discriminations and pressures on Negroes and the poor opportunities for Negro education, recreation and industrial skills which now widely exist.

Hitler, indeed, fools no one in America with his comparison. But, it seems to us, it is greatly desirable that fairminded Americans refuse to place too much stress on arguments to the Negro that he is, here in America, much better off than he would be if Hitler controlled this and other democratic nations. Negroes, we believe, realize this. Their pronouncements indicate strongly such awareness. Indeed, the major Negro plea now being raised in this country seems to be for greater opportunity to work in the war effort. And, too, to place too much stress on the Negro's situation here in America as compared with what it would probably be under Hitler seems to us to serve indirectly and unintentionally as basis for some satisfaction with the Negro's place in American life today. Such satisfaction, we believe, would, in the long run, retard the education of Negroes for constructive citizenship and might undesirably tend to curb the development of opportunities for Negroes.

Another answer to Hitler's comments on the American Negro is to be found on this page in a letter under "Forum of the People." Americans, in this spirit of humanity and fair play, provide the answer to Hitler and the promise of this land's future.

Race Prejudice Our Foe

In addressing the American Booksellers Association at the Astor Hotel in New York City last week, Pearl Buck, the noted author of "The Good Earth" and other novels, the latest of which, "Dragon Seed," is said to rank with her best work, held forth the idea that race prejudice is one of the greatest foes that the Caucasian nations now engaged in the war will have to combat.

This is a timely observation in view of the fact that the British have been disinclined to arm the Malayans and in view of the accusation of Cecil Brown to the effect that they discriminated against the natives in evacuating non-combatants from Penang. Furthermore, both Britain and the United States have been reluctant to give full recognition to the great armies of Chiang Kai-shek and were driven to do so recently only through fear that he might make a separate peace with Japan and join with the Pan-Asia ideologists.

This, too, is a problem that comes right home to us here in Anniston, Ala. We have several hundred Negro troops out at Fort McClellan. They are American citizens and wear the American uniform. Thus they are entitled to our respect and should have every consideration at our hands, as the things for which they have been enlisted to fight are common to us all. Let there be no evidence of race prejudice as long as they are here.

ROOSEVELT AND THE GROUNDHOG

LAKELAND.—Theodore Roosevelt, during his administration, had been putting many negroes in office especially in the South. February 2, 1908, the "groundhog" failing to come out, some Senators facetiously remarked that he was afraid to come for fear "Teddy" would put a coon in his hole.

Disfranchised, Whites and Negroes

As for the choice of a president and vice president, five sixths of the white people as well as the majority of the negroes are disfranchised—and the white people will remain disfranchised as long as the state primaries shall be held after the national convention meets and nominates. Were the primaries held in the spring the Democrats could vote in them for tickets of delegates to the national convention. Negro Republicans can hold primaries if they wish and can vote in the general elections. No one is hindering them.

The Negro And Present Crisis

(Communication)

"The Southern Frontier," published by the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Atlanta, Ga., reports a study made by The Institute of Propaganda Analysis, of the Negro's loyalty in the present crisis. To date we have not seen the results of this study. However, it is significant that this question has been raised by Southern white people. Their uneasiness is easily explained. God knows the Negro has reasons to be disloyal. The disillusionment of the Negro following World War I and his present status in the bi-racial set-up are provocative of serious questionings. What are to be the fruits of this second cataclysm? Is this question in order? Is it specious?

Several months ago The Columbia State in a very lucid editorial, "A Choice to Be Made," said: "South Carolina must make a choice. Adjustments in race relations are inevitable. The choice South Carolina has is this: will the twhite people of South Carolina guide inevitable changes for the common good of this state; or will we decline to take leadership offered to us, and let changes come unguided by us?

There can be no going back to the past." The words of this progressive journal are significantly pertinent. If there are questions among the Negroes (and there are) they have their basis in the uneasy fear that there will be a "going back to the past." If we want to follow God, let us be assured that He is not "back" but forward. I am not sure that we want to follow Him. The Negro must be assured beyond doubt that he is not giving his all for the preservation of the status quo, the Latin for "the mess we is in." Professor Harold Laski of faculty of political science, University of London, said in a recent release in the New York Times, "we have to avoid the temptation to believe that there can be any attempt to return to the pre-war world."

If these "Southern regions" are to assume their rightful place of leadership in the post-war world, we must accord to the Negro every opportunity to grow enjoyed by other ethnic groups. Dr. Odum in his monumental work already mentioned, says, "The Negro is an integral part of the Southeast. Here is the region's hardest problem. It is of, for, and by the Southern people. What thousands of young white students want and the thousands of Negro students want is hard-boiled, realistic, evolutionary hope for the future rather than closed doors of opportunity and change. 'His' problem lies at the very heart of the whole region's future development, a reality from which there is no escape." To attempt to go forward without him is like trying to play Hamlet without Hamlet. The questions will continue to plague us; the uneasy fears will continue to haunt us like Banquo's ghost until we are assured that the best, the most courageous, the most intelligent, and the most Christian in both races are making an honest-to-goodness attempt to follow the Galilean Carpenter who said, "the truth shall set you free." However before the truth can set us free it must first make us mad.

"There is a destiny that makes us brothers;
None goes his way alone;
All that we send into the lives of others
Comes back into our own.
I care not what his temples or his creeds,
One thing holds firm and fast—
That into each fateful heap of days and deeds
The soul of man is cast."

The Negro's Place

What is the place of the negro?

Only the negro can answer the question, for he must—is—making it. The constitution gives him certain guarantees, but the economic and social system have attached to him handicaps such as he can only with difficulty overcome. And yet in his very benignity is his strength, a power that will not—should not—be quenched.

The negro has been described as an exotic of the most gorgeous and superb countries of the world, and he has deep in his heart a passion for things splendid, rich and fanciful; a passion which, rudely indulged by untrained taste, draws on him the ridicule of the colder and more correct white race.

And yet, laugh at him or mistreat him, and he'll love you only the more. You can't beat that spirit.

His place! It was named when some one termed the negro the image of God cut in ebony.—The Shelby Daily Star.

THIS MORNING

by JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES, II

"Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well."

MAR 5 - 1942

Especially if it involves the hard-earned pennies and neglected bodies of the poor. That is something to think about as different plans are made for a Negro hospital here to be financed in part by the colored people themselves. The need is so great and the money will represent such a sacrifice that there should be every initial care that whatever plan is adopted is sound, that it has the endorsement of our local medical authorities (white and colored), that there are reasonable assurances of funds not only for building but also for operating, and that those in charge are competent for the job. This is too great an undertaking for anything less than total teamwork among the interested parties, total science in the plan, and total ability for bringing it about.

Nothing finer, more deserved, or necessary could happen to Birmingham than the building of a Negro hospital. The bitter need is obvious when it is seen how strained and inadequate present facilities are and when it is considered that there is absolutely no opportunity for the development of Negro doctors and Negro nurses in hospital experience here. That is why the thing must be done right if it is attempted at all.

Every white resident of this district has a direct concern in hospital facilities for the colored people of this district, without regard to any of the problems in race relations upon which there is disagreement. All of us who are open-eyed know that the physical and moral well-being of the big colored percentage of our population is coming more and more to be as important to us as to them. All of us who are civilized and decent have, too, a civilized and decent solicitude for our colored people. And all of us are alert appreciate the fine response our colored people are making to the patriotic demands of these times (as in the recent Red Cross drive) and the fine resistance they are showing to small-minded or vicious agitators in their midst.

We of the South are agreed for the most part that we must be left alone to settle our immense race problem in our own way and experience. And we of the South justify ourselves in that attitude when we are faithful to every home move that will improve the home lot of the Negro. We prove our philosophy of home rule on the race question when, without regard to quarrels on this or that aspect of the question, we are whole-souled in doing things for the Negro that he desperately needs done and that involve no quarrel at all. In this thought, the white people of Birmingham owe the colored people of Birmingham not only their eventual financial support in plans for a Negro hospital but their careful present examination of every plan to make sure it is sound and that no pennies of these colored people are wasted or lost.

Randolph Says Now Is Time to Seek All Rights

NEW YORK.—A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, told 1200 citizens at a mass meeting at Mt. Olivet Baptist Church on February 15 that to fail to fight for every constitutional right enjoyed by every other American would be treason to the race and the cause of democracy.

Mr. Randolph declared that the March-on-Washington Movement, of which he is director, seeks to enlist 1,000,000 citizens to defend the rights of colored Americans today and in the post-war period, and that the fight was "definitely compatible with the fight of the United States to save the democratic system."

"This Is the Hour"

The labor leader said that though the "tides of democracy were running low, this is the hour of greatest opportunity to fight for rights." He also asked all-out support of colored persons in the war to crush "Hitler and Hiterism, Italian fascism and Japanese treacherous despotism."

Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman of the Negro Labor Committee of Harlem, stated that the colored people won a "significant victory" in the issuance of the Executive Order and the establishment of the Fair Employment Practices Committee by the President, which he said was a result of the March-on-Washington threat.

Protests were launched against discrimination in the armed forces, recent attacks on soldiers at Alexandria, La., and Fort Bragg, N.C., and the lynching at Sikeston, Mo. Dr. Lawrence M. Ervin, chairman of the New York Division of the march movement, presided. The Rev. O. Clay Maxwell is pastor at Mt. Olivet.

Racial Tension Invites Enemies

CHICAGO.—"The existence of interracial and inter-cultural tensions is a standing invitation to totalitarian propagandists to repeat in this country their well-known policy of divide and conquer," Professor Lloyd Allen Cook, white, of the Ohio State University Department of Sociology, declared here on Friday.

Outlining what he considered the four immediate race problems brought about by the war, Professor Cook spoke at the Stevens Hotel to the annual conference of the Progressive Education Association and the Association for Family Living, attended by some 2,000 teachers, mostly from the Central States.

Declaring that educators have a dual role in eliminating race prejudice both as participants in the civilian defense program as citizens and as teachers in adapting the school services to human needs, with particular attention to minority group children, the professor set forth as other conditions created by the war:

Watch for Saboteurs

"The stirring of the colored man to new conception of rights and his new demands for an equality status as a citizen; strong prejudices which prevent use of minority group manpower in certain defense industries, in State and community defense organizations and in some branches of the armed forces;

'And the ned to be watchful for fifth columnists and saboteurs, some of whom are of native birth, some enemy aliens, some white, some colored."

THE NEW EDUCATION

FEB 26 1942

The Negro has reached a point in his history when he must re-think education. Black boys and girls are studying books written by white authors for white children. Especially is this true in the field of the social sciences,—history, sociology, anthropology, and psychology. The new education must be scientific, unprejudiced, unbiast, and the true story must be told. The glorious past of the Negro should be taught black children. That is the secret of Mazzin's Italy, and Goethe's Germany. The Italy of Mussolini, and the Germany of Hitler were not built by Garibaldi, or Bismarck, but by teachers who lead the youth into appreciation of early over-towering personalities, literature, art, architecture, and sculpture. From these the present has stemmed. The New Education must teach Negroes to appreciate Negroid culture, and civilisation.

Again the New Education must prepare the rising generation for social integration. The things needed for use and consumption are to be produced. Moral and religious control are necessary in experience, if civilisation is not to collapse. It must be shot thru with the ideals of the Sermon on the plain. The world situation today presents a striking picture of education minus those spiritual controls which make for tolerance, fellow feeling, sympathy, and brotherhood.

JUMP JIM CROW

Robeson Balks At K. C. Bias

FEB 28 1942

KANSAS CITY—Irked because Negro patrons of his concert here last Tuesday were placed on one side of Municipal Auditorium, Paul Robeson halted midway in his program and told the audience that he was singing "under protest". He told them that it was a practice of his never to sing where his fellow racemen were segregated.

The first part of the noted baritone's song recital progressed with the utmost harmony and good humor. He opened the second half and expressed the regret that he had to interrupt with a speech.

"But," he continued, "I have made it a lifelong habit to refuse to sing in southern states or anywhere that audiences are segregated. I accepted this engagement under guarantee that there would be no segregation. Since many local leaders of my own race have urged me to fill this engagement, I shall finish the concert, but I am doing so under protest.

Sings Jim Crow Song

Then the artist proceeded with a group of Russian songs, sung with his usual art and vigor, but noticeably with an inner stress. He followed this group with an encore, the "Jim Crow" song, to verses of unmistakable racial protest, and he sang it with stronger feeling than he had put into any other numbers.

At this point, a few whites in the audience rose and left the hall. There was no spontaneous exit, but white listeners trickled out the exits during the remainder of the concert.

With his return 15 minutes later for his final group of spirituals, his usual good humor apparently prevailed and the tension was greatly relaxed. Those who had remained in the audience applauded the spirituals vigorously and he closed the concert with his famous rendition of "Ol' Man River." The audience left quietly and at his dressing room door were more than a hundred persons seeking autographs.

According to Eugene Xachman, manager of the auditorium, when the concert was contracted for, no agreement was entered into that prohibited segregation. Seats were available for Negroes in all price ranges and locations, he added, and said he "considered it strange" that Robeson made no protest until the concert was half over. Although there were seats in boxes, loges, on the main floor and in the balcony, Zachman said that "most of the Negroes occupied the east side of the hall." He inferred that "the temperamental artist" was induced by others to lodge the protest.

Contact established with Robeson's attorney, Robert Rockmore in New York, brought to light that the singer had called off a scheduled appearance in Santa Fe, N. M., last Friday after a hotel cancelled his reservations because other guests objected to presence of a Negro. Robeson, however, denied this was the reason and stated that other committments in Hollywood and on the Pacific coast made the action necessary.

Robeson stated, "I will still cancel engagements when I encounter racial prejudices and segregations, but just now, when so many of my people are unemployed and in distress, is no time for me to be cancelling over the mere matter of a hotel room."

FOUR FREEDOMS, (JIM CROW)

MAR 28 1942

THE ABOVE IS THE TITLE of an article by Alvin E. White, well informed Washington correspondent for the Associated Negro Press, in the current issue of The Nation. In the article, Mr. White tells of how a clique of southern Democrats and reactionary northern Republicans in Congress are sabotaging the efforts of liberal administrative officials who have sought to break up racial discrimination in various departments of the federal government.

MAR 28 1942

Their technique is to withhold appropriations until the official who has incurred their displeasure has been forced out. According to Mr. White, Clark Foreman was forced to resign as director of Defense Housing, Federal Works Agency, because of his refusal to "cooperate in the award of defense-housing contracts, one of which was the 200-unit housing project for Negro defense workers in Detroit which was later given over to whites, and also that he once had a colored secretary. In a like manner Nathan Straus was forced to resign as administrator of the United States Housing Authority because of his liberal views on the race question. Attempts to consolidate two Employment Service offices in Washington. and to abolish the Jim Crow office, resulted in the holding up of appropriations for the United States Employment Service until this project was abandoned.

Here are some definite charges and we think that the President and his associates who believe in real democracy should crack down on the reactionary legislators who are doing their best to nullify his recent pronouncements against discrimination because of race, color and creed.

LINCOLN U. PREXY PLEADS FOR RACE

Pittsburg Courier
Pittsburg, Penn.

FEB 28 1942

ELIZABETH, N. J., Feb. 26.—"We have in this country a Negro population greater than that of Norway, Sweden and Denmark combined, and 50 per cent greater than either Belgium or Holland," said Dr. Walter Livingston Wright, president of Lincoln university, in Chester County, Pennsylvania, the only institution for the higher education of Negro young men in Northeastern United States, in a Washington's birthday address at the First Presbyterian church here Sunday.

"We are concerned with the minorities abroad," Dr. Wright continued. "We should not neglect the vital influence of that in our midst. The Negro is no longer a Southern problem. One-fifth of the population is now in the North, with a steady spread toward uniformity over the Northern areas east of the Mississippi."

How Does It Feel To Be A Negro?

A very interesting account entitled "Colored in a White World" was found in the newsweek magazine of February 16th. It was a record on the findings of the American Youth Commission, which is publicizing troubles of young people in general. The Newsweek article pointed out that this report had been made after three years of intensive study during which time interviewers combed the southern black belt regions and the slums of big cities.

The summary of Dr. Robert L. Sutherland, chief of the University of Texas' Hogg Foundation for mental hygiene, in saying it does not feel good economically to be a Negro is just about as close to a fact as any I have heard. It is as near to the right thing as any white person could get to knowing how it feels to be a Negro.

"The mass of Negroes are hopelessly poor," the article states. "As with the hopelessly poor of an other race, their environment offers little incentive to ambition, diligence, punctuality, thrift and other virtues of the American "get ahead" philosophy. So it is according to Sutherland, that Negroes do a little more than their share of fighting, gambling and loafing."

It is true the mass of Negroes are hopelessly poor. Such invironments only offer little incentive to ambition and the other things named, but the American Negro does have a definite unrest and dissatisfaction with this environment. He is naturally cheerful, but he does not let his environment conquer his desire for better than the sordid things around him. It may be true, that many are unable to conquer this terrible thing of sordid environment, but few white men know the burning desire and zeal in many a Negro's breast that keeps him ever anxious to get ahead in spite of these bonds which tie him down.

The first years of my life were spent in the southern black belt spoken of in Newsweek's article. Endless fields of cotton stretched as far as the eye could see under the blazing southern sun. I worked and talked and played with those youngsters whose day began at five o'clock in the morning and ended with the setting sun. I heard them say how they yearned to "get ahead." They oftimes did not know exactly what they meant when they said "get ahead"; but they wanted to break the chains of modern serfdom which bound them inseparably to the white man's verdant soil and get something for themselves. I know many who have half starved, trying to get an education on their own in friendless cities. They had no career guidance. They only knew that education was a step and they were willing to brave hunger and cold and the scorns of those more fortunate to get it.

These are facts not taken from anybody's book. The youth of whom I write, live today. I could call their names and point to them. Some finally took themselves as far away as they could from the cotton belt. Others have cast down their buckets not far from the huts in which they were born, but they are endeavoring to buy the land to which they look for sustenance. They have the courage to carry on in spite of the mob and white supremacy.

There are those too weak to withstand the oppression, just as in other groups, but the Negro is willing to dare and do.

The item also speaks of the color complex, stating that light skinned Negroes are accepted socially more than the dark, kinky haired ones. For the information of those who don't know, the kinky-heaired Negro is extinct, thanks to Mme. Walkers and others; but Negroes who are black are as high on the social ladder as those of any color.

I repeat as I have often said, it is hard for any white man to tell how the Negro thinks; it is difficult for him to know how he feels. The AYC report is kind and sympathetic, but in all instances it does not not ring quite true. Richard Wright knows how the Negro feels because all of his life he has been an active witness to the drama of dark America. He has felt like his Bigger Thomas, that he was on the outside of the world, peeping in through a knot hole. He has set those attitudes down on paper in his Native Son. No amount of earch can tell a white man how a Negro feels. He, too must live ife of a Negro before he can know that.

Negro Aspirations

Early last week The Anniston Star printed in this paper a letter by a well-known Negro preacher, in which he made a plea for racial equality. We ran the letter after due deliberation in order that the white persons of this section and the more responsible members of the Negro race might understand how many "advanced" Negroes today are thinking, getting their ideas largely from the pernicious propaganda of the Pittsburgh Negro paper that is circulated very widely over the country.

We hope that by now Grimmett realizes that the dissemination of his ideas has done his race far more harm than good. He has done the members of his race an injustice and the sooner he divests himself of the ambitions he and many others are entertaining the better it will be for all concerned. We believed, however, that unless we were informed as to what some Negroes are thinking we could not intelligently direct them along more conservative planes of race relationships.

This paper has a profound sympathy for the Negro. He was brought here over his protest and so long as he lives among the white people of the South he is entitled to considerate treatment. Yet, he must realize that he himself owes a certain responsibility to improve his own condition.

There is a wide difference between minorities in this country and abroad. In Europe, those minorities have had the advantage of an age-old civilization and a broad culture. The American Negro, however, is but a few generations removed from slavery and is incapable of self-government or of governmental responsibility, considered as a whole.

Before the American Negro becomes an integral part of our social organism he must learn to curb his animal instincts. He must abide by the laws of social hygiene. He must become more reliable as a worker and more thrifty as a citizen. To the end that this may be achieved, The Anniston Star believes he should have educational and economic opportunity, and certainly he is entitled to equality before the law.

Yet, we never hear the wisest Negroes talking about social equality. Booker Washington taught them that they should cultivate a sense of racial pride and responsibility and Dr. Carver evidently believes that they should win recognition by reason of their achievements. Hitler, however, who recognizes the Aryans as the only "pure" race, would restore them to slavery and Grimmett would do well to teach his people that lesson instead of preaching social equality. Let's see what the Negroes can do in Hobson City, an exclusively Negro town, before they undertake to run Anniston.

The Negro Must Speak Out

We have just been reading something about Abraham Lincoln's reaction to the Dred Scott decision handed down by the United State Supreme Court under Chief Justice Taney. Being accused by Stephen Douglass of resisting the court, he clarified his position by showing the distinction between the meanings of the words "resistance" and "opposition." "Resistance," he said, means to refuse to acquiesce, while "opposition" means a failure to be in accord with. Since the court held that a master had the right to carry his slave into whatever state, even free states, he might choose, Lincoln said that he would not resist the decision so long as it stood. But believing that the decision was not in accord with the meaning of the Constitution, he opposed it and would work for its repeal.

The Negro people of the United States find themselves very much in the position of Abraham Lincoln at this time of danger to our country's welfare. The Negro's place in the Nation's fighting forces is limited. He has little, if any, in the administration of the defense program connected with civilian activities. Then, there are the traditional limitatons whch have resulted n innumerable instances of unfair treatment of members of the race at the hands of white Americans. So, the question arises: What must the Negro people do? Must they forget the injustices which are being heaped upon them as a group and go forth to sacrifice and die for their country without saying a murmuring word? Or, must they, because of their own great grievances, refuse to cooperate with the program for national defense so long as their own grievances remain.

There is but one course to follow, if the Negro people can bring themselves to believe in the ultimate triumph of justice under democracy as did Abraham Lincoln: While fighting and giving their all to save democracy, they must not forget to cry aloud agaist the injustices from which, under democracy, they themselves are suffering. In other words, even though the United States is at war, and it may take all that the American people have to win the war the Negro people can not afford to cease their cry against lynching, segregation, disfranchisement, and a hundred other unjust limitations which the members of the race suffer here in the United States. To do so would be unfair to themselves and out of harmony with the spirit of democracy for which they declare themselves willing to sacrifice and die.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

World-Telegram

CHICAGO, Feb. 27.—Those persons, white and colored, who are most actively and earnestly concerned in the problem of race relations underestimate the progress that has been made in, say, the last 40 years. I can't remember when I last heard or read the word "coon," which was in common use when I was young, and the word "nigger," almost as offensive, has been dropping out of the vocabulary of intelligent white men and women. In fact, although the word "colored" seems stilted, I observe that it is now more commonly used in conversation, at least than "Negro," and I attribute all this to the white man's good will and good manners and a sensitive respect for the colored man's feelings. He doesn't like the word "Negro," so we avoid it, even when there are no colored men about. We still use it in the newspapers, but only because we insist that it is the more correct word and not lacking in dignity.

About the start of this century the colored man had no place on our stage and all colored parts were played by white actors blacked up with cork which would be a ridiculous device today when white and colored players mingle in the casts with no more friction than is ordinarily found in this temperamental calling. We were not band-crazy then, but the bands we did have were all white, except Handy's, and there were no colored singers of note, although there were some shouters in the dumps. Much of the strident music known as Negro stuff is very bad and not authentic or a credit to the race, but we had a school of patronizing and top-lofty writers about 20 years ago who so identified it and claimed to perceive some obscure beauty in it.

We may be sure of one thing. The Germans have declared themselves very flatly on the colored man's status in the world and, if victorious in this war, would degrade him to the position of a beast. Thus, it is plain that the colored American is not fighting a white man's war this time, whatever he may think of his part in Cuba in '98 and in France in 1917 and in '18.

The error is often made of saying that the United States is no less oppressive toward the Negro than Hitler toward the Jew and the feelings of colored men have been churned up by this thought. But it is a declared policy and purpose of the Nazi government to dehumanize the Jew and deprive him of all human rights. whereas our Constitution and laws pointedly recognize the colored man as a human being and citizen. The impositions on the Negro, the discriminations and denials are imperfections which our government has been trying to work out for many years and, as relations and understanding improve between the races, his status steadily rises.

The Communists have imposed shamelessly on our colored people, for Communism, if it is to be a revolt of the masses against the few, must throw the Negro into conflict with the masses because, in our country, it has been the ignorant and prejudiced white man who has most jealously and suspiciously opposed the rise of the dark man.

Until very recently, even the more enlightened workers who formed the labor aristocracy in the craft unions rejected the colored man on racial grounds and the improvement in relations has come from the higher levels of intelligence while prejudice persisted further down. So, if Communism were to prevail, the Negroes would still find themselves in conflict with and outnumbered by a victorious element that has been least generous to them all along.

The Negro writer, composer, painter, actor and musical artist nowadays are limited only by their own ability and the normal handicaps which trouble white men. The name of an author, for example, does not proclaim him to be a Negro and even if it be proudly announced that the writer of some great work were a colored man or woman, that person would be acclaimed and rewarded.

Frankly, the political leaders who have risen in Negro communities in the North have been undistinguished and selfish and on a par generally with the inferior white politician and, in method, very similar to the padrones of Italian immigrant neighborhoods, the professional Irishman and the professional Pole, a familiar political figure in Chicago and Buffalo.

No sensible man will say that the Negro associates freely with us, but we white people, ourselves, are divided into groups according to manners, occupations and interests and do not regard these rather instinctive segregations as inequalities. I say good will on the white man's side has wrought more improvement than we realize and the Negro has more to lose than any other American but the Jew by a victory for Adolf Hitler.

Mrs. Buck Tells of White Slavery Impending

It is interesting to observe the opposing views of Westbrook Pegler and Pearl S. Buck, as published in this issue. Pegler thinks there is a natural antagonism existing between the masses of white and black people, while Mrs. Buck takes the opposite view, and the one always stressed by the Black Dispatch. Mrs. Buck feels that the mass of white people want to do right and are at the present moment striving to climb over the hills of tradition and prejudice up to the plains of human brotherhood.

We think there is evidence all over America of this fact. Right here in Oklahoma the Oklahoma Youth Legislature, the Oklahoma Federation for Constitutional Rights, the interracial classes in all white churches, where Negro speakers are cordially invited to speak, are conclusive proof that white people have started THINKING RIGHT. Thought precedes action.

In the deep South the Southern Conference for Human Welfare, the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching, the CIO labor unions and numerous other liberal organizations all evidence the trend on the part of white people to take American democracy out of the ritual and convert it into a living, breathing thing.

Mrs. Buck thinks the greatest challenge that comes to the American Negro rests in his ability to see the whole world picture in this titanic struggle and not confine his vision and interest solely to what is happening here in America. We agree with Mrs. Buck in that statement.

In this connection, Mrs. Buck calls attention to the fact that if the Japs win in their struggle for power south of Singapore, that white people on the continent of Australia, who live in a country as large as the United States, may suddenly be thrown into chattel slavery as debasing as any condition ever visited upon the American Negro.

In this same Axis group is Hitler, who has announced a racial superiority thesis regarding white people, which with Hitler in power would overnight nullify every gain black people have made upon this continent.

A catholic survey of what is going on in the world today should convince any black man that this is not a race war, but indeed a battle for human freedom. Provincial thinking on the part of American Negroes is the most dangerous direction in which black citizens could drift.

In her discourse, Mrs. Buck makes concessions few whites are willing to make. But it is in the atmosphere of utter frankness that common ground can be found to battle for more idealistic thinking. Mrs. Buck in her statement goes far enough to say what this writer said at Houston, Texas, when we delivered the keynote address before the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People last year. Listen to Mrs. Buck:

> "Who can fight so well for freedom as those who know what it is to be deprived of it?
> "It is essential now that colored Americans see what the white man cannot see. Your vision must be clearer than his. You must not let him for a moment be satisfied with less than our American ideal of freedom for everyone. For there will be no freedom for the white man either if there is not freedom for the colored."

When we spoke at Houston last year we suggested then what Mrs. Buck talks about now. We insisted then that the Negro be given the right to sit at the council table and help white America to think, and in that connection we said this:

> "I know of no more significant reason why this meeting should be called here in Houston, by the 13,000,000 black men and women of America than the fact that America refuses to allow Negroes to assist in thinking through her great and vital problems. Many patriotic Negroes express desire to work and fight for the government, but I would add to work and fight, another freedom—the right to think.
> "Tonight, and this week, Negroes want to do a considerable amount of thinking for America. The mayor of Muskogee, Oklahoma, sometime ago, during the course of a welcome to the State Conference of Branches of the N. A. A. C. P., said he believed the American Negro had lived closer to God than any other segment of the population. I have tried since the mayor's speech to peer through his glasses, but that is not the picture I see. To my notion and thinking the Negro in America has lived closer to hell than any other group, and out the crucible of hell the black man in America can perhaps offer to America better definitions of democracy.
> "The conscience of the men who wrote the American constitution was refined in the atmosphere of tyranny shackled upon the colonists by King George. That is why today our constitution is the greatest charter of human rights the world has ever known, and the American Negro, who since Lincoln's freedom, has been cast into the brimstone of torment, is more capable of interpreting democracy than any other group."

It is the responsible task of every American Negro in this hour of crisis, in the community where he lives to seek out white men and women who like Mrs. Buck are fighting for the things that ought to be. In every community in America there should be a meeting of minds and an understanding of objectives. This is the hour when white men and white women are willing to accept the black man in the task of thinking through the grave problems of the world.

Let Grimmett Depart

To The Anniston Star:

In recent issues of your paper, I have read several letters with much interest regarding Grimmett's letter, "Will History Repeat Itself?" Are we returning to the day of the Carpet Baggers? In Grimmett's letter he seems to think that we are still living in the days of 1867 and 1868. Immediately after the passing of the Reconstruction Act, Northern adventurers, seeing the opportunity of securing for themselves the high offices of the reconstructed state governments, through the control of the Negro voters, began their invasion of the South. They were called "Carpet Baggers" because they were said to have brought all their possessions with them in carpet bags. However, many of them returned a few years later loaded with the wealth they had extorted from their former enemies. Even more despised by the white people of the South were the "Scalawags," white Southerners who joined the "Carpet Baggers." We in the South still have some of these "Scalawags."

Their success is indicated by the fact that in 1868, in the seven states that had just been restored, ten of the fourteen federal Senators, twenty of the thirty-five federal representatives, and four of the seven governors were carpet baggers. All the lesser offices were held by Negroes and scalawags. In the legislature of South Carolina, during 1868, there were eighty-eight Negroes and sixty-seven whites. There were many Negro members who could neither read nor write. The same was practically true of the white carpet baggers and scalawags. It was in the management of the financial affairs of the state that made the most pitiful showing. The entire membership of the South Carolina legislature in 1868 paid annual taxes amounting to only $635.20. Ninety-one of the members paid no taxes at all. Extravagant sums were appropriated from the public funds for fine desks upon which the Negroes put their feet. French windows and China spittoons and the most lavish furnishings were procured for the capital quarters. Similar conditions, to some extent, were also found in other Southern states. during the time they were dominated by the rascally carpet baggers, scalawags and Negroes.

With regiments of Northern military forces on hand to enforce these laws, the white people of the South were powerless to stop these extravagances and corruptions. The Union Leagues were organized during the war as agencies to promote the Union of these leagues, the carpet baggers lectured the blacks on their obligations to the Republican party and encouraged them to demand social as well as political equality of the races. Some of these leagues adopted violent methods in extreme cases. Democratic white leaders were robbed, murdered and their homes burned. These Southerners, in their desperation, sought some means of protection and retaliation and the Ku Klux Klan was organized at Pulaski, Tenn. It was a society as well as a social club, the name being derived from the Greek word "Kulos" meaning a band or a circle. In the spring of 1867, at Nashville, Tenn., these clubs were brought together into the invisible empire of the South, with Gen. Forrest as its head. It was not long until a baser element crept into the Klan and in 1869 Gen. Forrest ordered it disbanded.

Most of us Southerners are familiar with the societies mentioned and we do not approve of such rule. We believe in our Southern darkies having their just rights in both state and federal laws. In the past few years, the South has shown just such a spirit in many cases to our Southern darkies right here in Calhoun County and the state of Alabama. We have protected them from mob violence in murder trials which the writer feels has no part in our state government. I also think that Grimmett made a grave mistake when he came out publicly and stated his views in his letter to his own race and to our Democratic form of government. I think it wise for him, if he cannot become accustomed to our Southern hospitality, to return to the state to which he is accustomed . . . whether it be Maine or Massachusetts . . . and not come South and poison the minds of our Southern darkies who are accustomed to our ways and government, especially at a time when we should stand united for what Democracy means to all red-blooded Americans, justice, freedom and a free religion to all.

NEGRO MINISTERS ANSWER GRIMMETT

Letter Did Not Speak For Race In Anniston, They Say

Pointing out that the unfortunate Grimmett letter published recently in The Star had worked undue hardships on their race, two Negro Methodist ministers of Anniston, R. B. Barfield and W. P. Pollard, Wednesday paid a visit to The Star and explained that the writer of that letter was merely expressing his own opinion and did not represent the views of the members of his race in Anniston.

"The Negro race as a whole has suffered ill effects from this unfortunate letter," they explained, "and Grimmett's sentiments certainly cannot be taken as those of the Negro race in Anniston. He was speaking as an individual, and not as a representative of any group or organization of our race here.

"We feel that when the citizens of Anniston realize this fact, they will not blame the rest of us for some ill-advised expression from a member of our race. We know that 'Rome wasn't built in a day' and that we cannot expect too much all at once. We Negroes are attempting to build ourselves up so that we will merit the respect and confidence of the white people. When we, as a race, have fulfilled this mission, some of the far-fetched theories of which Grimmett wrote may become realities. All we ask now is that the people of Anniston and this section not judge all of us by the individual expression of one," they concluded.

The Revolt of the Evil Fairies

THE GRAND DRAMATIC OFFERING of the Booker T. Washington Colored Grammar School was the biggest event of the year in our social life in Hopkinsville, Kentucky. It was the one occasion on which they let us use the old Cooper Opera House, and even some of the white folks came out yearly to applaud our presentation. The first two rows of the orchestra were always reserved for our white friends, and our leading colored citizens sat right behind them —with an empty row intervening, of course.

Mr. Ed Smith, our local undertaker, invariably occupied a box to the left of the house and wore his cutaway coat and striped breeches. This distinctive garb was usually reserved for those rare occasions when he officiated at the funerals of our most prominent colored citizens. Mr. Thaddeus Long, our colored mailman, once rented a tuxedo and bought a box too. But nobody paid him much mind. We knew he was just showing off.

The title of our play never varied. It was always "Prince Charming and the Sleeping Beauty," but no two presentations were ever the same. Miss H. Belle LaPrade, our sixth-grade teacher, rewrote the script every season, and it was never like anything you read in the story books.

Miss LaPrade called it "a modern morality play of conflict between the forces of good and evil." And the forces of evil, of course, always came off second best.

The Booker T. Washington Colored Grammar School was in a state of ferment from Christmas until February, for this was the period when parts were assigned. First there was the selection of the Good Fairies and the Evil Fairies. This was very important, because the Good Fairies wore white costumes and the Evil Fairies black. And strangely enough most of the Good Fairies usually turned out to be extremely light in complexion, with straight hair and white folks' features. On rare occasions a dark-skinned girl might be lucky enough to be a Good Fairy, but not one with a speaking part.

There was never any doubt about Prince Charming and the Sleeping Beauty. They were always light-skinned. And though nobody ever discussed those things openly, it was an accepted fact that a lack of pigmentation was a decided advantage in the Prince Charming and Sleeping Beauty sweepstakes.

And therein lay my personal tragedy. I made the best grades in my class, I was the leading debater, and the scion of a respected family in the community. But I could never be Prince Charming, because I was black.

In fact, every year when they started casting our grand dramatic offering my family started pricing black cheesecloth at Franklin's Department Store. For they knew that I would be leading the forces of darkness and skulking back in the shadows—waiting to be vanquished in the third act. Mamma had experience with this sort of thing. All my brothers had finished Booker T. before me.

APR 6 - 1942

Not that I was alone in my disappointment. Many of my classmates felt it too. I probably just took it more to heart. Rat Joiner, for instance, could rationalize the situation. Rat was not only black; he lived on Billy Goat Hill. But Rat summed it up like this:

"If you black, you lack."

I should have been able to regard the matter calmly too. For our grand dramatic offering was only a reflection of our daily community life in Hopkinsville. The yallers had the best of everything. They held most of the teaching jobs in Booker T. Washington Colored Grammar School. They were the Negro doctors, the lawyers, the insurance men. They even had a "Blue Vein Society," and if your dark skin obscured your throbbing pulse you were hardly a member of the élite.

Yet I was inconsolable the first time they turned me down for Prince Charming. That was the year they picked Roger Jackson. Roger was not only dumb; he stuttered. But he was light enough to pass for white, and that was apparently sufficient.

In all fairness, however, it must be admitted that Roger had other qualifications. His father owned the only colored saloon in town and was quite a power in local politics. In fact, Mr. Clinton Jackson had a lot to say about just who taught in the Booker T. Washington Colored Grammar School. So it was understandable that Roger should have been picked for Prince Charming.

My real heartbreak, however, came the year they picked Sarah Williams for Sleeping Beauty. I had been in love with Sarah since kindergarten. She had soft light hair, bluish-grey eyes, and a dimple which stayed in her left cheek whether she was smiling or not.

Of course Sarah never encouraged me much. She never answered any of my fervent love letters and Rat was very scornful of my one-sided love affair. "As long as she don't call you a black baboon," he sneered, "you'll keep on hanging around."

After Sarah was chosen for Sleeping Beauty, I went out for the Prince Charming role with all my heart. If I had declaimed boldly in previous contests, I was matchless now. If I had bothered Mamma with rehearsals at home before, I pestered her to death this time. Yes, and I purloined my sister's can of Palmer's Skin Success.

I knew the Prince's role from start to finish, having played the Head Evil Fairy opposite it for two seasons. And Prince Charming was one character whose lines Miss LaPrade never varied much in her many versions. But although I never admitted it, even to myself, I knew I was doomed from the start. They gave the part to Leonardius Wright. Leonardius, of course, was yaller.

The teachers sensed my resentment. They were almost apologetic. They pointed out that I had been such a splendid Head Evil Fairy for two seasons that it would be a crime to let anybody else try the role. They reminded me that Mamma wouldn't have to buy any more cheesecloth because I could use my same old costume. They insisted that the Head Evil Fairy was even more important than Prince Charming because he was the one who cast the spell on Sleeping Beauty. So what could I do but accept?

I had never liked Leonardius Wright. He was a goody-goody, and even Mamma was always throwing him up to me. But above all, he too was in love with Sarah Williams. And now he got a chance to kiss Sarah every day in rehearsing the awakening scene.

Well, the show must go on, even for little black boys. So I threw my soul into my part and made the Head Evil Fairy a character to be remembered. When I drew back from the couch of Sleeping Beauty and slunk away into the shadows at the approach of Prince Charming, my facial expression was indeed something to behold. When I was vanquished by the shining sword of Prince Charming in the last act, I was a little hammy perhaps—but terrific!

The attendance at our grand dramatic offering that year was the best in its history. Even the white folks overflowed the two rows reserved for them and a few were forced to sit in the intervening one. This created a delicate situation, but everybody tactfully ignored it.

When the curtain went up on the last act, the audience was in fine fettle. Everything had gone well for me too—except for one spot in the second act. That was where Leonardius unexpectedly rapped me over the head with his sword as I slunk off into the shadows. That was not in the script, but Miss LaPrade quieted me down by saying it made a nice touch anyway. Rat said Leonardius did it on purpose.

The third act went on smoothly though until we came to the vanquishing scene. That was where I slunk from the shadows for the last time and challenged Prince Charming to mortal combat. The hero reached for his shining sword—a bit unsportsmanlike I always thought, since Miss LaPrade consistently left the Head Evil Fairy unarmed—and then it happened!

Later, I protested loudly—but in vain—that it was a case of self-defense. I pointed out that Leonardius had a mean look in his eye. I cited the impromptu rapping he had given my head in the second act. But nobody would listen. They just wouldn't believe that Leonardius really intended to brain me when he reached for his sword.

Anyway he didn't succeed. For the minute I saw that evil gleam in his eye—or was it in my own?—I cut loose with a right to the chin, and Prince Charming dropped his shining sword and staggered back. His astonishment lasted only a minute though, for he lowered his head and came charging in, fists flailing. There was nothing yellow about Leonardius but his skin.

The audience thought the scrap was something new Miss LaPrade had written in. They might have kept on thinking so if Miss LaPrade hadn't been screaming so hysterically from the sidelines. And if Rat Joiner hadn't decided that this was as good a time as any to settle old scores. So he turned around and took a sock at the male Good Fairy nearest him.

When the curtain rang down, the forces of Good and Evil were locked in combat. And Sleeping Beauty was wide awake, and streaking for the wings.

They rang the curtain back up fifteen minutes later, and we finished the play. I lay down and expired according to specifications, but Prince Charming will probably remember my sneering corpse to his dying day. They wouldn't let me appear in the grand dramatic offering at all the next year. But I didn't care. I couldn't have been Prince Charming anyway.

Why Should Southern People Be Told How to Treat the Negro?

To The Index-Journal:

We would like to know just why we have to be told how to treat Negroes after all these years of living in the same country together.

Some one may be after making money out of that society that met at the court house last Saturday. One lady says we treat them like babies and must not do so any more.

The South has always been the best friend of the Negro and as long as they understand conditions and observe them we will always be kind to them.

These people seem to be taking on Mrs. Roosevelts ideas. Some are thinking they are working under her. Pegler tells the truth about Mrs. Roosevelt. She is only stirring up strife.

We do have a color line in the South and it must not be crossed over. It is no place for social equality.

Let the races have their own schools, colleges and churches. We do not want any mix-up.

Some Northern teachers came to Georgia and wanted social equality in the University and we see how it failed. We should all take off our hats to Talmadge just for what he has done for Georgia with help from right-thinking people.

Can you tell us why we are told how to treat Negroes as if we were ignorant children? The First Lady must think we are so and she has these societies at work for her sake. It is as silly as her dancing lessons which she wants to run.

Every white person knows hom to treat them kind and do the right thing by them but fe cannot have social equality.

A good many are saying they want Hitler to come on over here and put them on top and we whites on the bottom. Some are having club meetings of this kind. Some white people are paving the way for the Klan to ride again by such doings.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.

Race Relations

CHICAGO, Feb. 27. Thase persons, white and colored, who are most actively and earnestly concerned in the problem of race relations underestimate the progress that has been made in, say, the last 40 years. I can't remember when I last heard or read the word "Coon," which was in common use when I was young, and the word "Nigger," almost as offensive, has been dropping out of the vocabulary of intelligent white men and women. In fact, although the word "colored" seems stilted, I observe that it is now more commonly used in conversation, at least than "Negro," and I attribute all this to the white man's good will and good manners and a sensitive respect for the colored man's feelings. He doesn't like the word "Negro," so we avoid it, even when there are no colored men about. We still use it in the newspapers, but only because we insist that is the more correct word and not lacking in dignity.

About the start of this century the colored man had no place on our stage and all colored parts were played by white actors blacked up with cork which would be a ridiculous device today when white and colored players mingle in the casts with no more friction than is ordinarily found in this temperamental calling. We were not band-crazy then, but the bands we did have were all white, except Handy's, and there were no colored singers of note, although there were some shouters in the dumps. Much of the strident music known as Negro stuff is very bad and not authentic or a credit to the race, but we had a school of patronizing and toplofty writers about 20 years ago who so identified it and claimed to perceive some obscure beauty in it.

German View

We may be sure of one thing. The Germans have declared themselves very flatly on the colored man's status in the world and, if victorious in this war, would degrade him to the position of a beast. Thus, it is plain that the colored American is not fighting a white man's war this time, whatever he may think of his part in Cuba in '98 and in France in 1917 and in '18.

Politeness

Make a note of the thanks you receive when you extend courtesies to the strangers you encounter on the streets, in the stores, in office buildings, and see how many or how few of them express any appreciation. You meet a messenger boy on the steps of a building. You salute him with a word of good will. How many times does he fail to return your salutation or merely grunt an acknowledgment?

Open the door of a restaurant for men and women and children and how many of them say "Thank you" as though they mean it? How many neglect to notice your courtesy? Open the door in a taxi to help someone enter. All of them do not show appreciation. On buses many passengers seem to think one who takes a seat beside them is infringing upon their rights.

In railway coaches men and women play the part of hogs by piling their baggage on two seats and only a request, sometimes a demand, will induce them to share space to which they have no right. On the sidewalks you are jostled by pedestrians. How many ask your pardon and how many do not?

"Pardon me," and "Thank you" are two signs of gentility that are fast passing in the South where they once were on the tips of all tongues to be uttered when occasion permitted, not when occasion demanded. They are expressions used far more often by the Negroes of today than the whites.

How must we account for the boorish manners of many of our young people? Not that human nature has changed, or that youth is more selfish, but that our way of life has changed and lack of training of children is the homes and schools is helping to rear an increasing crop of youngsters who haven't time to be courteous to young or old. "Pardon Me, Please," would be a great subject for sermons in American churches and it might be followed with sermons entitled "Thank You."

WE, TOO, ARE AMERICANS

(By Cordelia Kirksey)

In every national crisis that this country has faced since Negroes have been in America, our people have stood shoulder to shoulder with all other groups of Americans, in defending the ideals of this country.

The present situation is no exception. From a state of emergency we have moved into a state of war. Hostilities have begun. Lives have been lost. Bombs are falling on American soil. Enemies of Democracy and Freedom are training their treacherous guns upon us.

Despite that, we as Negroes, must move in and offer our services just as we have always done. This is no time for hysteria, for bickering, for indecision. Victory must be ours. America needs us fellow Negro citizens.

All industry has been called upon by our courageous president for seven-day week effort. Negroes are ready, anxious and able to give their share of service.

It is your duty and my duty as American Negroes to help our loyal white citizens of Pickens county and adjoining counties to see that our youth realize and appreciate the opportunities for preparation. The opportunity to acquire skills which will serve them in the future as well as in the present, the opportunity to become an integral part of America's victory program.

All of we Negroes can be of service, and we must. We must have our share of responsibility in order to contribute our share of service. Civilian defense needs every volunteer hand available. Our fellow white citizens need us to help win victory. We know what is happening and may we put our shoulder to the wheel and help them push.

The Negroes of Pickens are deeply interested in the First Aid course which is now under the direction of Dr. N. C. Brackett. We are striving to help him help make our community a safer, an intelligent place to dwell. We should not be afraid of something new, and should not fear adventuring into fields hitherto unexplored, if thereby we can increase our efficiency.

This is America's war. And we,
oo, are Americans.

Pity The White Man

MAR 14 1942

MAR 14 1942

By W. T. BOST

In The Greensboro Daily News

PRESIDENT Modecai Johnson of Howard University is a Negro whose complexion is about that of Booker T. Washington and Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, both of whom the president excels in the type of pulpit eloquence which one found in the great Bishop John C. Kilgo.

Booker Washington always counted it good fortune to be born a Negro; Dr. DuBois has many strains in his blood, but the blood which he most abhorrs is the white man's and he has none of that. Dr. Johnson is a descendant of southern slaves but the man he most pities is the southern white man, the most enslaved of all peoples on earth.

Of course, Dr. Johnson thinks that the British and Dutch have a lot of sins to answer for. Those empires have dealt very badly with the black man, so badly that millions of those blacks now are hesitant to choose between the "friendly enemy, Japan," and the hostile friends, the United Nations, particularly, the Dutch and the British. When there was a France another white race lorded it over all the little peoples of color. Any dubiety in the answer of British and American democratic purposes toward those repressed peoples, Dr. Johnson fears, may hurt us very much. He isn't certain that the Tory element in both, in all three great white countries, will not dominate so completely that in the end China may find it profitable to quit fighting Japan and therefore fighting for the United Nations.

ROOSEVELT A GREAT PRESIDENT

But Dr. Johnson is a native southerner. He had slave ancestors and he does not expect the miracle which religion and democracy wait to perform to come immediately, or in his own day. He thinks tremendous gains for all humanity radiate from North Carolina. He considers the University of North Carolina a "significant center" of goodwill and high purpose. He thinks North Carolina has a great opportunity. He regards Roosevelt the greatest president since Lincoln and just as fortunately positioned for a great world regeneration.

But he fears that the emancipation of the white man is going to be very difficult. This gentleman has been enslaved much longer than was the black man. The Negro was merely a piece of property 80 years ago. The farms on which he grew up were operated also by white men. They kept their chattel slavery and worked their degenerated farms. They still do. They are slaves to that impoverished life which has no mind in its muscle and no heart in its handiwork. So the leadership of those ex-slaves clings to that ancient soil. Result: There are 5,500,000 white men and 3,000,000 black men who live below the poverty level of the most impoverished peasantry in the world.

They live on less than $500 annual income. And they are not half the story More than 18,000,000 of our people live on incomes under $1,000 a year. On the same ratio about six million are Negroes; and 12 million whites. Does this tremendous figure of Howard University hate the whites? He does not. He pities them.

WHITE MAN TO BE PITIED

He pities them because they can make no escape from the immemorial and pertinacious obsession that ignorance and poverty are good for some people. Assuming that this could be true of the 6,000,000 Negroes, can it be true of the 12,000,000 whites? Granted that something could be said for ignorance, poverty, disease and death, is it in the public interest to have that many poor people in the richest country on earth? Can it help anybody in the world to have hidden in this great South the raw materials which can multiply the national wealth? Does it help to have a per capita appropriation for education in the South less than one half that of the nation? Does that make sure our keeping pace with our fellows? "I know what slavery did to us, but we haven't quit calculating what it has done for the whites," he said.

Dr. Mordecai Johnson does not of course like the kind of democracy which is dealt out to the men of color anywhere. Germans, Belgians, Dutch, British and Americans have superimposed their power. He thinks that all these white peoples could make tremendous moral and economic gains political and religious acquisitions by using the democracy for which Americans fought and died. But the man pitied by this college president isn't the disadvantaged black man living in poverty, ignorance and disease. "The man most to be commiserated is the white leader who has enslaved his whole South by dooming it to its ancient obsessions."

THE NEGRO AND THE PACIFIC MOVEMENT

Much has been said in the public press during the past week about the Negroes and their relation to the Pacific Movement of the Eastern World, an organization which attracted a large number of Negroes in this country to it by holding up the injustices which are imposed upon them in this country, solely because of their color.

The leaders in this movement posed as Japanese who claimed that they, too, suffered greatly and were denied equal justice because of their race and color. They lost no time in saying to us that the Filipinos and the Chinese and "other dark races of the world" were in sympathy with the Pacific Movement because of its racial aspect.

Quite naturally these leaders, who sometimes went in groups of three, viz: one Chinese, one Japanese and one Filipino, would often attend meetings and each would tell something about the injustices from which he suffered because of race. They promised little or nothing in the way of relief for the American Negro in the form of building a united nation of all the races, nor provided means to have the Negroes emigrate to Japan or to some other country. But they did stress the importance of the Negroes fighting, yes, ceaselessly fighting for his rights in America. They would often say that they, the Filipinos, the Japanese and the Chinese, were willing to join in with us and help us fight our battle against race prejudice. They would state further that by joining the Pacific Movement of the Eastern World, pooling their resources and uniting with other darker races, the Negroes in this country would be in a position to make a better fight for their rights because of this organization.

Of course, it is proper to state here that thoughtful Negroes, for the most part had little or no faith in the statements that we would receive any help from the Japanese. We, like the white people of this country, figured that Japan was a weak nation and any statements coming from the Japs to the contrary were received by us as an idle dream. But many of the less thoughtful among us really believed that in some mysterious way the Japanese would help us throw off the burden of oppression which is forced upon us as a minority group in America—like the story of the slave who was told that if he would climb a tree backward, with a pine torch in each hand, he would be free. As impossible as the feat was, the slave found himself with a pine knot in each hand and rubbing his back against the tree. We mention this little incident to further show that people are willing to do or undertake almost anything, be it ever so unreasonable, to free themselves from the oppressors.

Our observation and judgment of the Pacific Movement of the Eastern World is that it was no more a fifth column movement than are many other organizations whose purpose is to organize the Negroes to fight for their rights, and which organizations number hundreds in this country. This includes most of our fraternal and civic organizations, all of which urge the Negroes to put up money to help fight for their rights. In the case of the so-called Japanese leaders, they merely seized upon the weak spot, figuring they could do a nice piece of exploiting the Negroes by playing upon the injustices which are heaped upon us by our white brothers.

We are pleased to have had this question come up again at this time, even in the vein in which it was publicized, because it has served in some degree to focus the attention of the American white man upon the injustices which are being heaped upon American Negroes, which are galling the latter almost to desperation.

NEGROES AND DEMOCRACY

To the Editor The News:

This message bears an expression of profound gratitude for your editorial, "Loyalty From All," published in The News Monday, March 9. In it you expressed the sentiment of every thinking American Negro. He has ever been a faithful and loyal citizen. He has given his lif and blood in the defense of his country on every occasion in which such was required, and will continue doing so as long as America is America.

Still, no one knows better than the Negro that democracy in America is only a theory—a beautiful dream that hasn't become a reality. It has not failed, for it has not yet had the chance to succeed or fail. Indeed, it has never even had a fair trial.

Our hopes and prayers during all these years have been that a firm belief in Christ and His teachings in the hearts of American citizens of all races will eventually cause democracy to become a reality in this our beloved land and country. Because we are a faithful and patient people, we still hope, pray and fight, when the country needs us, for democracy.

Sometimes, though, our hopes become faint, our faith begins to fade and our prayers grow weak. In such dark hours an editorial like yours revives our hopes, increases our faith and causes us to believe our prayers aren't entirely vain. We get more courage and are able to spend our life's blood in the defense of a wonderful theory—a beautiful dream, believing that by so doing we are helping to cause the theory to become a practice, the beautiful dream to become a reality.

I believe I express the sentiment of my people when I say, we thank you.

MR. PELLEY'S DEFENSE

The case against William Dudley Pelley, leader of the Silver Shirts, arrested on a Federal charge that his published writings tended to "promote the success of our enemies," must not be prejudged. Mr. Pelley says he hasn't said anything that a lot of other people haven't said. He isn't un-American, unless it is un-American to propose that certain persons adhering to a certain religion (in this case the Jewish people) be segregated in one city in each State. And he isn't a blithering idiot unless a man is such when he calmly asserts that "what Hitler is trying to do is set up a United States of Europe to do away with racial barriers and racial prejudices."

Every man is entitled to his day in court, in this country and up to the present moment. We shall be interested and instructed when Mr. Pelley has his.

Harlem's Street Corner Orators-Menace Or Blessing?

FEB 14 1942

By EDGAR T. ROUZEAU

NOW that this country is at war, with the consequent restrictions which this will impose on some of the basic freedoms of American citizens, considerable concern is being voiced as to the danger to the race which may be contained in the inflammatory remarks of Harlem street corner orators against Nordics as a whole, and Jews in particular.

It is felt in responsible quarters that these remarks, falling on the ears of non-understanding whites, may serve to hamper race efforts to integrate more Negroes into the various defense industries controlled by whites.

The belief that such danger does exist is not without foundation. A four-page pamphlet called "The Hour," circulated by a white group which includes Wythe Williams, the radio commentator, recently expressed consternation over the anti-Semitic and other inflammatory utterances of these Harlem street orators, usually of the radical fringe.

SEVERAL JAILED

Another white group known as "Friends of Demorcary," with national headquarters in Kansas City, Mo., has been posting its representatives in Harlem for several weeks past and it was largely through the efforts of these that penitentiary sentences have been handed out to such well known orators as Joseph E. McWilliams, Henry Fredericks, Edgar Martin, and Randolph Wilson, all representatives of the Young Negroes Pioneer League.

This is also the organization whose eastern representatives, stationed here in New York, have been toiling assiduously to connect Henry Ford, Charles A. Lindbergh and Father Charles Coughlin with pro-Fascist movements.

The organization is headed by Dr. L. M. Birkhead, a Protestant minister, who during a vsiit to Germany several years ago, learned of the inroads that Hitler was making in America. Upon his return to this country, he organized The Friends of Democracy to combat this subversive element.

The interest of the group in the utterances of Harlem street orators arises from the belief of its officials that anti-racial remarks carry seeds of discontent which might well threaten the unity of Americans so necessary to our national defense effort.

It is a known fact that the files of the organization are open to the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

VITAL ROLES IN PEACE TIME

As Harlem looks at it, its famous street corner orators have played a vital and important role in the peace time struggles of the race to achieve its economic rights in the webwork of democracy. They have been in the forefront of every movement to create more jobs for New York Negroes.

The very inflammatory remarks of which they have been convicted, plus the picketing campaigns of their supporters, has paved the way for such erudite Negroes as the Rev. Adam C. Powell and the Rev. John H. Johnson to step in at the proper moment and receive recognition as bargaining agents for Negro labor.

While these street speakers may denounce the Gentile and Jewish capitalists and speak of the war from the same point-of-view of genuine pro-Nazi groups, their feelings do not spring from the same motive.

White listeners, not understanding this, might easily give these street corner tirades the wrong interpretation and use it secretly as an ecomonic barrier against the entire race.

"Negro Leadership Moves North"

56

We publish elsewhere in this edition a very interesting article under the above caption by Mr. Jonathan Daniels, prominent newspaper man of North Carolina. Mr. Daniels begins by discussing the now famous Gaston county "murder" which, for reasons which a great many people have refused to try to understand, was designated as a "lynching."

Since we have discussed that matter in these columns before we will not go into that, but we do hasten to reply to Mr. Daniels, who says: "I may have been misinformed," to the effect that he was misinformed if he were told that "Northern Negro leaders who had been urging Federal anti-lynching legislation were unwilling to accept the statistic which showed the approach of disappearance of lynching in the South. Southern Negro leaders were unwilling to resist the demand for a definition which would tag more killings as lynchings for fear of being denounced from north of the Mason & Dixon line as Uncle Toms or Handkerchief Heads."

It just happens that Mr. Daniels must know that it was Tuskegee Institute that made the designation of the Gaston County case, and to say that Negro leaders in the South are intimated by their Northern brothers is an indictment of Negro leaders in the South, which is the main thesis of Mr. Daniels' article, and which would go a long way toward explaining the conclusion which he reaches, if, indeed, that were true. But it is not true.

A great many Negro leaders have moved North, for many and varied reasons, which most certainly are not unknown to any well informed person, but for as many and varied reasons there are still many virile and courageous Negro leaders in the South, who have discovered and are discovering ways of helping to solve the problems of race relations in the South. Mr. Daniels should not be disturbed or complain, if Negro leaders in the South sometimes find themselves in agreement with Negro leaders of the North. For they do often agree for the same reason that white leaders of the South often agree with white leaders of the North in matters affecting the common good.

On the whole we find much in Mr. Daniels' article with which we agree; being particularly impressed with his frankness of expression on the need of facing our problems without fear and intimidation. But we regret that he found it necessary to use this "lynching" episode as a basis of his discussion. For while lynching has been a tremendous evil, it in itself is undoubtedly rapidly disappearing, but the evils of which it is a terrible symptom continue to a very marked degree.

What we are trying to say is that the Christian white leaders of the South must find a way to have "warm hearts" toward the Negro of the nation and there will be no need for either "poor substitutes" or any other kind of substitutes. "New justice in Washington" will give place to new justice in the South, not because of Supreme Court decisions, but because whites who know the loyalties of the black people of the South will have decided that in the name of simple Christian goodness all men shall be treated with justice and fairness.

When this happens, as it most certainly is happening, there will be no need for Negro leaders to move up North because he may find there "a freedom of expression which makes it impossible for him to speak with a direct vigor for his race which might be impossible in the Black Belt of Alabama."

GOVAN SAYS POETRY KEY TO THE NEGRO

He Tells Rotary Negro Poets Have Found New Method of Expressing Selves

Intelligent understanding of the Negro people as a race can be achieved through a study of American Negro poetry, Gilbert Govan, University of Chattanooga librarian and book editor of The Chattanooga Times, said yesterday in an address before the Rotary club at Hotel Patten.

Speaking on "American Negro Poetry," Mr. Govan discussed briefly the history of Negro poetry and read selections from several poems of such outstanding Negro poets as Paul Lawrence Dunbar, James Weldon Johnson and Countee Cullen. Mr. Govan was introduced by the Rev. Thorne Sparkman, program chairman.

"Negroes always, as do all peoples in similar positions, tell us what they believe we want to hear," Mr. Govan said. "That is one reason why a reading of their literature is important to us. We can find out from it what they actually think.

Origin in Wheatley Book

"American Negro literature—prose as well as poetry—has its origin in a book published by Phillis Wheatley, born in Africa and sold as a slave to a Boston family. Reared under conditions similar to a white child of her time and place, her poetry is much of a piece with that produced with other American poets of that period.

"By the time the next book by an American Negro was published, Paul Lawrence Dunbar's poems, in 1893, a convention had been established about the Negro. In the drama or in literature he was largely a comic or sentimental figure. Only one writer of the time, Joel Chandler Harris, treated him sincerely.

"A patois had come into existence, used by all writers except Mr. Harris, whose dialect is still faithful to Negro speech as my ear hears it. Except for purposes of comedy or sentiment, this literary dialect is frankly unusable. Yet writers about Negroes, and whether they were themselves Negro or white, they had to write for a white audience at that time, were practically forced by the convention to use it."

Mr. Govan said almost any example of Dunbar's popular poetry contained such dialect as portrayed in his lines, "Little brown baby wif spa'klin' eyes, Come to yo' pappy and set on his knee," and "When yo' mammy says the blessin' an' de co'n pone's hot."

Follow McKay, Hughes

Since the time of Dunbar, however, the more outstanding Negro poets have labored to attain appreciation for their more serious poetry, he said. The majority of the Negro poets of today follow the example set by Claude McKay and Langston Hughes. In illustration of this trend to more expressive and serious poetry, he quoted the following lines from Hughes' "The Negro Speaks of Rivers":

I've known rivers;
I've known rivers ancient as the world and older than the flow of human blood in human veins.
My soul has grown deep like the rivers.
I bathed in the Euphrates when dawns were young.
I built my hut near the Congo and it lulled me to sleep.
I looked upon the Nile and raised the pyramids above it.
I heard the singing of the Mississippi when Abe Lincoln went down to New Orleans.
I've known rivers:
Ancient, dusky rivers.
My soul has grown deep like rivers.

Mr. Govan said Negro poets have found a new method of expressing themselves in poetry, after having overcome the limiting influence of the early conventions that bound them. Their new poetry is accomplished through a rich idiom, not dialect in form, and through a distinctly racial rhythm.

The club yesterday elected four members as a nominating committee to draw up and submit a slate of officers for the club's coming year. They were Clarence Avery, Morrow Chamberlain, W. O. McCord and Herbert Barks.

Four Rotarians from Massachusetts were guests of the club yesterday, having stopped here on their way from Atlanta to Cincinnati. They were Mortin Hull, and Richard Chase, of Holyoke; Lewis Dement, of Old Deerfield and William Howe, of Greenfield. Mr. Hull and Mr. Dement are past governors of District 119, Rotary International.

Jewish and Black Americans

Hitler began his program of racial persecutions by tirades and pogroms against the Jews. They were the weakest and most vulnerable minority in the Reich. His next purge was aimed at the Catholics in Germany. Incidentally, because of the Africans in the French Armies of World Wars, one and two,. one of his most effectively rallying cries to the Hun masses always has been against the Blacks.

This pattern of racial persecution so poignant to every Hebrew should compel him to seek an immediate alliance with colored Americans in this republic. Every Black man must realize that, though he is now the first and saddest victim of racial bigotry in America, his natural ally is the race who not only has suffered elsewhere, but who will inevitably be the next victim in line for cruel proscription. Thus it is that every instinct of self preservation demands that both groups in America get together into an offensive and defensive alliance for the common good. There are good and bad elements in both racial groups. The necessity is therefore apparent that the sincere and substantial elements of both minority groups get together in a general organization behind the sincere and substantial leaders of both groups. Let every group within each group function through sub-committees under the general organization. The Jewish business man can and should help the colored business man. We would suggest Jewish leaders like Sulzberger of the New York Times and Sarnoff of R. C. A. as against the two leading colored business men of the nation. We would suggest Jewish Labor Leaders like Hillman and Dubinsky as against colored Labor Leaders like Webster and Crosswaith. In the field of theatrical cooperation we would suggest Artists like Stokowski and Cantor as against Robeson and Bojangles. In the profession of Medicine, we would suggest leadership like Bluestone and Goldwater against Surgeon Louis T. Wright and Charles S. Drew of Red Cross Blood Bank fame.

Without reservation and camouflage Colored and Jewish Americans must unite. The wolves of intolerance are yapping savagely at the heels of both.

WHITE SCHOOL PERFORMANCE IRKS NEGROES

MAR 21 1942

City Split Over Merits Of Drama Enacted By Race Students

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—A Negro history play that was enthusiastically acclaimed after two performances here created a city-wide disturbance when it was learned that it was to be shown to a white audience.

The play, "The Builders," created around the lives of Denmark Vesey, Harriet Tubman and Frederick Douglass, by a group of Negro high school children under the direction of Miss Ramona Lowe was their voluntary contribution to Negro history week.

Due to the success of the performances, the group was invited to put it on at the local high school for two assembly periods attended by thousands of white children. Disgruntled members of the group who had been dropped from the cast started a whispering campaign against the dramatization.

Negro children who had never seen the play threatened to beat up the participants if they persisted in their determination to present it to the white students. They also threatened to stay away from school the day of the scheduled performance.

Parents, becoming alarmed, phoned the school asking that the play be banned. Mrs. Maggie Cresswell, Negro policewoman, appeared at the high school to forcibly prevent the production. The superintendent of schools ordered the assemblies cancelled when the cast was ready to go on the stage.

Neither he nor any of the white officials of the high school had seen the play, but it was rumored that he was advised to act by a Negro principal who said he didn't want white people laughing at his history.

Some 150 Negro children who had cut school walked up and down the main thoroughfare of the Negro section shouting lines from the play. Fist fights between opposing factions had to be broken up. Although 500 Negro students attend the local high school, the teaching force is lily-white. This was the first time that an all Negro cast had been invited to perform on the high school stage.

Negroes are generally excluded from the dramatic society. No Negro history is taught in the school system.

The Acutest Phase

From time to time The News and Courier receives letters from intelligent negroes complaining, and invariably they complain about the South—as if the "negro question" were Southern. These leaders have not discovered that good roads, automobiles, cheap transportation and communication have made Colorado not less available as a home for the colored people than Georgia is. Surely negro migration the last twenty years has proved it.

Four million of 13,000,000 American negroes now dwell in Northern states. The notion that the South, for climatic reasons, is peculiarly suited for negro habitation is outworn. Montana is not less the country, by right and title, of the colored people than Mississippi is. One reads of the advances and achievements of the negroes; The News and Courier finds pleasure in the reading; and the question arises, if a colored man be discontented with South Carolina as a home, why does he not take refuge in Massachusetts or Michigan?

To our negro readers and correspondents The News and Courier has this to say: the most suspicious and disheartening symptom of the negro's problem is that the 4,000,000 in the North are confined to the great cities and industrial districts. In the North "race segregation" is enforced, not by law but in ways harder and more rigid than law, in greater degree than in any Southern state. One does not find negroes in the villages of New Hampshire, Indiana, Iowa. They are not on the Northern and Western farms.

We say to the leaders of the negroes in the South that if they are to be American, they must surmount the barriers erected against them throughout the United States, other than the South—barriers in all Northern states outside of their great cities and certain industrial districts.

Negro's Place in Industry and Army Problem for American Democracy; Milton Mayer's Article on Anti-Semitism.

Ideal democracy is the favorite subject of men who write books and political leaders who make speeches. They tell you that all men are created equal and that they have certain inalienable rights, among which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Practical democracy is what you experience from day to day, in a world which says that, "As long as I get mine, I'm not going to worry about you."

I don't look for miracles in any society, but sometimes I'm worried about the thick skin so many of us have. Take, for instance, the position of the Negro in war industries and in the present social readjustment. Roi Ottley, writing in Common Ground, the magazine that Louis Adamic founded to help assimilation among the foreign-born and give voice to minorities, asks, "Is this a white folks' war?" It seems so. The Negro doesn't enter into plans for the post-war world, dominated by Anglo-Saxon military might. He didn't get anything out of the last war and doesn't expect to get much out of this.

Then there was an article in the Threshold by Pauli Murray, of the law school of Howard University, wondering at the discrimination against the competent Negro worker in industry. If the employer doesn't shove him into a menial job the white workers may not tolerate him at the same workbench, while the federal offices in Washington avoid him.

Changing Conditions in the South.

In the South a number of intelligent leaders are recognizing that the welfare of the South is partially dependent on the welfare of the Negro, who makes up practically one-third of the population there. One of these is Virginius Dabney, editor of the Richmond Times-Dispatch, who has some pertinent suggestions for regional reforms to make in his book, Below the Potomac. (Appleton-Century. $3.)

Mr. Dabney says that lynching has been subsiding in the last 10 years and that public opinion seems to have been awakened by the vain attempts to deal with it through a federal law. He notes, however, that the murder of Negroes by other Negroes is very large and that murderers are rarely properly punished. This would suggest a callousness toward Negro social conditions by white officials, a feeling that all this does not concern the whites. But Mr. Dabney considers it demoralizing and advocates justice for the Negroes in Southern courts, to the extent that harsher penalties will be imposed on Negroes who slay other Negroes. He also advocates the use of colored policemen in Southern cities.

It must give the conservative Southerner something to think about when he reads the Richmond editor's statement: "No informed person could deny that there is a high percentage of anti-social behavior among Negroes, but how much lower would it be among whites who had to live under similar conditions and who were only a few generations removed from slavery? The excellent record as to citizenship and law observance of Negro college graduates is evidence of what opportunity and favorable surroundings can mean. The giving to the Negro of a chance to better himself, to make himself a useful and informed citizen and to dress decently has no bearing upon whether or not he intermarries with whites—the ultimate consequence and consummation of true 'social equality,' which the white South rejects emphatically and in which the black South has no serious interest."

Anti-Semitism and Democracy.

It seems to me that the Jews of America were badly served by the publication of Milton Mayer's article about them in the current Saturday Evening Post. Even if we accept the point that Mayer was castigating his coreligionists in order to emphasize their highest ideals, it is obvious that the man in the street will misunderstand him. I know this from comment by a taxicab driver, a salesman and a newsdealer, who mentioned it to me.

Mr. Mayer argues that the Jew demeans himself by conforming to the conventions of a Gentile world in order to gain the benefits of materialism. This is what social scientists usually call social expectancy. Actually, the Jew is only doing what his fellow-citizens, the Italian-born, the Irish-born and the Scandinavian-born, are doing—conforming to American society. Every vital society tends to impose conformity on its members. To berate a minority for having the same characteristics as the acquisitive majority gets us nowhere.

Milton Mayer and all others not clear on the subject, including Ralph Ingersoll, will do well to read Jews in a Gentile World, a group of studies in social science edited by Isacque Graeber, of the Institute of Social Research, and Dr. Steuart Henderson Britt, professor of psychology at George Washington University. This intelligent study of anti-Semitism has the psychological and social basis that Milton Mayer's article lacks. For it is obvious that the Jew cannot halt, in the middle of a movement toward assimilation and conformity, to become a prophet preaching righteousness, as Mr. Mayer proposes. What makes a problem for the Jew is that, as a minority, he is highly efficient. Professor Raymond Kennedy, recognizing this points out that here our democracy faces a supreme test. And his words apply also to the Negro problem that I mentioned above:

"Either we have to admit that our democracy is to work only for the favored majority and that we intend to put our cultural ideals of tolerance, freedom and equality of opportunity into practice for certain elements of our population, or we must honestly strive to make these ideals as universal in application as possible. . . . When a society ceases to strive toward any one of its cultural ideals, even though it can never be truly achieved, this means that the ideal in question is weakening in force and value and that the society runs the risk of abandoning it entirely."

The burden of tolerance is on those of us who are neither Negroes nor Jews. What intolerance means is exemplified in Germany. Intolerance means the tyranny of the incompetent majority.

Alabama Treats Japs Better Than Negroes

MAR 28 1942

Whites and Blacks Cheer Sunday When Brotherhood Talk Is Made

Just before Homer Smith, tenor, with the Southernaires, started singing "Precious Lord Take My Hand" before the huge mixed audience in the Douglass school auditorium Sunday, he delivered a short lecture on neighborliness, taking for his subject, "Thou Shalt Love Thy Neighbor as Thyself."

The noted singer started speaking in a suddenly stilled audience: "I was born down in Alabama. That is my home, but at this very moment as I stand here white people are holding a protest meeting in Birmingham, opposing the use of a swimming pool built for Negroes. They argue that the swimming pool is too good for Negroes. There are six thousand Negroes in the Philippines today fighting. How do you think they will feel when they discover we over here at home are spending these precious hours quibbling over such things as the kind of place where American Negroes shall swim?"

Smith said that at one time, before joining the Southernaires he sought to enroll at Alabama Polytechnical college.

"They would not accept me because of my color, but during that same year a Japanese was enrolled. Today that Jap is using his knowledge gained in an American school which refused me admittance, to destroy this nation. I do not know anything about electrical engineeringing, but the same school nursed a viper which today humiliates us in the Pacific ocean."

Just before he sang "Georgia Rose," the singer told of his boyhood days on the farm "when mother used to put vinegar and soot on our bruised feet, and after such an application had been made everything was all right.

"But in adult life sometimes we get bruised on the inside, where vinegar and soot will not reach. It is then only the neighborly spirit can help, when only the touch of love counts. America needs to know more of this type in human approach."

Whites as well as blacks vigorously cheered the speaker who in his concluding remarks said, "Twenty years ago our baritone in this group went away to war hoping to make the world safe for democracy. But there was a fault in our rehabilitation program and today we must go again to do the job all over. I am afraid that unless today we approach our task with integrity and sincerity of purpose another generation years hence will have to march away to bloody battle fields vainly seeking the things which we today strive for."

The concluding number, "The Boys of the Old Brigade," was a fitting climax rendered by the entire group to the neighborly remarks of the great singer.

A DANGEROUS PRECEDENT

With sinister and suspicious unanimity the daily newspapers and radio commentators of the United States have maintained silence on the dangerous violation of the Constitution in California where thousands of native-born American citizens have been deported from their homes on the ground that they might commit a crime against the nation.

Courier

These editors and commentators have sought to make it appear that these citizens are nationals of an enemy nation, Japan, by referring to them as Japanese born in the United States.

This is just as ridiculous as referring to a person of British, French, German or Italian ancestry as an Englishman, Frenchman, German or Italian born in the United States.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

A colored citizen whose great-grandfather came from South Africa could as sensibly be referred to as a Zulu born in the United States.

Any person born in the United States is a citizen of the United States and not of any other nation on earth, and every United States citizen is supposed to come under the protection of the laws and Constitution of this country.

The Fourth Amendment to the Federal Constitution provides that, "The right of the people to be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and effects, shall not be violated, and no warrants shall issue but upon probable cause, supported by oath or affirmation, and particularly describing the place to be searched, and the persons or things to be seized."

The Sixth Amendment provides for speedy trials, witnesses, etc., the Seventh Amendment provides for the right of trial by jury, and the Eighth Amendment prohibits excessive bail, fines or cruel punishment.

To tear thousands of citizens away from their homes, work and businesses on so flimsy a charge as the possibility that they MIGHT commit a crime is as high-handed a procedure as Hitler's deportation of Jews and liberals or Stalin's deportation of so-called Kulaks or America's previous deportation of Indians.

Worse, this is the application of the racial theory of government, since there is no move to deport from coastal regions those native-born citizens whose ancestors came from Germany and Italy, the other members of the Axis, doubtless because they are white.

Today it is only the citizens of Japanese ancestry who are being deported, but with the precedent now established, what assurance has ANY citizen that he will not be summarily deported to distant territories on the shallow pretense that he MIGHT commit a crime?

We believe the Administration is entirely right in taking necessary steps against enemy aliens, but deportation of citizens not charged with any crime represents a dangerous departure from American law and practice.

Some of the same white people who now view this event with complacency may eventually find themselves in the same boat.

Consider the Negro

Editor Telegraph and News:

We colored folks wish to extend our gratitude to you, the most liberal race on earth.

When you built extra schools so we could get an education, we knew you liked us, for it costs a heap of money to build one school and a heap more to build an extra one just for we colored folks!

When Washington, who loved and was kind to his slaves, and Lincoln who hated the system of slavery, passed on, we were sorry, but a lot of us weren't sorry for long, for there were a lot of lynchings and wholesale murders [which you call riots] and we, too, passed on. This should have decreased our numbers, but we multiply fast.

We are a race that is avid to learn, and we quickly mastered the machinery of a locomotive as well as the machinery of statesmanship. But, white folks, you felt politics to be rather strenuous mentally, so you ousted us colored folks out of office; and running a locomotive is hot, nasty work, so you turned that field of labor over to your own men.

You felt we might like it better to see faces of our own complexions—which shade from as white as yours to as dark as night—so you built separate sections for us, with tiny cabins like those we lived in during slavery times. This cost you extra taxes, but you love us so much, and what is a little thing like taxes between friends? [Then, too, you would get it back in the rent.]

You like to have us around with our cheerful, smiling countenances [for you never see the tragic heartbreak underneath] so you hire us as servants and buy special dishes and cutlery for us to eat out of, for we are rather special and you do not mind spending extra money for us.

In our separate schools we do not have the intricate machinery your boys learn to handle, for it is treacherous, and we might injure our lovely brown fingers, or weaken our laughing brown eyes . . . and so, when war comes, we do not know how to man the tanks, the airplanes, the machine guns . . . and the enemy swoops upon us and you, who love the colored folks so dearly, go out to battle and fight for us. While we stay in the comparative safety of mess quarters on the ship, you are up on deck dodging bullets from the enemy, while we are in the comparative safety of our army camps you are in the front line dodging enemy tanks, or in the air eluding the bombs that rocket from his plane, and while we are safe at home during a blackout, you are on the turret scanning the skies for danger.

Yes, white folks, you are generous and we colored folks are grateful, only we would like to show our gratitude by learning to handle the intricate machinery, participating fully in making and interpreting the laws, and we would rather be a fighter in the arena of war than a mere spectator. Let us make your bombs, man your tanks and guide your war planes . . . then we colored Americans can show in a small measure our appreciation for the liberality of you white folks!

WE COLORED FOLKS.

ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

Like the voice of one crying in the wilderness the wife of President Franklin D. Roosevelt of the United States is lifted in the cause of justice and democracy for all. Here is the clearest and greatest voice in America today. Mrs. Roosevelt sees and senses the problem of race prejudice and discrimination and has the courage to speak about it. She is eminently correct when she says the white race must change its attitude toward darker peoples. The following is taken from her release, "My Day," of April 3:

White Race Must Change

There is an article called "American Negroes in the War," by Earl Brown, which I hope all of us will read. Some of the statements made I know to be true, many of them I have not checked and cannot vouch for but that is not important. Today what concerns us most deeply is the necessary change in attitude on the part of the white race.

The psychology which believes that the white man alone of all the races in the world, has something which must be imposed on all other races, must go. We know today that our chance to live in peace in the future lies in respect for the individual, no matter what his color. We must have a willingness to accept what anyone has to contribute to civilization, and to co-operate in the difficult business of "live and let live."

The American white man might as well accord the Negro full democratic equality or face the inevitable. Especially is this true in the South, but to a certain degree the country over. This is not a white man's world, not a white man's country, not a white man's war. God bless Eleanor Roosevelt, humanitarian, protagonist for social justice, fighter for democracy and righteousness, Christian lady, prophetess of heaven, and herald of the new order.

Charleston Athletes Have Taste Of "Democracy" In Its Worst Form Following Highway Crash

CHARLESTON, S. C.— Five Charleston youths, members of the Mercos basketball team, had a taste of democracy in its worst form last Friday night when an ambulance from Elloree drove away and left them bleeding by the roadside, the driver having told them; "We do not carry colored people in this ambulance". The youths, Clifton Scott, driver, L Irving Brawley, Arthur Weston, Joseph Tollerson and Harold McGill. were enroute to Columbia to witness the annual basketball tournament at Booker T. Washington High School in Columbia. Near the intersection of the Elloree and Orangeburg roads, on route 31, the Pontiac in which they were traveling, collided with one of several mules roaming the highway. The mule was killed. The car overturned three times and is a total loss.

First to reach the scene were Clemson College cadets who rendered first aid and summoned an ambulance from Elloree to transport the men to a hospital. Arriving at the scent the driver curtly told the men that he could not move them. "We do not carry colored people in this ambulance", he is quoted as telling the men and refused to move even Brawley, most seriously injured and who had lost considerable blood.

Shortly after the ambulance disappeared in the darkness a white doctor from Elloree arrived on the scene and offered to take the men to Orangeburg on the condition that he be paid ten dollars in advance. Luckily, the men had the sum between them. At Tri County hospital in Orangeburg Brawley was treated for severe lacerations of the face and other parts of the body. Scott for bruises about the face and lower extremities Weston and Tollereson for loss of several teeth and McGill for a deep gash of the left shoulder and other injuries. The latter four were discharged following emergency treatment; Brawley was hospitalized until Monday night and discharged to a private physician in Charleston.

Learning of the incident Charleston Negroes were irate and questioned the type of prejudice displayed under such an emergency when the lives of loyal Americans are thusly endangered. The incident provoked bitter denunciation from the city's leading people who viewed it with the disgust as the nation viewed the death of Dean Juliette Derricotte of Fisk University several years ago when she died following the refusal of a white ambulance to move her and permit treatment.

If a "Question", It Is National

The "negro question" is no more Southern than Western or Eastern. Phases of it, in so far as a question it be, are more threatening to negroes in the North than in the South. For example, the migration of negroes to Northern states has been of immense importance, but why do negroes leaving the South confine the search for new homes to great cities and certain industrial, usually mining, districts? Is the negro by nature rural in the South and urban when he crosses the Mason and Dixon Line? Or are negro migrants frozen out of the rural North and West, their villages, small towns and farming districts?

A "symposium by and for members of the fourth estate", with expressions from learned editors, published by the "Commission on Interracial Cooperation" in Atlanta, reveals a singular ignorance of the "negro question" as national.

The expressions are praiseworthy, godly in fact, and have practical application to conditions which for the most part vanished from this part of the country many years ago. Dead bodies of two negroes were found in a creek. A member of The News and Courier's staff visited the scene, made an investigation, wrote about the tragedy and called names. A message came to him that he would show himself in that community again at bodily peril, and, unneceessarily we think, he returned to it by the next train. He was not molested.

That "lynching" could not happen now, the time of it was about 1885, (the newspaper man was Narcisso G. Gonzales), for the reason that lynchings have had their day. Suppression of mobs is easy in these times, and when they are not suppressed executive, law enforcers, are open to suspicion of toleration and connivance. More than sixty years The News and Courier "crusaded" against lynching, and at last the automobile was invented, good roads were built. rural police forces were established, communication by radio and telephone became general, and lynching became unpopular for reasons with which the crusading had little to do.

Negroes should be treated with justice. Plainly, it is not less contemptible and criminal to steal from a negro than from a white man. Therefore, the negro is entitled to his full dollar's worth in the schools and in all other ways and fields. All races should be treated with justice under the laws. South Carolina is, we believe, the only state in which a monument was erected in memory of a white sheriff who gave his life protecting a negro prisoner—and that prisoner was charged with "the crime against woman." We have always had good people and some not so good in this part of the country—and the good people have not been perpetrators of racial crimes.

Virginius Dabney, advocating in the "symposium" better educational facilities, a "fuller and more adequate life for the negro", with which is no disagreement, says that this is not a "counsel of social equality, that "the white South is opposed to social equality if the phrase means racial intermarriage" and that "there is no evidence that the black race is at all interested in racial amalgamation." That we believe to be exactly and entirely true—and we go further to say that racial separation must be maintained and promoted.

Therefore, there must not be mixed schools for the races, and negroes and whites must have separately their clubs and social organizations. It is expedient that they have separate political organizations. To deny the Masons, the "Klansmen", the Methodists, or the Jews the right to form clubs, nominate candidates for office, excluding other persons from having part in the nominating, would be denial of justice to them. It would be equivalent to saying that they have no right to be Masons, Methodists, Jews.

Equally, white men have the right to exclude negroes from political clubs, and negroes have the right to exclude white men from a political party that they may form. (They have in times past had in this state what was for the most part a negro party.)

In existing circumstances, with universal suffrage, or democracy, established by law, (as it should not be), the great numbers of ignorant, emotional, easily misled whites are a problem which strivers for fairly good government have staggering difficulty in solving. One endowed with buoyant imagination would strain it to assert that government in South Carolina is more than passably good, if that.

Were the white primaries open to 150,000 or 200,000 negroes, of whom nine in ten would be the easy prey of unprincipled and shrewd demagogues, white and black, we would have a state of affairs worse than we had in 1870, for we would have ten or twenty times as many salaried Scalawags to deal with. Persons who fancy that there are no white men in South Carolina who would be pastmasters in voting negroes are dreamers of pleasant and foolish dreams.

The negroes can have their own party, hold their own conventions and primaries and vote as they wish. No one is hindering them, but the white people would be insane not to maintain an exclusive party for the election of governments within the South.

With all efforts to improve the condition of poor negroes—and of poor white people too—The News and Courier is sympathetic. Of course it believes in benevolence. To give the poor better houses, better playgrounds, better sanitary facilities is the proper aim of all persons who pretend to a measure of goodness and have resources. The News and Courier is no enemy of benevolent activities.

The "negro question" remains a question for the negroes. They have had nearly three generations of freedom. In the South, land for them is the necessary most abundant, except air and water. If the negroes cannot take care of themselves, attain economic stability by their own exertions without the constant guardianship and nursing of white people, their prospect is no brighter in the South than it is on the farms of Wisconsin, Maine and Montana. Many negroes (the proportionate number is small) are self-sustaining, and they are asking no favors.

The chief obstacle to endeavors of Southern white people to help the negroes is the failure of Northern negro leaders to stress that separation of the two races is right, with the alarming implication flowing from it that racial amalgamation is what they want and look forward to.

In South Carolina inter-racial crime has greatly decreased. Intra-racial crimes are numerous in the negro population. It is the problem, in the main, of the negro, not the white, leaders to reduce and extirpate them—and white help and encouragement they have and have generally had from kindly white judges and juries. The truth is that too many negro, as well as white, criminals go unpunished.

The upshot of the matter is that the negro

Willkie And Agar Say A Word For Us Where It May Count

MAR 27 1942

Last week we spoke of Senator Barkley's great speech to a Colored audience and insisted Senator Barkley and other national leaders would make such speeches to WHITE audiences. We are glad to call attention to recent words said in behalf of Colored Americans by Mr. Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal and Mr. Wendell Willkie, Republican choice for President in 1940 and still a powerful national figure. Mr. Agar testified before a Congressional committee in an effort to kill the poll tax in the Southern States. He denounced the poll tax as unfair to the Negro and the POOR WHITE. He took occasion to point out that the country is at war and the rotten treatment dealt the Negro will not get the United Front being called for. Mr. Agar's talk to the committee not only reached its members but was quoted in papers all over the land.

There is no doubt many indifferent WHITES were aroused to the plight of Negroes by it. Last week at a dinner of Freedom House in the Commodore Hotel Mr. Willkie served as toastmaster. There were 2,000 persons present—all important WHITES. In his opening remarks Mr. Willkie used a lot of his time talking about Dorie Miller, the Colored mess boy, who without any training manned a machine gun on a battleship and fired at Japan attacks in Pearl Harbor until his ammunition was exhausted. Then Mr. Willkie followed with this:

"The dispatches give us no further news of that boy and we know none of the details of his life except that single fine act of judgment and self-sacrificing courage. But there's one fact we know positively and exactly: he cannot enlist in the United States Navy and only for the reason that he was born with a black skin.

"A few weeks ago, I sat in Madison Square Garden and I watched a perfect specimen of physical manhood risk his World's Championship in order to raise almost $100,000 for the Naval Relief Society. A few nights ago, I listened to that same young man make a speech to twenty thousand people at another Naval Relief Society rally in Madison Square Garden—a simple speech, an ungrammatical speech, yet eloquent and moving. He was preparing to fight in an Army uniform; he couldn't have been preparing to fight in a Navy uniform for his skin was black.

"Now you lovers of freedom — I don't think this is right in a free country. Won't you, while you are proclaiming the necessity for freedom throughout the world, devote some time to bringing about a correction of this injustice at home, an injustice which makes a mockery of all our fine words. Don't you think that as American citizens, we should insist that our government and Navy Department eliminate the bar that prohibits any American citizen from serving his country?"

We submit that Mr. Willkie's speech has helped in some degree to improve the status of the Negro among those who heard and read it.

"THE RISING TIDE OF COLOR"

MORE THAN 20 YEARS AGO Lothrop Stoddard wrote a boog called "The Rising Tide of Color," in which he predicted that the darker races of the world were becoming more aggressive and because of a superiority in numbers they would eventually overwhelm the Nordic races.

At that time the book was severely criticized for its tendency to stir up racial animosities. Subsequent events have in a measure justified Mr. Stoddard's predictions. But this rising tide of racial consciousness has not been due so much to the darker races, as to the doctrine of Nordic supremacy that has been fostered in this country by the Ku Klux Klan, the German-American Bund and its successor, the American Guard and in Europe by both the German and English speaking nations. Their persecution of Jews and exploiting of colonial peoples of the darker races has forced these peoples to unite against the white races.

Since the promulgation of the "Four Freedoms," the Allied nations have sought to minimize the racial issue in this war and have promised to the peoples of China and India home rule for their physical and financial aid in beating Japan. But in this country, the campaign of Nordic supremacy goes on, as witness the following circular distributed by The American Guard:-

THE NEGRO MENACE

"Racial equality was imposed upon America by Lincoln—some day, his name will be cursed by all whites. The Jewish New Deal continues on the path of racial destruction by catering to the colored peoples in a political and even social way.

"Cases wherein Aryan (white Gentile) women are attacked by Negroes occur quite frequently. The War Department has ordered the setting up of Negro units in all branches of the service, including aviation. This means that in case Roosevelt and his international clique of Fifth Columnists succeed in bringing our country into the war, Negroes will be used to bomb and maim and kill our white brethren overseas. Or they might be used against our own people in case the New Deal decides to crush by force of arms the rising opposition to its anti-American policies.

"The above examples of the growing Negro menace show the dire need for protective measures. We must, therefore demand: First, immediate disarmament of and dismissal from military service of all Negroes; second death by hanging for Negroes having violated white women.

"Fellow whites! Aryan supremacy must be established in these United States.

—The American Guard."

Sentiments such as the above do more to aggravate the color question in this country than any thing the Negro is doing by agitation for an equal opportunity in the war effort. Now that the Dies Committee has been continued for another year, we think they would do well to investigate the growing opposition to Negro participation in the war effort.

What Mr. Stoddard in his book failed to say was that this rising tide of color is due to persecution, of the darker races, especially in this country, at the hands of prejudiced whites.

problem is their own, that it is national and not Southern, and in its solution the negroes will have as they they always have had, in slavery as well as freedom, more assistance and understanding sympathy in the Southern states than they have had anywhere else on this globe. If the negroes cannot stand on their own feet now, they never will.

"Now you lovers of freedom — I don't think this is right in a free country. Won't you, while you are proclaiming the necessity for freedom throughout the world, devote some time to bringing about a correction of this injustice at home, an injustice which makes a mockery of all our fine words. Don't you think that as American citizens, we should insist that our government and Navy Department eliminate the bar that prohibits any American citizen from serving his country?"

We submit that Mr. Willkie's speech has helped in some degree to improve the status of the Negro among those who heard and read it.

"THE RISING TIDE OF COLOR"

MORE THAN 20 YEARS AGO Lothrop Stoddard wrote a boog called "The Rising Tide of Color," in which he predicted that the darker races of the world were becoming more aggressive and because of a superiority in numbers they would eventually overwhelm the Nordic races.

At that time the book was severely criticized for its tendency to stir up racial animosities. Subsequent events have in a measure justified Mr. Stoddard's predictions. But this rising tide of racial consciousness has not been due so much to the darker races, as to the doctrine of Nordic supremacy that has been fostered in this country by the Ku Klux Klan, the German-American Bund and its successor, the American Guard and in Europe by both the German and English speaking nations. Their persecution of Jews and exploiting of colonial peoples of the darker races has forced these peoples to unite against the white races.

Since the promulgation of the "Four Freedoms," the Allied nations have sought to minimize the racial issue in this war and have promised to the peoples of China and India home rule for their physical and financial aid in beating Japan. But in this country, the campaign of Nordic supremacy goes on, as witness the following circular distributed by The American Guard:-

THE NEGRO MENACE

"Racial equality was imposed upon America by Lincoln—some day, his name will be cursed by all whites. The Jewish New Deal continues on the path of racial destruction by catering to the colored peoples in a political and even social way.

"Cases wherein Aryan (white Gentile) women are attacked by Negroes occur quite frequently. The War Department has ordered the setting up of Negro units in all branches of the service, including aviation. This means that in case Roosevelt and his international clique of Fifth Columnists succeed in bringing our country into the war, Negroes will be used to bomb and maim and kill our white brethren overseas. Or they might be used against our own people in case the New Deal decides to crush by force of arms the rising opposition to its anti-American policies.

"The above examples of the growing Negro menace show the dire need for protective measures. We must, therefore demand: First, immediate disarmament of and dismissal from military service of all Negroes; second death by hanging for Negroes having violated white women.

"Fellow whites! Aryan supremacy must be established in these United States.

—The American Guard."

Sentiments such as the above do more to aggravate the color question in this country than any thing the Negro is doing by agitation for an equal opportunity in the war effort. Now that the Dies Committee has been continued for another year, we think they would do well to investigate the growing opposition to Negro participation in the war effort.

What Mr. Stoddard in his book failed to say was that this rising tide of color is due to persecution of the darker races, especially in this country, at the hands of prejudiced whites.

WHEN UNCLE SAM ACTS

Pittsburgh Courier

Uncle Sam is doing something to protect the citizenship rights of Negroes in Sikeston, Mo., Detroit, Mich., at Fort Dix, N. J., and in several war plants; and when Uncle Sam acts something happens.

It has always seemed ridiculous for the Department of Justice to take the position that it could not investigate lynchings and prosecute lynchers because of State's rights, thus ignoring citizenship rights.

Attorney General Biddle in ordering a Federal Grand Jury investigation of the Sikeston horror for "possible" violation of the civil rights statutes has quietly abandoned the former hands-off policy of the central government.

Uncle Sam has acted in Detroit, too, where a U. S. Grand Jury has indicted three white men on charges of conspiracy to prevent Negroes from occupying the Sojourner Truth Homes, and named four others as co-conspirators.

It was a little difficult to see how the government of a country as powerful as the United States could permit itself to be defied by a handful of gorillas and racketeers working for selfish realty interests.

Pittsburgh, Pa

As National Housing Administrator John B. Blandford, Jr., has well stated:

APR 25 1942

> "We are at war. Men of all races and creeds are marching in our armed forces and are at work in our vast war industries. That is the spirit of American democracy.
> "By the same token, war workers and their families must have adequate homes, regardless of race or creed, if the country's output of planes, tanks, ships and machines is to grow in sufficient volume to win the war."

Uncle Sam has also acted in a forthright manner in the Ft. Dix, N. J., case, by declaring "off limits" all public places in the vicinity of the camp which segregate or discriminate against Negroes.

Unfortunately, Secretary of War Stimson did not have the moral courage nor the wisdom to extend this prohibition to the vicinity of ALL camps in the United States, thus dealing a tremendous blow at color discrimination and making national unity a reality.

The favorite excuse of the War and Navy Departments for not trying to carry out the spirit of the Constitution in dealing with the colored citizen, is that they are not making any sociological experiments; but in avoiding, to deal forthrightly in this matter, they are undermining the very thing they are claiming to defend: i.e. democracy.

It is better to make sociological experiments and insure the unity that will win the war, than to foster hatred, prejudice and disunity and lose the war.

In another direction Uncle Sam also cracked down when the Fair Employment Practices Committee ordered ten Midwestern industries with war contracts to stop discriminating against workers because of race and creed.

That is the sort of action we have been hoping the FEPC would take, and it is to be expected that all war plants in the country will be so ordered. However, the FEPC needs more real power than it has.

It is perfectly clear to even the most optimistic that this is going to be a long hard war, and that either side can win; so Uncle Sam is beginning to take the actions necessary to make victory sure for us.

When Sewing Pays $20 a Week, It's a White Woman's Job

By DR. BUELL GALLAGHER

10 Per Cent of College Presidents Would Flunk History Exams

By DR. CARTER G. WOODSON
Director of Association for Study of Negro History

Two straight-from-the-shoulder addresses featured the annual meeting of the Georgia Teachers' and Educational Association last week in Atlanta. Dr. Woodson spoke at Spelman College, Dr. Gallagher before 4,000 in the stadium. Excerpts from their speeches are given here.

I lament the teachers' ignorance of their rich racial heritage. Few of our college presidents could make more than ten per cent on an examination in the history of the colored race.

We spend millions yearly to straighten our hair and bleach our skins, and some of us go so far as to have our noses lifted in the hope of looking like the white man. Monkeys too have straight hair and thin lips.

I advocate a more realistic and practical approach in education. It took me about thirty years to get over my Harvard education.

I had been brought up to believe that sewing, domestic science and the like were colored women's jobs. However, in the 120-million-dollar Talladega powder plant, the job of stitching together rayon bags is paying $20 to $25 per week, which automatically makes it a white woman's job.

We are to have 120,000 airplanes — many times the number of stars visible to the naked eye on a clear night — but only two squadrons of that vast number are to be piloted by colored aviators!

The system is so thoroughly discriminatory that white Americans are apparently willing to let coloerd men die FOR them but not WITH them!

America a Hypocrite

America is indeed a hypocrite when she extends a hand stained with Scottsboro, Sikeston, and jim crow to the predominantly colored peoples to the south of us.

The continual reference to the Japanese as "yellow curs," "yellow traitors," etc., and the talk about the "white man's loss of face in Asia," give the mistaken impression that the United Nations forces are all Hitlerian aryans.

Won't Cremate Lawfully

There was a "Christian martyr," a colored woman, who died in North Carolina recently, after having spent the best years of her life as a missionary in Portguese East Africa.

She had asked her husband to bury her ashes in the soil of her native Alabama, but the husband was informed that there were no facilities for cremating colored people in North Carolina.

Undertakers in Washington finally agreed to cremate the body PROVIDED no members of the family came along! The husband had to bury his wife in North Carolina.

On the same day that it was impossible to have a dead colored body cremated, a mob in Sikeston, Mo., was cremating a live colored man!

ALL FOR THE WHITE MAN AND NOTHING FOR THE NEGRO

APR 24 1942

To illustrate the attitude of the Administration at Washington, toward the Negro employment in factories, mines and other industries, holding Government contracts, let us give you an example of how the white man on the farm used to figure the Negro out of his share of his crop on his plantation.

"Aught is an aught,
Five is a figure,
All for the white man
And aught for the nigger."

A few days ago, we went over to the State Capitol to make some inquiries about vocational education for Negroes; with the view of preparing applicants for service in the Bell Bomber Plant in nearby Cobb County, Georgia. We were in seek of the information regarding facilities to prepare Negro workers in common with white workers to do work at the Plant. We had been informed that certain vocational schools had been opened for Negroes, and that the Government was threatening to shut them up, because the people could not get enough Negro applicants to attend the school to warrant the government in keeping the doors open. Mr. Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution had given us this information and told us to take it up with Mr. M. D. Mobley, in charge of vocational education in the State of Georgia. Accordingly we called on Mr. Mobley, but he was absent. We were then sent to the Negro division of the Educational Bureau, which was in charge of a very fine and courteous white woman who gave us all the information she had, which she said was official.

She informed us that provisions had been made for white classes at Lake Park; fully equipped, and those attending were being prepared to do work at the Cobb County Plant as soon as the work advanced far enough to employ skilled and semi-skilled labor. She then informed us that no provision whatever had been made for the preparation of Negro applicants for employment at the Cobb County Plant. And so far, as her information went training had been provided for only white workers. We then asked her did she think training schools would soon be open for Negro applicants. She very kindly informed us with regrets, that the information she had already given us was official and that she was not in a position to make promises. So you see the Administration's bottleneck so far as Negroes are concerned. It seems that ninety-nine per cent of government money spent for the manufacture and labor of war implements will go to the white man and aught to the Negro.

What patience will a just God have with a government that will refuse an honest man a chance to earn a dollar to buy bread for himself and family when hungry? What mercy will a righteous God have on a government at war with the world, which refuses to give a citizen an opportunity to take care of himself and family, because of race, color and previous condition of servitude; and will spend billions for clothing and food to take care of Jews, Greeks, Chinese and Russians thousands of miles away? Does the Democratic Administration at Washington want national unity, that permits white civilians to shoot to death Negro soldiers in uniforms and go unpunished? Does any country want to win a war that refuses to employ or utilize all of its man-power and resources to win the victory? Would the Administration at Washington prefer a Hitler victory over the Allies, than to grant to the Negro equal pay, equal service and equal rights with white citizens? Yes, it looks so.

Darky Woman, 93, Buys $1,000 Of War Against 'Ole Hitler'

BARNESVILLE, April 23—Aunt Louise Fleming Merritt, 93-year-old Lamar county Negro woman, doesn't approve of "old Hitler," so she went to the First National bank here the other day and withdrew enough of her savings account to purchase a $1,000 war savings bond. She says she hopes the bomb her money pays for will be the very one to hit Hitler, "'cause I just naturally doesn't like the way he is killing so many men away from their families."

Another thing Aunt Louise doesn't like is the short dresses the women of today are wearing, and she hopes somebody will do something about that, too.

Aunt Louise was born in the Liberty Hill section of this county in 1849. She was a slave in the family of the Morgan Bloodworths, and remembers all about the Confederate war, and that she and another Negro girl ran away to Atlanta while the Yankees were there. But her Pappy went to Atlanta and brought her right straight home.

She saw plenty of hard labor in her day, the aged Negro says, and she plowed the fields and worked all day, but they had lots of good times at night sitting around the bon-fires and singing such songs as The Devil in My Old Shoe Sole. She rode galloping horses, and was skeered of haints, she says, and still don't want to get mixed up with them.

Aunt Louise had a grandson in France in the First World war.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Shameful 'Defender'

TUCSON, Ariz., April 26—Speaking from the experience of one who has been a blue-eyed, fair-haired Aryan for almost 48 years, I would say that the one member of our breed or physical type of whom the decent members have cause to be most ashamed is the one who has set himself up as the defender of our whole kind. This was very presumptuous of him because we are by no means all of us Germans and are scattered widely over the world and nobody but himself ever nominated Adolf Hitler to protect us from the peoples whom he, personally, happened not to like. It was presumptuous because he undertook to speak and act as the authorized representative of the entire lot of us. This essay of mine is not presumptuous because I speak only for myself, as a member of the lodge, but not for the lodge itself.

Not even the utterances and actions of Hitler, Goering, the incredibly brutal Himler and Satanic Josef Goering, who has dark eyes and hair and a sallow skin, can condemn us in the world as a race, if that is what we are. They have presumed to commit the most savage cruelties in our name and have deliberately contrived the ghastliest war in all history, but attention is called to the fact that more of us are arrayed against them than for them. Only a few renegade Dutch and Scandinavians have taken service with Hitler and the majority of these peoples, who surely qualify for membership in the tribe according to Hitler's definition, are proud to be counted among his enemies.

More Good Than Bad

As a breed, if I may assume, for the purpose of discussion, that we are a breed, we are neither as evil as Hitler's career would suggest nor anywhere near as godlike as he has represented us to be. We are somewhere in between and rather more good than bad, and I would emphasize the fact to our credit that most of us loathe Hitler and all Hitlerism and have repudiated him, and the Aryans, as he has called us, will earn a full share of the credit for his final obliteration.

If any people of one complexion or another could be held morally responsible for the misconduct of any individual or small group of the same type, then our kind should be condemned for ages yet to come, for it would be true to say that we had deliberately set out to destroy all civilization down to date. But we do not apply any such responsibility to other groups for the conduct of individuals and I submit that we should be spared blame for Hitlerism except as, individually, we have indorsed this awful thing. He does, however, put us on the defensive in a way, for we cannot deny a sense of shame that this was done in our name, though without our authority, or that the civilization to which we contributed so much was suddenly, but we hope, only momentarily, set at naught by Hitler.

They Were Aryans

Yes, we have contributed much to civilization — those who, by processes that none of us understand, chanced to fall into the group to which Hitler decreed racial partness and superiority. But we admit, too, that they were Aryans, almost to a man and woman, who fell on the brave but helpless southern states of our country after '65 and, in a ruthless and pitiless quest for money, robbed and persecuted a fallen enemy in a way that Germany was honorably spared after 1918. The chivalrous kindness which was showed defeated but unrepentant Germany after the first World War was dictated in part by Aryans at the peace table who remembered what had been done to the south and wanted no repetition of that.

It is exasperating that we so often in the last 20 years have been set apart from the rest of the human family for purposes which would degrade us if we actually were a separate group and always by such evil, self-appointed representatives.

The Ku Klux Klan called us Nordics and represented us as an efficient, cowardly lot who, despite numerical superiority and greater wealth and better opportunities, must resort to the lash, the tar-pot, silent persecution and mass attacks by night on helpless individuals to hold our own in the world. Miserable frauds wanting money, luxury and power would have the world believe that for all our boast of superiority we still could not compete with a smaller element of our inferiors on fair, honest terms.

Humiliating Statement

Then Hitler made the humiliating claim that a half-million non-Aryans, outnumbered 100 to 1 among 50,000,000 German supermen, were stealing the country and contaminating them and attacked civilization, itself, because he believed the Aryan could not make good except as a barbarian.

It is a good thing for us that we are not apart because if we really were a conscious group we would now risk some great punishment from the rest of mankind for generations to come.

Says Negroes Want to Do More Than Their Share

Georgia's population is made up of 36 per cent of Negroes and 64 per cent of whites, but the Negroes want to contribute "50 per cent to winning this war," one of their number says.

Dr. J. W. Holley, of Albany, called on for his comments at Wednesday's session of the State Citizen's Defense Committee as director of Negro defense efforts, said 80,000 members of his race were registered for defense work in the state, while 30,000 others would contribute toward farming efforts from their lands.

"The Negro's democracy hangs on the fate of the white man's democracy, and we know it," he said.

"They say the Negro has never had as much democracy as the white man, and maybe he hasn't, but the 13,000,000 Negroes in this country have more democracy than any 13,000,000 anywhere else in the world."

Dr. DuBois Lectures At Vassar And Yale

Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois, head of the Department of Sociology, Atlanta University and editor of PHYLON, is lecturing this week at Vassar College, Poughkeepsie, New York; and at Yale University, New Haven, Connecticut. At Vassar he is speaking on "The Future of Africa in America" and emphasizing the demand for democracy on the part of the thirty million persons of African descent on the American continent.

He is pointing out that the whole religious and scientific opposition to Negro equality has evaporated and that today there are Negroes measuring up to the best of American culture. While the average of the culture among Negroes is lower than that among whites, nevertheless, the Negro is increasingly demanding equality of treatment and must be granted this if democracy triumphs.

At Yale he is conducting Professor Kennedy's class on "American Society," then after a dinner given by the Graduate Club, he addresses the club and its friends on "The Future of Europe in Africa." He stresses the fact that the world has invested in Africa, six thousand five hundred million dollars in capital since the first World War and that Africa was exporting before the opening of this war seven hundred million dollars worth of exports annually.

This makes Africa an important part of the world economy; and yet in the current plans and discussions for peace, nothing is said about Africa. On the contrary, England has made Ethiopia not independent but really a British protectorate. She has grandted no further democratic powers to the peoples of West Africa, while ten million Negroes in South Africa are being held in subjection to three million whites. He declares that unless plans are made for inducting Africa into the New World democracy, there can be no permanent peace.

Ministers Unite in Battle Against Racial Discrimination

People's Voice
New York, N.Y.

Members of the Baptist Ministers Conference of Greater New York and vicinity, the Interdenominational Minister's Alliance, and the AME Zion Minister's Alliance set the precedent for ministers throughout the nation Monday when they united in one body and heartily endorsed the movement of the March-on-Washington Committee, under the leadership of militant A. Philip Randolph, to go en masse to Madison Square Garden on June 16 in a protest meeting against all forms of discrimination; and in so doing, they further pledged themselves and the full support of the 457,000 or more Negroes represented by them to support fully the movement; and in a solid front help break down discrimination and secure citizenship rights for Negroes throughout America.

The resolution of the united ministers further declared 100 per cent support for the National Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the national and local NAACP, the National Urban League, the Negro Labor Committee, the friends to the Negro Labor Committee, the Modern Trends Association, the American Virgin Island Association, the Central Manhattan Medical Association, and many other organizations that are using their influence and money to see that the mass meeting at Madison Square Garden does not fail in attendance or intent of purpose.

The action followed the address of Dr. Lawrence Irving of the New York division of the labor union at the ministers conference, Metropolitan Baptist church. Dr. Irving, in a masterful address, cited the barbarous lynching at Sikeston, Mo., the mobbing and shooting of Negro soldiers at Alexandria, La., shooting and killing at Ft. Bragg and Camp Dix, discrimination in the USO, segregation of Negro blood by the Red Cross, segregation in the navy condoned by Secretary Frank Knox, segregation in the air corps, and exclusion of Negroes from policy-making bodies of our local and national government as compared with the heroic deeds of Crispus Attucks, our black boys at San Juan Hill, Kelly the messman and Dorie Miller at Pearl Harbor, and other Negro heroes who willingly pay the supreme sacrifice for our country.

With 12,000,000 Negroes as a potent part of the American nation, the speaker declared, it is time to form a solid front and secure a guarantee of the principles of democracy here at home, then victory at home will mean victory abroad.

Rev. T. S. Eldridge, president of the Baptist Ministers Conference, presented the resolution. Immediately it was adopted by motion and seconded. Rev. George Hinton, president of the Interdenominational Minister's Alliance, assured the support of that organization; and Rev. W. O. Carrington, president of the AME Zion Minister's Alliance, endorsed the support of his group.

The office of the united ministerial group in Theresa Hotel, Rev. T. S. Eldridge, chairman, promises immediately to begin contacting every minister, pastor, official and members throughout the various churches in support of the movement.

AN EDITORIAL

There is an urge to devote this piece this week to Westbrook Pegler, a New York columnist, who says colored newspapers are not criticizing the Government constructively.

Pegler compared some colored newspapers (not this one) to Father Coughlin's Social Justice, which the Government has suppressed.

Unfortunately, we haven't space this week to answer Pegler fully, except to say this: We do not have to apologize to anyone for our patriotism. We have no double loyalties.

MAY 9 - 1942

Pegler Is Wrong

The trouble is that army, navy and industry are not taking enough of our men and women in every branch of war activity—not training enough laborers to become skilled workers—not promoting men in the armed forces as rapidly as they can qualify.

Patriotism isn't our lack. Colored people are not critical or hesitant about where they shall work or fight. To the contrary, a large part of their efforts is devoted to opening all the doors and keeping them open so we can get about this job of winning the war.

Two Answers to Pegler

President Roosevelt knows this. That is the reason for his order directing war industries not to discriminate against colored people.

Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox knows this, because last week he said something that Pegler missed. Knox found the United States Navy closed to colored volunteers and enlisted men except as flunkies and toilet tenders.

Criticism by the colored press compelled him to open the door partly and admit colored men to shore duties as marines, seamen and coast-guards. Commissions and service on the high seas are still closed to colored patriots.

Secretary Knox said that he's aware of the "courage shown by the American colored man in waging his struggle for full freedom and full participation in our democratic institutions."

And he added this generous sentence: "We know that colored leaders are not going to stop their fight for broader opportunities—AND WE DO NOT EXPECT THEM TO DO SO."

We think Secretary Knox's statement is a complete answer to Pegler and his kind, of whom, unfortunately, there are too many.

We are just average folks, patient and hard workers, but we can think. And the difficulties we have to overcome in order to fight for our lives and our homes makes us plenty sore.

The fact that here and there over the country a war industry condescends to take on a few colored workers for menial tasks does not impress us.

What We Want to Hear

We want to hear that every plant with a war order has been ORDERED to accept all qualified applicants without regard to race or its owner will go to jail.

The fact that the army is training a few colored officers and a few colored flyers, or the Federal Government is hiring a few colored clerks is no real aid to democracy.

The fact that here and there over the country a war industry condescends to take on a few colored workers for menial tasks does not impress us.

What We Want to Hear

We want to hear that every plant with a war order has been ORDERED to accept all qualified applicants without regard to race or its owner will go to jail.

The fact that the army is training a few colored officers and a few colored flyers, or the Federal Government is hiring a few colored clerks is no real aid to democracy.

We want to hear that the question of race and color and religion shall not be considered in any Federal agency and that any one who does so will be dismissed and imprisoned.

Knox Is Half Right Here

Secretary Knox's statement that he doesn't expect colored people to stop fighting for broader opportunities doesn't end national confusion. It adds to it. We are sick and tired of fighting other Americans. The enemy is at our gates.

We expect the government to say that internal strife is over and all Americans fight as equal partners. Those who will not will be put "under" the jail until they repent.

Biddle Is All Right

Francis M. Biddle, able United States Attorney General, announced last week that he is prosecuting defendants in fifteen localities for violating the civil rights of colored people. The cases involve everything from lynching and peonage to rioting to keep colored people from moving into a Detroit housing project. Mr. Biddle adds that he welcomes a chance to proceed also against the Ku Klux Klan.

Prosecution Is Swell

We expect the government to slap down all opposition and put guilty culprits in jail.

We have used this word "jail" three times. It's a penalty all wrong-minded men respect. Until a government puts its evildoers in jail, they do not believe it means business.

What Pearl Buck Says

Pearl Buck has the idea in general terms. She says the password in this war is "freedom for all." Listen to her:

"The fighting front is wherever men who are fighting for others find themselves opposed to men who are fighting for themselves at the expense of freedom for all. These are the enemy under whatever flag they fight. These men can make us lose the war, even if our armed forces win the battles."

"Freedom for all," says Pearl Buck. "First come, first served," says General MacArthur. "All men up," was Teddy Roosevelt's slogan.

The First Step

How shall these things be accomplished? What is the first step?

President Roosevelt has the authority. He can end confusion, internal strife and unify the nation as a war measure.

Lincoln waited until the South had almost won the Civil War before he acted.

Roosevelt can profit by Lincoln's mistake.

Let him enforce the Civil Rights Act of 1875 now and see what it means to give 12,000,000 fighting-mad colored people the chance to FIGHT.

Unwanted Heroes

Ticketed as both heroes and undesirable aliens, Filipinos in the United States are wondering what on earth they are and what their status will be tomorrow.

There are 60,000 of them in the United States and something more than that number in Hawaii. Most on the mainland are in California. In the early thirties certain California groups agitated for the total exclusion of Filipinos but, since Filipinos then owed allegiance to the United States, such a measure was too crude to make headway. When the Tydings-McDuffie bill giving the Philippines independence in 1946 was passed, however, Filipino immigration was limited to fifty persons a year. A special California law forbade them to own real estate, regardless of the length of their residence in the United States. They were refused the right to practise law. They were also bracketed with aliens of other nationalities in the sweeping provisions of the anti-alien land law.

As aliens, they were disqualified from enlistment in the armed forces of the United States. President Roosevelt by proclamation established their right to be inducted into the army, under the 1940 draft law, but they were relegated to class 4C.

Succeeding events have left them utterly bewildered. The fall of the Philippines was of course a tremendous shock to them. The demonstration of the fighting ability of their own troops was a source of great pride. Overnight they themselves were reclassified in the draft and moved from the bottom of the list to the top, from 4C to 1A. Even the navy presently opened its guarded doors to them. The office of the Philippines Commissioner advised them simply to join up, as if that were the perfect solution to all problems.

But not all Filipinos can join up, any more than all Americans can. And of the proportion which can, some may be more needed in their present jobs. Most Filipinos are engaged in agriculture in California, particularly in the asparagus industry, for the exacting labor of which they are highly skilled. The Asparagus Association of the Sacramento area is trying to arrange for the importation of Mexican workers to take their places. The Associated Farmers, who were trying hardest to have Filipinos excluded, until yesterday (when there were plenty of Japanese laborers), are petitioning for the deferment of those subject to the draft. For the past twenty-five years Filipinos have largely

But there is a growing distrust of what he represents and protects in the web of the British social structure. The conservatives in party politics, the monopolists in business and finance, the military caste and the colonial administrators of empire cannot escape the record they have written. It was, in many respects, a magnificent record, but it is one that cannot continue after the present world convulsion. British prestige alone cannot longer maintain a far-flung empire. A few uniforms, a renowned navy, a haughty attitude toward subject races and the power of money—these things are crumbling before the eyes of the world and of the British people as they have to face the formidable challenge of a ruthless foe. And it was these things which Churchill symbolized before the war, and with which he is still associated, in spite of the fact that in imagination and adaptability he stands head and shoulders above the tradition of which he has been the spokesman.

The British people are restive under the long series of military defeats which have driven their forces from one region after another. They know these defeats were not due to any lack of courage in their

Methodists and the Negro

Elderly (119 years) but lively Zion's Herald, No. 2 Methodist weekly, waxed hot last week over racial discrimination in the Methodist Church. "Our sin against the Negro lies as a log across the path of Methodist progress," editorialized the Herald. "In these days of war, with discrimination against the Negro becoming a nationwide scandal, we are tongue-tied. . . . What is the church going to do about real brotherhood?"

The outburst was occasioned by the refusal of Wilbraham Academy, oldest Methodist school in America, to admit the fully qualified son of one of its own Negro alumni.* The alumnus is Robert Shaw Wilkinson Jr., a Manhattan surgeon. He and his brother both graduated from Wilbraham with highest honors—the first pair of brothers to achieve this distinction in the history of the school.

Said Dr. Wilkinson: "If you could have seen the tragic expression which came over the face of my splendid young son last evening when he was apprised of Wilbraham's decision, you would fully realize the serious implications and results of the pseudodemocracy existing in America today."

* In the South, Methodists operate nine colleges, two junior colleges and three professional schools for Negroes.

Hospital Drops 2 Who Beat Negro

APR 16 1942

Case of Expectant Mother in Chicago Wins Action As Negroes Hold Protest

CHICAGO, April 15.—Because they maltreated and beat an expectant Negro mother, a doctor and a watchman at the County Hospital have been suspended through public protest.

56k

A Negro mass meeting, called by the Baptist Ministers Conference of Chicago for last night to protest the beating and to plan further action, was so informed by Gen. Manus McCloskey, chief warden at the hospital.

The mass meeting then passed a resolution praising the suspensions. It further urged that Negro physicians be added to the hospital staff and that the number of Negro nurses be increased.

In addition, the meeting discussed the difficulties often experienced by Negroes in getting admission to the hospital and recommended that measures be taken to relieve this situation and "that the hospital be taken out of politics in this respect."

Mrs. Lillie White was the expectant mother who was beaten by Dr. Roy E. Hanford, in charge of the receiving ward. Mrs. White had been accompanied on March 1, to the hospital by her landlady, Miss Louise Shannon. When Miss Shannon tried to restrain Dr. Hanford, the watchman, George Bolinsky, forcibly restrained her and used abusive language.

Miss Shannon described the treatment given Mrs. White "as the most brutal tragedy I ever saw."

The case was investigated by the Baptist Ministers Conference, and a report was submitted to County Commissioner Edward M. Sneed. Sneed said the doctor and watchman were "merely suspended," but that the suspensions were as much equivalent to dismissal as if they had received their dismissal slips.

According to the statement of Dr. Roger T. Vaughan, night warden, Dr. Hanford freely admitted he was rough, and "stubborn and belliggeernt" before the investigating committee.

SAYS 'NIGGER' DURING TALK TO STUDENTS

Detroit

Principal Lauds Colored Boys And Girls At School

By JOHN WOOD

The assembly room at River Rouge high school was transformed into a scene of violence Tuesday morning when a Negro student, objecting to the theme of a lecturer from the University of Detroit who is reported to have used the word "nigger" repeatedly, struck one of two teachers who tried to hold him as he made a lunge for the lecturer.

The incident, which occurred after Prof. Michael Kinsella of the language department of the university in a pantomime of racial characteristics and languages, is reported to have given a pantomime of Negro preachers and their congregations, was termed "regrettable" by assistant school principal, J. I. Harrington.

Say Kinsella Used Word "Nigger"

According to several students interviewed by this reporter, Kinsella had given pantomimes of several racial groups, using their dialect, in a morning assembly. When he came to the subject of Negroes, the students said, he said "and now this is the way a 'nigger' preacher talks, and how his congregation acts while he is preaching."

After Kinsella had "burlesqued" the Race for several minutes, the students said, Elmer Evans, 18, 377 Holford, member of the football squad at the school, resenting Kinsella's actions, jumped from his seat and made a lunge for the speaker. Two teachers grabbed Evans, the students say, to hold him back from Kinsella, and Evans struck one of the teachers. By this time, they say, the entire Negro student body was voicing its resentment of Kinsella and he was advised to leave the assembly room.

Evans was told to drop the matter and he left the room with all the Negro students following him. Police were called, but when they arrived, school officials had the disturbance well in hand.

Kinsella Refuses to Apologize

In an effort to smooth the matter over, one of the program arrangers asked Kinsella to apologize to Evans, but Evans refused to accept the apology unless Kinsella apologized to the whole assembly. This Kinsella refused to do and Evans was advised to go home to prevent a further disturbance.

(First reports were to the effect that all Negro students had been sent home but this reporter was at the school for an hour and learned that only a few were missing from the classrooms.

Interviewed at his office, assistant principal Harrington said he did not want to talk about the incident until he had discussed it with the board of education. "I know the whole story, but I don't want to talk until I have discussed the matter with the board of education," Harrington said. "I know the board does not want such a story to get around," he added.

"Did Kinsella use the word 'nigger'?" Harrington was asked.

"The students I have talked with say he did and I can depend on what they tell me," Harrington answered.

Commenting on relations at the school, Harrington said "I don't see why anybody would want to emphasize race at a time like this. We try to forget there are differences at this school. The colored boys and girls have done a lot to put this school over and the incident today is most regrettable."

Rouge Leaders Investigate

Leading Negro citizens of River Rouge were investigating the disturbance Tuesday. Headed by Dr. S. Byron Milton and Director of Beechwood Center Boone, the group planned to call a meeting between school officials and the Parent Teachers association at Northrop school Tuesday night.

Although Tuesday's incident was the first occurrence of violence at the school, one spokesman said students report that southern teachers at the school often make derogatory remarks and use other methods of embarrassing Negro students.

Kinsella could not be reached for a statement as we went to press.

Stanley High Says Right To Work Would End Negro Problem

BY JOHN C. McCUNE

"The Negro, both in the North and South, wants to have the chance of having as good a job as he is capable of fitting himself for. Personally, I think that is the solution of the Negro problem, both in the South and the North."

High, a police reporter for many years before his articles on the Negro, Fascism and Communism were published in The Saturday Evening Post, was in Birmingham Thursday preparatory to writing a series of articles for Readers Digest on the war's effect on the Negro. He already had visited Harlem, Washington, Philadelphia, Atlanta and rural Georgia and planned to visit St. Louis, Detroit and Pittsburgh to gather additional material for his articles.

The magazine editor, a man of average size who has difficulty in sitting still, a trait apparently common to those who have had training in newspaper shops, said "the war has brought all the Negro's sub-surface feelings to the surface because he has been asked to go out and fight for a democracy that he personally has seen too little of."

Editor Visits City

"Outsider" Policy Admitted

High prefaced his remarks by asserting that he was a "crass outsider" as far as the Negro problem in the South was concerned, and he added that in his opinion "no one, either black or white, ought to come South and prescribe how the Negro question in the South should be settled."

Lighting another cigaret as he sat in his room at the Tutwiler Hotel, High emphasized that he thought "there are enough intelligence, fair-mindedness and good will on both sides in the South to solve the problem.

But warming to his subject of the Negro problem generally, High said:

"The one element that I am most disapopinted in is the element which by virtue of what it claims to be ought to be doing more than any other agency in solving the racial problem, namely the Christian Church.

"After all, the Christian Church claims to be more than an ordinary human institution—it claims to be the voice of Christ. There are, of course, many clergymen who are awake to this problem of interracial relationships but the weight of ecclesiastical influence, by and large, seems to me to be doing too little too slow.

"The Negro wants an equality of opportunity and that specifically means economic opportunity, not social equality.

Newspapers Praised

"The two most hopeful elements on the white side of the Negro problem in the South, so far as I have observed, are the stand of certain branches of organized labor and the newspapers. Such men are Virginius Dabney, of The Richmond News Leader; Jonathan Daniels, of The Raleigh News and Observer; Ralph McGill, of The Atlanta Constitution; John Temple Graves, II, of The Birmingham Age-Herald; Mark Etheridge, of The Louisville Courier-Journal, and others are providing the leadership which both white and Negro communities in the South someday will highly appreciate."

High was asked to recall his days with the Roosevelt administration—the days before he wrote an article for The Saturday Evening Post entitled "Whose Party Is It?"

High recalled that "Mr. Roosevelt publicly rebuked me and the article."

Organizer and president of the Good Neighbor League, an organization designed to catch the independent voter in the 1936 campaign, High bears no rancor over the parting of the ways.

"I am more for than against the New Deal now," he said.

"The president was a great guy to work with. He couldn't be beat."

High will go to St. Louis from Birmingham.

Race Intolerance Charge Ruled Libel

Houston Post

Pearson, Allen Case Ruled On

APR 14 1942

WASHINGTON, April 13.—(AP)—The supreme court upheld Monday a lower court decision declaring that under New York state law a false accusation of racial intolerance against a public official is libelous "per se"—that is, without any necessity of proving specific damages.

Houston Texas

The decision was rendered last July by the federal circuit court of appeals in New York in connection with a libel suit brought by Representative Sweeney (D., Ohio) against the Schenectady (N. Y.) Union Star because of a published statement that he opposed the appointment of a man to a judgeship because the man was a Jew.

Trial on Merits

(Neither the circuit court or supreme court passed upon the truth or falsity of the published statement; their decision merely means that the suit is to be tried on the merits.)

The supreme court, with Justice Jackson not participating, split 4-4 on the case. This automatically upheld the lower court. No formal opinion was issued, and the reason for Jackson's withdrawal and the individual stands of the other eight justices were not made public.

The suit was one of a number filed by Sweeney against various newspapers which published a "Washington Merry-Go-Round" column by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen in 1938 which represented Sweeney and Father Charles E. Coughlin as opposing the appointment of Emerich Burt Freed as a federal district judge in Cleveland because Freed was a Jew.

Grounds for Jurisdiction

The federal courts took jurisdiction because of "diversity of citizenship," Sweeney being a resident of Ohio and the newspaper a New York corporation, but the decision in this case dealt only with interpretation of the New York libel laws.

The federal district court threw out the case on the ground that no cause of action had been stated. The circuit court reversed this ruling on the ground that if false the publication was libelous per se, saying that it took for granted, for purposes of deciding the question, that the statement about Sweeney was false.

The case now goes back to the district court for trial, at which the truth or falsity of the statement presumably will be an issue.

Test of Libel

The circuit court, in a 2 to 1 decision by Judge Harrie Brigham Chase, said that the test of libel per se in New York "is whether right-thinking persons would be reasonably expected to be induced by the publication to believe that it truthfully represented the plaintiff's attitude on the subject of Freed's appointment and would be likely to regard him as a consequence in such a way that his reputation was injured." It was an established principle in New York, Chase wrote, "that, when made of a public official, false accusations which may well lead right-thinking people to believe him unworthy of public trust and confidence are libelous per se."

And the court declared that "decent, liberty-loving people . . . are greatly offended" by racial intolerance and that "those who hate intolerance are prone to regard the person who believes in and practices acts of intolerance with aversion and contempt."

Persecutions Cited

In view of Hitler's persecution of the Jews, the opinion added, "the publication of statements such as those alleged may well gain for the person falsely accused the scorn and contempt of the right-thinking in appreciable numbers."

Judge Charles E. Clark, dissenting, held that under New York law "the right of comment on a public official has been safeguarded in a practical way by 'a somewhat different rule' than in ordinary cases." For a statement about a public official to be libelous per se, he contended, "the charge must go to the extent of definite impropriety in office." He said that the statement about Sweeney "charges rather bigotry and prejudice than corruption or impropriety in office."

The New York State Publishers association, in a brief filed with the supreme court, asserted that the circuit court's decision "will limit and shackle the force of the press as an instrument of public welfare" and that it "represents an unprecedented extension of liability for the publication of comment on public officers and public affairs contrary to the fundamental rights of the press." The American civil liberties union took a similar position.

Briefs opposing the decision also were filed by the American Jewish Congress, the American Jewish committee, the B'nai B'rith and the Jewish labor committee. They said that the decision made hazardous criticism by the press or by members of minority groups "charging public officials with bias against minorities."

The People's Forum

FIXED PATTERNS.

To the Editor: I have just finished reading the article in the People's Forum entitled "The Negro Question," by J. W. Stroud of Richmond, Va. In this connection I would like to call attention to the fact that where groups have been influenced by some fixed pattern for a long period of time, especially where that pattern has thwarted mutual support and mutual connections of activities, where that pattern has hindered maximum production, unspeakable suffering has been experienced by all the people who live and move within the pattern. So that it becomes necessary sometimes to modify the pattern in order to make progress.

Respecting the Negro group, I do not think that any member of it wants social, political nor economic traditions that tend towards the growth and development of all the people changed, and certainly not because members of the group have been inducted into the armed forces of the United States. Every able-bodied man in the Negro group that I have talked with has expressed himself as being willing to pour out the last measure of his blood in the defense of his nation and of the democratic way of life. But he simply wants the pattern modified to the degree that he might have the opportunity to work in this economy in which he finds himself.

I think that the Negro in these parts wants clean, proportional accommodations on public carriers; I think that he wants to be accorded the common courtesies that are accorded other human beings. I don't think that there is any great desire on the part of the Southern Negro for any very intimate racial co-mingling in more than there is a desire for on the part of the white people. The Negro wants to be given the privilege to do the work that he is qualified to do. And he wants the opportunity to learn to do more things and to do them well, so that our Southland will become one of the finest sections of the United States.

As the Crow Flies

By W. E. B. DU BOIS

THE sympathy of every American Negro goes out to the brave leaders of India, whether Hindu or Moslem, they are fighting for the freedom of the majority of mankind.

Dr. Du Bois

It is not pleasant this spring to think of Europe. I have seen the Champs Elysees when the spring was transforming it from earth to heaven and the Triumphant Arch stood at its summit. I have seen the Bois de Boulogne, the Thiergarten, the walls of Nuremburg, and the Italian lakes sleeping beneath the snows of Switzerland. I shall not see these things again as once they were.

Programs

One of the extraordinary and not easily realized difficulties before the American Negro is the attempt to conceive and announce a single program for all of our thirteen millions. That is a logical impossibility and leads to quite unnecessary contradiction and recrimination. Ours is a complicated, dynamic problem varying in space and time.

For instance, conceive with me a small Northern city with only a few Negro inhabitants and those long settled there. The Negro problem in such a situation is simply a determination to let no race discrimination or segregation creep in. Negro children have always gone to the schools and been well-treated. Negroes live scattered here and there. In fact, there is no Negro problem in such a town.

Contrast with that the situation in a great city like New York, Chicago, Detroit or Cleveland. Here are large numbers of Negroes; some old and well-to-do settlers; some poverty-stricken new-comers; others, in between. The city faces an old pattern of comparatively little color discrimination, but sees it growing and growing fast. Despite theory there are "Jim Crow" schools;; there are Negro neighborhoods; there is a Negro problem. How shall it be met? It cannot be settled suddenly or by phrases. The discrimination and segregation that has grown up will last for some time. The problem is to keep it from growing; to see that the separate schools are good schools; that the segregated neighborhoods are not slums.

Long Historical Precedent

Changing from this, let us look at Richmond, or Charleston or New Orleans, where there is a color pattern set in long historical precedent, recognized by black and white. There is a white city; there is a black city. Social activities run in something like parallel lines. The line exists geographically and even more deeply is it drawn in the souls of men. There is no use saying here, we will not have segregation; we will not submit to discrimination. We already have segregation; we already live under discrimination. We can say, we will work for a time when artificial and insulting differences are removed; but there is no rational hope that this can be done in less than a generation. It may take many generations. In the meantime, men will live and die; children will be born and educated. Our statement of the Negro problem must comprehend the present color line; it may declare that it is unfair and unwise; it may hope for its abolition. But the line cannot be ignored.

Now going further, go to the country districts of south Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, in the small towns and country districts. There color caste is supreme. Serfdom approaches slavery. Treatment in public places is thoughtlessly insulting. Wages are low and built on color. Occupations are limited; even moving from place to place is sometime difficult. What shall a Negro do who lives there? We may say easily: Move away, and thousands have moved; other thousands will. Nevertheless, thousands remain and must remain. An attitude toward the Negro problem cannot be voiced in terms of a colored resident of Chicago or even of Washington, D. C. It must be a grim fight with silent battles and dumb suffering and yet a fight which has its victories and its heroisms.

When now a leader or a thinker tries to state a program suited to all four of these situations, it cannot be simply glib and impudent. It has got to be thoughtful and intelligent and we have got to give just as much credit to the man who suffers and stands straight in Mississippi, as the man who yells and gestures in Harlem.

Dr. DuBois Lectures At Vassar And Yale

ATLANTA, April 30—(ANP)—Dr. W. E. B. DuBois, head of the department of sociology, Atlanta university, and editor of Phylon, is lecturing this week at Vassar college, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and at Yale university, New Haven, Conn. At Vassar he is speaking on "The Future of Africa in America" and emphasizing the demand for democracy on the part of the 30 million persons of African descent on the American continent.

At Yale he is conducting Prof. Kennedy's class on "American Society"; then after a dinner given by the Graduate club, he addresses the club and its friends on "The Future of Europe in Africa." He stresses the fact that the world has invested in Africa $6,500,000,000 in capital since the first World War and that Africa was exporting before the opening of this war $700,000,000 worth of exports annually.

LESS SAID

To the Editor:

I think the less said of the Southern people about their attitude toward the Negro the better. I do not think any broad-minded person desires to deprive them of their just rights and civil liberties. A few would like to stir up our feelings and bring out hatred they say we have for them to further their own ends in disuniting our people. But we are not going to be divided. And we are not going to fall.

The "Four Equalities"

For a democracy to be real, said Mrs. Roosevelt in a speech at Hampton Institute Friday, four things are necessary:

1. Equality of all persons before the law.
2. Equal opportunity for education.
3. Equal opportunity of employment.
4. Equal chance to participate in government.

There would have been no point in making such a statement at the University of Virginia, for all four equalities are either directly guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, or inferentially affirmed by the Declaration of Independence. But the President's wife was speaking at a training school for Negroes. That is what made the statement pertinent to the times.

Only those who have deliberately closed their minds to the fiery testing period through which the institution of democracy is passing as it faces the most dangerous challenge that has confronted it in all its history, will quarrel with Mrs. Roosevelt for bidding the Negroes of the United States to have faith in the American system and in the promise it holds out to them of a future which will bring them, in the four respects mentioned, substantial parity with all other elements under the Constitution's protection. If the American system can not bring them this substantial parity they will certainly not attain it under any of the enemy systems that now challenge it.

The relations that should obtain between America's white and colored races on the social level, let it be noted, did not enter Mrs. Roosevelt's discussion. That is a subject apart—one concerning which the races themselves establish the rules in response to criteria that no abstract concepts of democracy can overrule. Nobody in Virginia will be so unfair as to discern in Mrs. Roosevelt's speech anything more than a definition of what America's democracy owes its 13,000,000 Negroes as members of its political and economic order, and as human beings seeking education, self-improvement, self-sufficiency, self-respect and exact justice under the law.

RACE RELATIONS.

To the Editor: Of late there has been much agitation on the part of the Negro race for social equality to the extent of advocating the discontinuance of segregation in schools, public conveyances, and such public places as hotels, restaurants, movies and the like.

Negro educators and religious leaders who preach this to their less literate brethren are doing them a real injustice. Before Southerners would give in to such a mix-up they would have the State Legislatures discontinue all appropriations for schools and go in for local cooperative or private schools. Likewise each movie would become a private club, hotels and restaurants would become a chain of private clubs whose membership would require that each member be of the white race, etc.

Today thousands of Negroes have the opportunity of schooling at the expense of the white race. Any other plan which would place the cost of their schooling on the individual would lessen the opportunities of the Negro child.

This is the opinion of the writer who has spent over a year in each of the Southern States south of Virginia and Missouri and between these two States except for Tennessee and Kentucky, including three years in the State of Texas.

AMERICAN NEGROES

To the Editor: We are facing at this moment a great crisis. Our country is in danger. The future of the United States as a great, free democratic nation rests upon the unity and cooperation of all Americans. However, we are determined that we shall not be broken by sinister forces from without nor undermined by pernicious cleavages from within.

As bad as anything that I can recall is a letter published in The News and Observer of April 14, by J. W. Stroud, in vain attempt to malign the American Negroes. Stroud's letter is a challenging affront to the Negroes because it succeeds in achieving that measure of truth recognized as indispensable to serve its purpose, a scheme so often employed by Hitler who first understood that the greatest lie may succeed in finding root if fertilized with the proper portion of obvious truth.

But the Stroud technique upon analysis of the Negro is absurdly simple because he is unloading the weight of his charges entirely upon himself. The story of the Negroes in war and valor is a great epic in the American history. By their labor they helped develop this country. They fought with Washington at Valley Forge in the Revolutionary War, and Negro soldiers are said to have rescued Colonel Theodore Roosevelt from possible death. Two hundred thousand Negro soldiers went to France in the first World War to make the world safe for democracy. Today they are sending their sons into the battlefield to die in defense of a principle "that all men are created equal". If we denounce the racial bigotry of Nazism how can we permit industry to discriminate against our loyal American Negroes? Let us live up to the ideal of Washington, Jefferson and Lincoln and strengthen our democracy by giving qualified Negroes their share of war jobs in industry and commissions in our armed forces.

Jewish Paper Hits Legislature For Not Halting Jimcro Practices

The American Jewish Congress, through its official publication, Congress Weekly, took to task this week the New York State Legislature for its failure to act in connection with some 40 bills that were designed to eliminate discrimination in defense as well as in other industries, because of race, color or creed. In an editorial, the publication states: "There is something strange going on in the New York State Legislature in connection with a number of bills designed to place legal bars c racial and religious discrimination in industry. No less than 40 such bil of which 17 fully answer the several orders issued by the President against discrimination, were introduced during this legislative session.

"These bills provide against discrimination by contractors of public works; by utilities and insurance companies; by defense industries and employment agencies. Some of them would also make it unlawful for any newspaper, magazine or other publication to permit the insertion of advertisements containing preferences, or discrimination because of race, creed, color or national origin.

"Of all these bills, only three were reported out of committee, of which two have been passed in the Assembly. The rest of them, including the most effective, are being denied the chance of consideration either by the Assembly or State Senate by the simple method of burial in committee.

"The enactment of these bills into law, even if it did not abolish discrimination with a stroke of the pen, would at least offer legal ground for proceedings against the vested interests that now enjoy full freedom to practice their prejudices and hatreds.

"It would prevent employers from choosing their workers by means of questionnaires establishing the religion or race of the applicant for employment."

STUDENTS OPEN ANTI-TALMADGE ELECTION DRIVE

Report Governor Discounted Alumni Ability to Beat Him

By C. E. GREGORY

5-6K

Students at all state-supported colleges and several other universities were signing up Friday as members of the state-wide Student Political League pledged to wage an all-out political war against the re-election of Governor Talmadge.

Student leaders expected to sign up from 12,000 to 15,000 students coming from practically every magisterial district in Georgia.

At mass meetings to be held during the day, the students were to hear a report of a student committee that called upon Governor Talmadge and heard his defiance of anything the University System students or alumni can do.

"1. The Governor will admit no mistake in his purge of the University System.

"2. The Governor would have us believe that the action of the Southern Association was inspired solely by a desire on the part of 'moth-eaten professors' who want to see co-education of the white and Negro races.

"3. The Governor would have us believe that 'the Southern Association is an outside group that did what it did just to be at me in the election this fall,' and 'that the Southern Association is nothing but a racket.'

"4. The Governor plans 'to ruin these associations that won't recognize our credits.' He plans to have the next Legislature pass laws making it impossible for graduates from the states that do not recognize our degrees to practice their professions in Georgia. To quote the Governor: 'The road from here to Knoxville will be full of folks leaving Georgia. That will stop the Southern Association.'

"5. The Governor admitted that this action would create terrible disorder in the state and probably would ruin the schools, but he deems it necessary, in order, as he put it, 'to save Georgia's traditions.' The Governor admitted that he expected Tech's enrollment might be less than 500 next year. It was 3,000 last year.

"6. The Governor admitted that the action of the students had caused him some concern about his chances for re-election. He now believes, however, that the war situation has so obscured the students' arguments that they will cause him no further trouble.

"Puppet Regents"

"It is the opinion of this committee that nothing can be done to save the University System from disaster except by forcing the necessary measures directly over the opposition of the Governor. The present puppet condition of the Board of Regents and the natural inertia of a legisuature out of session make it highly improbable that anything can be done at the present time. Only the possibility that a new governor may be elected in the coming fall elections offers much hope that the units of the University System may escape long years of ignominy and stagnation."

The call for the mass meetings, sent out from state headquarters of the Student Political League in Athens, read:

"The students of the University System have exhausted every passive means to have something done about the plight of our University System. The one obstacle to all suggested remedies remains Governor Talmadge, the cause of our troubles. The time for action has come. The Student Political League is being organized to coordinate action of the students in one last step—to defeat Talmadge in the coming election."

The Boas Award

The American Federation of Teachers has honored itself in bestowing its annual award on Prof. Franz Boas for "outstanding services in the cause of education for democracy." The achievements of Dr. Boas in his own field have placed him in the front rank of the world's anthropologists. Inevitably the search for scientific truth compelled him to take up the cudgels against the purveyors of pseudo-scientific falsehood. In The Mind of Primitive Man and other works he marshaled the evidence to refute the racists and obscurantists. These classics of anthropology constitute the best antidote to the neo-Nazi doctrines being propagated by such men as Dr. Alexis Carrel and Prof. Earnest Hooton of Harvard.

But Dr. Boas has been more than scientist and educator in the narrow sense of those terms. As chairman and moving spirit of the American Committee for Democracy and Intellectual Freedom he has given notable leadership to the fight for civil liberties at a time when they are most seriously menaced. He has opposed all efforts to incite war hysteria. He has stood firm in defense of the Bill of Rights. At a time when so many liberals have run for cover in the arms of reaction, Dr. Boas has given a demonstration of true liberalism, of service, not lip service, to democracy.

GOVERNOR TALMADGE of Georgia has announced that he is opposed to a bill now before Congress that would allow $300,000,000 of federal funds to be turned over to state educational institutions. "If federal funds were appropriated," he says, "you would have the problem of coeducation of the races immediately. And that's something Georgia don't stand for."

Conspiracy in Alabama

THE country is beginning to learn of the volcanic situation now rumbling down in certain Southern states.

It seems that a "White Supremacy" organization is being organized, with headquarters in Birmingham, with the sole purpose of organizing resistance to the United States government's decision to bring Negro labor into war industry on a basis of equality.

Sender Garlin, special staff correspondent of this paper, has been telling this story in his dispatches from Birmingham.

A delegation of trade unionists has visited Washington to place before the Government the startling facts of a group of men who would rather see the United States deprived of war munitions than have their Jim Crow system of segregation broken down.

This paper intends to keep a steady fire of exposure playing on any reactionary movement which hinders the war, including this revival of Ku Klux violence against trade unions, white as well as Negro workers, who are guilty of nothing but trying to enforce the law of the United States.

Threats of violence against the Government's anti-Jim Crow agencies menace the whole nation from within.

The Axis would like nothing better than to see our war effort in the South crippled by Ku Kluxers and "white supremacy" phonies who rob the whites of their rights as well as the Negro people.

America has got to stop this "white supremacy" conspiracy right now before it does any widespread damage, before it explodes into bloodshed and chaos.

The South Challenges the Nation

The recent clashes between Negro soldiers and civilian police in the South presents a real challenge to the War and Justice Departments.

Officials of these Southern cities near where our boys are stationed, resent the presence in the community of Negro soldiers from the North. They have no objections to Southern Negro soldiers, because, as one official said, "they know their place."

With Southern officials assuming such an attitude it is easy to understand why civilian police plague Negro business and residential areas with a purpose of provoking trouble leading to arrestes.

The 90-day jail sentences given five Negro soldiers in uniform by a Jacksonville, Florida judge, was the climax of what police in Florida termed a riot on the part of the Negro soldiers to take one of their number from the custody of civilian police.

To quell the "riot" of five soldiers, a call was put in for the state police, county police, sheriff's deputies, and military police. They all came with shot guns, machine guns, riot guns and service revolvers.

Senator John Bankhead, rabble-rouser from Alabama, writes the Army Chief-of-Staff that the problem would be solved if Negro soldiers from the North would not be sent to training in the South

"Our own people feel," he wrote, "that the Government is doing a disservice to the war effort by locating Negro troops in the South in immediate contact with white troops at a time when race feeling among the Negroes has been aroused and when all the energies of both the whites and blacks should be devoted to the war effort."

Senator Bankhead suggests that all energies should be devoted to the war effort, yet at the same time he asks the Chief-of-Staff to depart from the war effort to help sustain the white supremacy of the South.

This is a war in which all of the United States are engaged,—a war we are destined to win. We cannot win the war with one-tenth of our soldiers in Southern city jails simply because Southern whites resent their presence in the South.

Civilian police who would cripple the war effort by denying this country the service of Negro citizens, and who would throw them in jail to effect that end, are just as treacherous as any saboteur who ever landed on our shores, and like convicted saboteurs should be lined up against a wall and shot.

This country has a right to train soldiers in its defense anywhere in America it pleases. As underserved as Alabama and Florida may be, we are fighting this war in their defense too, for if this country loses, Alabama and Florida both are lost, and if Alabama and Florida are lost, there will be neither white nor black supremacy.

The War Department should assert itself, and provide protection for its soldiers in the North as well as the South, and whether they are white or black.

Bankhead is not running this war. Alabama and Florida are not running the war. The Chief-of-Staff should tell them so. If our military forces are running the war, they should tell these treacherous Southern states where to get off.

Those five soldiers in the Jacksonville jail were drafted by their country to defend their country. They can't defend it while languishing behind jail bars, so the War and Justice Departments should immediately find a way to get them out.

Menacing National Unity

From 1865 to 1933 the national Democratic party was the friend and defender of the white South. It never failed us.

The national Republican party, through the Reconstruction period, was the persecutor and oppressor of the South, and, after that came to its close in 1877, it continued to annoy and to threaten it until the inauguration of William Howard Taft in 1909. In South Carolina, in no Southern state, was the "negro question" political for twenty-four years. Mr. Hoover's appointments in South Carolina were as respectable in every way as President Roosevelt's have been. So were those of Presidents Harding and Coolidge.

The negro vote is now important in Northern cities. "The negroes have come into control of the Democratic party", said Senator Byrnes, January 11, 1938.

An aggressive movement is afoot in the North to convert the negroes into an important political factor—and that is a stepping stone to demands for all sorts of negro recognition. (We may look for an effort to compel the admission of negroes into the cotton mills of the Upcountry, and it may come soon.)

Some of the Southerners in Congress are beginning to see what is ahead of them. Already one hears hints of a Southern political party.

The Southern states can at any time organize a party that would destroy the "two-party system". They could elect a sufficient number of members of the Electoral College to prevent any candidate for president receiving a majority in that body. The president, if that should come to pass, would be chosen by the national house of representatives.

The Liberalites, the New Dealers, the Republicans, too, are inviting this danger to the two-party system.

To The News and Courier it seems that at least for the duration of the war, it would be common sense for all parties to let the "negro question" rest.

The agitation of this question and the activities now in progress in relation to the negroes constitute the greatest menace to national unity now before the American public.

Georgia Warns Militia To Expect Race Conflict

Talmadge Appointee 'Alerts' Volunteer Shotgun Troops Against Negro 'Disturbances'

5-6-K

Special Correspondence

ATLANTA, Aug. 12.—Gov. Talmadge's program of Negro suppression took a fresh turn yesterday with publication of an "alert" order to the State Guard against Negroes.

AUG 21 1942

Col. Lindsey W. Camp, Talmadge-appointed head of the Guard, said he was "apprehensive" of racial disturbances and ordered his organization of part-time shotgun-armed militia to be alert for trouble. Only whites serve in the Guard.

Camp said the U. S. Army, under which his organization operates, was "fully aware" of his action.

'Demand Privileges'

"There have been reported efforts on the part of Negro men and women to demand certain privileges which are not granted in Georgia and which never will be," Camp's order of the day recited. "These occurrences are believed to be the direct result of the work of white agents and colored agents. . . ."

The situation in Georgia and other Southern states is admittedly bad. Last week a delegation of Southern liberals, union officials and civic leaders went to Washington to ask Federal agencies to do something about racial tension which is impairing the war program south of the Mason-Dixon line.

They told of scores of arrests and beatings of Negroes throughout the South, strikes of white workmen on jobs employing Negroes, threats and assaults on white employers of Negro workmen and other violent efforts toward Negro suppression, including several reported murders.

Camp, in his prepare-for-battle "alert," agreed with these people on only one point—that the situation is hot and about to boil over.

'Subversive Influences'

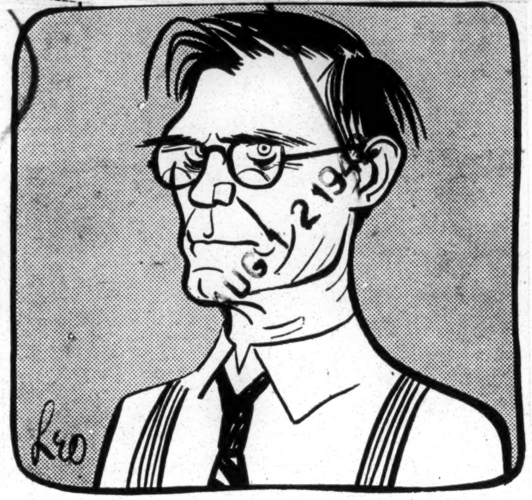
Camp said the "suspected subversive influences" were at work also in Albama, South Carolina and other Southern states."

AUG 21 1942

"There have been an unusual number of assault cases and attempts to assault white ladies," he told his unit commanders throughout the state.



Gov. Talmadge extended his campaign against Negroes with an "alert" to the Georgia Guard to expect trouble.

Camp's order was not revealed to the public until a political opponent of Talmadge referred to it.

Camp accompanied the order with a statement of his own that it was "non-political" and was not issued until "I considered it my duty to warn the Guard of impending danger."

MAKING THE RACIAL ISSUE INTO A BUGABOO

Gov. Frank M. Dixon of Alabama sees red in a clause attached to a contract with the Defense Supplies corporation for 1,750,000 yards of convict-made cloth, and refuses to permit the contract to be signed so long as that clause remains. The clause reads:

"The seller, in performing the work required by the contract, shall not discriminate against any worker because of race, creed color or national origin".

5-6-K

The governor charges that the Federal agencies had adopted policies "to break down the principle of segregation under which the white and Negro races have lived in peace together in the South since reconstruction".

It is fortunate that the governor specifically set forth in his charges that the Negro and white races have lived together in peace since reconstruction, though it is unfortunate that he should now at this critical moment inject the race issue when there is every reason in the world to make even racial concessions in the interest of national unity.

No one believes seriously that white supremacy is being threatened in the South despite federal rulings. There will always be a racial problem so long as there is a mixture of white and colored people in the South, but there is nothing on the horizon to indicate that that problem is seriously out of proportion now to its status in normal times. ........................

It is unfortunate when anyone, particularly Southern hwite

"Will Negro Use Chance"? Muses C. C. Spaulding

DURHAM, N. C.—(ANP)—"The American Negro has before him the greatest opportunity in all his history," declared C. C. Spaulding, insurance and banking magnate, busineses man of national repute, widely known civic leader and trustee of several colleges, speaking in his office here last week.

"I am wondering how wisely he will use it," the white-maned elder statesman continued, musingly. "Have we the leadership, the calm, good judgment, to press our claims for justice, to seek every possible opening industrially and civically, yes, but at the same time not to be stampeded into false hopes or present unattainable aims? Many gains can be made now. Others can be lost or greatly delayed if the wrong technique is used. Many advantages will never reach us until we really prepare for them, sacrifice and measure up to their responsibilities.

"I want the same things the radicals want," Mr. Spaulding said. "I want them the same way they want them, but I know from long and wide experience that reason, good judgment and cooperation are far more swift and effective methods than the types of ill considered pressures which create enmity and stifle cooperation.

"Let's take the matter of school teacher's salaries in a state such as North Carolina. In many southern states when school authorities indicated that their financial position would not permit immediate equalization of salaries between white and Negro teachers without reducing white teacher's salaries, suits were filed. It has been the considered judgment of the leading Negro educators and business men of North Carolina, a judgment in which our teachers have joined, that the best way to work the problem out in North Carolina was in cooperation with the school authorities. The result is that we got 25 percent more this year. In two years Negro teachers' salaries will be equal with those of white teachers and there has been no strain. We have had the full cooperation of the taxing bodies, the state department of education and the white school teacher's association in working the matter out.

"I realize that all southern states are not like North Carolina and in some results might only be obtained through force of law. by resort to courts, but we here in North Carolina find that friendly cooperation works best and leaves no scars.

"The Negro should have the franchise. He should pay his poll tax where necessary and register, seeking to vote where his voting is opposed. At one time in some sections of North Carolina, Negroes were denied the right to vote. We persisted and now we are not having any trouble in the matter of voting.

'In the election held last month, the precincts which were soldidly Negro showed excellent results in the number voting. In Durham, a Negro physician, running for county commissioner, received votes in every precinct including those which were solidly white. There are 3300 Negroes registered in Durham and most of them vote. It is reported that 25,000 are registered in the state. The Committee on Negro affairs is responsible for this condition. It organized and encouraged Negroes to go to the polls. We have the poll tax in North Carolina but it is not enforced.

"A voteless group is a helpless group. Negroes in every southern state ought to give serious attention to increasing the vote of the Negro population. Here in Durham, the chairman of the precinct in which the court house is located is a Negro, Dr. James T. Taylor, dean of men at North Carolina College for Negroes.

"I have been serving on draft board No. 2 here ever since it was set up. Judge R. N. Sykes, white, remarked the other day that he had found it a pleasure to serve on the board and that he had gained a new appreciation of the service which Negroes are rendering.

"We Negroes can do a great deal to help ourselves. As Dr. Moton used to say, 'The Negro wants everything the white man wants. Let's learn to respect uorselves, first of all'.

"All that has been accomplished in North Carolina has been achieved without rancor, hatred or ill will. We can contend for our rights intelligently and persistently. We must not be led into rash threats nor unfortunate hatreds by a lot of thoughtless radicals who seize upon discontent at a time when we need unity to shield unwise speech. Let's see where we are going. Let's es. Let's consolidate every gain, make every advantage permanent.

NEGROES AND JAPANESE

Much is being said in the public press with regard to Japanese propaganda among Negroes in this country. The occasion for a recent outburst of publicity in which some of the daily papers are frantically endeavoring to show that the Negroes have been or are being illusioned with the false hope that the Japanese are our friends, was the arrest by the FBI of one Mimo D. Guzman, who is said to be the same Dr. A. Takis who worked among Negroes in St. Louis and other sections of the country.

The Memphis Commercial Appeal in a recent editorial, claimed that not infrequently a few misguided Negroes used the expression "this is a white man's war—not ours." This paper attempts to connect the above statement with the assertion of the Japanese which says "we intend to liberate the darker races of the earth." Therefore, the Commercial Appeal attempts to connect the two statements and make a prima facie case to show that the Negroes and Japanese are working hand and glove to overthrow the so-called "white supremacy" in this country and in the world.

We wish to state here and now that the Negroes of America are not being misguided or illusioned by any glittering statements which might come from Japanese propagandists and we would suggest to those concerned not to give too much attention to the superficial Japanese friendship as the Negro views it, but rather look at the real situation at our doors. If these newspapers are concerned about the Negro's loyalty, let them take up the cudgels against the evils which are imposed upon the Negroes in America and which are far more dangerous to the peace, comfort and welfare of the Negroes than all the Japanese in Asia. Then, too, we think it far more important that the FBI and the power of this government be used to assure the American Negro his rights as a citizen than all the expenditure of time and money used to run down a lone Japanese who is said to be influencing a few Negroes to be disloyal to this our government. Whoever heard of the Negro being disloyal to this government? All we want is that the government be loyal to us. We can properly classify ourselves as one hundred per cent American but we do ask in return that America give us one hundred per cent citizenship rights. Yes, the Negro is loyal, equal to or to a greater degree than, any other racial group which makes up the vast population of America. Among us you find no saboteurs; you find no Benedict Arnolds; we are not slackers, but rather we ask for an opportunity to serve our country as other races and groups do. We have no foreign ties of kinship, which naturally would divide our interest between the mother tongue and an adopted country. We have given the best we have for more than three hundred years but we ask no more as citizens than those who were naturalized yesterday. However, we contend that we are entitled to as much consideration in America as the unnaturalized citizen or those who became citizens just yesterday.

Of course we can understand to a certain degree the reason for many of the newspapers taking advantage of every opportunity to question the Negro's loyalty because the truth of the matter is, they cannot understand how we can remain loyal to a government which denies us the common rights of citizenship despite our tested loyalty.

Ere another issue of this paper the fate of the foreign spies and saboteurs who were on trial will have been announced by the President of the United States. We are pleased to report that no Negroes are among the ill-fated eight.

Finally we may state that we have no fear of Japanese invasion and have no hope of any reward if Japanese invasion were possible. Our fear is for the lynchers' rope and the mob's torch in America. Our fear is of being cufied from the sidewalk in the cities of the South, though we have committed no offense against the laws of the state. Our fear is of being thrust in a bastile in the South when we protest the Jim Crow car. We fear the kangaroo court which sacrifices our rights as citizens on the altar of racial prejudice. These are some of the things we fear.

Journey of the Negro

Editor of The Times-Dispatch,
Sir:

Horace Wilkinson, Birmingham attorney, in his plea for organization of a League to Maintain White Supremacy, places himself in the category of those who are responsible for the South's comparative position of social, political, educational and economic inferiority.

Mr. Wilkinson speaks of the threat to "drag the white man down to the level of the Negro." Why not concentrate on raising the Negro to the white man's level or as near that level as the Negro is capable of being raised? The Association for the Advancement of Colored People is not aiming to destroy the lot of a "superior people," but rather with raising the standard of an "oppressed" people to the point where he too may taste of this enviable lot. The NAACP does not condone lawless and violent acts resorted to by a few as a means of gaining its ends, but it is determined that criticism of the few who know no other weapon with which to fight an unbearable injustice shall not deter its efforts.

Is the Negro population attempting to shape the policy of the Southern States, or is it aiming to have a part in shaping a policy under which it lives? If the cherished institutions of the South have been threatened because of a "herculean effort is being made to break down and destroy segregation," isn't it true that these institutions are built upon something fundamentally wrong? Is the Negro as concerned about being segregated as he is about the things from which he is being segregated? I recall having begun a trip from the Midwest via the C. & O. Railroad in a coach furnished with the most comfortable reclining seats. As night came on, the lights were dimmed and other measures were taken to add to the comfort of the passengers. About midnight, I was aroused and told that I would have to go in to the "colored" coach because we were in the State of Kentucky.

Letters to the Voice of the People should be held to 200 words. The editor reserves the right to trim communications, preserving the essential thought. Unless accompanied by adequate postage, unused letters will not be returned.

After passing through several coaches, I reached a dirty half-coach which had been used as a smoker. The seats were of the old order, hard and the backs were straight. The conductor occupied two of these seats and kept the lights bright so that he could do his work. The coach was soon crowded. I arrived at my destination about 10:30 tired and sick. It wasn't the fact that I had been segregated that filled me with a sickening loathing, but the fact that I had been robbed. I had paid the same fare as any other passenger riding in a coach and yet I was forced to ride under the most uncomfortable circumstances.

Is the Negro to be accused of putting his "selfish interests" above the all-out war effort simply because he too wants to be sure that he shall not have died in vain? That in giving his life for the protection of his nation, he shall be gaining for those who come after him a fuller share of those things called "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness"?

If Mr. Wilkinson is wise he will remember that the United States cannot be a truly strong and secure nation as long as any minority group within its borders is oppressed, that the white man in holding the Negro down with one hand has but one free with which to work; that in standing still to hold the Negro down, he cannot go forward himself. He should remember that he cannot shut his doors or windows tightly enough to shut out the disease bred among poverty-stricken people; that there aren't bolts strong enough to protect him and his children and his children's children against criminals he has created. He must remember that every man that is lynched in his State threatens the peace and security of a nation; that in breaking down dams, the water will drown him, too; that he cannot sow the whirlwind and build a house strong enough to stand in it. He must remember that he needs more than a league to stop the Negro in his march against injustice. I know, for I am a Negro.

INDIANS FORCE ISSUE

By Dean Gordon B. Hancock for ANP

Some weeks ago I felt called upon to write a series of articles entitled "Forcing the Issue." There came from New York a letter from an unknown writer, but who was seeking light after a very serious manner. He raised the question of how the Indians were organizing resistance to England in this crisis and wanted to know just why the Negro should not do the same thing. Here, he thought, was the golden opportunity to bring this nation to itself by going on a sitdown strike until all our wrongs had been righted and all our grievances redressed.

Because the writer seemed more desirous of solving an intellectual problem than merely heckling "Between the Lines," I took time out and wrote him a long letter trying to clarify the principles involved in forcing the issue. The fact that attention is being focused on Gandhi and his recent utterances that threaten England's stranglehold on India, we feel it germane to our high mission to divert the minds of our readers to the Indian situation and juxtapose the Negro's.

There are certain fundamental differences between the Indian and Negro situations which must be considered when we urge that Negroes follow the lead that the Indians are taking. In the first place, Negroes in this country are a minority group, whereas the Indians are a majority group. Force is possible where there is a majority. But where there is a minority, force has dangerous possibilities which few minority groups in hstory have utilized.

If 400,000,000 Indians were to rise up against England to the death, England would tire of killing millions and millions of non-resisting folk. The heart would grow sick of death and blood and sorrow. And in the end by sheer numbers the Indians stand the better chance of surviving. If the few thousand Englishmen in India were poor and restricted, they would not have a ghost of a show in a general uprising. The point here is, the technique and tactics of minority groups is far different from those employed by majority groups. Physical force has vast possibilities in a majority group, but scarcely any in a minority group.

The second reason why Negroes well might hesitate before adopting the problem of the Indians resides in the fact, that the Indians are racially homogeneous whereas the Negroes are heterogeneous as a racial unit. The great diversity of color in the Negro race makes it almost impossible to unite the race on any robust program of racial redemption. The various colors within the Negro race makes not much difference in what Negroes think of one another. In a color struck world it would be one of the greatest of miracles were it otherwise.

If the 13,000,000 Negroes of the United States were of one blood and color it would be much easier for us to advance our cause against the dreadful odds that confront us. We have in this regard a problem that does not afflict the Indians. Much of the intra-racial jealousy that serves too often as a millstone about the neck of the race has its inception in the color diversity of the Negro race. However deplorable, as a fact, this may be, we must face it when we urge that Negroes follow the Indians who threaten England in one of her critical hours.

There is a third reason. The Indians are indigenous to India in a way the Negro is not indigenous to America. Anthropology cannot think India without the Indians but it can think America without the Negroes. The Negro race is a transplanted race while the Indians are indigenous. The world, therefore, would bestow upon the Indians a sympathy it would never accord the Negroes, if they went on a sit-down strike or instituted a non-resistance program as a means of attaining their end.

Because of its millions and its unity of blood and color and its indigenous claims upon its people, the [illegible] that Indians run in delivering their land to a foreign conqueror is much less than that the Negroes would run in a similar situation. The Indians can overwhelm the invading Germans but Negroes cannot overwhelm the Germans across the sea nor their sympathizers here at home.

The final reason we cannot follow the lead of the Indians is we have no Black Gandhi to lead us! Our Negro leaders are too long on big talk and too short on sacrifice. Where can we find a Negro leader who will miss even one square meal for his race? Where can we find even one who prefers the loin cloth to broadcloth? Ye stall-fed "leaders," answer me!

ANOTHER PUBLICATION, ADVERTISING AGE, ASKS EQUAL OPPORTUNITY FOR NEGRO

CHICAGO.—(ANP)—Another name was added to the rapidly growing list of white publications clamoring for justice for the Negro when the weekly national advertising newspaper "Advertising Age," in its July 27 issue printed an editorial entitled "The Future of the Ne-

Said the editorial:

"Current discussion of the market represented by Negroes in the United States parallels increasing attention to the problem of our relations with the brown, black and yellow races which have been regarded by most Caucasians, at least in this country, as inferior. The objectives of this war, to spread the four freedoms to the far corners of the earth, will demand, our best thinkers agree, a change in our attitude not only toward the Chinese the Filipinos and the East Indians, but also toward the dark skinned citizens of our own America.

"The Negro has made remarkable progress in this country during the past generation. Better facilities for education and greater opportunities for economic advancement have given the colored population both the aspiration and the means to satisfy, in part at least, the benefits of our free and prosperous America. Yet it remains true that the condition of the Negro from the standpoint of literacy, health, crime and income, is still not what it should be, if he is to realize the hopes and ambitions of the leaders of his race, and incidentally become the important market for advertised goods which these millions of potentially important consumers might well be.

"No one could read Westbrook Pegler's recent burning editorial on the subject of the Negro boy who risks his life for his country in the armed forces of the United States, but returns to find the doors of opportunity closed to him, without being forced to admit that we have negleced one of our greatest human and economic resources. This is true not merely of the south, but of the whole country. Race prejudice is not the exclusive possession of any one section or sacrifices of American boys, black and white, then it would be ironic indeed if we failed to realize them fully in our own country. This does not mean social equality in the carpetbagger sense, but rather the chance for every American regardless of color to share in the unlimited opportunities for personal and economic advancement which the richest country in the world should offer to all of its citizens.

"The south has been accused of holding back the development of the Negro. Yet slum conditions prevail in the great cities of the industrial north occupied by Negro families just as they do in the south. Southern leaders have encouraged their Negro neighbors to advance along educational and industrial lines because of enlightened self-interest which realizes that educated, prosperous Negroes make better neighbors, better tenants and better customers. The same reasoning should apply to every section.

"We have the problem. Its successful solution will interest every American, but particularly those who realize that the Negro's improved ability to produce, to earn and to consume will make sounder markets and a stronger nation."

First Lady Speaks At Interracial Meet

The first lady, Mrs. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was one of the principal speakers defending the cause of American Democracy and the Welfare of Negroes at the general meeting sponsored by the interracial student group of Teachers College, Columbia University, Tuesday evening in McMillian Theatre, with Dean William F Russell presiding.

The meeting was the second of the three meetings that mark the climax to the lifetime of service Dr. Mabel Carney, retiring professor of education, Columbia, has contributed to the welfare of Negroes. Various angles on the Negro and Democracy were discussed by six speakers to a mixed audience of more than 3,000 persons.

Aside from Mrs. Roosevelt's plea for democracy were those of Mary McLeod Bethune, director of NYA; Arthur D. Wright, president, Southern Education Foundation; Walter G. Daniel, librarian, Howard University, and George S. Counts, Teachers College, Columbia University.

South Forms Front To Save Jimcroism

MONTGOMERY, Ala. – (FF)– Southern reactionaries, led by Governors Frank M. Dixon of Alabama and Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, have opened a second front in the US that will help hitler. They launched an attack July 23 on efforts of the President's Fair Employment Practices Committee to mobilize Negro manpower.

Dixon rejected a War Production Board contract for 1,750,000 yards of cloth because the contract had a clause requiring that there be no discrimination against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin." He said this was an attempt to end segregation of Negroes.

Talmadge warned in his political weekly, The Statesman, that any one who does not aprove of his jimcro laws "had better stay out of Georgia."

In Birmingham, Horace Wilkinson, one of Alabama's most active anti-union lawyers, began organization of the League to Maintain White Supremacy.

Wilkinson earned the hatred of the labor movement several years ago in his defense of goons used against striking iron ore miners, and he has since been associated with almost every anti-union movement in the south.

CONTRACT REJECTED FOR RACE PROVISION

Dixon Raps 'Federal Attempt To Abolish Segregation'

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 24.—(UP)—Gov. Frank M. Dixon, denouncing what he termed a Federal attempt to abolish segregation of races in the South, Friday rejected a contract proffered by the War Production Board under which cotton mills operated by the Alabama State Prison would manufacture 1,750,000 yards of osnaburg for the Army.

Dixon rejected the contract in a letter to Ralph D. Williams of New York, agent for the Defense Supplies Corporation. He told Williams he specifically objected to the clause in the contract which read:

"Under the executive order of the President, built around the same principle enunciated in this clause, the United States Employment Service has adopted policies the effect of which are to break down the principle of segregation under which white and negro races have lived in peace in the South all the years since reconstruction," Governor Dixon wrote.

"Under cover of this particular clause, the Fair Employment Practice Committee has been operating to break down this same principle of segregation of races, to force negroes and white people to work together, intermingle with each other, and even to bring about the situation where white employes will have to work under negroes."

DIXON CHARGES U. S. INJECTING RACIAL POLICIES

Cloth Contract Rejected When Agency Insists On Work Clause

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 23—(AP)—Gov. Frank M. Dixon, of Alabama, Thursday charged that federal agencies had adopted policies "to break down the principle of segregation under which the white and Negro races have lived in peace together in the South since Reconstruction," and criticized "those who seek to foster their own pet social reforms in a time of national crisis."

The executive's accusations, including one that the Fair Employment Practice Committee had intimated the U. S. government would force abandonment of race segregation, were included in his refusal to sign a contract with the Defense Supplies Corporation for 1,750,000 yards of convict-made osnaburg cloth so long as it contained a non-discrimination clause to which he objected.

The clause as set out in Dixon's letter to Ralph D. Williams, New York agent for the corporation, reads:

Objections Stated

Dixon told newsmen his primary objection to the clause was "the effect it would have under announced federal policy," and said in his letter to Williams: "

"Should we sign the contract with this clause included, we can expect the Fair Employment Practice Committee immediately to descend upon the state with the demand that Negroes be put in positions of responsibility in that (Corrections and Institutions) department in approximately the same proportion that the Negro race bears to the white race in Alabama. I will not permit the State of Alabama to be subject to the whims of any federal agency, and I will not permit the employes of the state to be placed in a position where they must abandon the principle of segregation or lose their jobs."

Release of Dixon's letter followed by one day a statement by Horace Wilkinson, a Birmingham attorney long at political odds with the governor, that "a Herculean effort is being made to break down and destroy segregation."

Wilkinson, speaking to a Bessemer civic club, said: "If there is room in this country for a National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, there is need of a league to maintain white supremacy."

Declaring he told a Defense Supplies Corporation agent he would sign no contract for the state's prison cotton mills which contained the "discrimination by seller" clause, Dixon addressed this explanation to Williams, "In order that our position may not be misunderstood or subject to misinterpretation:

"Under executive order 8802 of the president of the United States, which is built around the same principle enunciated in this clause, the United States Employment Service Division of the Social Security Board has adopted policies the effect of which are to break down the principle of segregation under which the white and the Negro races have lived in peace together in the South for all the years since Reconstruction.

"Under cover of this particular clause contained in war contracts, the Fair Employment Practice Committee has been operating to break down this same principle of segregation of the races, to force Negroes and white people to work together, intermingle with each other, and even to bring about the situation where white employes will have to work under Negroes. A careful study of the record of the Fair Employment Practice Committee hearing recently held in Birmingham disclosed that, however sincere the protestations of the committee members to the contrary, actually there was placed on trial the entire system of race segregation of the South, and that with the single exception of Mr. Mark Ethridge, of Louisville, Ky., there was no realization in the minds of any of the committee members of the basic necessity for any such system.

"The clear intimation was that unless the Southern people changed their way of living and abandon the principle of segregation, they would be forced so to do by the federal government. Unfortunately, the issue seems to be clearly drawn.

"The thinking white people of the South want the Negro educated and trained. They realize that by this process the per capita wealth and income of the region can be increased, the services of the local governments to their people made greater, the economic difficulties brought about largely by freight rate differentials be made less serious. They want the Negro race to be used, as it is willing to be used, to supply part of the necessary manpower for war and industry. They realize, however, from their familiarity with a problem which has been theirs for years, that these things must be done and can be done within the framework of the existing social structure. The present emergency should not be used as a pretext to bring about the abolition of color lines in the South.

"I regard it as extremely unfortunate that this issue should be forced upon the Southern people in a time when the very life of the nation is at stake. By every act and expression of theirs they have now, as always, proven their intense patriotism. In proportions that largely exceed those in every other section of the country they have voluntarily entered the armed services. If you will examine the casualty lists to date, you will find that a large proportion of them are Southern men. There should be no attack on the long-established institutions of any section of the country at a time when our sons are engaged in a life-and-death struggle with the enemies of the democratic way of life.

"Those of us who have long been friends of the Negro race regard the present attempt to abolish the segregation of the races as disastrous. The Negro has progressed only by the help of his white friends in the South. He can progress only by their help. The federal government in the past engaged once in the experiment of forcing Negro domination on the Southern people.

"It succeeded only in making the lot of the Negro far harder than it would otherwise have been, and to many of us it seems that the net result of the present attempt will be the same. When the lines are drawn, as inevitably they must be, unless this projected social reform is abandoned serious injury will be done to the whole cause of advancement of the Negro race, in which so many of the best men of the South have had such an intensive interest for so many years.

"The Democratic party in Alabama has as its motto 'White Supremacy.' I know of nothing which will wreck the Democratic party quicker in this state than any effort the result of which is to abolish segregation. As a Democratic governor, proud of the long traditions of the Democratic party, I am greatly concerned.

Problem Different In South

"The problem presents very different aspects in the South from any other section of the country. In the North there are comparatively few Negroes. But for us in the South the picture is greatly complicated by the large proportion of Negroes.

"In still another way the injection of the racial issue at this time is unfortunate. Maximum production is the desire of all of us. It can be obtained only by permitting those experienced in production to run their plants in the way they have found best. Attempts to interfere by bringing in social issues and attempted reforms at this time can only have the effect of causing bitterness and confusion, slowing down the production of the country, taking from the hands of the very men on whom we must rely to the plants their ability to run them efficiently.

"Under the circumstances such as outlined above, as anyone I hope can clearly see, it is impossible for the state of Alabama to sign any contract containing the clause set out above. The employes of the Department of Corrections and Institutions in Alabama are white employes. Based on past experience, should we sign the contract with this clause included, we can expect the Fair Employment Practice Committee immediately to descend upon the state with the demand that Negroes be put in positions of responsibility in that department in approximately the same proportion that the Negro race bears to the white race in Alabama. I will not permit the state of Alabama to be subject to the whims of any federal committee, and I will not permit the employes of the state to be placed in a position where they must abandon the principle of segregation or lose their jobs.

"The cotton mills owned by the state and operated by the Department of Corrections and Institutions are not operated primarily for the purpose of making money, but for the purpose of supplying useful work for the convicts. The sovereignty of the state over the operations of this department cannot be waived, nor can it be shared with the federal government or with any committee of the federal government. We are perfectly willing to enter into a contract for the production of goods, but the method used, the control of our employes and convicts, the housing and sleeping arrangements and all other matters in connection with the production of those goods must remain in the hands of the state.

"Please understand that the state wants to do everything that it can in the war effort. We will sign any reasonable contract with this clause eliminated and will do everything else on earth that we can to aid in this war. But we will not place ourselves in a position to be attacked by those who seek to foster their own pet social reforms in a time of national crisis."

The High Cost of Racial Segregation

The South Loses a Million Man-Hours a Day Keeping the Colored Man "in His Place" and Policing Other White People Who Don't Believe in It.

Down in Birmingham, Ala., last week the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee held a three-day hearing in the city post office.

And for those three days the entire time and energy of a U.S. marshal were occupied in seating the spectators who attended.

Equal rights to a Southern white man mean equal but separate. So this Birmingham marshal had to arrange his seats so that both colored and white would have front seats; some colored would be seated front of whites and vice versa.

An Elaborate Jim Crow Pattern

So he divided the front row, half for colored persons and half for whites. Then he put five rows of colored spectators behind the front white row, and three rows of whites behind the colored front row. There followed a back row of white and colored with an aisle between them.

The difficulty arose because white people got in the colored seats and declined to move and fair skinned colored people took the white seats.

The result was that this U.S. marshal was on the move ten hours each day, showing somebody out of one row into another.

At the close of the three-day session, he saw an AFRO editor making a sketch of his seating arrangements and showed an interest in it. He remarked that he was going home for a good rest conscious of the fact that he had done a hard job well.

Three Days Thrown Away

Perhaps he had, but all that he had done for three days was to throw away thirty hours of work that could have been better used in a defense plant.

And that is typical of the operation of racial segregation in the South. Otherwise sensible and decent Americans spend precious man-hours of work in "keeping colored people in their place."

For the separation of races is not something that can be done today and neglected tomorrow. The two races have so much in common that artificial lines can be preserved only by laws plus enforcement officers who are vigilant day and night.

That is what Booker Washington meant when he said, "You cannot keep a colored man down in the ditch unless you stay there with him."

The Golf Case

Consider one other case. Last week a Baltimore court was occupied two full days and one night until 11 p.m., with the hearing of a segregation suit.

Plaintiffs were members of a colored golf club. Defendants were the mayor and park board—that is the city government.

Here again for two days the entire time of a judge, bailiff, secretary, seven attorneys, twelve members of a jury, fifty club members, witnesses for golf clubs, members of the park board, in all perhaps a hundred people—2,000 man-hours—was utilized for what purpose?—to segregate colored people and to prevent them from playing golf in all city parks.

That 2,000 man-hours was time wasted last week. To get the whole picture, we must add other hours spent since 1934, when this golf case first began, and the hours yet to come as the city appeals the case to a higher court and eventually it goes to the United States Supreme Court.

A Million Man-Hours Lost Daily

Suppose we could measure the time Baltimore and Birmingham spend on cases like those mentioned above. Let us multiply that total by the number of villages and cities we have everywhere in sixteen Southern States. When we think we have a reasonable total, let us add the time at night the South spends in drawing up new methods of segregation and the equal or greater number of hours colored people spend in contriving means to nullify them.

If a million colored and white people in the South each day devoted only one hour to the segregation question, that would be a million man-hours.

Compare that with the 80,000 man-hours lost each day by strikers in the war industries during the month of May. Congress, the war leaders and the War Labor Board are bending every effort to reduce those 80,000 daily man-hours, and threaten anti-strike laws unless it is done speedily.

But the strikers are losing only a fraction of our wasted production hours.

Adding to the Total

Every third white man is a skilled worker. Only every eighth colored man is skilled. Only 4 per cent of the colored trainees in the South can get training in vocational schools. Every public facility in the South has to be built twice, once for colored and once for white. Who loses the more, colored people or the war effort?

We have thrown away our man-hours maintaining segregation for so long that some people cannot think of an America in which they do not have the privilege of hating somebody lower than themselves.

And so we have Mark Ethridge of the Louisville Courier-Journal saying that even the Axis can't force the Southern whites to abandon public segregation. The Baltimore Sun opines that segregation is above the law. That is what the South said about slavery in 1860. It was wrong then and it is wrong now.

Segregation Can't Win the War

Above the dull-witted din of the segregators a clear voice in the June issue of Fortune Magazine recognizes the realities:

> Discrimination is too costly. To keep a minority in its place is a tough job. . . . A perpetual irritation of the social tissues, it combines the discomfort of a troubled conscience with a high tax of inefficiency.
> In the consciousness of all peoples in the world, this war is being fought for and against the idea of racial superiority. America's Constitution, like Christianity, is based on the principle that every man is born with the inalienable right to equality of opportunity . . .
> Whether or not this assumption is realistic—we must either stick to it or change sides. Anything else would be not only immoral, it would be a military mistake. For men do not die for causes they are cynical about, and they cannot conquer on behalf of a principle they discount.

NEGROES, NORTH AND SOUTH

We have no part with those who are willing to surrender our constitutional rights by advocating the exclusion of northern Negro soldiers from the South for duty and training. So far as we can see there is no difference between the Negro, North and the Negro, South. The all-important question with us all is the enjoyment of our political and civil rights which are denied us both North and South. This denial which is aimed at the Negro generally, goes too far when it reaches the soldier in the uniform of his government. We contend that a soldier is the property of the government of the United States. We see hundreds of Negroes inducted into the services daily, we see them take the oath of a soldier to defend the country with their lives. They no longer are ordinary citizens. Their wills become those of their superiors and whatever they do or wherever they go or wherever they find themselves they are under orders of a government and must obey. Therefore, when we say that this discrimination against the Negro soldiers is carrying race prejudice too far, we mean just that.

We contend that it is the duty of the government to protect the soldiers in uniform against assaults and insults, whether such assaults and insults come from alien enemies or enemies at home. Uncle Sam has insisted upon writing a non-discrimination clause based upon race or national origin in government contracts for work. Surely the lives of the soldiers in uniform should be protected by the government as faithfully as Uncle Sam would protect a building contract. It has been argued or stated that the mistreatment of Negro soldiers in the southern states is a "God-given state right.". State rights can go just so far, especially in time of war. Therefore, because we are in the midst of a devastating war such as the present civilization has never before seen, we are calling upon the President of the United States to use his powers and set the Negro soldier free, both North and South as a war measure. We make this suggestion on the practical theory that the powers of the President in time of war are almost unlimited. Then, too, no one could seriously or logically object to an order or proclamation from the President setting the Negroes free in America and giving to them full citizenship rights at this time, thus sttting an example for England in her domination of India and also for the benefit of the Allied Nations who are fighting for a real democracy.

In order to save the Union of the States, President Abraham Lincoln issued a proclamation giving alms to 200,000 Negroes who were not citizens and by so doing the Union was saved. If Lincoln could issue such a proclamation and save the nation in a crucial moment, surely President Roosevelt, with all the power of the government behind him, can, in 1942, issue such a proclamation or an order banning discrimination against any citizen, but especially those in uniform, as a war measure.

Then, too, is not the South part of the United States as well as the North? Is it not true that should the Axis forces prevail and the citizens of this country become subject to whims and wishes of a foreign power, will not the people of the South be affected as well as the people of the North? Is it true (and it appears to be) that the people of the South are devoting the major portion of their time to fighting the Civil War again instead of putting forth an all-out effort to defeat the Axis powers. Is it true, as has been stated by some of her statesmen, that the people of the South would rather lose the present conflict to the Axis than to grant the Negro his civil and political rights?—We hope not. We hope that the people of the South will soon see the stupidity of their ways and change their attitude before it is too late.

Powerful Forces In American Life Aiding Colored America's Struggle

Large magazines with important circulations are printing articles keyed to improve race relations between colored and white citizens. The Ladies Home Journal, Fortune, The American, Advertising Age, Readers Digest, Colliers and The Saturday Evening Post, have carried excellent stories which were obviously printed to improve conditions between white and colored people.

PM, a New York daily newspaper, is on the firing line daily advocating the cause of the Negro. The Daily Worker does the same thing.

The motion picture industry is gradually changing its former attitude toward colored people. Pictures are being made which give colored actresses an opportunity to portray characters other than buffoons and idiots.

Even the comic strips are attempting to give colored Americans a "break." "Joe Palooka" and "Little Orphan Annie" are the ones we have observed. Keep in mind that Americans read comic strips more than anything else.

There is also President Roosevelt's Executive Order against discrimination on account of race or color in war industries Despite the fact that this order has not been enforced, there are indications that serious efforts are being made to make it effective.

Certain radio commentators and even some radio stations are championing the cause of colored Americans.

Powerful private individuals like Wendell Willkie and Pearl Buck are hitting the line hard on the side of colored Americans.

Many labor leaders are going all the way in their efforts to integrate colored Americans into industry.

Some people may say that all this is being done because of the pressure of the war. Be that as it may, the important thing is, that it is being done.

There is another side to this picture which must be looked squarely in the face. There are certain selfish Americans who, war or no war, desire to keep colored Americans in "their place." This group is headed by Gene Talmadge of Georgia, Frank Dixon and John Bankhead of Alabama, and John Rankin of Mississippi.

These men have around them a set of men who are determined to maintain their power by fostering racial prejudice. They are the most dangerous foes which Negroes and those who are fighting for democracy must face.

But the strongest element in American life is on the side of justice and decency, on the side where Negroes stand.

The searchlight is clearly upon Negroes. Our enemies say that Negroes are lazy, dirty, immoral, inefficient, boisterous, childish and unfit for equality with other Americans.

It is unfair to judge any race or group of people by the conduct of a few individuals within that group. That statement of a simple truth does not, however, meet the requirements of our enemies nor help our friends who are anxious to assist us achieve the goal of absolute equality under the law.

Colored Americans must crack down with everything they have on those within their race who would by their unseemly conduct destroy the progress being made.

The millions of hard working, thrifty, decent colored Americans who are determined to enjoy the blessings of full American citizenship, must resolve to assist those unfortunate members of the race, who think it is "smart" to be lewd, "loud-mouthed" and "show-offs", to a higher plane of life.

The march is forward! There is no question about that. But one thoughtless, foolish Negro can retard that march. No one expects, or should expect, Negroes to be cringing cowards. But there is a big distinction between cowardice and manliness.

It is just as important to work to raise the level of self-respect among Negroes as it is to blast the Dixons and Talmadges. In fact it is more important; because if the former is accomplished, all the Dixons in the world cannot stop the progress of colored people. As a matter of fact, the Negro-baiters are now gasping their final and last breath.

So far as we can see there is no difference between the Negro, North and the Negro, South. The all-important question with us all is the enjoyment of our political and civil rights which are denied us both North and South. This denial which is aimed at the Negro generally, goes too far when it reaches the soldier in the uniform of his government. We contend that a soldier is the property of the government of the United States. We see hundreds of Negroes inducted into the services daily, we see them take the oath of a soldier to defend the country with their lives. They no longer are ordinary citizens. Their wills become those of their superiors and whatever they do or wherever they go or wherever they find themselves they are under orders of a government and must obey. Therefore, when we say that this discrimination against the Negro soldiers is carrying race prejudice too far, we mean just that.

We contend that it is the duty of the government to protect the soldiers in uniform against assaults and insults, whether such assaults and insults come from alien enemies or enemies at home. Uncle Sam has insisted upon writing a non-discrimination clause based upon race or national origin in government contracts for work. Surely the lives of the soldiers in uniform should be protected by the government as faithfully as Uncle Sam would protect a building contract. It has been argued or stated that the mistreatment of Negro soldiers in the southern states is a "God-given state right.". State rights can go just so far, especially in time of war. Therefore, because we are in the midst of a devastating war such as the present civilization has never before seen, we are calling upon the President of the United States to use his powers and set the Negro soldier free, both North and South as a war measure. We make this suggestion on the practical theory that the powers of the President in time of war are almost unlimited. Then, too, no one could seriously or logically object to an order or proclamation from the President setting the Negroes free in America and giving to them full citizenship rights at this time, thus sttting an example for England in her domination of India and also for the benefit of the Allied Nations who are fighting for a real democracy.

In order to save the Union of the States, President Abraham Lincoln issued a proclamation giving alms to 200,000 Negroes who were not citizens and by so doing the Union was saved. If Lincoln could issue such a proclamation and save the nation in a crucial moment, surely President Roosevelt, with all the power of the government behind him, can, in 1942, issue such a proclamation or an order banning discrimination against any citizen, but especially those in uniform, as a war measure.

Then, too, is not the South part of the United States as well as the North? Is it not true that should the Axis forces prevail and the citizens of this country become subject to whims and wishes of a foreign power, will not the people of the South be affected as well as the people of the North? Is it true (and it appears to be) that the people of the South are devoting the major portion of their time to fighting the Civil War again instead of putting forth an all-out effort to defeat the Axis powers. Is it true, as has been stated by some of her statesmen, that the people of the South would rather lose the present conflict to the Axis than to grant the Negro his civil and political rights?—We hope not. We hope that the people of the South will soon see the stupidity of their ways and change their attitude before it is too late.

Powerful Forces In American Life Aiding Colored America's Struggle

Large magazines with important circulations are printing articles keyed to improve race relations between colored and white citizens. The Ladies Home Journal, Fortune, The American, Advertising Age, Readers Digest, Colliers and The Saturday Evening Post, have carried excellent stories which were obviously printed to improve conditions between white and colored people.

PM, a New York daily newspaper, is on the firing line daily advocating the cause of the Negro. The Daily Worker does the same thing.

The motion picture industry is gradually changing its former attitude toward colored people. Pictures are being made which give colored actresses an opportunity to portray characters other than buffoons and idiots.

Even the comic strips are attempting to give colored Americans a "break." "Joe Palooka" and "Little Orphan Annie" are the ones we have observed. Keep in mind that Americans read comic strips more than anything else.

There is also President Roosevelt's Executive Order against discrimination on account of race or color in war industries Despite the fact that this order has not been enforced, there are indications that serious efforts are being made to make it effective.

Certain radio commentators and even some radio stations are championing the cause of colored Americans.

Powerful private individuals like Wendell Willkie and Pearl Buck are hitting the line hard on the side of colored Americans.

Many labor leaders are going all the way in their efforts to integrate colored Americans into industry.

Some people may say that all this is being done because of the pressure of the war. Be that as it may, the important thing is, that it is being done.

There is another side to this picture which must be looked squarely in the face. There are certain selfish Americans who, war or no war, desire to keep colored Americans in "their place." This group is headed by Gene Talmadge of Georgia, Frank Dixon and John Bankhead of Alabama, and John Rankin of Mississippi.

These men have around them a set of men who are determined to maintain their power by fostering racial prejudice. They are the most dangerous foes which Negroes and those who are fighting for democracy must face.

But the strongest element in American life is on the side of justice and decency, on the side where Negroes stand.

The searchlight is clearly upon Negroes. Our enemies say that Negroes are lazy, dirty, immoral, inefficient, boisterous, childish and unfit for equality with other Americans.

It is unfair to judge any race or group of people by the conduct of a few individuals within that group. That statement of a simple truth does not, however, meet the requirements of our enemies nor help our friends who are anxious to assist us achieve the goal of absolute equality under the law.

Colored Americans must crack down with everything they have on those within their race who would by their unseemly conduct destroy the progress being made.

The millions of hard working, thrifty, decent colored Americans who are determined to enjoy the blessings of full American citizenship, must resolve to assist those unfortunate members of the race, who think it is "smart" to be lewd, "loud-mouthed" and "show-offs", to a higher plane of life.

The march is forward! There is no question about that. But one thoughtless, foolish Negro can retard that march. No one expects, or should expect, Negroes to be cringing cowards. But there is a big distinction between cowardice and manliness.

It is just as important to work to raise the level of self-respect among Negroes as it is to blast the Dixons and Talmadges. In fact it is more important; because if the former is accomplished, all the Dixons in the world cannot stop the progress of colored people. As a matter of fact, the Negro-baiters are now gasping their final and last breath.

Race Baiting Aids The Axis

ONE IS FORCED to wonder if the Rankins, the Dixons, the Talmadges and the Bilbos have seriously considered the disastrous world-wide effect [illegible] their bigoted and intolerant anti-Negro ravings have [illegible] the global struggle of the United Nations to transform from a beautiful dream to reality the brand, new world promised in the famed Four Freedoms pronouncement.

MACKAY

Surely they do not yet realize that their white imperalistic attitude forms a direct contradition to the very thing America is pledged to fight for. Can they be so stupid as to believe they can cling to fascism and all of its ugly ramifications right here in America, while thousands of our boys are spilling their blood and dying in every section of the world to stamp out this inhuman monster.

CAN'T SEE REAL ENEMIES

Are they so blinded by their intense hatred of black men that they cannot see the shadow of this country's real enemies, lurking with drawn [illegible] hand, to deliver the fatal stab in the back. None of these enemies have black faces. Their skins are white and golden.

The men with black faces, whom the Talmadges, the Rankins, the Bilbos, and the Dixons are so busily engaged in fighting and repressing, all stand on the side of the United Nations. They are ready to fight and die for freedom. They better than anybody [illegible] know what fascism means. They have lived under its evil shadow for lo these many centuries.

The unpatriotic disservice these men are doing their country has reached alarming proportions. This fact was never more forcibly pointed out than in a letter received by Lucius Jones, Atlanta Daily WORLD sports editor, from a corporal of the United States Army, written as he was entraining for he knew not where.

DISHEARTENED IN GEORGIA

This soldier writes: "I am a corporal in the United States Army and have been in Atlanta on what I think will be my last furlough. My mind at the present time is in such a low state of being that I fear as a fighting man I am just about all used up. Perhaps the Georgia political situation has revealed too much to me. How can I fight for a democracy which I have learned in the last few days does not exist? I have listened to Talmadge. I have heard him proclaim the same doctrine which my government is sending me to disprove in perhaps another land.

"I have heard that my native state, Georgia, will always deny the Negro opportunity for advancement. Why do they fight the Negro so? It is plain to see the governor is trying his best to promulgate a race riot. I fear for my relatives whom I am leaving in Atlanta. I read with alarm the letter Lindley Camp sent to his State Guards to be on the lookout for a race riot, calling on them to protect the white people. Does he as a high official of Georgia propose not to protect my mother and sister. I am supposed to die to save him from Hitler and Hirohito. That just doesn't make sense to me.

"Perhaps you are wondering why my mind is so befuddled. Well, I am still in my own beloved Georgia and the most disillusioned soldier perhaps in the army. I and many thousand of others who have any sense at all know that we are up against a [illegible] wall in bucking discrimination. We know that nothing will ever happen to improve our lot in Georgia and Alabama. We know what to expect when we get back.

PLEADS FOR RECOGNITION

"If no adjustments are to be made during these trying times, then what the devil can the Negro expect after we have destroyed Hitler? Only occasionally will you hear of the part Negroes played in this war. Then their valor will be censored just as the white press is censoring everything about us now. If I am killed or if any Atlanta boy is killed please give due honor and respect to his death. Please don't let our [illegible], courage and deaths go wanting for lack of recognition. Let the world know that we [illegible] that we held dear to protect some men who hated us, for a state that doesn't want us.

"They play us light, but I can assure you that if all the colored boys can get Talmadge, Dixon, Rankin and Bilbo out of their systems long enough you won't have to worry about the outcome of the war."

"When I return I hope to see some changes made in Georgia. I would like to see high schools for Negroes in every district. I would like to see some provision made for Negroes to study medicine, law, pharmacy and other professions. Every educational opportunity offered whites should also be offered Negroes with Negro teachers.

JIM CROW IN DEATH

"If I am killed I am positive I won't have to be bothered with Talmadge anymore as I am sure that God will not disappoint him and send him to a heaven with Negroes. God surely has a special jim crow heaven for Talmadge. No Negroes will be allowed in this heaven as heaven is too good for men with black faces.

"Well, my train is here and I am ready to meet my destiny, to offer my life as a sacrifice to the injustices about me. I am anxious to meet a Jap or two and a flaxon-haired Teuton to see if either of these two races dies the same as Negroes or do they die a different, special kind of jim crow death."

No more need be added to this letter. It tells in such simple language the kind of emotion the Talmadges, the Dixons, the Rankins and the Bilbos have kindled in the breasts of American soldiers, en route to meet the enemy. The letter, no doubt, could easily be multiplied by the many thousands of black men in uniform now serving their country in Ireland, Eritrea, India, Libya, New Guinea, Australia and New Zealand. Utter frustration is in their hearts, thanks to these men who have worked so hard to help our enemies.

OTHERS AFFECTED

And American Negro soldiers, are by no means the only sector of our allies affected by these anti-Negro outbursts. Suspicion is created by Talmadge and Company in the minds of the Chinese, the Indians, the Africans and the millions of black people to the South of us whose support our government is now so busily wooing.

On this first anniversary of the Atlantic Charter, they begin wondering whether the noble doctrine of the Four Freedoms is intended to protect the rights of all men, everywhere, or does it narrow and limit the guarantees of liberty to the conquered white peoples of Europe only.

Nothing the Axis propagandists have done has served to fan this smouldering flame of morale destroying doubt and suspicion among our dark allies quite as much as this bigoted racial diatribe of the Dixons, the Talmadges, the Rankins and the Bilbos.

So good has been their career as script writers of Axis propaganda, our enemies need only to quote their utterances verbatum to produce the desired disturbing result among the millions of darker people fighting on our side.

Why these men, who profess to be "all out for winning the war," can't see this is one of the most puzzling things of our turbulent times. Maybe they mean the now 70-year old Civil War. Surely they are not so simple as to believe America has the least chance of winning this war without the help and cooperation of these stalwart dark peoples, who outnumber whites five to one.

Rome, Ga. Editor Uses Paper To Belittle Negro

Editorial Raps Race Soldiers In Australia

ROME Ga. —(SNS)—The Rome News-Tribune went on record through its Monday, August 10, editorial column as saying that the presence of Negro troops under General MacArthur in embattled Australia is an "offense to Australians."

The editorial claims that "Negro troops are carried half around the world where they are not wanted and their presence is as source of irritation" by those who wish to curry favor with the Chinese and Indians and the colored people back in the United States. It said that "the whole fantastic procedure, including the determined drive to fasten racial equality upon the South, appears to have stemmed from a radio address made by a Japanese propagandist in Manchukuo on Mach 15, last."

In a front page editorial feature, the News-Tribune presents a picture of the Committee on Fair Employment Practices and calls Attorney Earl B. Dickerson and Milton [illegible] Webster, its two Negro members, "Chocolate Drop" and "Tar Baby." The paper accuses Georgia's gubernatorial candidate, Attorney Arnall of ignoring the challenge of racial equality as presented through the President's FEPC committee and commends Alabama's Governor Dixon's stand in refusing to sign a contract guaranteeing equal fairness in jobs on a federal defense project, to Negroes.

Countinuing, the News-Tribune feature says that practically every big magazine in the country has had some hand in the fight for racial equality and that the issue has been raised all over the nation, not in Georgia alone.

In the next day's issue (August 11), the News-Tribune cites the Nek York newspaper "PM" which stated in a recent feature that a report of the "Public Affairs Committee' at 50 Rookefeller Plaze, embracing a "Study of the Negro and the War" said that "race equality is a war issue."

No Reports Of Racial Trouble, FBI Declares

The Federal Bureau of Investigation and Department of Justice sources Wednesday denied that any reports of subversive influences among Negroes in the state had reached them.

The denial came in answer to an "alert" letter sent State Guards by Colonel Lindley W. Camp, who claimed that subversive agents in Georgia were attempting to stir up Negroes. Colonel Camp made public the letter Wednesday. It had been commented on recently by James V. Carmichael, white, of Marietta, former state legislator, who claimed the move as 'pure politics." Carmichael said that if there is any race trouble in Georgia, Governor Talmadge would be at the root of it.

Camp called upon the guards to "get the goods" on white or Negro agents and told "white ladies" to take no chances while alone, whatsoever. He said that there have been reported an unusual number of assault cases and attempts to assault white ladies and that "other communities have reported efforts on the part of Negro men and women to demand certain privileges which are not granted in Georgia and which will never be."

The Atlanta Police Department reported assaults and attempted assaults are the lowest in years.

Mr. Camp is supporting Governor Eugene Talmadge candidate for re-election.

Strange Lack Of Information

Speaking at Fort Valley the other day, Ellis Arnall, candidate for Governor of Georgia, made the statement:

That assertion reveals a degree of ignorance about what is going on that unfits Mr. Arnall for any office requiring a wide knowledge of conditions.

Indeed, it is almost unbelievable that any person capable of reading could be so utterly uninformed upon an issue that affects the South so intimately and which threatens such disastrous consequences.

Mr. Arnall should read the statement issued the past week by Frank M. Dixon, the quiet, conservative Governor of Alabama, in which the deadly nature of this menace to Southern civilization is made clear. For further light he might also get in touch with Congressman Joe Starnes, of the Dies Committee, and with the various Southern Governors who have come to the support of Governor Dixon, in his determined stand against permitting the South to be subjected to this monstrous wrong.

But Mr. Arnall does not have to leave the State of Georgia to discover something of this social equality movement which he says does not exist but which is recognized by every informed person in the South today. Let him read the most recent issue of Fortune Magazine in which a powerful boost is given to the social equality scheme and in which it is related with evident satisfaction that when a Southern boy at Fort Benning protested against being placed in the same barracks with Negroes, he was told to "get out and stay out" if he didn't like it.

This social equality move occurred in the State of Georgia and if Mr. Arnall doesn't know about it he should inform himself.

Again, if Mr. Arnall will go to the capital of the nation at Washington, where some of his support is coming from, he will find white girls being subjected to the indignity of acting as secretaries and stenographers to Negro officials in federal offices.

Documentary evidence of what is being attempted also is abundant. Mr. Arnall, by stepping into the office of any industrialist who is doing war work, may find copies of the contract that was so hotly and justly denounced by Governor Dixon, of Alabama, and will discover in black and white a provision under which no discrimination between races is permitted. This clause, as Governor Dixon has stated, opens the way for the social equality bureaucrats of Washington to come snooping into the South and demand that racial lines be abolished in the manner pointed out by Governor Dixon.

The drive is on and it means the end of civilization in the South as it is known today unless it is halted by the resolute action of such men as Governor Dixon a[illegible] patriotic and wise Negro leaders as [illegible] have arisen in this city to protest the[illegible] to disturb the pleasant relations existi[illegible]n the races.

Grist for Goebbels

ONE of the secrets of Henry J. Kaiser's success is his aggressive willingness to cooperate with labor, white and black. It is more than significant that the first Negro to launch an American ship was the wife of a Negro janitor in Kaiser's Portland, Ore., yard. This is the spirit which has shattered all production schedules in this yard by cutting the time of building ships from 253 days to forty-six days. Mrs. Walter Harris, the woman who crashed the champagne bottle over the bow of the Liberty ship, says she struck the hull twice. Once, to send the boat down the ways, the other time to demonstrate the determination of the Negro people to help win this war.

This is the spirit all America needs, particularly in the field of relations with the Negro people. This is what impelled a number of Negro citizens in Arkansas to defy Bourbon tradition, and to vote in the Federal elections for the first time in history. This is why, a few weeks ago, a group of white Democrats in South Carolina adopted a resolution urging that Negroes be permitted to vote in the Democratic primary. The imperative need for unity has brought the anti-poll tax movement in this country to its peak today, where but twenty-eight more congressional signatures are necessary to bring the Geyer bill out on the floor. But those twenty-eight signatures are needed, and everybody's congressman must be apprised of that fact.

The heritage of Jim Crow was apparent in the finding last week of the Federal Grand Jury at Sikeston, Mo., which, in effect, whitewashed the lynchers who murdered Cleo Wright some months ago. This lynching was one of the most brutal in history: the Negro was shot, dragged through the streets, hanged and burned. The Federal Grand Jury saw nothing that could be termed a "federal offense." It lamented, it deplored, but brought no action against the so-called law enforcement officials of the t[illegible], nor against the mobsters themselves. It is more than puzzling that Attorney General Biddle's office has not yet moved on [illegible]s case. Mr. Biddle's colleagues announced a long time ago that they "would take action." While they dallied, Willie Vinson was lynched in Texas, Jessie Smith, a soldier, was lynched in Arizona, and Roland Hayes, world famous artist, was assaulted in Georgia. This apathy hinders President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practices Committee; it threatens national unity. Moreover, it enables Herr Goebbels to mock American democracy over the air waves; it menaces victory.

Evidence of Barbed Wire

Of the pleaders for equality of negroes and white people in the United States, if not for racial amalgamation, The New Republic, a New York city publication which calls itself "Liberalite", is one of the chief, and therefore its editorial, which we reprint notwithstanding a scurrilous reference to Senator Byrd, has information for Southern people.

The American negroes are entitled to as fair and generous treatment in the Northern and Western states as they are receiving and, generally, have received, in the Southern states. At present they are for the most part excluded from the North and West, except their great cities, where they are segrated, courted and coddled by politicians for their votes.

The characteristic of the period in which we are living is movement. (The tire and gasoline rationing is temporary.) The migration of Southern negroes in the last twenty-five years was incidental to the movement of all sorts of people in all directions.

It will fulfill a natural destiny if half or two-thirds of the negro population shall leave the Southern states in the next twenty or ten years. The obstacle to it would be the refusal of the Northern white people of the rural districts and small towns to allow them to dwell in their neighborhoods.

Iowa, Nebraska, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Maine, Wisconsin would have tens of thousands of negro inhabitants if as immigrants they should receive treatment as kind as that which is accorded white immigrants in South Carolina, and if voting in "Democratic" primaries is a blessing, the negroes would enjoy that also in Northern and Western states.

At this time, the most serious check to the welfare of the American negroes is the barbed wire by which they are kept out of the rural districts and villages of the North and West. Of that the New Republic's article is substantial evidence. Negroes have not been "set free" to live, outside of cities and industrial centers, in the North and West.

NEGRO DISCRIMINATION REPORT CALLS RACE EQUALITY WAR ISSUE

"PM Daily"

Army, Navy, Unions Cited By Public Affairs Group

New York, N. Y.

By ARNO[illegible] BEICHMAN

The Public Affairs Committee, 50 Rockefeller Plaza, today issued a study on The Negro and the War, in which it declares that "'race equality is a war issue."

Summarizing its findings under Army, Navy, U. S. Government and Unions, the report recommends that:

Army—"Colored soldiers must be protected against physical injury and intimidation in the cities, especially in Southern towns near Army camps. where the soldiers go for recreation."

More Negroes should be given officers training. There are only 650 Negro officers in the entire Army. The Negro 99th Pursuit Squadron can train only 10 officer pilots a year.

Navy—Qualified Negroes should be accepted "freely" at Annapolis. Enlistment of Negroes in the Navy should be made a permanent policy.

U. S. Government—"A resolute and determined effort should be made to end discrimination in the appointment of Federal employes and to end discrimination in treatment after Negroes are appointed."

Asks Unions to Clean House

President Roosevelt should strengthen the Committee on Fair Employment Practice, which investigates discrimination in war plants, by enlarging the Committee's powers and finances.

Unions—"It is up to the unions to clean house on the color question in their own ranks, for the cleavage compromises their strength and prejudices their future."

The report was prepared by Earl Brown, a Negro and an editor of Life magazine, and George Leighton. associate editor of Harper's.

Praising FDR, Mrs. Roosevelt and Interior Secretary Ickes for their "convictions" on the Negro question, the writers, however, point out that most of the chief Negro Federal appointees in the Government do "not hold their jobs for the transaction of Federal business but as functionaries and advisers to deal exclusively with Negro problems." (the writer's italics.)

Lynching as Propaganda

The report discloses that last January, the Japanese broadcast throughout Asia how a young Negro named Cleo Wright was lynched in Sikeston, Mo. It says:

"The Japanese are acutely aware that the problem of color in the Far East is one of the pivotal questions in the war; they know why the Burmese scarcely lifted a hand to help the British and why the Indian leaders rejected the offers of Sir Stafford Cripps.

"They know that there are millions of colored people, yellow and brown, who have had all the white man's rule they ever want to see. . . . The designs of the Japanese themselves may be evil and malignant, but the record of the white man's relations with the colored man is so bad that it requires no particular skill to exploit it."

Refusal by factory-owners to hire Negro workers right in their own localities has thrown "employment out of balance throughout the entire country" by establishing "artificially created" labor shortages.

Georgia Editors Say:

THE DIE IS CAST.

(From The Americus Times-Recorder.)

Voters of Georgia now have a pretty good picture of what to expect during the next two months as candidates campaign for the various state offices.

Most interest, of course, centers in the gubernatorial race, which will be a two-man affair between Governor Eugene Talmadge and Attorney General Ellis Arnall. Most Georgians were hoping that the list of candidates for this high office would not exceed two.

The issue between the two candidates is clear cut. It is an important issue.

The issue is not over state's rights and the race issue, as one of the candidates would have you believe. Georgians are strongly of the same opinion in regard to the Negro question and that question ceased to be an issue years ago. Georgians will stand united against any effort of outsiders who, ignorant of the question, might strive to change our policy on the matter. So that is not the issue in this campaign.

The issue is whether the great state of Georgia wants a government of, by and for the people, or one by a dictatorial demagogue. Whether Georgia is to go forward in education and industry and regain the respect of fellow Americans from other sections of our great nation, or to lag and be the target for scornful, sarcastic and humorous jibes.

Ellis Arnall is a young, clean and energetic man with outstanding ability. He offers a program that is sound, ambitious, commendable and reasonable. The Times-Recorder is happy to lend its support to Mr. Arnall's candidacy.

Columbus Roberts Goes To Talmadge's Support

'Do Not Endorse All the Things Governor Stands for,' He Says Here

By KEN TURNER

Columbus Roberts, former commissioner of agriculture and one-time political opponent of Governor Talmadge for the governorship, Saturday was on record as favoring the re-election of Mr. Talmadge for a four-year term.

Mr. Roberts made this announcement Friday night as h introduced the Governor at weekly meeting of the Fulto County for Talmadge Club.

"Sound judgment demands support Mr. Talmadge," he said "And I invite my friends to join me in supporting him."

Mr. Roberts said he had given deep consideration to the matter and pointed out "I do not endorse all the things the Governor stands for."

Attacks Press

Governor Talmadge's address was a repetition of several others he has made during the campaign. He continued his attack on newspapers and newspapermen, whom he charged drew $48,000 from the "Rivers-Arnall administration;" lashed out again at gas rationing and charged "several of our plunderbund politicians want to abolish the county unit system."

"When you have a bought press and a subsidized press, freedom of the people is gone," he declared. "Freedom of speech, freedom of the press, can be nullified by intimidation and tyranny and freedom of the press can be stifled by a governor paying newspapers and newspaper reporters to write articles to fool the people on the true conditions of affairs in their government."

In pointing to the $48,000 which he said newspaper reporters were paid, the Governor said, "think of the old-age pensions that would have paid."

In tackling the gas rationing question, the Governor charged it "is drying up business in Georgia" and urged voters of Southeastern states to write their congressmen about "this terrible injustice that is putting men out of work"

Racial Issue Again

He said the rationing program was "sending business west to other states and cutting our own revenue."

Again injecting the racial issue, Mr. Talmadge said: "Who is it who wants to name the governor of Georgia? It is those who are interested in the interracial league outside the state. They want to intimidate us, threaten us, buy us and say, 'you must elect a crowd down there we want.'

"Georgia has never yet bowed to dictation from within the state, our outside the state," he added, "and she will not bow down this time."

The Governor reiterated the charge that Wiley Moore, Atlanta oil executive, "with some help outside the state" succeeded in having the price of gasoline raised 2½ cents per gallon "to build up a slush fund of $38,000,000 for his oil company and other oil companies."

He said Brack Blalock, road machinery company official, paid $335,000 income tax on profits made from selling road machinery to the state while Rivers was Governor.

"That is the reason he wants so desperately to get Arnall elected Governor and have Ed Rivers (former Governor) appointed chairman of the Highway Department," he charged. "He could then make $500,000 per year profit."

Defends Unit System

The Governor said that "plunderbund politicians" were seeking to abolish the county unit system of elections so "they could have a free rein to organize and have a boss in Georgia as has been done in other states."

"But as long as I am Governor," he said, "the county unit system will stay intact. The other crowd knows it."

While Mr. Roberts' endorsement of the Governor highlighted the meeting, a brief fist-swinging session between Georgia Tech students and Talmadge faithfuls enlivened events after the session.

No Police Report

The group of students, about 50 in number, staged a noisy but orderly demonstration after the session for more than a half hour and frequent shouts of "to hell with Talmadge" were heard as the youths sang songs and milled about.

Just what provoked the start of the fight was not determined. There was no official police report of the incident which slowed traffic in front of the Biltmore where the Talmadge meeting was held.

There were unofficial reports that some students were blackjacked, but this could not be confirmed.

Later, a "Talmadge for Governor" sign was torn down from the front of the Ansley Hotel. The Governor's Fulton County campaign headquarters are located in the Ansley.

USING HITLER TACTICS

Editor, The Journal: May I commend you on your general attitude toward the political situation in my home state.

It is pitiful when the youth of Georgia go, without reservation, to preserve American democracy, only to have the principles of Hitler in operation in our beloved state. We will fight, however, with the firm conviction that democracy will survive and continue to be a potent force in the world after the clouds of war have vanished.

God must save Georgia and all of us from intolerance and race hatreds now, as that is a basic factor of democracy. Hitler evidently used these very things for creating his dictatorship, and now Talmadge uses them in Georgia—to the disregard of the State and our everlasting shame.

As a former chairman of the Young Democrats of the Eight Congressional District of Georgia, I trust that the people of the state will not allow the money of corporations, or anything else, to elect Eugene Talmadge.

I believe in the intelligence of the people of Georgia and that they will elect Ellis Arnall to the governorship. Always a Georgian,

Paging Mr. Grafton

WHAT ABOUT AMERICA'S No. 1 WAR PROBLEM?

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

Mr. Samuel Grafton,
New York Post,
New York City, New York.

Dear Samuel Grafton:

I'VE just read your syndicated column "I'd Rather Be Right" in the Chicago Sun. This particular column took up the question of India and I thought you dealt with it in a forthright fashion. As a matter of fact I think that most of your material is pretty hard hitting and straight from the shoulder. However, I've got an argument with you and I want to have it out in the open.

Cayton

Here is the point! You've written in a liberal fashion about everything under the sun but the most important question in the United States and perhaps in the world today—the American Negro problem. You've shown plenty of nerve and courage in your column. It can't be that you are afraid to handle this hot potato. And you know about the problem (remember I wrote you about it a few months ago and told you about it at the party which was given for you at Hull House?) Well, even Westbrook Pegler is talking about it in pretty realistic terms. Why don't you get right?

CHIDES ALLIES ABOUT INDIA

In talking about India you said a lot of good things. You said that it was pretty hypocritical to talk about freedom for people under the Nazis without being willing to give India her freedom. You made fun of the English and American editorial writer who looked on India's demand for freedom simply as "making trouble." Then you said:

"Nehru, says, in effect, that there is no difference between his movement for freedom and the one going on in Prague; it is the English job to combine the two into one planetary cat-o'-nine-tails for scourging fascism. I agree, it makes my world make sense. A world that makes sense will win."

WELL, Mr. Grafton, does your own back yard make sense? You don't have to write about India or any other place if you want to find a place that should make sense yet makes nonsense. I'm not telling you what to write. I just wonder how you have overlooked what is happening in Georgia.

HAYES INCIDENT

Recently, Roland Hayes was beaten in Georgia because his wife didn't want to sit in the back of a shoe store to try on shoes. When it was brought to the attention of Talmadge, he stated that Hayes or any other Negro who didn't like to be treated like that could get out of the state of Georgia. A few days ago Negroes in Little Rock were told that they could not vote in the white primary elections even for federal candidates, in spite of the Supreme Court decision of 1941. Of course, this doesn't make sense and never did, but that's not the point.

THE point is this—Negroes don't like it. Of course, they have never liked it but that's not important. What is important is that they like it still less when they are fighting and dying to save the Checks from Germany.

PROPAGANDA FOR THE AXIS

The way Negroes are treated in this country is furnishing the Japanese and the Germans with a lot of propaganda material. A lynching in Sikeston or Texas, a housing riot in Detroit, barring colored people from the polls in Arkansas or beating up an artist like Hayes, hits the Tokyo radio as soon as it hits our papers. We can't convince the people of Asia, India or South America that our democracy means very much or that it isn't just another ruse to maintain white supremacy doing that. What people think of Negroes—whether they want to give them justice or not—is besides the point. The point is that the majority of our allies are non-white people. We can't win the war or make a better world order without their aid. How can we beat Japan's slogan of Asia for the Asiatics and lynch Negroes in the United States?

SOME Americans have discovered these unpleasant facts and have faced them courageously. Recently Wendell Willkie stated over the radio:

"It has been a long while since the United States had any imperialistic designs toward the outside world. But we have practiced within our own boundaries something that amounts to race imperialism. The attitude of the white citizens of this country toward the Negroes has undeniably had some of the unlovely characteristics of an alien imperialism—a smug racial superiority, a willingness to exploit an unprotected people . . . The moral atmosphere in which it (the internal imperialism) has existed is identical with that in which men—well-meaning men—could talk of 'the white man's burden.'"

Well, I don't want to labor the point, but what you were writing about in India, the imperialism you criticize in Great Britain, exists not only in Mississippi but just up the street from you in Harlem. Most newspapers, columnists and editorial writers have ignored it. That's to be expected, but "You Would Rather Be Right." Now that I've presented you with this problem, I hope you will deal with it and see if it is possible to make our own immediate world, not only make sense but become a bulwark for real democracy.

For Southern Independence

To The News and Courier:

Surely by now every Southerner knows that the desires of the Communist, the Liberalite, New Dealer and both major parties are to strike a blow at the heart of the South which would imperil our civilization. Both parties wish to become dominant through obtaining the negro vote. A drive us on to establish racial equality.

These Northern politicians are sowing the seed which later on the nation, but particularly the South, will harvest in grief. They wish to establish a policy of letting the negroes vote and protect them at the polls. It was the fear of that which for years has kept the South Democratic and hostile to the Republicans. Now, we find both parties getting more heedless of the South. It may soon come to pass that against our will, we shall have to form an independent party in the South and Border states, in order to preserve our way of life handed down to us by our ancestors.

We must not forget the dark days of 1876. We like the colored people. We know them, and they have not had in the South any trouble as recently happened in Detroit. We wish to continue to live on good terms with them, but not on the terms or under the conditions the Northern people who control the major parties wish to impose upon us. We must at least have a plan which we could use if we have to. We have little to lose. The Democrats have "us in the bag", hence do not worry about us. The Republicans naturally do not care for us as we never vote for them.

I would like to suggest a plan which seems to me to be workable and should be of great aid politically to us. Of course I realize that some our "Pay Roll" Patriots" will not approve of any plan as long as they are "getting theirs". Everyone knows that the difference between fools and partisans is that fools can't recognize the truth when they see it, and partisans are so blinded that they never see the truth.

Before presenting the plan, let me say that in the electoral college we, though in the minority, hold the balance of power. As many of you know, there are 531 electoral votes cast for a president. Therefore it takes 226 votes to elect. The "Solid South" has 104 votes, and with some Border states joining our plan we could get fifty-four more. On a basis of half these states, we would have 131 votes. We could get, with Maryland, plus the five border states, 148 votes. Certainly we would hold the balance of power. Do you know any party which would ignore 130 or more votes? My plan therefore is to put machinery in order that would enable us, if intolerable conditions make it necessary so to do, to break our shackles and become, for example, "The Southern Independent Party".

We could ask each congressional district to nominate a few of their very best men whom all would have confidence in, and in a first primary the one getting most votes would be their nominee. Therefore, in the second primary in South Carolina we would have six men, one from each district, and the highest vote obtained would be "Adviser of Federal Elections and Affairs" from South Carolina.

If the same idea is carried out in fourteen states, those picked men would study our rights and our needs, and every four years after the Democrats and the Republicans had nominated their candidates they would interview each party, cold as ice, and after getting their promises would, two weeks prior to the election, tell the South which one to vote for as president. Right now in the house and in the senate sit men who are listed as "Independent" or "Progressives"; so could our senators and congressmen serve their country and us. All the electorate would have to do would be to pledge that in national affairs they would vote as advised by our committee. Now, each man who was elected to serve his state would have to take an oath that he would never accept another public office or appointment. Also that during his service he would take no part in intra-state elections, or even give an indication of his preference for any candidate running for senate, congress or any other, be it state, city or county.

Before they are selected all names on the ballot in each congressional district shall be only those who agree not to solicit votes or have their friends do so. In other words this committee should be as aloof as a judge of the United States supreme court. We would thus become a doubtful area and no party would fail to regard us. In fact, we would live on the fat of the land. We would not vote for one party or another but merely for the one which seemed best to our committee.

In adopting this plan we could use our regular and present manner of conducting our state elections, and therefore this change in name of our party would not affect any officeholder from United States senator to the lowest office held by anyone, nor would it affect anyone's influence in the party.

Some will say, "Whom can you get that all would trust? We found Wade Hampton in 1876. We can find another.

Ala. Governor Stirs Race Issue

By ALABAMA TRIBUNE

Staff Writer

'I would rather suffer with my people for a season then to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter."

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(SNS)— We understand the South is our home, not only that, but it is the place where we were born. It is the old landmark of hundreds of hundreds of our people. Some of the oldest heads remember where they were born, at a big mulberry tree that set on the southside of Mr. A house. They will also tell you how good Miss B. (white) was to them just after slavery. They will tell you just a few years ago, colored men were state senators, making laws for you and me to abide by. Not long ago, our candidate, all voted out of those high position men who were heading the state at that time, tried to even throw our race back into slavery. But I am sure that they said like David when he was in bondage: "I would rather suffer with my people in season than to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter." But Moses continued to fight and at the end he won and led the children out of Egypt.

WE MUST STAND TOGETHER

As staff writer of this paper, I am telling you that no race or nation ever got anything unless they fought for it. I read a front page state article in Friday morning Advertiser from Governor Dixon who in many cases is the last word when it comes to State affairs. But in no case did the thinking people of Alabama, both white and colored, think that Mr. Dixon would turn a contract down that was offered this state because of the race question.

Sometime our leaders need to be pitied rather than scorned. I'm sure that Mr. Dixon was joking and didn't mean what he said when it comes to the races working together. I have charge of the third floor at 23 1-2 Monroe street and subrent it out to Labor Union of A.F.L. with Mr. William Lee as manager (colored) and daily hundreds of white people crowd in and ask for a job. I am sure that Mr. Dixon doesn't know this since he said, "As long as he is Governor no white man will work under a Negro." I voted for Governor Dixon and I thought at that time he was the man for the job. But today he has reached back in trying to stir up all the Southern states.

So far as race is concerned, Governor Dixon is like the Board of Education and the good white people of Mississippi when a large sum of money is appropriated for the education of both races in the amount of $75,000. In this particular place there were more colored than white and yet only $20,000 was probated for colored people. And last week an Editor of one of the papers in Mississippi wrote an article and in it he said: "We white people thought we were doing something when we failed to educate the Negro, but today our sons are being sent to war and many of them have already been killed while many Negroes have been turned down because of their education. From now on, I will always work to have the money divided equally, according to the population."

This is one of the states that Governor Dixon has invited an executive to meet with him in Birmingham. It may be that we will have to suffer for a season, but that season I am thinking will not belong.

A Study In White And Colored

The most important matter in our political situation at the present is the race question. We cannot be told too often that no question is settled until it is settled right. With an earnest desire to do my little bit toward a right solution of this problem, I write these lines.

First, I wish to call attention to the points of friction. When we see these points clearly we will be able to see the direction toward which we are to look for light to enable white and colored to live together in peace and harmony. To that end there must be a recognition of the facts that there are two elements in both races: THERE ARE GOOD WHITE AND GOOD COLORED; THERE ARE BAD WHITE AND BAD COLORED. A further fact must be recognized: THE WHITE NEED THE COLORED AND THE COLORED NEED THE WHITES.

After we have these fundamentals fixed in our minds, we must know where to look for our trouble. Our trouble does not lie between the good whites and the good colored, but between the bad whites and the bad colored. The good whites dealing with the bad colored will have trouble; the good colored dealing with the bad whites will have trouble; but the worst trouble comes when the bad whites deal with the bad colored. When this comes about both parties must suffer.

When we study this question carefully we will see that both whites and colored must realize in what respects we need each other. Speaking in general terms, the whites need the colored as laborers. We understand colored labor better than any other kind of labor and appreciate them more. To that end both whites and colored must know that labor is not slavery but liberty. That no one can go any higher or do any better than to be a servant, for Jesus himself said that he who would be greatest must be servant of all. Once we get into our minds the nobility of all honest work, we have gone a long way toward the solution of the entire labor question. Then the colored must realize as never before that they need the whites as employers. I can conceive of no more serious economic revolution than that whites should cease to employ colored. We have seen some indications of this already in the mechanized farm and in modern domestic equipment. Should this become universal, widespread suffering must come to our colored population. No government on earth could survive caring for all our unemployed colored people. Nor could the whites survive with no outlet for the products of the mechanized farm. If this should come to pass both the whites and the colored would thus destroy themselves.

Let me insist that this is the time for some cool and careful thinking on the part of both the whites and the colored. I can conceive of no greater enemies to their country than whites who foment hate for the colored or the colored who listen to the seductive voices that would lead them to sullen and spiteful hatred for the whites. I can conceive of no greater patriots than the whites who recognize the principle that the laborer is worthy of his hire and who do all in their power to improve the living conditions of the colored both physically and spiritually. Equally as great are the colored patriots who become better servants and gladly and happily cooperate with their white neighbors and employers in making this a better and more prosperous community.

What this country will be in a thousand years from now only God knows. We must leave the issues of the far distant future to the people who live at that time. Of one thing I am sure that the whites and the colored of THIS DAY must work out their present problems in the atmosphere of respect each for the other. Our best leaders, like our vegetables, are home grown, both the whites and the colored. The whites and the colored in this country have grown up together. This country is OUR country. We MUST oppose with all our might all divisive elements in both races. We MUST strive as best we can to produce the best whites and the best colored in the whole round world.—N. H. Williams in The Camilla Enterprise.

Dean Cocking Urged Training Of Negroes to Teach Negroes

By C. E. GREGORY

FOUR YEARS AGO a report on a study of higher education for Negroes in Georgia was submitted to the State Board of Regents, by Dr. Walter D. Cocking, former dean of the School of Education of the University of Georgia and outstanding victim of the Talmade purge last year.

I have just finished reading that report, containing 98 pages, and if there is in it any suggestion of the joint use of any school building by white and Negro teachers or pupils I would appreciate having it shown to me.

The report first points out that over one-third of Georgia's population consists of Negroes, made up of approximately 250,000 families. Slightly over three-fifths of these 250,000 Negro families live in rural areas, but there is a strong tendency to move to the cities, which Dean Cocking thinks should be stopped. So does Governor Talmadge.

Dean Cocking does not seem to be a partisan of the Negro race as a whole, even if he was born in Iowa. In this connection he says:

"The strain upon family stability caused by low and uncertain wages, the necessity of family efforts to increase the income, contribute greatly to family disorganization, ultimately characterized by nonsupport, desertions, failure to pay rent, evictions, overcrowding, illegitimacy, brawls, debilitating sickness and larceny.

"In both rural and urban areas there has been a definite assumption by whites of positions formerly occupied by Negroes. The decrease in the number of Negro tenant farmers has been accompanied by an increase in white tenantry; and since no improvement in tenant conditions has occurred, it is evident that the Negro is being pushed still further down the social and economic ladder.

"The occupational trend is away from agriculture to jobs in urban centers, where the majority of Negroes find work as casual laborers and domestics."

The report points out that there are only 193 Negro physicians and 92 Negro dentists to serve a Negro population of 1,071,125, or 5,549 Negro people for each Negro physician. Yet Dean Cocking does not suggest that the State of Georgia undertake to educate Negroes for the professions.

"The majority of the Negro schools, elementary and secondary, have only one teacher, and very few have over two," Dean Cocking reported. "Thus, 71.2 per cent of the Negro schools have only one teacher, 17.9 per cent have two teachers, and the remaining 10.9 per cent have from 3 to 20. The average number of pupils per teacher in the Negro elementary schools is 46.27. Approximately 50 per cent of the Negro teachers have county licenses only, 40 per cent have some college training and only 10 per cent have had four years of college.

"From the evidence which has been accumulated it seems clear that the chief objective confronting higher education for Negroes in this state for many years to come will be education of teachers. The training of teachers is the outstanding task confronting all of the Negro colleges.

"The education of agricultural leadership and homemakers is also important to the total development of Georgia, and facilities for such training for Negroes should be developed in the Negro colleges.

"The state should also accept the responsibility of providing adequate training in trades and industries open to Negroes in the Negro colleges.

"In addition, the state should accept the obligation of providing various types of adult education for Negro groups throughout the state. Such a purpose will become of more and more importance as time goes on. This purpose can best be satisfied in the main with the offering of various kinds of short courses, from one to six weeks in length, at the Negro institutions and through development of extension classes taught by members of the faculties of the various institutions.

"These then would appear to be the chief objectives which should be accepted in the development of the future program of higher education for Negroes in the state."

In other words, Dean Cocking recommended that Negro colleges train Negro teachers to improve Negro rural schools and keep Negro tenants on the farms, and that Negro farmers and their wives be trained in agriculture and home making to make them better satisfied and equipped for farm life.

What was wrong about that, Governor?

DR. AUSTIN AND CIO TELL NEGRO TO BE MILITANT

(By George F. McCray)

Chicago, July 2—(ANP)—In a fighting speech before a mass meeting of Negro and white CIO steel and auto workers at Pilgrim Baptist church, Sunday, the Rev. J. C. Austin again stated his position on Communism. After listening for several hours to the reports of Negro and white workers on their joint struggles to secure better social and economic conditions for Negroes, Rev. Austin took the floor.

"Every time somebody sees a Negro and a white man fighting side by side in fellowship, somebody cries 'communism.' Well, if that be communism, then I am a Communist.

"Nobody needs to tell me," Rev. Austin continued, "I know labor is the salt of the earth and as for me, I want to work with the toilers of this world."

The minister had a special message for the Negro toilers. "No matter how hard these white brothers work on your behalf they can't save you. The Negro will be saved when he learns to stand on his own feet. And he'll do that when he stops being afraid of dying. When we Negroes decide you don't mind dying," he shouted, "then we'll begin to live."

Walter Hardin, international union official from Detroit, described what organized labor had done for Negro and white workers of all ages in the Detroit area. He stated that the education of white workers is not a job to be done over night and that such anti-Negro, anti-labor organizations as the National Workers League, the KKK, and followers of Father Coughlin, are constantly appealing to the prejudices of [illegible] thousands of southerners now living in Detroit. He also claimed that K. J. Thomas, president of the UAW, CIO, used all the political power of the union and successfully forced local officials to protect Negro families moving into Sojourner Truth homes.

Others on the program were John Conyers, Wesley Thompson, Gleaves, Meno Collins, and Norm Smith from Detroit and Chicago.

EDUCATION IN GEORGIA

Editor, The Journal: Your paper published my article last week on the racial issue in Georgia, and I have received quite a number of letters favorable to what has been said. I have also received letters taking issue, and against what my article carried.

In the first place, I desire to state emphatically and in all sincerity, what I most desire, that the people of Georgia, regardless of race or creed, receive consideration from every viewpoint to which they are justly entitled. The constitution of Georgia is a safe guard to the best interest of her people, and with the educational advantages our state has been blessed with now for centuries, there is no doubt to my mind but that we have nothing to worry about from a racial issue, either within the borders of Georgia or through any influence that might arise from any other place or source. To bring out such an issue, it is nothing more than preying on the ignorance of one class and casting a reflection on another class. The real thinking Georgia people are capable of taking care of this issue without politicians bringing it up in the time of such an emergency as we are now confronted with.

"Fight" Is Against Separation

At a meeting of a colored people's society in Charleston one of the speakers said that "hundreds of white people have become interested in our fight to end inequalities". What "inequalities"?

The colored people have equalities with the white people in voting.

The white people have the same right to hold conventions and primaries, excluding negroes from them, that colored people have to exclude whites from one of their fraternal societies or from a church called "African".

The negroes surely have that right. The "fight" of negroes and their white political associates in Northern states to force their admission into a Southern white political party would, if it should succeed, be a preliminary step to forcing their admission into white lodges of the Woodmen of the World or of Free Masons.

The "fight" that is in progress to compel white people to receive negroes in their societies is a fight to break down separation of the races.

The News and Courier advocates justice to negroes and to all races. Any race, sect, order, has the right to engage in political or other lawful activities and to exercise exclusion from membership in it.

To say that a body of persons may not hold a political caucus or primary without admitting to it all other persons who apply is sheer idiocy.

To say that in Philadelphia white men may not, if they wish, form an exclusive white political faction would be to deny fundamental rights guaranteed in the constitution to white men and to negroes too

For Racial Harmony

This newspaper has long stood squarely behind the Negro in his plea for educational and economic opportunities. It consistently has advocated justice and fairness for him and has opposed those who have tried to prevent the attainment of these legitimate goals. It shall continue to do so in the belief that only in this way can the white man and the Negro man continue to live together in peace and harmony.

Yet The Eagle recognizes that a radical-inspired movement is now on foot which has as its goal, not justice and fairness for the Negro, but social equality and the removal of all Southern segregation laws. If carried to its logical conclusion this movement can have but one result. It will bring strife and sadness and tears that will divide the people of the South at a time when their united effort is needed to repulse an enemy which threatens the security of the entire nation.

To ignore the dangers inherent in any social revolution which will divide the South and revive old prejudices which have long been dormant is fool-hardy. The problem can best be met by bringing it into the open and discussing it freely and, above all, temperately, not by pretending that it is non-existent.

It has not been at the instigation of the South that racial relations have become a prime topic of discussion. Sane, level-headed Southerners, both whites and Negroes, are alarmed lest the hot-heads and the radicals create dissension where, for so long, there has been none. These are perilous times when the fate of the nation is at stake. It is not a time for hatreds and intolerances to divide us.

That this is recognized by the true leaders and friends of the Negro is amply demonstrated in a letter to the editor which appears on this page today. It is from Dr. D. V. Jemison, Jr., a Negro dentist who has practiced in Dothan for several years and who has won the respect and admiration of whites as well as the members of his own race.

Dr. Jemison's is a strong plea for harmony between the races. It will be sympathetically read by those who know how important it is for the white man and the Negro man to work together in peace and understanding.

While Dr. Jemison may be correct in stating that the thinking Negro does not seek social equality and would find it uncomfortable, there is a preponderance of evidence to indicate that many members of his race do have such a goal in mind. Without exception the Negro press has advocated social equality and the removal of all segregation laws and have encouraged its readers to use the war emergency to give force to their demands. These newspapers, encouraged by social-minded radicals who are ignorant of the consequences, are fanning the flames which are sure to consume those who play with them.

Racial relations have become a paramount issue for the first time since the days of Reconstruction because of the thoughtless mouthings of Mrs. Roosevelt and the little band of radicals and social reformers who surround her. Occupying as she does a high position in the nation, by virtue of being the wife of the President of the United States—a position which, incidentally, she has failed to dignify—she has consistently used her influence to destroy, rather than create, racial harmony.

Under the pretense of spreading more equitably among all the peoples the good things of democracy, she has launched a campaign to abolish Southern segregation laws and to encourage an unwise and terribly dangerous intermingling of races.

This newspaper knows, as does Dr. Jemison and the other informed members of his race, that the pursuit of these goals is as silly as looking for the end of the rainbow. There is no power on this earth that can bring it to pass. The tried and true friend of the Negro knows this to be true and trembles with apprehension when it becomes the play-thing of the thoughtless.

The Negro is happiest in the South, with all its short-comings. Here he is surrounded by those who know him and sympathize with his problems and share with him the economic plight of a region which has not yet taken advantage of its natural resources. It is the destiny of the white and Negro races that they live side by side in the South and work out their own salvation without outside interference. The South alone can find a solution to its own peculiar problems. Its people must stand together in telling the radicals and trouble-makers to mind their own business.

Such Negroes as Dr. Jemison can, and undoubtedly will, do much toward teaching the less informed members of their race how to recognize their friends and choose their leaders. That is the only answer to the agitators, that is the only solution to whatever "race problem" we may be threatened with now.

Turmoil

Trouble, bad trouble seemed brewing in the South as whites and Negroes made all kinds of forced adjustments to the changes in ways of living brought on by the war—and the Four Freedoms:

▶ The Southern Conference for Human Welfare, composed mostly of liberal whites, took a full-page advertisement in the Birmingham News-Age-Herald for an open letter to the President: ". . . There has been artificially created in the South grave racial tension. . . . Violent speeches filled with Nazi ideas and phrases are inciting race hatred and conflict. . . . A widely advertised campaign to revive the K.K.K. is preparing the South for organized racial violence. With grave concern responsible Southerners are watching the subversive efforts of irresponsible politicians who for selfish purposes are endangering the nation's war effort. . . ."

▶ In Mobile, Ala., Negro Private Henry Williams had words with white Bus Driver Grover Chandler. Police said the soldier was shot and killed after he had asked the driver to lift his suitcase off the bus. Driver Chandler, 29, was charged with murder.

▶ In Macon, Ga., during a quarrel between soldiers and Negro civilians, a Negro soldier grabbed a sergeant's pistol, killed a Macon policeman and wounded the sergeant.

▶ Federal officials started prosecution of two Beaumont, Tex. policemen accused of beating and shooting Negro Private Charles Reco after a fight that started when Reco took a bus seat reserved for whites. The charge: violating the soldier's civil rights.

▶ Colonel Lindley W. Camp, head of the Georgia State Guard, ordered the Guard to be on the alert for trouble: "There have been reported efforts on the part of Negro men and women to demand certain privileges which are not granted in Georgia and which never will be."

▶ But from the South Seas came a different note: For "heroic action at the risk of their own safety," General Douglas MacArthur awarded the Soldier's Medal to Negro Privates Julius Franklin of Charleston, S.C., Harvey Crandle of Greenville, N.C., and James Scott of Montgomery, Ala. Their deed: plunging through deadly gasoline flames to save a pilot from a burning plane.

By Gee McGee

A WORN-OUT SUBJECT

—There is no Negro Question in the South . . . except in the hollow-heads of a few demagogues, commonly called candidates or politicians. Such parasites feel that they can't be elected unless they stir up hate and strife between the races. Frequently a sufficient number of unsuspecting white folks are influenced to the extent of voting for and electing these wide-mouthed humbugs, and there-after — everything becomes quiet again . . . till the same "bunkem thrower" comes up for re-election.

—The Southern Negro does not want social equality. He wouldn't have it if he could get it. He wants his own church, his own school, his own lodge and his own community. The North does not understand the Negro. They never will understand the Negro until it is too late. Their feeling for him is a sympathetic one: he doesn't need or care for such sympathy, but he has to accept it because it is forced upon him. The Southern Negro in the South is not being imposed upon, except in very rare cases, as the Northerners think.

—The South no longer elects men to office who use as the principle plank in their platform the race issue. We no longer have many backwoodsy voters. They are all smart and they soon catch on to schemes and crooked political practices. A few yellow-tinted newspapers occasionally use the Negro or social equality morsel to attract attention to something that does not exist.

The South is the real home of the Negro. The climate suits him and the people who know him are willing to help him when he neds help.

—Our country has millions of worthy Negroes. With only a few exceptions—they are loyal citizens. One of the most outstanding men I ever had the pleasure of meeting is Dr. George Washington. Carver of Tuskeegee, Ala. He is indeed a humble and valuable man. I calle on him three times a few years ago and while talking with him for a

hour or so, I felt that I was in th presence of the most unusual Ne-

What the Afro's Closed Fist Means

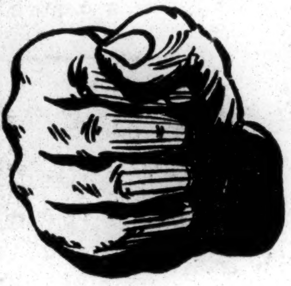
A fighter can't do his best with a sore finger— If any citizens have social equality we are for it.



This reproduction of a closed fist has appeared for several months in a conspicuous place on the AFRO's front page. What oes it mean? readers have asked ime and again. We take this neans of explaining. The closed fist stands for unity without which we cannot win the war. The flag, also carried at the top of page one, stands for loyalty, but patriotism can function effectively only if all citizens, like all fingers of the hand, work together as partners.

Uncle Sam has two fists and ten fingers. One of those fingers is colored, because we are one-tenth of the people of continental United States. Every tenth man or woman is one of us.

In ordinary times, when everything goes well, we neglect our fingers, but in a war we take no chances. We can't go into a fight to the death with a sore finger, or with one disabled from lack of use. The only way we can knock out the enemy is to hit him with all we've got. If we hold back because one finger isn't ready, we might get hit first and lose the war.

If we sock the enemy lightly in order to favor our sore finger, we waste the strength of the other nine fingers and prolong the battle.

Unity of Colored People

There are several considerations about this symbol of unity that are of interest to AFRO readers.

First it means unity of colored people. As in all races and nations, colored Americans are divided into liberals and conservatives. Usually the liberals are found in the North and conservatives in the South.

The reason for this is not that there is any difference between the colored people of the North and the South. The exact opposite is true. There is no difference between them. Ninety per cent of the people of the North or their parents were born in the South and a Southern conservative becomes a liberal as soon as he crosses the Mason and Dixon Line.

That is the line of hate. Generally speaking, North of it every colored person votes without hindrance, attends mixed schools, uses tax-supported institutions without segregation, and enjoys greater

C. C. Spaulding

Unity of colored people, therefore, is simple, because as C. C. Spaulding says, we all desire the same things.

Mr. Spaulding is the South's outstanding business man. Celebrating his sixty-eighth birthday, August 1, he might be expected to belong to the conservative wing. But whatever he thinks of methods, he is convinced that North and South, we stand together for the same ideas.

Unity with White People

But what of unity with the white race?

At present there is no unity, and it is no fault of ours. The majority of white people are willing to unite on the partnership basis with colored people. But a loud and intolerant minority restrains them.

The mayor of a big city squawked the other day. This is a white man's city and a white man's country. He lies, of course, because it belongs to all the people who are citizens and we know it.

Mark Ethridge, supposedly a liberal member of the President's nation-wide committee to see that minority groups are employed in the war industries, says he's for unity provided he can segregate colored people.

The average Southern white is for unity in the nation provided there is no "social equality" with colored people, and he becomes so emotional and noisy over this question that we ought to talk about it a little.

Social Equality

We begin by saying that the AFRO believes in social equality if it is anything other citizens have. We think we are entitled to all the public rights of citizens and therefore need no special arrangements made for us.

If mixed schools involve social equality, we are for mixed schools. In a free country no citizen needs special schools.

If intermarriage is social equality, we are for it. Free people choose their own life-time companions without any interference from the State. If God Almighty never intended humans of varied colors to mate, He would have made it impossible for them to do so. You cannot breed a horse and a cow.

Eating in Restaurants

If removing the "white only" signs from public conveyances, hotels, restaurants, and stores is social equality, we are for it. These institutions receive licenses from the public to operate; we are a part of the public.

If social equality means service on juries, holding public office, voting in primaries or general elections for public officials, using public parks and libraries, we are for it, since no State in the United States can legally give special privileges to any citizens.

If social equality means equality in civil service or membership in mixed labor unions or equal pay for equal work in government or government-aided enterprises, we are for that.

One-Standard Citizenship

In short, it is our belief that in every human relationship government can have but one standard—citizenship. If we are citizens, we are in. If we are aliens, we are out.

The only spot reserved for social equality is in the home, or private club which requires no public license to operate. Every citizen has the right to choose his own associates, and entertain his friends.

He has no right to express publicly his hatred for any other group of citizens, whether they be colored or Catholic, Jewish or Japanese, as long as they are Americans.

War Will Compel Unity

We have a long way to go to unity, just as we have a long way to go to win the war.

As defeats continue; as every citizen, no matter what his race, must continue to make sacrifices for victory, government will become less and less tolerant of internal strife, more and more insistent that equality citizenship means identity of citizenship.

That is what the closed fist at the top of the AFRO for. Unity of colored people, unity of colored te people, unity for victory NOW!

Talmadge Tells Negroes To Stay Out Of Georgia

"Birmingham World" Birmingham, Ala.

BY ASSOCIATED NEGRO PRESS

Eugene Talmadge, governor of Georgia, issued a public statement Thursday, in which he advised any Negro who objected to the state's segregation laws "To stay out of Georgia."

Talmadge made the statement in his political weekly, The Statesman, as a comment on numerous telegrams of "indignation" he had received after the brutal beating by police at Rome of Roland Hayes, internationally famous tenor.

"We are going to keep the jim crow laws and protect them and will not allow the whites and the blacks to be taught in the same schools and colleges in the state of Georgia," said Talmadge.

Whites and blacks in Georgia, he contended, approve of the state's separation laws in hotels, restaurants, and other public places.

PEOPLE'S FORUM

THE HAYES INCIDENT

Editor of The Citizen:

The following comment, based upon newspaper reports, may require modification when all the facts are known, but even if only parts of them are correct, the Christian people of the South should make protests.

I do not know Roland Hayes, the negro singer, except by the reputation which he bears as a singer. But the fact that he is a gifted artist is recognized by a considerable number of people. He must possess an appreciation of the finer things of life, and, in any world which preaches the Christian religion, should find opportunities to make the fullest use of his talents as his contribution to the social and cultural life of the nation.

The incident of his arrest and the treatment of his wife did not spring out of the teachings of our religion, nor out of the political philosophy upon which this nation is founded. We are in the midst of a great war to defend and save democracy, and to keep the religion in which we profess to believe. The greatest dangers to both do not lie in Europe, but within our own minds and hearts, and in a social order which denies in practice its high professions of belief. Such treatment as Hayes and wife are reported to have received in the state of Georgia springs out of that unregenerate nature which our religion declares must be changed. We should take to heart the fact that the incident took place in the section of country which claims to be the most religious in America.

There are many negroes in the South who are not capable of exercising all the privileges of a democracy, but there are many whose intelligence and character do entitle them to a larger share in our social and economic life. The negro is no more interested in what we generally call social equality than the white man is, but the negro is deeply interested in the educational and economic privileges which will enable him to develop some social life and culture among his own people—a state and condition which will make him far more acceptable to his white neighbors. There should be recognition of those negroes, who by their loyalty, industry, and ability make themselves good citizens, and capable of rendering a greater contribution to our national life. Common sense should tell us that a democracy which denies its privileges to a considerable number of its people will perish in time. Precepts which are accepted in principle but denied in practice have a way of retaliating by imposing upon their violators the conditions which they impose upon others.

There is, at the moment, some unwise agitation by some of the negro leaders, which will do more harm than good to the members of the race. But it remains a fact that educational and other privileges have given the negro some insights into democracy, and he is asking some very pointed questions. Some basic truth, and some fundamental rights lie back of those questions.

Some years ago I was discussing racial questions with a man, a prominent church member, in one of our communities which prides itself upon being very religious. I remarked that I was born in South Carolina, and had grown up with a lot of prejudice against the negro, but that after trying to be a Christian, even if a poor one, I had had to surrender a lot of that prejudice. Here is his reply: "What you say may be true, it may be Christian, but it is not the mind of the South. When it comes to a matter of choice on this question, I'll take the mind of the South."

That was a frank reply. It is difficult to put in within the Christian ideal, but it is the position, unspoken perhaps, of more professing Christians than we should like to acknowledge. Much of our organized life is built, not upon our professed religious and social beliefs, but upon a denial of them. Too often we have heard it said: "That may be Christian, but it will not work in business." "You can't be a Christian and stay in business." We preach unities and build barriers; we preach democracy and practice discriminations. In a word we say: "That may be the mind of Christ, but when it comes to a choice we'll take the mind of our group, or of our sections."

In theology, ritual, art, and in political philosophy we have set up some high beliefs, but we have failed to give them adequate expression in our social order.

In spite of much bad advice to the negroes from ill-advised leaders, there will be no uprising of the negroes. They constitute, on the whole, a most loyal section of American citizenship. They would render far more valuable service to the country were they given opportunity. But they have no need to seek retaliation. Vengeance lies within every act of injustice. Why are white men now dying all over the earth, and why are millions suffering the terrors of hell? It is because the people who have been in control of things have put into their social orders the things which their own high beliefs condemn—competition, race and group pride, prejudice, social and economic barriers: individuals, groups, and nations have pointed fingers of scorn at other groups, and hatreds have been aroused which culminated in war. It makes little difference that the thing headed up in the mind of a little man with a devil's brain; it headed up there because there was so much of the antithesis of Christianity and democracy, our professed principles, in the actual world social order. It had to come to a head somewhere, and it has come with frightful vengeance. For a long time we have been preaching a Fatherhood of God and a Brotherhood of Man, but we have not been acting upon our teachings in setting up our world. The white race, in its nurture of ideals of race superiority, while at the same time preaching the doctrine that in Jesus Christ there is neither Jew, Greek, barbarian, bond, or free, but all one, set up some contradictions which the present conflict is showing up—in all their brutal silliness. That idea has reached its climax in Hitler's absurd theory of Aryan supremacy. Modern science declares today what religion has always affirmed, that inferiorities of race are not biological, but due to lack of opportunity in environment. Any social, national, or economic systems which are going to be permanent structures must be built upon more enduring foundations than upon some of the absurdities which have gone into the present world order.

These comments have become too extended, and I may seem to have wandered from my point, but I believe that this treatment of one man, by one group of people, possessed of a certain idea, is symbolical of world-wide conditions, and that we are never going to have any better world until we bring religion out of the clouds, and into the world in which we live today. I am not asking for equalities which do not exist, nor for the enforcement of associations which have no basic elements of congeniality, but I am pleading for the application of our Christian teachings to social and economic life. There will always be war in a world built upon prejudice and injustice.

I, for one, am completely "fed up" on a religion which overlooks this life in its emotional and aesthetic predicition of a blessed Isle of Somewhere. Jesus came into this world to show us something about it, and how to live in it. It is a hard way, very hard—it is so difficult that we shun it by getting blissfully intoxicated about a world in the sweet bye and bye. It is the most "saved" people, who, unfortunately, are most violent in their race prejudice. Neither sawdust trails nor stained-glass windows can lead us into the Kingdom of God.

Talmadge Hates 'Home Journal'

Daily Worker
N.Y., N.Y.

Georgia's poll-tax Governor Talmadge doesn't like the Ladies Home Journal, says Mabe Kountze, in the Aug. 22 issue of "The Guardian," Boston Negro newspaper.

The reason isn't hard to find, Miss Kountze explains. She quotes the Negro-baiting Governor as complaining against the Journal for "preaching racial equality to housewives all over the nation."

And with such things going on, she says, the Governor is getting afraid of the ladies. After all, women can vote, even in Georgia. And if Georgia housewives get infected with those "racial equality" ideas, it's going to be tough on Talmadge.

The article in the Ladies Home Journal that aroused the Governor's ire was warmly praised on the Worker Woman's Page two weeks ago. Miss Kountze's comments deserve repetition. We therefore quote extensively:

"This latest rascal ranting from dear old Dixie," Miss Kountze says, "comes as a result of several brightly illustrated and photographed printed pages devoted to a colored U. S. Army doctor and his Philadelphia family featured in the current August issue of the Home Journal which you can buy at the store. If you haven't read, "Meet the Hinksons," you just haven't lived. . .

"There isn't the least particle of sports or sportsmanship in any attempts to insult the womanhood of a race such as ours, which is today sacrificing so much for and receiving so little from white democracy.

Fears Women's Vote

"Governor Talmadge and his ignorant ilk are fully aware that progressive white women, in vastly increasing numbers, are getting hep to the truth about this racial nonsense.

"The Home Journal, which has a cover slogan reading: 'The Magazine Women Believe In,' has at least a potential threat of reaching 32 million housewives in America. It'll reach deep into the South and deep into Georgia. It'll make the crackers sit up and take notice.

"Women voters can't very well believe in the success stories of colored Americans and the chain-gang doctrines of Talmadge at the same time. This will make Southern women voters pause and reflect. And the women vote is going to be powerful this year. . . .

"Insofar as Gov. Talmadge and his ravings on housewife equality are concerned, I believe both races can learn a lot from each other, and off-hand I would say that the white housewives of Georgia to points north, south, east and west, have not yet reached the "equality" stage with colored women, who in many cases reared the white ladies from the cradle and taught 'em all they know. This includes 'Southern cookin',' which is still done to a large extent by Southern housekeepers who are not white.

"So, Gov. Talmadge is already defeated in this domestic field of equality, and must turn to the field of society, where even in Georgia colored men are fast becoming high ranking officers, and colored officer wives, like those pictured in the Home Journal, must receive equal courtesies even from the Governor of Georgia.

"This, then, is the reason why Talmage objects to the Journal being circulated in Dixie. Because it cramps the Governor's style

"It may even someday force the Gov. to welcome a colored U. S. General."

WHAT ARE WE FIGHTING FOR?

"The Courier Journal" Louisville, Ky.

By HERBERT AGAR.

JUL 24 1942

5-6K

PEOPLE have been asking, Why doesn't this war produce a Tom Paine? Why haven't we a great pamphleteer? We have the greatest of causes, but no one has written about that cause with one-fifteenth the effectiveness of Tom Paine's Common Sense.

Why? Perhaps the answer is that most of us are afraid of our cause. No one can write a flaming pamphlet if he doesn't quite dare say everything in his mind.

If this war means anything at all, if we know what we are fighting for, the issue comes down to something as simple as "freedom for all." It is easy to talk about freedom for all; but it isn't easy to mean it. "All" is a big word. Some of us remember that the word was used in the Declaration of Independence, in relation to certain propositions that were said to be true of "all men."

In 1857 the Supreme Court of the United States wrote a long and famous opinion which was intended to prove that "all men" doesn't mean "all men"—in particular that it doesn't mean any Negroes. That was the opinion in the Dred Scott case. It was one of the reasons for the Civil War.

Nobody can write a good pamphlet about today's war, or a good speech, or a good newspaper article, until he decides what he means by the word "all." If we're not fighting for freedom for all, we're not fighting for anything that can be put in heart-lifting terms. If we are fighting for freedom for all, that phrase covers a lot of ground.

IT COVERS the American Negroes, and the Chinese, and the Indians, and all the colored peoples of the world, and it even covers the Germans. If we mean freedom for all, we can put that idea in terms that will excite men's minds everywhere on earth. But if we only think we mean freedom for all, while in fact we have no intention of treating most of our fellow-men as equals, we can only write something which will be another fine illustration of the white man's hypocrisy—another propaganda weapon for Hitler or Tojo.

These thoughts are suggested by Pearl Buck's magnificent new book, American Unity and Asia (John Day Company). Miss Buck is not afraid of our cause. She really believes in it; she has lived it for years; it is the passion of her life. She is therefore able to write in the great American tradition. She may turn out to be the Tom Paine of our world-wide civil war.

"It is a moral issue," she writes, "this principle of freedom for all, and as a moral issue it is the most practical in the world. If we have learned anything it is that without the capacity for moral integrity for a principle no nation continues to stand . . . When will we learn that greed and revenge and unjust power over human beings are the most costly and impractical things in the world?"

She reminds us that in our attitude toward our colored fellow-citizens here at home we display "the same curious blindness that none of us could understand in France." Just as the French didn't want to notice that their country was sapped with treason and disunity, so we don't want to notice that until we live up to the American idea in America we can't expect anyone to take it seriously elsewhere.

"EVERYWHERE in the world," says Miss Buck, "colored peoples are asking each other if they must forever endure the arrogant ruling of the white race . . . It is idle to say that the crisis is two steps off and let us attend first to defense and the present war. Crisis between white and colored is not two steps off—it is close, inextricably mingled with this war, because the war against Nazism carries race equality or inequality as one of its main issues."

We don't want to notice that in this war our own sins are coming home to roost. We want to simplify the war into the silly little story that three bad men have plunged the world into ruin. A world that can be ruined by three men isn't much of a world. There must be more to the story than that. And the "more" is that millions of men and women everywhere have begun to say in their hearts that the white man's democracy is a fake.

The only way to answer their disillusionment is to prove that it isn't a fake. We can't do it by talking about freedom for all. We can do it by living up to freedom for all. A good place to begin is in Harlem and in all our other neighborhood ghettos. And a good way to get the will to begin is to read Pearl Buck's book.

Negroes Want Economic Justice Not Social Contacts With Whites

"The Courier Journal" Louisville, Ky.

By David H. Bradford

5-6K

THE South delights to think of itself as different, as having peculiar institutions, and, most of all, it prides itself upon its dogged determination to persist in a way of life that time has shown clearly to be detrimental to its economic and political advancement. In the country at large, the South is regarded very much as one regards an eccentric relative. Having once made up its mind on the Negro problem, it refuses to admit the need or reasonableness of any re-examination of the question. This is tragic for the South. The Negro problem is at the root of most of its ills. To refuse to examine that problem in the light of reason is foolhardly. The South may be content to stand still itself, but the rest of the world is rapidly passing it by. A new philosophy of life is being formulated. If the South refuses to take part in its formulation, it will at some future day come to the unpleasant realization that it must live in a world in which it has no voice and in which it had no part in creating.

THE persistence with which the South refuses to recognize the signs of the changing status of world thought on the problems of race was evidenced recently in a speech at Bessemer, Alabama. A Birmingham attorney, speaking before the Kiwanis Club, urged the formulation of a "League to Maintain White Supremacy." In the present state of white opinion in the South, there is no more need to form such a league to prevent Negro progress than there is need to paint a lily. Reading the account of the Birmingham advocate's remarkable outburst, one is forced to wonder whether time stands still in Alabama. This is not 1860, and no amount of speech-making can make it so.

The attorney's uneasiness is rooted in ignorance of what are the hopes and aspirations of present day Negroes. What he fears most, Negroes want least. He need not disturb himself, intelligent Negroes are too proud to want to crash places where they are not welcomed. They know that they are not wanted at Kiwanis Club luncheons in Alabama. What the Alabama attorney does not know is that Negroes do not wish to dine at such festive boards. They do want, however, an opportunity to work at wages sufficiently high to enable them to live decent lives among themselves. This is literally true. Few white Southerners believe it. Doubtless, it would be a shock to many white Southerners to know just how little most Negroes prize their company.

MUCH of the unrest with which the South is confronted today, according to the Kiwanis speaker, is traceable to the activities of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. In his way of thinking, Negroes cannot advance unless white people are dragged down "to the level of the Negro." This is obviously untrue. Certainly the N.A.A.C.P. would not wish such a fate upon any people. Improvement of the standards of Negro life need not lower the standards of the community. Quite the contrary. The N.A.A.C.P. does not wish to deprive a single white man of a single privilege. Nor does it wish to intrude upon the privacy of any individual. It seeks merely to guide Negroes in their efforts to acquire the full use of the privileges and immunities guaranteed by the Constitution.

Advocates of white supremacy would like to have their notions incorporated in the fundamental law of the land. To gain their objective, they would change the principles upon which the Republic was founded and for which we are now engaged in a death struggle. They seem to have no realization of the inconsistency of their position. It is impossible to have one's cake and eat it too. Freedom cannot be destroyed on one hand and saved on the other. Talk of white supremacy is silly after Hong Kong and Singapore. Those who indulge in it fool only themselves.

Eight months after Pearl Harbor we are still playing the Axis' game. Internal disunity never won a war. Negroes on every hand are urged to forget their aspirations toward a better life until the war is won. If those who urge this are sincere, it would appear to be the course of wisdom to refrain, at least for the duration, from such reactionary speech-making as that at Bessemer.

President Roosevelt Accepts

In a stirring message to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in its 33rd annual conference held at Los Angeles, California, President Roosevelt made the following far-reaching statement: "As Chief Executive of this whole American Nation, I assure you that your Government will accept its responsibility to you." That is exactly what we wanted the President to say, that is exactly what he should say, and that is exactly what he should endeavor at all times to live up to.

The N.A.A.C.P., which has become a veritable "first line of defense," had for its challenging theme, "Victory Is Vital to Minorities." President Roosevelt went on to say: "I note with satisfaction that the theme of your significant gatherings reads, 'Victory Is Vital to Minorities." This theme might well be reversed and given to the Nation as a slogan. For today as never before in our history, 'Minorities Are Vital to Victory'."

To which we say, "Amen." And inasmuch as the President so frankly and pointedly accepts his and the Government's responsibility to the Minorities, of which they Negro is one of the most important and one which has had so many reasons to complain of lack of the Government's adequate responsibility, we do hereby voice for the Negro a rededication of the American Negro to the responsibility which he owes and will pay to the deserving Victory of the Nation. But we also pledge the President and the Government that we shall hold both of them to the complete fulfillment of their responsibility to us.

We want the President and the Government to know that more than 10,000,000 Negroes, who live in the poll tax states of the South, have little or no voice in the government. The representatives in Congress from these states have a responsibility to their Negro constituents, which they do not often realize or endeavor to accept. More and more the Governors of Southern States, like the Hon. J. Melville Broughton, of North Carolina, see this responsibility and are striving to live up to it. But the President can do more than anyone else, and if he will do what this acceptance implies, neither the South nor the Nation as a whole will have anything to fear from the Negro.

WHAT ARE WE FIGHTING FOR?

If we can't behave decently in our own lives, who do we think is proposing to give us a happy peace?

"The Courier-Journal"

BY HERBERT AGAR

Louisville, 1942

A CORRESPONDENT writes, "Could it be that Roosevelt is being played for a Wilson? Is it not logical to doubt a war that takes so much, destroys so much, and offers—what? Are the little men who fight the war fighting for the business men who may make the peace to suit themselves? Again? Are all those men to be sacrificed for only a few years of peace? . . . . . Does not the world want and need positive assurance of a definite, decent peace?"

The questions are heartfelt and they doubtless reflect the feelings of millions of our fellow-citizens. Yet I think the questions are misdirected. Of course the world wants "positive assurance of a definite, decent peace." But the world won't get it, because there is no power on earth which can give such assurance. Peace cannot be given to us by some power from the outside. It can only be earned by each one of us, by our daily conduct. If enough millions of us earn it, we shall have a peace that is worth having. If not, not.

The peace which will follow this war is being determined by the day-to-day conduct of all of us during the war. What we all do and say and think today will fix the limits within which we are able to act when the war is over. No government, however well-intentioned, will be able to overstep those limits. This is merely a round-about way of saying that only a first-rate people can have the privilege of living in a first-rate world.

It is one of the simplest rules of life that we become what we do. No matter what fancy words we use to describe our behavior, if our behavior is bad the results will be bad. The ends which we reach will be determined by the means which we use.

INSTEAD of saying that we want to be promised a decent peace, which is true but unintelligent, since nobody can make such a promise, we should be saying that we want a decent peace so ardently that we are willing to live decent lives in order to make such a peace more probable. How many of us are living such lives? How many of us are behaving in such a way as to make the brotherhood of man more real, democracy more possible?

It is vain to blame the present plight of the world on vague abstractions called "business men" who are supposed to have messed up the last peace. The business men no doubt contributed their share to that disaster, but so did everybody else. In the elections of 1920, the American people as a whole ratified the betrayal of 1919. On the 19th of November, 1919, the United States Senate rejected the Treaty of Versailles—a day we might well celebrate by flying our flags at half-mast. On election day, 1920, the American people gave Harding 16,152,200 votes, and gave Cox 9,147,353 votes. Cox stood for supporting the League of Nations and the American promises to the world; Harding didn't.

Harding was not elected by "business men." He was elected by a large majority of almost every group or subdivision in the country. It was not just business men who were callous and stupid. We as a people were callous and stupid. If we try to pass the buck, we thereby excuse ourselves for behaving just as badly a second time.

AS ONE who took a passionate part in the arguments of 1919-1920, I can testify that we as a people, the big majority of us, did not give a whoop for the future of the world in 1920, and did not think that the future of all the rest of mankind made a bean's worth of difference to us. So why blame anybody else for what has happened? Why not admit that if we had acted better we would not be in the bloody mess of today? Such an admission would give us a strong impulse to train ourselves at once, by our daily acts, to become citizens of a decent future, to become possible participants in a decent peace.

We are fighting for a second chance to create a world society in which the benefits of this earth and this civilization are shared with some equity among the members of the human race. The second chance will be wasted, just as the first chance was wasted, if we are still as selfish and as blind and as smug as we were in 1920. If we have learned from experience and made ourselves better men, the second chance will not be wasted.

How do we make ourselves better? Read Westbrook Pegler's column in The Louisville Times of July 16. It is an eloquent statement of our dirty conduct toward our own Negro fellow-citizens. Why can't each of us make this a personal test? If we really want "a definite, decent peace," if we don't just want somebody to give it to us, which is impossible, but if we want to earn it, why don't we each start fighting today to make our lives respectable on this one front? If most Americans began behaving like Americans in regard to the racial issue, that deed alone might be enough to change the face of the world.

If we can't behave decently in our own lives, who do we think is going to give us a happy world to inhabit?

SPIKE THOSE RUMORS.

(From The Sandersville Progress)

The daily press of the state announces that many rumors are being started in various sections of the state of race troubles. Of course there is no truth in these rumors.

Even in Washington county we have heard many rumors and each and every one we traced down, found not an iota of truth. The peculiar part about the rumors is that no one seems to know how or who started them.

We now have wartime regulations against starting false rumors that might excite or upset the morale of our people. Should the guilty person or persons be found who started the false rumors they face a long prison term in Uncle Sam's bastile.

The population of Washington county is almost evenly divided between the white and colored people. There has never been any race trouble in this county. The white people look upon the Negroes as part of their daily life and practically every white family in the county have Negroes employed. The Negroes appreciate the fact that they are dependent upon the white people for their welfare in life and are loyal to their employers. And the peculiar part of the wild rumors is the fact that the Negroes do not spread these. They never have. So every white citizen is urged to spike baseless rumors that may lead to aiding the enemies of our country.

A Courageous Position

To The News and Courier:

In her letter to The News and Courier what Miss Frost says on "Justice to the Negro" is very nice, humanistic and logical. She wishes to treat human beings as human beings on grounds that we cannot gainsay. It is to her credit as an intelligent, broad-minded and thinking woman that she has courageously advanced a step in our socio-political organization which she wants the rest of us to consider and take.

But the lady perhaps is n ot fully aware of the paraphernalia in which her seemingly simple step will demand to be set and the repercussions its adoption will bring about. If she is equally courageously prepared to face these, so also are the rest of us.

But the lady need not worry, neither should we, that the time is fast approaching when the step she wants us to take will take itself if we fail, but then it will be in a manner that none of us would like to face. Therefore we consider Miss Frost's proposal timely and it deserves a careful consideration of all thinking men.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL

THE PARDON RACKET The Chattanooga Times, in discussing the pardon racket in Georgia, points out that since 1939 Governor Prentice Cooper has pardoned 17 prisoners.

Governor Cooper has pardoned, in almost four years, [illegible] men.

Governor Talmadge pardoned, in his previous four years in office, more than 4,500 prisoners.

That is the nation's record.

Governor E. D. Rivers' pardons in the same period of years, are a poor second, being about 1,600 as against Mr. Talmadge's record of about 4,500.

It is easy to see why he does not care to discuss this issue.

Those more than 4,500 persons were not pardoned just for the pardoning or the exercize of the spirit of mercy. No one is naive enough to believe that.

The pardon racket is one issue which explains why the Governor berates the newspapers and seeks to engage newspapermen in a controversy to divert attention from the issues.

ANSWERING THE MAIL Considerable mail has arrived asking about the Governor's purchase of a farm a few months ago and his payment of $25,000 in cash (reportedly in 25 $1,000 bills) for that farm.

The purchase was made a few months after he began his term of office. I know nothing of the details. He did buy the farm.

As to queries about the facts of his attitude toward the national administration, those are well-known.

He opposed the AAA, which kept the bottom from dropping out of agriculture. He opposed the ruling which made it mandatory for the farm owner to pay a part of the benefit checks to the tenants on the farms.

He bitterly opposed, in public speeches and in his personal newspaper, the social security law.

He vetoed the old-age pension bill.

He vetoed the free school books law.

He vetoed the seven months school law which would give to the rural section of the state better education. And more education.

He has a hatred for President Roosevelt which verges on the fanatical. Back as late as 1935 Mr. Talmadge was saying in his paper: "His (Roosevelt's) nomination would be a great calamity for the nation." (The Liberty League poured the money in to him.)

As for newspapers—well, in 1935 he was charging that the "lying newspapers" were not being fair to him; that they were withholding the news. That's old stuff. And no truer then than now.

As for the query regarding the charges made by Ellis Arnall that crooks operate high in the Talmadge machine, I long ago learned that what a politician-on-the-run wants to do is to get a fight started on personalities. The names Arnall knows are available on court records. One appointee was convicted three times for theft; another for racketeering, another for petty theft and a fourth is wanted for beating hotel bills.

"NIGGER-NIGGER" In 1936, during his campaign for the United States Senate against Senator Russell, Governor Talmadge, then citizen Talmadge, raised the Negro issue and failed to get anywhere with it. He stoops to it when the going is hard.

This year he again is raising the issue, deliberately manufactured.

His method is subtle. And interesting.

He raises his hand to heaven and says, "As long as I am governor no Negro will serve as a foreman in a cotton mill over white employees."

Well, naturally not. That wouldn't happen no matter who was governor.

It is a trick to make at least some of those in the audience think such an idea has been proposed. It has not. The Governor knows it.

He follows the same technique when he says that as long as he is governor whites and colored children will not go to school together.

The Constitution of the state of Georgia forbids it. It has forbidden it since 1870. The legislature would have to change it along with a vote of the people to make such a thing possible.

Governor Talmadge knows that.

He hopes some of the hard-working farm people who hear him, and who didn't get a chance to go to school much in their youth because the governors like him vetoed bills for seven months of school, don't know that the state's constitution forbids it. He doesn't want them to know he is going to scare away what little farm labor is left.

He is on the defensive. He is attacking newspapers and newspapermen with any charge that comes to mind. He has two reasons. He does so because they are against him. Secondly he hopes to detract attention from his own record and the real issues.

No outside influences seek to run the University of Georgia.

He doesn't believe that himself. He is a power-drunk politician, willing to smear, swear falsely, or ruin the state university if it will get him votes. He wants four more years in office. He will stoop to any depth to attain them.

Two certain men had an opportunity to examine into his charges about attempts at racial co-education at Georgia. One was the late W. N. Ainsworth, bishop of the Methodist church in Georgia. The other is Dr. Harmon Caldwell, president of the University of Georgia, himself a Georgian.

Bishop Ainsworth, speaking in Macon last April a short time before his death, said the charges were false. He prayed that no political campaign would see the issue raised. President Caldwell spoke Saturday, saying the charges were utterly false.

Who will you believe? Those two men or Eugene Talmadge?

Asserts It's His Duty To Inform People Properly on Issue

ATHENS, Ga., Aug. 1.—(AP)—The University of Georgia's lot should not be made more difficult "by the circulation of false charges that its policies and teachings are contrary to the accepted traditions of our people," Dr. Harmon W. Caldwell, president of the university, said in a statement here today.

It already has suffered enough "from the prospective loss of its accredited standing," he said, and any statement suggesting that the university or members of its faculty encourage or favor racial intermingling or racial coeducation "is untrue and should not be believed."

Dr. Caldwell said he had hesitated to make any public statement for fear it would be construed as political in character, but added that the time has come "when I feel that as president of the University of Georgia I cannot longer ignore publication and radio addresses that attempt to create a wholly false impression regarding the attitude of the university and its faculty toward the problem of race relations in the south.

"As the head of the university and as the one immediately responsible for its administration, I deem it to be my duty to see that the people of Georgia are correctly informed on this issue."

His statement follows:

"It is contrary to my inclination to enter any political controversy. I have never been a candidate for any elective office, nor have I aspired to one. Even when the name of the University of Georgia has been bandied back and forth in political harangues, I have hesitated to make any public statement because I feared that it would be construed to be political in character.

Can't Ignore Issue.

"The time has come, however, when I feel that as president of the University of Georgia I cannot longer ignore publications and radio addresses that attempt to create a wholly false impression regarding the attitude of the university and its faculty toward the problem of race relations in versity and as the oneunietaoe the south. As the head of the university and as the one immediately responsible for its administration, I deem it to be my duty to see that the people of Georgia are correctly informed on this issue.

"I was born in Meriwether county, Georgia. My people came to Georgia from South Carolina in the 1820's. I was educated in the public schools of Georgia and was graduated from the Boys' High school of Atlanta and from the University of Georgia.

Taught in Schools.

"I taught in the public schools of our state and practiced law in our courts before becoming affiliated with the University of Georgia. My views on race questions are similar to those held by any intelligent southern man. I believe that I am in a position to judge whether or not the views and practices of the members of the university faculty are in accord with the traditions of Georgia and of the south.

"It is not my desire nor my intention now to enter into a detailed discussion of the facts of any particular case. The only case that has been specifically mentioned is one in which I have heretofore testified publicly. The accused in that case was vindicated by the board of regents of the University System before its membership was changed and was subsequently vindicated by the Southern Associtaion of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

Defense of School.

"The meaning of vindication by the Southern Association is appreciated when it is borne in mind that the Southern Association is composed wholly of southern educationl institutions like our own whose traditions and customs in racial matters are the same as those held by us in Georgia.

Defense of School

"The purpose of this statement is to undertake to defend the honored name of the University of Georgia by giving my unqualified assurance to the people of the state that there has never been at any time during my administration any effort to promote, encourage, or suggest the co-education of members of the white and colored races, the building on the university campus of dormitories for Negroes, or anything directly or indirectly looking toward the accomplishment of these ends.

"Any statement that suggests that the university or members of its faculty encourage or favor racial intermingling or racial co-education is untrue and should not be belived. The university is suffering enough from the prospective loss of its accredited standing. Its lot should not be made more difficult by the circulation of false charges that its policies and teachings are contrary to the accepted traditions of our people.

"The Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools was organized in 1895 at Atlanta, Georgia, by representatives of southern colleges and universities. Its membership is on a voluntary basis and its object, according to its constitution, is 'to establish helpful relations between the secondary schools and the institutions of higher education within the territory of the Association, and to consider all subjects that tend to the promotion of their interests.'

"Membership in the association has in the course of time come to be accepted as a badge of academic worthiness and carries with it accredited standing or recognition in the realm of education.

"That the university will suffer grievously from the loss of its membership in the association is inevitable. The experience of other institutions is sufficient proof of this statement. The university will lose many of its students and some of the best members of its faculty. The real tragedy, however, will be that the boys and girls of Georgia will have no fully accredited publicly supported college or university in the state to which they can go.

Entering Other Schools.

"There is already evidence that students who would normally come to the university are going to other states. It is probable that some boys and girls who are not able to pay the greater costs of attending other institutions will be deprived of a college education.

"The students and alumni of the university appreciate what accredited standing means to any college or university, and we should not discount their appraisal of its true value. If the university of Georgia loses its accredited standing for any considerable length of time, it is my sincere opinion that, in spite of all our efforts to carry on, our beloved institution will be threatened not only with demoralization but with disintegration.

"I regret that circumstances have arisen to make this statement necessary. I feel, however, that I would be grossly derelict in my duty to those who love and support the University of Georgia if I did not say that our beloved old university is still true to the traditions of our fathers and that its progress and well-being are largely dependent on its ability to maintain its academic standing in the educational world."

Dr. Caldwell Leading Educator

Entering the educational field shortly after completing his collegiate course, Dr. Caldwell rose rapidly until he became president of the University of Georgia System, and became one of America's foremost educators.

Born January 29, 1899, Dr. Caldwell received his A. B. degree at the University of Georgia in 1919; his LL. B., at Harvard in 1924, and was awarded an LL. D., by Emory University in 1935; Mercer University in 1935, and Tulane University in 1938.

He began his educational work in the Georgia public schools, giving that work up in 1921 in order to enter Harvard. During the years of 1924 to 1926, he was assistant professor in law at Emory University, giving up that work for the purpose of practicing law here.

In 1933, he was named dean of the Lumpkin Law School, a part of the University of Georgia, at Athens, and in 1935 was elected president of the entire university system.

He was one of the youngest men ever to be elected to head such a large educational system, being only 36 years old at the time he assumed the presidency.

He is a member of the board of trustees of the Berry Schools, at Rome, and for years has taken an active interest in the work accomplished in that institution founded in a log cabin less than half a century ago by the late Miss Martha Berry.

Member of Bar Groups.

He also is a member of the American, the Georgia and the Atlanta Bar Association, a Chi Phi, Phi Delta Phi, Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Kappa Phi, Omicron Delta Kappa, and Beta Gamma Sigma.

A native Georgian, he is the son of Lucius Alexander Caldwell and Lillie Dorothy Reynolds and was born on a Meriwether county farm.

He is a former president of the Association of Georgia Colleges and at one time was prominently mentioned as a candidate for Governor of Georgia, but he promptly spiked that by declaring he was of the opinion he could be of more value to the state as president of the University System.

Dr. Caldwell Speaks Out!

Dr. Harmon Caldwell, Georgia's own president of the University of Georgia, has a statement on the front page of today's Constitution. It is one issued to the people of the state.

Speaking to protect the name and integrity of the state's beloved University, he made these points:

1. The time has come when he, as president of the university, cannot longer ignore publications and radio addresses that attempt to create a wholly false impression regarding the attitude of the University and its faculty toward the problem of race relations in the south.

2. His purpose is to defend the honored name of the University by giving his unqualified assurance to the people of the state that there has never been at any time any effort to promote, encourage or suggest the co-education of membrs of the white and colored races, the building on the university campus of dormitories for Negroes, or anything directly or indirectly looking toward the accomplishment of these ends.

3. Any statement that suggests that the University or members of its faculty encourage or favor racial intermingling or racial co-education is untrue and should not be believed.

4. The University is suffering enough from the prospective loss of its accredited standing. Many students already have left. Its lot should not be made more difficult by the circulation of false charges.

5. If the University loses its accredited standing for any considerable length of time, in spite of all efforts to carry on, the institution will be threatened with not merely demoralization but disintegration.

6. The beloved old institution is still true to the traditions of our fathers and its progress and well being are largely dependent on its ability to maintain its academic standing.

President Caldwell is a native of Georgia. He was educated in Georgia. He has never sought any political office. He has never participated in any political campaign.

He speaks because of his responsibility to the people of the state who are being almost daily deluged with manufactured falsehoods and deliberate distortions of the truth for the purpose of arousing passions and prejudices in support of the Talmadge campaign.

It is the most false and shameful campaign in the history of the state.

It is so shameful that all persons who have the interest of the state at heart surely must be aroused to take a stand and to speak out against such a vicious and dangerous campaign.

The Constitution commends Dr. Caldwell's courage and his statement to the attention of its readers. When they have read it, it is commended to their minds and consciences.

Dangerous Time For Racial Issue

If there was ever a time when there was urgent need for calm wisdom there is such a time in this country now. Advocates of social equality for the Negro are using the war to advance their own ends. The vast majority who believe this country must be kept in control of the white race are equally determined.

Dissension threatens and Hitler must be cheered by the reports of this division in America, because it's right down his alley—"divide and conquer."

The question of the further advancement of the Negro in this country is one that must be solved, but there is only one sound and patriotic thing to do—maintain the status quo until the common enemy has been defeated. There should be no further effort to force the Negro into places of authority and prominence. Likewise there should be no effort to set him back at this time. Certainly the fanning of racial hatred is a poor service to the country in war. Every race, every creed and every color with American citizenship is needed in the war effort.

The South, where 90 per cent of the Negroes live, will never submit to the kind of equality that is being promoted in Washington, but this is no time for either side in this dangerous issue to force a decision. If we don't win this war we'll all go down, white and black. Yellow and aryan "supremacy" present no attractive future.

THE USE OF CAPITAL LETTERS

To the Editor The News:

For a long time I have been wondering why writers, editors and publishers can't get together on the use of capitals. In "the good old days" it was all very simple. All you had to know about it was: "Capitals are used to begin proper names, words of special importance and at the beginning of a sentence; also to begin otherwise common nouns when said nouns are personified." But now just let a correspondent begin such words as president, democrat, republican with lower-case letters and the editor will change the initial letters to capitals even when in so doing he utterly destroys the meaning intended.

Not long ago an article in The News referred to the President and the prime minister. Now is it really prime minister, Prime Minister, prime Minister or Prime minister? Which is the more important, prime or minister?

They used to say, "The months and days of the week begin with capital letters, but not the seasons." Now they begin the names of the seasons with capitals, while weather, which has all that the four seasons have to put out, and earth and sun, without which neither seasons nor weather could exist, must be content to begin with little letters.

Another curious error, much more common in the South (or south) than in the North (or north), is beginning of the term negro with a capital. Every day we run across some phrase such as "both white and Negro." Absurd because negro is Spanish for black. Wonder if it wouldn't be all right to have it read "both Blanco and black." Why not begin silo with a capital? It is a Spanish word. Those who think negro should begin with a capital ought to consult the leading encyclopedias.

'Chinese Deserve Better Recognition In War'-Bolden

JUN 20 1942

By FRANK E. BOLDEN

The role of China in the present world conflict deserves a better pedestal in the incandescent glare of publicity. Here is a colored ally of the United Allies, that has successfully held an enemy at bay, that had the "ups" on her in war-production and armaments whose vintage did not date back to pre-ancestral days.

Without the resistance of this ally, whose greatest weapon was spirit, the Allies might today find themselves "way on the outskirts of [illegible] as far as military bases in the Asiatic hemisphere are concerned. To her credit, it might be said that China has plugged the hole in the dyke and is patiently holding on until the Allied command can cut red tape and bring her the necessary aid that she has asked for, and which she so rightly deserves.

MR. BOLDEN

The first important victory of the United Nations upon the Pacific and Far Eastern war fronts was won at Changsha by the Chinese.

BRITISH REFUSED AID OF CHINESE

By her tenacious resistance, the Chinese have been able to keep a major portion of the Japanese forces occupied, so that the rest of the Allied forces could get ready to crush the treacherous bandits of Nippon. Over a million Japanese troops long engaged by the Chinese are not available for action on other fronts. This is approximately more than three times the forces engaged by the American, British and Dutch forces. China offered a vast pool of manpower and a vast continental theater of war.

China, from whom Britain and America in the past have wrested special rights and privileges, has not hesitated to help defend the British Empire. Britain once refused the offer of Chinese troops in the expected attack on Hongkong and Malaya. Hongkong surrendered, while Chinese troops converged upon the enemy from the rear.

Chinese military strategy shows bravery and foresight. The method of allowing the Japanese to advance through the previously parted Chinese lines, allowing the Japanese supply lines to lengthen, and then suddenly flanking them and closing in, has proved very effective. This shows the effect of the Russian military training, which incidentally has been used to satisfaction against the Nazi hordes. Adequately armed, the Chinese soldier is superior to his Japanese foe. The Chinese are willing to sacrifice space to gain time—time to wear down the enemy and build up their own army.

JAPANESE FEAR RUSSIA'S AID

By her aid to China, Russia has won the assurance that a Japanese attack upon the Soviet Far East would bring Russian and Chinese armies into instant coalition. This fact has greatly increased Russia's freedom to press vigorously her campaign against the Nazis. If Japan attacks Russia, Chinese and Russian armies together will have indisputable superiority in numbers and probably equipment over the Japanese forces in Manchuria, Korea, North and Central China. Of course the Allies must keep the Japanese occupied in the South Pacific at the same time.

During four and a half years, China's role in the developing world war has been to delay and exhaust the force of Japanese military aggression and to repudiate the aims of Japanese political tyranny. Her performance has been good, because she sees in a final Allied victory the recovery of her lost territories and the establishment of a free and independent nation. I think that she deserves all that she is fighting for, and I hope that she is not forgotten at the peace table.

War Helps Colored Group, Says Landon

JUN 20 1942

MARSHALLTOWN, Iowa. — (ANP)—The war has removed many racial limitations on colored people "which will never be replaced," declared Alf M. Landon, former governor of Kansas and Republican candidate for president in 1936, in a speech at the Elks' Flag Day meeting Sunday eevning.

"A stupendous problem ahead is race relations," he asserted. "Failure to adjust ourselves to the economic as well as the citizen right of colored people, along with labor problems, suspicion by the New Deal of business and by business of the New Deal, may well rack our country to pieces."

BOOK REVIEW

By THEODORE STANFORD

Jackson's International Almanac. Compiled by Samuel L. Jackson and Edward Atkinson. 94 pp. Illustrated. The Vanguard. New York City. 25 cents.

Jackson's International Almanac, subtitled "A Pocket Encyclopedia of the Darker Races", is a handy, pocket-sized repository of information concerning Negroes throughout the world.

The little volume contains much information of varied interest. Among the 21 separate sections of the book are those dealing with: athletics, religion, education, organizations, retail stores, insurance companies, marriage laws, newspapers, and population. In addition, there are facts dealing with: the abolition of slavery in the various parts of the earth; commissioned officers in the United States Army; members of the U. S. Congress; secondary education in the Southern States, and important dates in history. A section devoted to thumbnail biographical sketches is included. Specific data is given relative to Negroes in such widely dispersed localities as: the United States, Haiti, Ethiopia, [illegible], Senegal and the Union of South Africa.

Jackson's International Almanac is useful and informative. Because of its slight size, it is suggestive rather than complete, compact rather than comprehensive. It is worth many times the price of its purchase, and should be added immediately to the most-used shelf of every Negro's library.

Question and Answer

MRS. ROOSEVELT contributes a very interesting page to the Ladies Home Journal on which she answers questions put to her by readers of that magaine. In the June number, the wife of the President of the United States was asked: "Do you have colored blood in your family, as you seem to derive so much pleasure from associating with colored people. Would you approve of one of your children having as a most intimate friend a colored person?"

Because Mrs. Roosevelt is who she is, we would say that the question is impertinent. But the First Lady answered it in the completeness and humility which characterize her life.

To her questioner she replied that she only knew about her ancestors as far back as their arrival in America, and that during that period she had not discovered any colored blood. But, she observed, "if any of us go back far enough, I suppose we can find that we all stem from the same beginnings." She also told her interrogator that she had no feeling that the colored race is inferior to the white race, and that she would have no objection if a child of hers "chose a friend among the peoples of any race, regardless of color or creed."

We wonder sometimes if the people who raise these indelicate questions know anything about the history of the human race here in America.

Among "other than white" people in the United States are some four million persons, half of whose ancestors came from Europe and half from Africa. They have that peculiar ancestry because some people whose ancestors came from Europe "derived so much pleasure from associating with colored people."

Futher along in his speech he said:

Wants FD to Class Bias as Treason

CHICAGO. — (ANP) — A Presidential order making racial discrimination a treasonable offense was asked by Hugh E. MacBeth, prominent Los Angeles attorney, in an address before the Poble Club here Saturday night.

Mr. MacBeth also suggested the creation of a new cabinet position with a colored man as secretary of interracial affairs.

8-Point Program Adopted By March-on-Washington Group

JUN 20 1942

Following is the eight-point program that forms the blueprint of the March-on-Washington Movement, as enunciated at the gigantic mass meeting in Madison Square Garden Tuesday night.

1. We demand in the interest of national unity, the abrogation of every law which makes a distinction in treatment between citizens based on religion, creed, color, or national origin. This means an end to Jim Crow in education, in housing, in transportation and in every other social, economic and political privilege; and especially, we demand, in the capital of the nation, an end to all segregation in public places and in public institutions.

2. We demand legislation to enforce the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments guaranteeing that no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law so that the full weight of the national Government may be used for the protection of life and thereby may end the disgrace of lynching.

3. We demand the enforcement of the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments and the enactment of the Pepper Poll Tax Bill so that all barriers in the exercise of the suffrage are eliminated.

4. We demand the abolition of segregation and discrimination in the army, navy, marine corps, air corps, and all other branches of national defense.

5. We demand an end to discrimination in jobs and job training. Further, we demand that the FEPC be made a permanent administration agency of the U. S. Government and that it be given power to enforce its decisions based on its findings.

6. We demand that Federal funds be withheld from any agency which practices discrimination in the use of such funds.

7. We demand Negro and minority group representation on all administrative agencies so that these groups may have recognition of their democratic right to participate in formulating policies.

8. We demand representation for the Negro and minority racial groups on all missions, political and technical, which will be sent to the peace conference so that the interests of all people everywhere may be fully recognized and justly provided for in the post war settlement.

Nothing less than this program will afford Negroes their constitutional rights; nothing less will be an evidence of America's devotion to the democratic way of life.

THE RACE ISSUE

The race issue has raised its ugly head in the South again, brought on by the war in part but more by self-seeking politicians who wish to exploit the Negro for his vote and by Negro organizations who inflame unthinking members of the colored race with promises of political and social equality.

It is to the credit of some candidates for public office in South Carolina that they take public cognizance of this question and reaffirm the doctrine of white supremacy. Although the Democratic party in other sections of the country have deserted this principle of the party as well as States' Rights, the South is still determined to maintain the Democratic party as a white man's party.

The Georgia state home defense force has been ordered to be on the alert for possible race riots by the commanding officer of the force in that state. The order was issued on the basis of information received by him that certain individuals and subversive groups in the state are stirring up the colored race. This is another manifestation of the organizations that are abroad for this purpose.

Threatening letters sent to Eugene S. Blease, candidate for the Senate in South Carolina, by the Black Dragon Society serves to remind us that our state is not free from certain elements that are not conducive to unity.

Unless the Negroes are content to devote their energies to winning the war and refuse to follow the counsel of radical leaders, they will find the "social gains" they allegedly seek will boomerang.

No one wants to raise the race issue, but it is becoming an ever-increasing problem which cannot be solved by the ostrich-like policy of a few politicians who refuse to recognize its existence and seek to curry colored favor.

The Only Sensible View

(The Charleston News and Courier)

"The Negro Leaders Who Mislead" (the quoted words are a headline over an editorial article in The Louisville Courier Journal) are all, or nearly all, citizens of great Northern cities. The instigation is by and from these Northern negroes and has sprung from the increase of negro population in them. Their votes are courted by the Northern parties, Democratic and Republican. The national Democratic party is preponderantly a great city party; it carries the states dominated by cities and, in 1936, would have triumphed though never a Southern state had voted with it. The negro leaders are themselves misled—by white politicians.

This paragraph from The Courier Journal deserves to be read by colored people in the South:

"The Southern negro cannot afford to drive from his side, in his march to a greater fulfillment of his rights, the Southern white men of good will who have been his chief asset and his chief aid. He must recognize that there is no power in the world—not even in all the mechanized armies of the earth, Allied and Axis—which could now force the Southern white people to the abandonment of the principle of social segregation. It is a cruel disillusionment, bearing the germs of strife and perhaps tragedy, for any of their leaders to tell them that they can expect it, or that they can exact it as the price of their participation in the war."

Further The Courier Journal expresses the thought and wish of white friends of the negroes in the South:

"The decent Southern white man......if he is not willing to break down segregation—and he is not—can at least see that it is not achieved on the brutal standards of a Ku Klux Klansman....He can interest himself in the legitimate aspirations and demands of the negro population," as "the distribution of public utilities and public benefits, such as sewer and water connections .... public health and hospital facilities .... He can give the negro jobs and interest himself in full justice in the courts for the negro."

In those opinions and aims The News and Courier is in full accord, and it would go further to say that the white people in the slavery and free period of the negro race have done marvels of benefit to it. Never was a time when the negroes were profitable to the South, and its relative poverty is in large part caused by their presence. The proof of the saying is evident—in the North where negro slaves caused not even the illusion of wealth-production, slavery was soon abolished—though it persisted in New York and New Jersey to 1824 and 1844. Negroes created wealth for the few but never for the whole South or for a considerable part of its white population.

The present agitation is the result of the migration of negroes to Northern cities, in which they are more segregated as to residence than in the South, but where they are an asset to political parties.

In the South must be segregation, political as well as social, for the present at least. The two are not practically separable. Without this segregation, the South will not be habitable by white men.

Governor Talmadge Right About Social Equality Move

It is high time for Southern Senators and Representatives to wake up to the sinister implications of the things that are being attempted in the South at this time and to see that these perilous and provocative activities are brought to an immediate close.

Negroes of the North, finding a lot of craven politicians amenable to their desires, have succeeded in creating a condition under which white and colored persons at mixed indiscriminately in various departments at Washington, white girls being under the supervision of or having to take dictation from Negro men.

Now having gotten away with this sort of thing in the Nation's capital through the bluffing and intimidating of week-kneed politicians of the North, the Society for the Advancement of the Colored Race is now trying to put the same thing over in the South as a whole and it seems to have the full cooperation of the administration and the full support of Mrs. Roosevelt.

Committees of snoopers, like that which assembled in Birmingham Thursday to spy upon Southern industrialists, Southern labor unions and Southern school authorities, are out deliberately endeavoring to create a condition under which white and colored people will have to mix freely in offices, shops and elsewhere and also in the public schools that receive support from the federal government.

Meanwhile, under the instigation of these same social equality groups, Negro soldiers are being sent to Southern military camps, where white soldiers are forced to mingle with colored soldiers.

According to an article in Fortune Magazine in which the program of the Society for the advancement of the Colored Race is boosted strongly, the statement is made that at Fort Benning, Georgia, a white candidate in the officer's training school who objected to having to sleep in the same barracks with Negroes was told that "if he did not like it he could get out and stay out." That statement is on page 164 of current Fortune and it might interest Governor Eugene Talmadge, one of the few Southern executives who appears to have been alert to the sinister plot that it is sought to put over on the South.

Interesting, too, is the fact, according to Fortune, that this whole program looking to implanting Negroes among those of the white race, in all sorts of positions, had its inception in a hard-boiled bluffing of the President of the United States by a set of Negro politicians! The Fortune article relates that the order under which the social equality movement is now being pushed with such tremendous vigor, had its inception as follows:

"The President's proclamation would have caused much more enthusiasm among the Negroes had it not been so clearly THE RESULT OF PRESSURE. A. Phillip Randolph of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, had announced a general protest march upon Washington for July 1 (1941). A few weeks before the critical day, Fiorello La Guardia, then still in charge of the Office of Civilian Defense, requested them to call it off. When this was refused, the White House took the matter up officially. At a meeting with the President and ranking members of the Cabinet and the Office of Production Management, the suggestion of an executive order came from the Negro side of the conference table, and was coolly received on the other side. When only a few days were left for preventing an inter-national embarrassment, the Negro leaders were shown a first draft, which committeed defense industries but not the government itself. The Negroes stood pat. Finally the President agreed to include an order to his own administration. And the march was cancelled."

Fortune adds that it "was a compromise between hard-boiled pressure groups", but compromise or no, it led to the unbelievable conditions that have since been created in Washington and to the astounding crusade that is being conducted in the South today to fill offices as well as factories with Negro men and women and to force the entry of colored children in public schools.

In brief, the greatest emergency in the nation's history is being utilized as a vehicle for forcing upon the South intolerable social conditions that are wanted neither by the Negroes nor the white people of the South.

Georgia's virile, courageous and outspoken governor has taken the lead in trying to keep the educational system of the South from coming under the dominance of these advocates of racial equality and he probably is the best equipped of any one in public life to meet the current situation and, by boldness, frankness and devotion to the priceless principle of white supremacy, prevent this monstrous effort to saddle upon the South an intolerable condition.

The people of the South, white and black, get along nicely together and are fully capable of working out their problems without the intervention of insane reformers from the North who do not recognize dynamite when they see it. If these apostles of racial equality in the South are not told where to get off and persist in their inflammatory tactics they are going to start something they won't be able to finish. And it is time for some one high in authority to tell them so and to do it in thunder tones.

Guarding Race Harmony

Organization of the Inter-racial Committee of Bibb county, under the auspices of the Bibb county grand jury, is a timely and highly intelligent step towards the maintenance of those cordial relations between the races which have always been outstanding in this community.

The purpose of the organization has been clearly set forth and the personnel of the committee gives assurance that this purpose will be pursued with honest candor and good will.

The statement issued by the new organization says it cannot undertake to offer solutions of the many problems involved in the relations of the white and colored citizens of Bibb county. It cannot even undertake to act judicially to determine the right and wrong side in particular instances.

What it will endeavor to do is to prevent the rise and spread of animosity and to promote in the white and colored races alike "the earnest desire to live together in unity, peace and understanding."

Gen. Walter A. Harris has been named general chairman while representative citizens among the white and colored races of the county have been placed on the committee.

Meetings will be held on the first Tuesday of each month, to consider any subject incident to the committee's objective and special meetings will be called whenever necessary.

There is no good reason why the abnormal conditions created in military and civil life by the war effort should interrupt the harmony and good will which prevail among the better element of white and colored citizens and none but the better element, none but those who have complete understanding of our special problems, should be allowed to direct the course of those relations in the critical times that lie ahead.

There is welcome reassurance in the organization of this committee.

No Time for Experiment

The so-called "negro question" in the United States is primarily one of numbers and localities.

In Vermont and Iowa, in most of the states, is no negro question, for the sufficient reason that in them the negro population is so small as to be negligible—except in large cities and industrial districts where in recent years it has taken on an important political character. In New York city, Pittsburgh, Chicago, the negroes are a valuable section in the Democratic party—the saying of Mr. Justice Byrnes when he was a senator (January 11, 1938) that "the negroes are now in control of the Democratic party" is well remembered.

New York city has its Harlem where most of its negroes live. In the Northern cities negroes are for the most part residentially segregated. In the small towns and country districts of the North and West are so few negroes that no question arises.

In the South, every hamlet has its Harlem. The white people and the negroes are everywhere scattered. In the towns, the colored people prefer to live to themselves, and no friction or conflict arises about residence.

It is inconceivable that the federal administration will do anything to press this question on the South and cause issues unnecessarily to be raised.

In 1917-1918 separate camps for the training of colored commissioned officers were placed in Northern states. Thirty or forty commissioned officers, negroes, arrived at Camp Jackson. A colored officer, a Columbian, home on furlough from a Northern state, told the writer of this article of their arrival, saying that their presence had not been observed, that he thought that they had been sent to Camp Jackson by mistake, that if they remained trouble might follow.

The writer went at once to Governor Richard I. Manning and gave him the information. In an hour or less Governor Manning was in conversation by telephone with the secretary of war, Newton F. Baker, and in twenty-four hours the party of colored officers was sent elsewhere. So far as we know, the incident has not heretofore been mentioned in print.

In this great country is abundant room. In the South, racial separation is the rule. In the last thirty or forty years it has been more the rule than it was before. There is every disposition on the part of white people to treat the colored people justly, however that does not mean political or social admixture.

It would be easily within the possibilities for well meaning persons outside of the South to incite bad feeling in the South, now non-existant, between the races, by imprudent action. This is no time for experimentation. Experiments are often explosive. This is no time to play with abstractions, much as some few of the people in the North would like to establish their notions. The war is real. The sowing of dissensions in the South would be little short of sabotage of the national cause.

The probability is that in the nearly coming years the negro population will be distributed throughout the country. Let nature take its course.

The News and Courier cannot and does not believe that the Washington administration will at this time engage in strange expeditions into domains of embarrassment. The example of the Wilson war administration is before it.

Time For Real Thinking By People Of The South

SGH

Those in charge of the machinery of government in every country on ~~this earth have~~ learned one from another that by the skillful use of propaganda the emotions and feelings of the people over whom they rule, can be directed and controlled as water is ~~directed~~ and controlled by the nozzle on a hose.

Witness the American scene. One week every syndicated writer and every radio commentator is busy letting the ~~American people~~ know that the so-called democracies (Russia and China being by them included as democracies) will win the war by Christmas, that the Japanese fleet has been rendered impotent, that a great uprising is about to take place in Germany, with Hitler being overthrown, that Russia has practically destroyed the German army, that the submarine menace has been licked, etc. The next week we are informed, or events the knowledge of which cannot be suppressed, disclose to us, that there was hardly a scintilla of truth in anything we had been told.

Witness the British. The people there were told that Germany was being bombed to her knees, that the British army in Libya, equipped with the latest American U. S. Grant tanks, had surprised and trapped General Rommel and was preparing to annihilate him. Was this true? Well Tobruk fell in one day and five British generals with upraised hands surrendered thirty thousand British troops and about all the tanks we had sent them to an Italian (not German) general.

Is it any wonder then that people who are able to do a little thinking for themselves are beginning to take with a large lump of salt every bit of propaganda that is handed them? The trouble is not enough people will think for themselves.

Well it is high time that the native born white man and woman of the South began to do a lot of serious thinking for themselves. They should begin to ask of their congressmen and their senators, yes, even of their governors, this question: Are we trying to win a foreign war, or are we, under the guise of the war effort, trying to overthrow our form of government from within? There are numerous signs which indicate that alien groups in charge of many bureaus in our government are bent on destruction from within.

Let us be specific, Fortune Magazine carries a lengthy article in its June issue describing in detail and praising the efforts to break down the sentiment of race segregation in the South. With evident glee it tells of the forcing of the white boys at the Camp Benning Officers Candidate School in the state of Georgia, to sleep in the same room with Negroes and to eat at the same mess table.

Under cover of a presidential order a committee has just met in Birmingham to hear expert testimony, concerning what it terms racial discrimination in war industry. No skilled Negro workers, no colored foremen, no colored stenographers, no colored executives, they allege, are employed in Southern industry, and they cite the executives of certain of these companies to appear before the committee to show cause why this discrimination exists.

The Saturday Evening Post, which has thrown Benjamin Franklin's picture from its pages and which seeks to curry favor with the radicals by libeling, ridiculing and vilifying everything in the South, makes a studied effort to portray the governor of the state of Georgia and his wife to the nation as crude yokels, illiterate and held in power with the vote of white trash in Georgia, which it speaks of as the wool hat boys. By innuendo if not by direct statement, it is made to appear that Governor Talmadge has raided both county and state treasuries for his personal gain. The attempt is to discredit Talmadge for his opposition to entry of Negroes into white schools. Life Magazine carries in one of its late issues a picture of Rochester, the Negro comedian of the Jello program, together with his Negro foreman and white and Negro girls working under him in a parachute factory Rochester is operating for the government.

In Birmingham, perhaps in other Southern cities, dodgers have been thrown on the street demanding that certain of the schools be thrown open to Negroes as well as whites.

Why all this, we ask you? It all dovetails into one definite scheme to humiliate the white South, to do away with the color line and make a race of mongrel people for this foreign bunch to lord it over and govern.

Despite the fact that the national administration labels itself "Democratic" and came to power largely from ballots labelled "White Supremacy", despite the fact that Southern Democratic members of Congress elected by this "White Supremacy" ballot have held places of great importance in the national Congress, the Southern white man is the lowest down in the estimation of these bureaucrats and with less influence of any group within the nation's borders—that is except when giving of its youth to the fighting forces.

We believe that no where else in the United States is the Negro treated as well and so sympathetically as here in the South. The relations between the races are predominantly harmonious and pleasant. Certainly no where in this country are Negroes employed in such high proportion to white employes as here in the South.

Try to find a colored waiter, bell boy or maid in a New York hotel. The jobs are all pre-empted by foreign whites. Did you ever see a colored barber in a shop patronized by the white trade of New York? How many Negro coal miners are in the Pennsylvania mines? In New Jersey, even in the truck gardens, colored workers were stoned and run out because the Italians would not have them competing in this type of work.

Whether the radicals know it or not, this country is engaged in what bids fair to be the most desperate war of all history. In the words of Congressman Rankin, "The people of the South are behind every effort to aid this war and they resent these attempts on the part of Communists, policitians and firks to stir up race trouble from which the Negro ultimately will be the greatest sufferer".

A divided country cannot possibly hope to win this war. Why then are such persistent efforts made to break down Southern morale and thus divide the country? Do some thinking for yourself.

Georgia Guard Alerted Against Racial Trouble

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 11. (UP)—Col. Lindley W. Camp, commanding officer of the Georgia state guard, today made public a general order alerting the guard against racial disturbances throughout the state.

Camp said "suspected subversive influences" were attempting to cause trouble in Georgia and added the "same condition exists in Alabama, South Carolina and other southern states."

In the order, directed to guard unit commanders throughout the state, Camp said, "There have been reported an unusual number of asault cases and attempts to assault white ladies. Other communities have reported efforts on the part of negro men and women to demand certain priviledges which are not granted in Georgia and which never will be. These occurences are believed to be the direct result of the work of white agents and colored agents who seem to be active throughout the state."

U. S. Army "Fully Aware"

Camp said the U. S. army was "fully aware" of the order. The state guard was organized to replace the Georgia national guard when that body was taken into the army, and it operates under general army supervision.

Camp expressed himself in the order as "apprehensive" over the race situation, which he described as "growing in intensity."

Camp told reporters state guard intelligence had reported "numerous race incidents" throughout Georgia. He declined to go into detail.

~~In a public statement~~ accompanying the order, Camp emphasized that his action was nonpolitical, and that "I did not issue the order until I considered it my duty to warn the guard of impendng danger."

(Camp is an appointee of Gov. Eugene Talmadge, who in his campaign for re-election has stressed the "threat to southern tradition" by groups advocating "racial equality." Camp released the order for publication after Talmadge's political opponents referred to it in radio campaign addresses.)

Camp called upon every guardsman to assist in getting "the goods on these white agents, or negro agents, . . . and give the evidence to your nearest law enforcement agency."

"Warning" Is Asked

The order further called upon guard units to "warn the public without creating any excitement to join you in looking for these agents.

"Ask white ladies to take no chances whatsoever and to be especially careful when they are alone," the text continued, "You must be careful in the manner you use to warn them as we certainly do not want to create any confusion or undue alarm, but we owe it to our white ladies to give them this warning and protection."

Camp, in his statement, asked Georgia newspapers to publish his order in full for "the public to read and draw their own conclusion." He called upon all political candidates to help keep the guard out of politics "because we have duties to peform that just don't mix with politics."

'Racial Politics' Rapped by Paper Here 46 Years Ago

"All other political issues of the day, as far as the state campaign is concerned, have been dwarfed if not eclipsed by the controversy which has arisen over the now famous Duncan circular," an Atlanta newspaper, The Looking Glass, declared in the issue of October 3, 1896.

The yellowed sheet was brought to light Thursday by M. B. Lester, an employe in the city clerk's office, who discovered it in the office vault. It had been preserved by the late A. W. McClain, a worker in the city department for more than 26 years.

MOTHER NECESSITY

We are taught from childhood the wonders of Mother Nature, whose frown is the storm of winter and whose smile is the glorious springtime. Mother Nature has a companion who has long since become a mother, and her name is "Mother Necessity." Little is said from time to time about this grand old lady, but she is ever playing her part in the affairs of men and nations. If she were the "mother of inventions" only, hers would be a large place in the history of mankind; but she is more than this. She often shapes the destinies of the nations.

Mother Necessity drives enemies into each other's arms for protection at times in startling fashion. She often shapes the destinies of the nations. She set the north and south against each other in the civil conflict and beckoned to the white Christians of the north and pointed out the importunities of the freedmen and philanthropy surged in the breast of Northern Christians and our Christian colleges are the result. Mother Necessity is whispering gently in the ears of the south and nation saying, if thou wouldst thyself be saved thou must save thy brother in black;" and so there is springing up a generation of whites who are not willing to measure their "superiority" by color alone.

Mother Necessity has taken Negro soldiers to Austrialia, the erstwhile white man's land where the sign, "For Whites Only," has become more proverbial. What is more, they are welcomed with enthusiasm. The landing of Negro troops in Australia was at the behest of Mother Necessity and not Congress, reichs and parliaments. The only reason Negro soldiers are in Australia is because they are needed there! Mother Necessity!

Let us turn for a moment to much-maligned Russia. This country has been the Negro amoung the nations. There is no other nation that has borne such abuse and misrepresentation. The Russia of the Reds was a synonym for all that was politically and socially ugly and unorthodox. If once upon a time it was greater to have been a Roman than a king, in the case of Russia being a Russian was worse than being a slave.

But today how changed! Russia is the only hero among the nations! Treacherous Japan stabbed us in our backs. It is true, she should never have gotten to our backs—we had them turned while debating racial superiorities and inferiorities. Germany is playing the ignominious role of all-world brigand. Italy, the land of Verdi and Garibaldi and Michael Angelo, is becoming a hench-nation among the nations. Great Britain has become a specialist in successful retreats before "superior numbers" to "our own United States has become the victim of Wheelerism and Lindberghism." When we think of how congress "politicalized" while our defenses were not made sure; and while the lightnings of war were already striking before our eyes, they were bent on fettering our great President, it makes us sick at heart; and when we think that Pearl Harbor was made possible by this political tricksterism, we are inclined to be unforgiving towards the present congress.

When we realize that the real explanation of our plight in the Pacific was the refusal of congress to let the President dispose our military and naval forces as Mother Necessity required, we almost despair of democracy. But how different with Russia who saw what was coming and prepared; and thus becomes the saviour of nations. This country is bound up with Russia not because they love the Russians but because of the pleadings of Mother Necessity.

Some weeks ago the Negroes seemed irate because somebody wanted labels in our blood banks. The whites, of course, did not want to get the blood mixed lest some Negro blood found its way into some white person. Preference for Negro blood is by no means unanimous among Negroes themselves, and just why the Negro would want the white man to be indifferent to this matter is hard to understand. The white man, like the Negro, has a perfect right to say whose blood shall go into his veins. They are his veins. If the white man has scruples about his transfusions and the Negro has not, it is not his fault.

Let Mother Necessity settle that point. When Negro blood will save a dying white man he will take it lying down. If nursing at the breast of "black mammies" has not hurt the white man certainly a little Negro blood will not, although the said Negro blood is a terrible handicap in the twentieth century world. For that matter I do not want any of Wheeler's and Lindbergh's blood in my veins.

Let's have done with this "racial nervousness," that rejects common sense propositions and posits a feeling of inferiority ofttimes in silly resentments. Mother Necessity is at present whispering in the ears of this country saying "Let the Negro up and seize a Jap or a German instead." Mother Necessity has a hundred stunts to try out on the present situation, thanks be. Mother Necessity whether the daughter or mother of Mother Nature I dare not say. God bless her!!

THE NEED FOR CHANGING

By JOHN McCRAY
"Birmingham World" Birmingham, Ala.

Let's Make Up Our Minds

"What are we fighting for?" I don't mean what are we Negroes fighting for in this war. I mean what are we fighting for on the home front and as a minority racial group. Often. I find myself in violent disagreement with "our leaders" because of their inconsistent cy and ridiculous behavior.

"What are we fighting for?" came to my mind this week when I read that the NAACP had announced from New York City that it was opposed to the Sun Shipbuilding Co.'s new plant at Chester, Penn., where more than 600 Negroes are at work among themselves, on the ground that detailing Negroes in such manner was nothing short of "keeping the Negro in his place." Ere these many years I have thought that I didn't care where or for whom I worked so long as I had the opportunity to earn a decent living and apply my training to the best of my ability. These many years have I heard my "leaders" say that as a race we sought not to associate nor mingle, with the white people. All we wanted was the chance. Now, when the chance does come, when a special plant is built for us, we come forth with a howl which in substance says, "the job is good, the pay and the opportunity are good, but we want to rub elbows with the white people. We are either incompetent to build ships by ourselves or, we must have a white man to "boss," us or, a white man needs to be around to see how good we are." I say, "what are we fighting for?"

Perhaps, the most humorous and ridiculous case of "what are we fighting for" is that of C. C. Harraway of Arkansas who was convicted by an all-white jury for misappropriating, for his personal use, food supplies for pupils in his school. He argued that the all-white jury was prejudiced against him and the Negroes should have served on the jury. The court promptly impaneled an all-colored jury which convicted him on the charges as promptly and completely as the white jury. Mr. Harraway is now saying that the all-Negro jury mistreated him and that his rights as a citizen were violated by an all-colored jury. It should have been a mixed jury, he said.

I could cite other cases of this inconsistent behavior among our people. You can, also. Some of us don't seem to know what we want or, if we do, we are camouflaging our ultimate goal with "tricky" and confusing language. For myself, I don't care if I ever see a white man so long as I can plod along, make enough on which to subside and be left alone. I don't want to work alongside a white man, so long as I can make the same money by myself or among my own people. Workers at the Navy Yard in Charleston, in many other places and in factories and plants with whom I have talked, and who work alongside white people, tell me that daily their work is made unpleasant for them in a million different and subtle ways. Their word is enough for me.

"What are we fighting for?" Do we want simple opportunity or do we seek the white man's "society"?

Forcing The Issue

IT HAS BEEN SAID that they are our friends who know our faults and love us still. It could also be said with equal truth that they also are our friends who tell us the truth about ourselves without regard to whether this truth be fair or ugly. Of course we want most of all to hear the beautiful truth about ourselves but the ugly truth needs telling most of all.

Within recent weeks the Negro world has been stirred by statements coming from whites supposed to be friendly towards the cause of Negro advancement. Here in Richmond we have two white newspapers whose constructive attitude on the color question is a source of great pride and encouragement. One of these papers is edited by Virginius Dabney, one of the liberals of the new south. The cause of Negro advance never seeks in vain the support of Mr. Dabney's Times-Dispatch. He fought Ku-Kluxism to a standstill. He went all-out for the question of equalization of teachers' salaries. He never faltered before the challenge presented when Virginia had not yet assumed responsibility for the graduate study of Negroes. He has issued more than one stinging rebuke to Talmadgism in Georgia and elsewhere. He has advocated from the beginning the full integration of Negroes into the defense work. Whenever and wherever Mr. Dabney could tip the scales in the Negroes' favor he did so without equivocation.

ATTACKED BY NEGROES

Mr. Dabney recently delivered himself on the ominous outbreaks of race riots in the camps and what he said ran counter to the opinions of most Negroes. Negroes set upon him as if to rend him and their disagreement with him as ranged all the way from friendly criticism to an attempt to discredit him before Negroes and the nation.

All that he has done through the years to help the cause of Negroes advance was seemingly forgotten in an attempt to refute his thesis on the riot situation. Negroes had full right to disagree with Mr. Dabney, but it was not necessary to carry the disagreement to such ugly point as was in some instances done. Here is a man who has put his neck out for Negroes more than once; yet Negroes themselves seem bent on tomhawking him.

The way they "waded" into Editor Dabney is mighty poor encouragement for other whites to champion the Negro's cause, for they are warned that unless they say all that Negroes want said and say it the way Negroes want it said, they incur a blistering wrath. The easier course for a white person would be to let the Negroes paddle their own canoe, rather than put out their necks in Negro behalf.

CAME TO RESCUE

More recently Mark Ethridge of Kentucky has spoken after such manner that it can easily be construed as coming to Mr. Dabney's rescue. Mark Ethridge has exhibited one of the finest spirits in dealing with this all-vexing Negro question. He is one Southern white that Negroes have learned to esteem and trust. But Mr. Ethridge serves notice on Negroes that they need not expect any revolution in race relations during the war nor immediately after. He, like Mr. Dabney, fears that too much "hard pushing" on the part of Negroes will result disastrously unless there is greater caution. It is fervently to be hoped that Negroes will not try to decapitate Mr. Ethridge for his frank expression.

It is probable that both Mr. Ethridge and Mr. Dabney know something we do not know, and are trying to warn us in time. It might be well for us to take what these white friends say as essential information germane to the readjustments the war will make inevitable. Mr. Dabney and Mr. Ethridge are our friends; and we should hear them seriously rather than critically. They know what the silent group of whites is thinking.

MUST FACE FACTS

Some are saying that Roosevelt has an opportunity to be a Lincoln. What did Lincoln do besides sign the Emancipation proclamation? He did this for the same reason that Great Britain and the United States are in league with Russia-dire necessity. Mr. Lincoln's fiat did not free the Negroes because after nearly a century we are still far from the Promised Land. Mr. Lincoln signed the proclamation and turned the Negroes over to the south where they were jim-crowed, ku-kluxed and bushwhacked into subjugation.

The same thing will happen if Roosevelt attempts by fiat to settle in toto the Negro question. The painful fact remains that in the future as in the past the advance of the Negro must wait on the slow growth of an enlightened public opinion. Let us fight; but let us not fool ourselves nor let anybody fool us. This war is not going to settle the color question, nor any other question. This is a painful conclusion but it is better to face it than to face disastrous disillusionment!

A Lesson From the Front

Two races have lived together in South Carolina, ever since it became a state, in harmony and peace never enjoyed in any foreign country in which there existed bi-racial conditions.

In South Carolina one race has always been politically strong and the other has had no political strength. One race has been financially strong and the other financially weak. One race has been educationally strong and the other has had limited educational advantages.

Yet in spite of the aforesaid conditions the weaker, Negro race, has been friendly to the stronger. It has had no political advantages, but has trusted the white people to do what they could to relieve conditions under which it lived. And it must be said that the white people, crushed by the war that liberated Negro slaves in the United States, took hold of the Negro problem with determination to solve it in the best possible manner under all the circumstances.

Schools were built for the Negroes and teachers were employed from taxes levied by the whites upon themselves. It was years after the War Between the States before the Negroes in South Carolina were able to pay more than a small proportion of the taxes for education and for the general advancement of the race. We think the vast majority of the Negroes in the state appreciated the efforts of the white people to improve their condition, to help them step from slavery into freedom and progress as rapidly as possible.

And so, as we have said, the two races lived together in peace and harmony and in an atmosphere of mutual good will. We believe neither race would have those relations rudely disturbed. Now and then, in times of prosperity and times of depression, there may have been local signs of friction, but they were entirely local, and they always were resented and condemned by the majority of both races.

Nothing should be introduced in the life of the two races in South Carolina at this time when the nation is threatened by foreign enemies and the whole man power and energy of America are needed to protect the freedom and independence of the people.

The government has called representatives of both races for armed service and they have responded willingly. White men and Negro men are in the armed forces together on numerous fronts and in training camps in preparation for service at the front. Negro parents who are working in the homes of white parents have sent their sons to the Army to fight for a common country and they have sent them willingly.

Friday, a short news dispatch appeared in American newspapers. We quote it in full:

> Gen. MacArthur's Headquarters, Australia, Friday, Aug. 31 (AP).—Three American Negro soldiers who swam through a flaming river to rescue a fighter pilot "from death or serious injury" today were awarded the soldiers medal, the first time Negroes have been decorated in this war zone.
> The three, members of an engineer unit were Pvt. Julius S. Franklin, of Charleston, S. C., Pvt. Harvey M. Crandle, of Greenville, N. C., and Pvt. James Scott, of Montgomery, Ala.

Those Negro soldiers all were from Southern states. They were the first Negroes to win the soldiers medal in Australian fighting. One of them was from South Carolina. The white pilot they rescued by swimming a river covered with burning oil may have come from one of their states.

The Herald mentions the incident to illustrate the rank injustice and the danger of introducing the racial issue in the senatorial campaign in South Carolina. It was Judge Eugene S. Blease who did that and he deserves pity more than condemnation. We think he was unwisely advised.

As a newcomer in politics his novitiate developed a situation which we must believe Judge Blease already regrets. As we have said before, it is our opinion that he will continue to regret, whether he wins or loses Tuesday, as a hideous nightmare.

We are sorry for the Judge. We would not censure him in defeat nor could we congratulate him on success. He has not contributed to the winning of this war. He has not helped his state by making this racial question the outstanding feature of his campaign speeches.

Silent Parade Planned Here In Protest Of Recent Wave Of Violence Against Negroes

The execution of Odell Waller on July 2 described as a "legal lynching" by irate Negroes, followed closely by the mob lynching of Willie Vinson on July 16 in Texarkana, Texas, the shooting of Private Jesse Smith by a posse in Flagstaff, Arizona, and the beating of the noted Negro tenor, Roland Hayes and his wife in Rome, Ga., have brought a countrywide storm of protest from Negroes.

New York Negroes under direction of the local division of the March on Washington Movement plan a silent parade to the beat of muffled drums, Saturday, July 25 at 2:30 to protest this wave of killings.

A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March on Washington Movement, in a vigorous letter of protest to President Roosevelt declared, "Waller's electrocution has intensified a wave of determination for a showdown on the question of total democracy for the Negro which cannot long be held back by leaders who use the bargain and compromise method. It was the signal for the barbarous forces in this country to renew the unleashing of their venom of hatred upon the Negro people.

"With the world in the agony of a war for the survival of sheer human decency, the race issue in America is crucial to the whole struggle. These fascist-like brutalities in the United States are grist for the propaganda mill of the Axis powers and undoubtedly will be used to destroy the faith of the allied nations in the honesty and integrity of American democracy, and hasten the deterioration of the morale of the enslaved peoples of the world which hangs precariously on this hope," Mr. Randolph continued. "If the Negro is not given his full rights now, then the battle for Democracy is lost."

In announcing plan for the parade, Dr. Lawrence Erwin, president of the New York Division, March on Washington Movement, said: "We, want the world to know and particularly our Government, how the Negroes in Harlem feel about the electrocution of Waller, the lynchings of Willie Vinson and Private Jessie Smith in Texas and Arizona and the brutal beating and jailing of Roland Hayes. There will be more Wallers and Vinsons and Smiths if we let those things go unchallenged. No Negro is safe anywhere."

Parade To Union Square

"The March on Washington Movement, Dr. Ervin continued, "is dedicated to fighting all forms of national oppression perpetuated against the Negro. We intend militantly to show to white America that the evil of the poll tax system which fosters these lynchings and beatings shall be buried in the same grave with Odell Waller."

Wearing black mourning arm bands and carrying signs of protest against lynching, Waller's electrocution and the poll tax, the marchers will assemble at 56th street and Seventh avenue, march south to 14th street, east on 14th to Union Square where the paraders will be greeted by music and speakers.

The speakers at Union Square will be Colden Brown, chairman, and member of the March on Washington Movement, William Agar, educational director, Freedom House, Frank R. Crosswaith, director, Negro Labor Committee and member New York Housing Auhority; John F. Finerty, counsel for Workers Defense League who handled the Waller case; Dr. Lawrence Ervin, president, New York Division, March on Washington Movement; Dr. Channing Tobias, National Council, YMCA; Layle Lane, vice president, American Federation of Teashers, and Anna Arnold Hedgeman, Negro Women, Inc., and Ashley L. Totten, international secretary-treas of Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

The program at Union Square will begin at 4 p. m. The local division of the March on Washington Movement has issued 100,000 leaflets and 1,000 posters in Harlem and Brooklyn during the past week. A citywide conference at the YMCA on Friday, July 17, attended by representatives of 50 organizations set in motion plans for the parade under chairmanship of Robert Early. Organizations represented at the conference included Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, International Ladies Garment Workers Union, Joint Board of Laundry Workers Union, Building Service Employees Union, United Transport Service Employees of America, Frederick Douglass Society, Modern Trend Youth Club, Negro Women, Incorporated and Workers Defense League.

"We are asking all Negroes in New York join us at 56th street and Eighth avenue on Saturday, to show our silent determination that democracy shall be won at home as well as abroad. We call upon Negroes throughout the country and those in New York who cannot march with us to observe five minutes of silence wherever they are on Saturday,

Letters to the Editor

An appeal to lay aside racial feelings and to unite to save America.

Editor, Virginian-Pilot:

Southern America, arise, awake, be alert and aware—the enemy is about and among us. We are in a world revolution, not just an economic war for markets and colonies. Our very freedom is at stake, the freedom of all the freedom loving people in the world is at stake. Negro American freedom is at stake, the right to fight for the rights in our country is at stake. The enemy is in our midst.

Norfolk is seething with racial unrest due to an element among us that is not of the white Southern brothers' making. The enemy is sewing the seed because he knows of the Southern tradition of the "place for Negroes." Some of our American citizens are playing dupes by falling for the line, "Don't work with niggers, they'll get above themselves."

We who were born in Norfolk know that never has there been this open, seething, inflammable hatred. Normally, mutual danger causes co-operation but the fifth columnist in our midst is causing the breach to be widened.

White America, check the man who tells you that Negroes should not be given too much play. Remember your Constitution, remember your Bill of Rights, above all remember the Declaration of Independence, and know that it isn't the superficial, superiority complex that has been built up in the minds through false ideas, that is at stake. It is the very foundation of democracy that is at stake. Report to your lead man or your superiors any person who persists in raising the silly question of what color a man must me to do a job at this time. The question is, Is he qualified? Is he an American? Does he believe in and support the Declaration of Independence, the Constitution of the United States and the Bill of Rights? If this is true, then he is the man to go in our factories, yards and operating bases. As freedom loving Americans we are determined to wipe Hitler, Hirohito and his satellites from the earth once and for all.

Negro America, remember with all of the faults that may be and God knows there are many, we are Americans, our country is in grave danger—and we are in it to the finish. To smash Hitler so that we may be free to demand under the laws of our land those rights guaranteed all of its citizens.

Roll up your sleeves and go to it—keep your ears open America, Negro and white. Distrust the stranger who tells you, "You have nothing to fight for, America is unfair to you." White America, distrust the man who tells you "the Negro will get out of his place if you work with him." Remember this is your country and his, and it is to be saved by unity of all. Remember history proves the loyalty of the Negro from 1619 to the present day—not a traitor among them high or low. Truth is authority—not authority truth.

Surely we Negroes have a place. We agree our place is complete integration into this great effort, complete use of our resources in all branches of our country, both economically and politically. Tell the person who suggests division to you that this is America and an America at war. We have no time for division—we'll stop it and victory will be ours when Hitler's hordes cannot report progress on the race issue.

Fight yourself, white America, and accept your darker brother whom you have every reason to trust. Our house is afire. We, all of us, must put it out by fighting as one, for unity at home and victory abroad.

Norfolk, July 20, 1942.

Editor, Virginian-Pilot:

I want to express the warmest admiration for the co-operation shown by the State government, the government of the city of Norfolk, the Army, and the Navy in the measures recently taken in the Norfolk defense area for the control of vice. It seems to me that what has been done without the personal interest of the Governor, the activity of the State Welfare and Health departments, the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board and the other governmental organizations involved in the effort.

The question of vice in defense areas, involving such vital considerations as health and safety, calls for joint local, State and Federal action; and only such co-operation can be effective. I feel that Virginians have a right to be just a little proud at the present moment.

The case of Roland Hayes and his wife—A protest against the treatment they received in Georgia.

Editor, Virginian-Pilot:

Deep regret and patriotic pity is to be felt for Georgia's recent unkindly treatment of one of her most distinguished sons, Roland Hayes, celebrated Negro tenor. Justifiable resentment on the part of the American Negro for the wholly un-American acts of the South is blacked out by the feeling of the race for the undeniable need for national unity to stem the onslaught of the destroyers of democracy.

Granted the South has its questionably sacred traditions which it is loath to give up, the least it can do in the present crisis is to shelve its prejudices against its foster black children for the duration. Unless it adopts this attitude, it is aligning itself with the enemies of human freedom.

The Empire of Talmadge made a classic error in singling out Roland Hayes on whom to vent its spleen or irrational race prejudice. Few other Georgians have brought more credit to their State and nation. Few are more at liberty to select their place of residence in America with the ease of the great singer.

But Mr. Hayes and his wife have demonstrated a courage that few white Georgians would under similar circumstances—or any human being for that matter—by investing thousands of dollars in a State where they knew they were about as welcome as a Stuka dive bomber.

Hayes gives an excellent reason for his choice—a reason which the Southern white man apparently fails to understand: "I love Georgia."

By establishing a permanent residence in his native State, the famous tenor proves without question a truth to which the Southern white man is blind, and which seems the crux of his perennial nightmare as he looks at his foster sons and daughters: The Negro does not want social intercourse with the white man. He prefers his own kind and class. He only wants the right to live, achieve and enjoy the unequalled privileges of full American citizensship like any other dweller under the Stars and Stripes.

American life, as a whole, is being weighed in a critical balance. It is up to the Southern white man, wherever he lives in this country, to determine the outcome insofar as national solidarity is concerned.

The American Negro is as powerless today to remove his legislated and traditional shackles of liberty as he was to unloose the bonds of human slavery. A greater power than his did the job then, and will do it again.

We have resolved to give the "last full measure of devotion" to our country and wait until our change comes. And it must come, or all canons of truth, justice and religion are vain illusions and fantastic mockeries.

HITLERISM AND MR. HAYES

The disgraceful beating and jailing of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Hayes in Rome, Ga., arouses the indignation of every intelligent and freedom-loving American.

Roland Hayes is one of the great figures in American artistic life, a man of education, refinement and world-wide fame, and Mrs. Hayes is an outstanding example of cultured and sensitive American womanhood.

One's blood boils at the thought of a couple of this calibre being pushed around, beaten, separated from their small daughter and thrust into a filthy cell in the local jail because they objected to being treated as pariahs.

To the Georgia chief of police who jailed them, the incident appears closed, but to thirteen million American colored folk and millions of white Americans who know Roland Hayes the incident is decidedly not closed.

Mrs. Hayes is reported to have told the clerk who forcibly ejected her from a shoe store because she refused to go to the hot stuffy rear "for colored;" "This is no time to talk about racial prejudice and segregation." How true!

There is a World War going on, the outcome of which depends upon the colored peoples of the world in general and those of this country in particular; but some white people in Georgia and elsewhere do not seem to understand it.

While fighting to the death against Hitlerism abroad, they persist in maintaining Hitlerism at home.

This type in high and low places insists that despite the seriousness of America's situation, this country must retain its caste system based on a vicious and unscientific blood theory no different from that promulgated and enforced by Germany's Nazi oppressors.

The Red Cross blood policy, the humiliation of Negro ldiers and sailors in the uniforms of their country, the imination against colored workers, the disfranchisement millions of qualified voters, the residential segregation policy—all are based on this vicious theory which we would like to dub un-American but which we truthfully cannot.

America is indignant over this latest disgraceful incident because a citizen of international fame is involved, but it must not be forgotten that similar humiliations and indignities are experienced by thousands of Negroes but get little publicity because the victims are insignificant and unknown.

This sort of thing will continue as long as those in authority condone it and compromise with the Hitlerian forces that inflict it.

Day after day on the public platform, over the radio and in the press, we are being told, in the words of journalists and FEPC Committeeman Mark Etheridge that "there is no power in the world—not even in all the mechanized armies of the earth, Allied and Axis—which could now force the Southern white people to the abandonment of the principle of social segregation."

The editor of the Rome, (Ga.) News Tribune, a few days before the Hayes incident, in a long editorial denouncing what he describes as a conspiracy to force social equality on the South (by the Administration!) praises unspeakable Eugene Talmadge, Georgia's governor, as "the best equipped of any one in public life to meet the current situation and, by boldness, frankness and devotion to the priceless principle of white supremacy, prevent this monstrous effort to saddle upon the South an intolerable condition."

Hundreds of newspapers in the South and dozens of public men continue to voice similar sentiments, distorting the facts and obscuring the real issue of democracy and fair-play, and thus inciting the lowly mob-minded like the shoe store clerk and the police in Rome, Ga., and a thousand other places.

This thing must be fought vigorously and continuously by all friends of democracy and American unity, else we shall find that having won the war, we have lost the peace.

The "Double V" campaign—Victory for Democracy at Home and Abroad—must be prosecuted with renewed energy if the forces of Hitlerism are not ultimately to triumph in America.

Mayor's Nation-Wide Appeal For Racial Harmony Wins Praise Throughout Country

Congratulatory messages poured in to Mayor James M. Wooddall following his radio message Sunday morning in connection with a Columbia Broadcasting system relay of the "Wings Over Jordan" program which originated at station WRDW.

In a brief plea, the mayor called for racial harmony. Responses came from all over the nation, he said.

The mayor made a similar address of welcome at Municipal auditorium Friday night when the celebrated Negro choir gave a special performance here under the direction of the Rev. Glen T. Settle, its organizer.

SENTIMENTS OF MANY

"I am sure I voice the sentiments of millions of listeners in this vast network program, when I say 'Wings Over Jordan' has become an American institution beloved by all races and creeds," he said in his radio address.

"Were all of us able to catch and re-incarnate the spirit of Christ, there would never be any occasion to mar the harmonious relationship between mankind of all races.

"As we think of the harmony given in these programs, we must be reminded of the harmony that exists, and that should continue to exist, between our respective races represented here this morning. How we each, in our own way, should play our part so that peace, happiness and contentment will be our song.

"The Negro and the white man should at these critical times, work together for the building of a more harmonious nation, the like of which has never been known before. Ours is a song that would be incomplete without each of us," the mayor continued.

FORCES OF EVIL

"There are forces in this world who seek to produce discord among us. To overcome such evils, we must keep our eyes fixed on the goal of exquisite harmony, and sing on, and in so doing, drown out the false notes.

"As the white keys and the black keys of the piano blend to produce rich harmony, so then should we, as Americans all, coordinate our efforts for the common good.

"This is not just my nation, nor your nation, but our nation, and the songs you sing are not just to glorify your God, or my God, but our God.

"So sing on, you to whom God has given the wonderful gift of song, and we, who will sit and listen, will join you in spirit as we live together, work together, fight our county's battles together, and praise God from who all blessings flow," he concluded.

Justice for Negroes

Editor, The Telegraph:

While reading the Speak Up column of Aug. 4, Pic Magazine, I ran across an article which I would be very grateful to you if you would publish in your Letters To The Editor. It is submitted by E. W. Holliman, of Denver, Colo., and is as follows:

"Dear Sir:

"As a reader of Speak Up, I must write this article.

"Imagine out of thirteen million Negro Americans not one is to be found to have betrayed his country or to be arrested for subversive activities, or a spy. And still America limits their rights and privileges.

"Give to the Negro a good living, equal opportunity, rights and privileges as American citizens. These are the basic elements of democracy—a democracy which America must learn and practice before there is peace and unity among people."

In conclusion I should like to say for the Negro, he is not seeking to intermingle with other races in social matters where he is not wanted or asked. But he is asking in every state and community in which he resides that equal justice shall be meted out to him in the courts and elsewhere and at all times his family and property be protected by those who administer the law.

This I believe will be granted by the great American people to thirteen million Negro Americans before the end.

What's Behind Wilkinson, Dixon Scare? Politicians Ask

56X

By ATTICUS MULLIN

When Horace Wilkinson of Birmingham flooded the State two weeks ago with a circular calling for a battle to the death against the Black Dragon, it did not create half the comment the recent statement made by Frank Dixon did on the same subject.

Political circles are agog, not only over the similarity of the statements and thoughts of Wilkinson and Dixon, but by the fact the two authors are Birminghamians where centralized opposition to President Roosevelt is located.

That the trumpetings of Wilkinson and Dixon met with response in Alabama, and we find in nearly every instance a favorable response, goes without saying. The writer has talked with numerous politicians who endorse the statements of both Wilkinson and Dixon relative to the race situation in Alabama.

But politicians are looking for a meaning deeper than the mere statements of Wilkinson and Dixon. They wonder if there is something more important than the Black Dragon scare. They wonder just why the statements were issued at the present time.

Wilkinson, so far as is known, entertains no further political ambitions. He voluntarily resigned a circuit judgeship in Jefferson County for the practice of law and he is known as one of the ablest lawyers in Alabama.

Could it be that Wilkinson sees that now is the time to begin a race agitation in Alabama which would see another ku klux klan or something like it organized? The old ku klux klan was used politically and it worked and especially in Jefferson County. Wilkinson, who is politically far more keen minded than Dixon, and whose knowledge of mass psychology in Alabama is far superior to that of Dixon, may be getting ready for another of those oldtime political campaigns for Governor in which racial hatred will be the principal issue. And don't think it won't work. Maybe Wilkinson wants to be king maker again.

The general thought among those politically minded men with whom the writer has talked is that Dixon, after reading Wilkinson's statewide circular attacking the Black Dragon, reached the conclusion that Wilkinson "had something." Dixon, as is generally known, wants to run for something, probably United States Senator. If he could run on a racial issue against the negro, he might defeat Hill. Always provided, of course, that Hill would sit steady and allow himself to be the champion of social equality and all of that. Which, of course, Hill wouldn't do because Hill was elected to Congress six or seven times under the Democratic rooster, a Democratic emblem of "White Supremacy." But if he could not lure Hill into defense of the Black Dragon, Dixon, politicians figure, might have seen in the Wilkinson blast the opening of a wedge that might penetrate to the Governor's chair four years from now. Dixon, of course, probably knows that it would take two or three years of organization to stir the people up to another agitation like the ku klux klan. But if they were so stirred, even though Dixon did not join, he might be able to say "I was second only to Horace Wilkinson in fighting the race matter including social equality."

There is considerable agitation in Alabama over what many believe are the attempts of Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt to make the South take her ideas of social equality. Alabamians, and Southerners generally, bitterly resent Mrs. Roosevelt's actions and the fact that in nearly every issue of every negro publication in the United States her picture is shown with negroes and never with whites has done much to arouse Southerners to racial equality dangers.

But certainly in Alabama no politician would be so crazy as to endorse anything Mrs. Roosevelt has said or done about the negro race. Just how Wilkinson and Dixon could make Mrs. Roosevelt and her ideas of social equality for negroes a State matter, we can't see. Certainly no candidate for Governor and no candidate for United States Senator would fail to condemn these things as strongly, if not more strongly, than either Wilkinson or Dixon. But the belief is the Birmingham pair have something.

WHITE SUPREMACY LEAGUE IS URGED

Birmingham Attorney Says Now Is Time to Act

BESSEMER, Ala., July 22 (AP).—Declaring "it is tragic for the white people in this country to sit idly by and allow these Negroes to misguidedly place their selfish interests ahead of an all-out war effort," a Birmingham attorney proposed today nation-wide organization of a League to Maintain White Supremacy.

"It is ridiculous for a 10 per cent. Negro population to undertake to shape the policy of the southern states," the attorney, Horace Wilkinson, declared in an address before the Bessemer Kiwanis club.

"The time to act is now," asserted Wilkinson, long prominent in Alabama legal and political circles. "An organization should be formed, so strong, so powerful and so efficient, that this menace to our national security and our local way of life will rapidly disappear.

"The whites being in the majority, it is their right and responsibility to work out the problem within the law and by a law that all whites and blacks must obey," he declared. "It must be done that way. Extra legal methods, however necessary or effective they may have been in days of yore, are not to be resorted to now."

William M. Bruns, president of the club, said the address was "very well received" by the members, and Gordon Vail, publicity committee chairman, issued a statement which said that "The Bessemer Kiwanis club is always ready to hear speakers on both sides of controversial matters, but makes no commitments in such matters."

Citing various racial incidents in Alabama and the south recently, Wilkinson said, "These incidents, like boils on the body, are indicative of a condition that needs attention.

"They are not mentioned for the purpose of arousing feeling against the Negro race, but for the purpose of showing you that the time has arrived for discussion that will provoke serious consideration of the situation in Alabama and the south and bring forth suggestions for a solution of the problem within the law and under the constitution of the United States."

Group Urged To Hold White Supremacy

Speaker Says Negroes Menace U. S. Security

"The Courier-Journal"

JUL 23 1942

Bessemer, Ala., July 22 (AP)—Declaring "it is tragic for the white people in this country to sit idly by and allow these Negroes to misguidedly place their selfish interests ahead of an all-out war effort," a Birmingham attorney proposed today nation-wide organization of a League to Maintain White Supremacy.

"It is ridiculous for a 10 per cent Negro population to undertake to shape the policy of the southern states," the attorney, Horace Wilkinson, declared in an address before the Bessemer Kiwanis Club. Louisville, Ky.

Urges Immediate Action.

"The time to act is now," asserted Wilkinson, long prominent in Alabama legal and political circles. "An organization should be formed, so strong, so powerful and so efficient, that this menace to our national security and our local way of life will rapidly disappear."

"The whites being in the majority, it is their right and responsibility to work out the problem within the law and by a law that all whites and blacks must obey," he declared. "It must be done that way. Extra-legal methods, however necessary or effectiive they may have been in days of yore, are not to be resorted to now."

Address "Well Received."

56X

William M. Bruns, president of the club, said the address was "very well received" by the members.

Citing various racial incidents in Alabama and the South recently, Wilkinson said "these incidents, like boils on the body, are indicative of a condition that needs attention.

"They are not mentioned for the purpose of arousing feeling against the Negro race, but for the purpsse of showing you that the time has arrived for discussion that will provoke serious consideration of the situation in Alabama and the South and bring forth suggestions for a solution of the problem within the law and under the Constitution of the United States."

Criticises Decisions.

The attorney criticised "recent decisions" of the Supreme Court in cases involving Negroes, and added:

"The criminal element among the Negroes has accepted these decisions by our highest court as a license to murder and ravish and rob. The law-abiding and law-enforcing white man regards them as a betrayal of his confidence in the courts and as a consequence we hear lots of strong talk about lynch law instead of constitutional law in such cases."

Says Great Effort Needed.

Wilkinson asserted that "this is enough to indicate to you that a Herculean effort is being made to break down and destroy segregation and with it many of the most cherished institutions in the South. . . . The white men of the South who oppose dragging the white man down to the level of the Negro must organize.

"If there is room in this country for a National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, there is need of a League to Maintain White Supremacy."

Astonishing Development

T, 2

One of the most astonishing developments in connection with the sustained drive to put over racial equality is the spirited and unrestrained manner in which the once highly respected Ladies' Home Journal leaps into the campaign and goes all-out in favor of accepting the colored population upon a basis of social equality.

In throwing its influence behind the movement, the Ladies' Home Journal turns from white girls in illustrating styles and so forth and uses colored models. Page after page is devoted to magnifying the social importance of negroes and the observer cannot refrain from wondering what mighty influence has been put to work to obtain such support in a cause having so little popular interest and of so little importance except in the South.

What the Saturday Evening Post, Fortune Magazine, Life and other influential publications of national circulation have done to boost the social equality drive is eclipsed by the unrestrained and whole-hearted abandon with which the Ladies' Home Journal ties into the job.

The editors of this once creditable monthly obviously feel that the support of socially inclined negroes in the North is worth more to the publication than the support of the women of the South, who will certainly be nauseated by the contents of the current issue.

RACIAL SEGREGATION DEFENDED BY DIXON

Both White, Negroes Approve Custom, Is Claim

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 24.—(AP)—The Governors of Alabama and Georgia charged today that outsiders are attempting to tear down the principles of race segregation in the South.

Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama accused two federal agencies of adopting policies which he said would destroy segregation "under which the white and Negro races have lived in peace together in the South since Reconstruction."

Eugene Talmadge, red - gallused Governor of Georgia, advised Negroes who did not like the state's segregation laws "to stay out of Georgia," and added:

"Outside influences know nothing about the traditions and conditions here and should not interfere with the friendship between the two races of long years' standing."

Dixon's assertions were made in a letter explaining his reasons for not signing a contract with the Defense Supplies Corporation for 1,750,000 yards of convict-made osnaburg cloth. The contract contained a workers' non-discrimination clause.

"Should we sign the contract with this clause included," he wrote Ralph D. Williams, New York agent for the federal agency, "we can expect the fair employment practice committee immediately to descend upon the state with the demand that Negroes be put in positions of responsibility" in the state's prison cotton mills.

He asserted that under cover of the "discrimination by seller" clause contained in war contracts, the fair employment practice committee "has been operating . . . to force Negroes and white people to work together, intermingle with each other, and even to bring about the situation where white employes will have to work under Negroes."

Talmadge, now campaigning for a fourth term as Georgia's Governor, made his statement in his political weekly, The Statesman, in commenting on "indignation" telegrams he received after Roland Hayes, Negro concert singer, charged he was beaten recently by Rome, Ga., police. The Georgia Governor said both whites and Negroes in Georgia approved of laws providing separation of the races in public places.

Talmadge forced the ouster of several Georgia educators last year on charges they advocated racial co-education—a charge they denied. The ousters are at issue in the present gubernatorial campaign.

Disaccrediting of Georgia's state-supported schools by a number of Southern and national educational groups resulted from the ousters.

DIXON COURAGE

The late Grover Hall, of the Montgomery Advertiser, knew a man when he saw one. His editorial, "The War Eagle Flies Again" will not soon be forgotten in Alabama politics. It was about a young man who had gone to France to serve his country in the first World War when aviation was very young. That young man lost a leg in his fight to preserve the freedom of the world against the gray German legions of 1918. That young man was Frank Dixon.

Not at all unlike Frank Dixon was it then that he decided to run for governor, pitting himself against the shrewd politician the late Bibb Graves. With $500 and a broken down automobile, Frank Dixon went out to seek the voters of Alabama, to tell them that if they had sense enough to elect him governor he would in turn set things aright in Montgomery, eliminate the political locusts and bandwagon barnacles. He didn't defeat that shrewd politican and promiser of political patronage in that first campaign, but he succeeded in awakening Alabamians to the dangers confronting their state.

When the War Eagle flew again in 1938 he flew like a whirlwind, a cyclone of ballots whizzed him into office.

He told the people what could be expected of him when he entered office and after he entered office he did what he had told the people he would do. The people liked it, the politicians didn't, they couldn't get at the treasury.

Soon the War Eagle leaves the mansion house at Montgomery, to enter private life in Birmingham. He leaves millions in the treasury and debts have been reduced by millions, the state government is running efficiently. His strong-handed successor, Chauncey Sparks, can be counted on to deliver the goods for his people in the Dixon tradition.

Yesterday we wrote Frank Dixon and congratulated him upon his straight-thinking and his courage under fire, and added, "If you were governor of New York you would be elected President of the United States."

Our congratulatory letter to Dixon resulted for his courage and fine common sense in telling off a Federal bureau regarding the future of segregation laws in this state. Dixon wrote the Defense Supplies Corporation that so long as a non-discrimination clause remained in the contract, the State of Alabama would not sign the contract.

"Should we sign the contract with this clause included," he wrote, "we can expect the Fair Employment Practice Committee immediately to descend upon the state with the demand that Negroes be put into positions of responsibility."

In the United States there are 13,000,000 Negroes. Of this total there are 10,000,000 in the South. Therefore, the problem, if it is a problem, is essentially Southern. If it is a problem it is made so by people who know little or nothing about the South and care little or nothing about the future of the Negro race. They are in it for what they can get out of it, not because they have any particular sympathies for the Negro and his problem of improving his own standards of living. We rather suspect that this controversy, coming at this particular time, is Axis inspired. Certainly there is every earmark of Axis influence in trying to disturb the pleasant relationship existing in the South between the white man and the Negro.

In the South the white man has his place. In the South the Negro has his place. They both know it. Conditions in the South will improve just as steadily as the South prospers and if the East wishes to be of real value to the Negro, then the big money boys and the political powers up there should see that Southern industry is aided instead of being discriminated against with unfair freight rates which make competition difficult with the eastern manufacturer.

Frank Dixon has spoken with courage, there should be no misunderstanding, no misinterpretation. He has spoken like an American and an Alabamian. This newspaper is proud of him for it.

Judge Persons Says Is No Race Problem In Grand Jury Talk

JACKSON, Ga.—Calling attention that there is no race problem in this section, Judge Ogden Persons declared the two races live together in peace and good will in his charge Monday to the August term of Butts Superior Court.

He cited the fact that there is little crime in this section and that no county in the Flint Circuit has a probation officer to deal with juvenile crime.

Judge Persons pointed to the progress made by members of the negro race. He said Dr. George Washington Carver had been cited as the outstanding scientist of the year for having found more than 200 uses for sweet potatoes and a great many uses for peanuts.

Taking note of the national and international situation, Judge Persons urged more purchases of War Bonds to prevent inflation and commended the English people for their valiant stand against aggression. He lambasted those who criticise England's stand against a stronger foe.

Judge Persons stated that the letters home from the boys in the service reflect their Christian training and in none of the letters is complaint uttered.

Like Baa Baa Sheep

The movement for a new "Reconstruction" in the South proceeds without abatement. It began early in the Roosevelt administrations; it is now taking on, with the war the excuse, greatly increasing force. Negroes, labor leaders and intellectual "liberalites" are holding mass meetings and denouncing the commonwealth of Virginia, its courts and governor, because a murderer was executed who had not been convicted by his "peers", namely, persons who could not qualify as jurors by having paid a poll tax of a dollar and a half. Even The New York Times has committed itself to the proposition that a "penniless" person who has killed a man should not be tried unless by a jury composed of some of the penniless.

Interesting The News and Courier and disconcerting to it is that this movement goes on without arousing protest, except a very little, among Southern congressmen. Senator E. D. Smith sensed it when he walked out of the Philadelphia convention in 1936. In January, 1938, Mr. J. F. Byrnes perceived it when he said that "the negroes had come into control of the Democratic party" (those were his words), but subsequently in a South Carolina convention he tried to explain his anti-lynching speech, declaring in substance that he did not mean what he said as reported in the Congressional Record. When he delivered the speech in the senate he was no more a Roosevelt New Dealer than The News and Courier is.

This negro agitation springs from the presence of negro colonies in great cities of the North. The Democrats have captured these voters. The Southern congressmen, to control patronage, obtain subsidies for their states and districts, conform to the national Democratic administration, they swallow their pride, they trample on the traditions and history of their people, they repudiate the Hamptons and the Tillmans, they sell out. (There are exceptions of course.) They actually support the third termism of the late Roscoe Conkling and President Grant.

The new Reconstruction is afoot. It has gained great headway. For it the representatives of the South are responsible. They have wilted, paled, and run away, they have followed and obeyed like baa baa sheep on their way to the feed trough. You are not hearing them in the present campaign speaking out for their South Carolina, and if they do not know that there is trouble in front, they are ignorant, they are simple-minded.

The Negro Wonders

Sometimes we wonder if America knows what democracy is, and if it does, whether it really wants a democracy in America. These recent events are what causes us to wonder:

1. The execution of Odell Waller upon a verdict reached by an all-white poll tax jury.
2. The unwarranted killing of a Negro soldier at Flagstaff, Arizona, by civilian police.
3. The brutal attack upon Alfred Knox, soldier attached to Fort Huachuca, by military police who objected to his entering the railroad station in Houston, Texas via the white waiting room.
4. The lynching of Willie Vinson in Texarkana, Texas.
5. The brutal attack upon Roland Hayes by police in Rome, Ga.

These are just a few of the incidents that have occured within the past three weeks to make us wonder if it really matters whether we are murdered here in America or elsewhere.

We wonder if there is anyone in America from the President on down, who really cares, and if it can be true that one, including the President, has authority to bring a halt to the wanton and brutal treatment inflicted upon Negroes in and out of uniform.

Steal a dollar from the Government and it will spend a million to track down the thief and bring him to punishment; take a life of one of the Government's citizens, and it doesn't spend a cent to bring the criminal to punishment.

American Negroes need a man in Washington who can and will speak to the President for the Negroes. We need a laison man between us and our President. Out of 13,000,000 Negroes in America, we have not one who command enough influence to gain the President's ear when we need that ear.

While all of the above-mentioned offenses were taking place, the NAACP left Washington and New York to hold an annual convention in Los Angeles. What it accomplished out there was nothing. The only worthwhile speech was that delivered by Mr. Willkie, and he would just as soon have delivered it from New York or Washington, D.C. While the NAACP led its followers to that war zone, war broke out in Houston, Texas, Rome, Ga., Flagstaff, Arizona, and Texarkana, Texas. No one was in Washington to lead a movement for speedy action on the part of the Government against the lynchers.

To our mind the movement of A. Phillip Randolph is about the best movement currently in operation. Negroes would do well to jump on Mr. Randolph's bandwagon, and declare him our undisputed leader. We should give him a blank check to deal with the Government in our behalf. He should lead us and we should follow him. He has ability, integrity and loyalty to commend him. Almost single-handed he wrenched from the President Executive Order 8802. Maybe, with proper support, he can wrench another order from him.

Washington should welcome the establishment of headquarters of a militant organization headed by Mr. Randolph, and it should tell the NAACP to move on the outskirts of town and let an organization come in here who is willing to fight our enemies at home, while we leave to fight our enemies abroad.

Goodbye, Mr. White! Come in, Mr. Randolph.

EDITOR'S DIGEST

By ROBERT DURR

"White Men Think"

We have a lot of white readers, with some of them we often have a heart to heart talk—man to man. We really enjoy talking with a lot of them for in this way we have been able to better understand each other. Most people are really decent at heart and you find that out once you have "a prayer meeting" with each other on matters pertaining to our mutual welfare. If you have reason to disagree with people, very often you will find them quite willing to work with you most satisfactory in efforts to make things better for all.

Early this week a white man, whom I have never seen, called me from out in West End of Birmingham and informed me that he was a regular of this newspaper and asked me if I knew Mr. Robert W. Kincey of the Birmingham News. I told him I knew Mr. Kincey, but had not had the pleasure of meeting him. My caller told me of an article Mr. Kincey wrote under the title, "Business, Industry and Defense" in a recent issue of The Birmingham News-Age-Herald. In the course of our very pleasant conversation, this white man said he felt that the white man owed it to himself to take a helpful interest in the problems of the Negro people. And to this of course I said, Amen, Amen.

I asked this white friend to send me the clipping of Mr. Kincey's article. Here is what Mr. Kincey said:

"A VISITOR from New York is interested, among other things, in the probable future of industry in the South after the war. He is interested in the so-called Negro question. He is interested in the war "consciousness" of the people of these Southern commuiities.

Because he talked to this department it seems appropriate to mention, briefly something of the conclusions that were presented to him .

As to Southern industry and all industry after the war, one person's guess is as good as another's. Nevertheless, and regardless of what industry in the East may think of industry in the South there are many reasons to believe and even to predict that the South, with special reference to iron and steel, will be in a stronger position after this war than it has ever been.

Capital investments, even though made primarily to expedite the war effort, will be called upon to make the most substantial return possible long after the war shall have been forgotten. Manufacturing economies in the South, with particular reference to the Birmingham industrial district, are coming to be generally recognized largely because of the proximity of essential ingredents and the generally favorable climatic conditions.

It is inconceivable, then. that these major capital investments shall not be given the most carefull consideration in plans for the national industrial picture of the future.

As to the "Negro question", the problem is being handled, for the most part, intelligently and with the understanding that it is essentially a long range problem. The truth is that the Negro in the Negro in the South has not, in many instances, been made to realize and to appreciate his responsibility, either as a citizen or as a worker. That is due, in large measure, to the fact that he has been handicapped educationally and economically.

Even a tthe expense of condemnation and criticism, we say, as a native of the Black Belt of Alabama:

1. That the rank and file of the Negro population of Alabama does not seek and does not want what is usually called "social equality".
2. That the Negro is, with the proper training and education combined with the proper consideration from the white race, a good citizen.
3. That equal opportunity economically should be afforded him and that his purchasing power should be increased.
4. That he should be given proper training to make a greater realization of his responsibility as a citizen and as a producer, and that he should be encouraged in citizenship to the extent that he must be a producer, especially in times like these, rather than strictly a consumer.
5. That the "Negro questiion" can be more intelligently and satisfactorily handled by our own Negro leaders and liberal white men, working together, than by any interference from elsewhere, no matter how well-intentioned, and that there is a growing realization of the prejudice heretofore prevalent in this section, along wit han equally growing tendency to discard much of that prejudice. Criticism from outside the South is usually resented, but it would be foolish for us to deny that such criticism has often awakened us to the need of making changes.

6. That the Negro and the white man [illegible] the South are friends and that, all things considered, the Negro has made and will continue to make rapid strides educationally and economically which will, in turn, make for a better race of solid, substantial citizens.

As to the war consciousness of the people of the South, they are, like the people of all other sections of the United States, not fully alive to the imminent danger. They are beginning to feel the pinch in a mild way. Like the people of the North, the East and the West, they will make whatever sacrifice, in time money or blood it takes to write a successful conclusion to the struggle."

On point number one, I can say, that history proves that the Negro never has wanted what is called "social equality". A recent survey by a white man and woman in Harlem, where there are thousands of "street walkers" of both races, reveals that when the question was asked why there were no reports of rape by Negro men on the women of either race, the reply came back that the Negro was not interested in women of the other race, preferring the association of his own women. You hear a great deal about this that and the other in the south on the same score as a basis of creating bogeys about interracial association, but hundreds of Negro women can tell you that they are constantly molested in their homes, along the streets and elsewhere by trashy white men. So on the whole, it may safely be said that there are good and bad in both groups, but by and large, most of both groups, do not want what is called "social equality" as a matter of policy and never will, within or without either group, because there is nothing to be gained by such, but the Negro wants social justice—plain and simple and not a type of social justice especially designed by some one else for the Negro as if he were a lower order of human beings. That is why we hate Hitler, with all our souls. The Negro wants to share equally in the benefits of a democratic social order, and without this he can not be happy.

On point number two, the Negro feels that the whole of society would be, wholesomely invigorated by equality of opportunity along all lines.

On point number three the Negro holds that on such equality the south should dedicate itself religiously, if it is to rid itself of the backwardness which gives the ground upon which some call the south the economic problem number one of the nation.

On number five Mr. Kincey expresses my conviction and the end to which I have dedicated newspaper and myself.

On number five, I affirm that the Negro is the white man's best friend, he has proven it in spirit and in deed. And the white man of the south ought to see above everything else, that the Negro's friendship is not in vain and prove it by making up for all the Negro has deserved for so long. The white man has an inescapable responsibility in that connection. No one can make him do what he should do, nevertheless the responsibility is there and a destiny stronger than life and will hold him accountable for a honorable discharge of that responsibility.

Enlightened whites and blacks of the south must find a middle ground upon which to build as friends, a better way of life for both, as friends.

There is so much good to be done in the south. The rocks, red hills, weeds, and rivers, must be scientifically converted into the needs of people everywhere, to increase the income of the common people of both races as well as those on the other side of the railroad tracks. The road to God runs through men. The road to a better south must run through and out from the brains of both whites and blacks developed to the fullest possible extent, in order all may make the greatest possible contribution in the building of a more abundant life for all.

There is no reason for hatred, fear, prejudice, exploitation and oppression. We are our own best keepers in proportion as we realize that we are not only our brothers' keepers, be they white or black, but that we are our brothers' brothers.

It remains for us to lay aside every sentimental weight which so easily besets us, hatreds based upon the neglects and wrongs of the past and work together—one for all and all for one. Any other course is silly, and will do more harm than can be afforded or repaired.

Enlightened white people are not enemies of black people. I can recall, even back in my younger days when I use to teach school in the deep woods of Mississippi, southern white teachers, used to meet me on the road to and from school and labor with me about doing this or that as a means of achieving some of my ambitions.

Back there in the deep, deep woods of Mississippi, where I used to hear my father early in the morning humming, "By And By When The Morning Come We Will Understand" or "Lord I Didn't Know I Had To Bow So Low", I saw the answers to his early morning prayers in Mississippi in white merchants, bankers, lawyers, who in a lot of cases did all they could—more than they sometimes would do for their own relatives, to help me achieve much of that which makes it possible for me to serve as your editor today. They gave me the respect I gave myself. A lot of them would have done much more had they not been afraid of the unenlightened of their own race. Our understanding was on the individual basis They were not untrue to their own, they did not expect me to untrue to my own. They belonged to me and I belonged to them. We did whatever good we could together, even if we did have to do a lot of it by way of the "underground railroad" method.

When I take an inventory of friends who have supported our efforts with this newspaper. I find that a lot of white people have done all they could to help just as a lot of Negroes have done. I would have it no other way, for while I plead a lot for my own people, I am no racists. I believe in the efficiacy of the higher and middle ground.

In all the above related experiences, we have tried to be understanding, patient, honest and fearless in our attitudes.

We have not tried to be selfish. We have not wanted to uplift any at the expense of others, although we have felt that the strong should bear the infirmities of the weak. We have not asvocated upholding any at the expense of others.

We know the south—its whites and Negroes. And we know that, "as close as sin and suffering joined, the oppressor and the oppressed march to fate abreast." We believe the south can be made to stand upon its own feet in proportion as social-minded whites and blacks dedicate themselves to the enormous task of developing blacks and whites to the fullest extent to the end that all may have a more abundant life.

Any advantage gained, manitained or sought by either group at the expense of the other may be likened unto the well known mill stone around the neck of all.

Race Issue Losing Out In Political Appeal, Says Southern Leader

SEP 1 3 1942

Recent South Carolina And Georgia Results Cited By Dr. Odum As Proof

ATLANTA—(AP)—Dr. Howard W. Odum, president of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, said Saturday he believed the result of the gubernatorial primary in Georgia and the recent senatorial campaign in South Carolina "shows clearly that the race issue no longer has its oldtime political appeal."

In a statement issued through the commission office here, Dr. Odum, who is director of the Institute for research in social science at the University of North Carolina, asserted the elections "will contribute definitely to the unity and welfare of the Southern region."

Gov. Eugene Talmadge campaigned in Georgia for renomination with a contention that "white supremacy" was endangered by "outside influences," and much the same issue was raised in South Carolina by Eugene Blease, running for the United States Senate.

The opponents of both held that the contention of race was not a real issue. They appealed to voters to reject attempts to further discussion of racial issues.

Atty. Gen. Ellis Arnall defeated Talmadge on the basis of unofficial returns from a Wednesday primary. Last fortnight Senator Burnet R. Maybank defeated Blease in a South Carolina primary.

Dr. Odum's statement:

"The outcome of the gubernatorial contest in Georgia last Wednesday shows clearly that the race issue no longer has its oldtime political appeal. Relied upon by the governor as his chief asset in a hard fight for reelection, this issue was repudiated by an overwhelming vote for the opponent who had denounced its injuction into the campaign as insincere and dangerous.

"The result of the recent senatorial race in South Carolina bears testimony to the same effect. Politicians may well take notice and hereafter pitch their appeals on a higher plane.

"These results and the trend they indicate will greatly encourage the constructive leadership of both races in the South and will contribute definitely to the unity and welfare of the region. The Negro may reasonably expect increasing sympathy and cooperation as the great heart of the South follows its judgment in a continued program of unity and progress."

Arnall, Talmadge's Rival, Says He Will Do Best to Ban It

AUG 1 4 1942

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTA, Aug. 13 — There were two reactions today to the appeal of Milwee Owens, editor of The Augusta Herald, to Governor Talmadge and Attorney General Arnall, candidates for Governor, urging them to purge the race issue from the political campaign.

Mr. Arnall accepted the Augusta editor's proposal. Atlanta's Mayor, William B. Hartsfield, gave a warning against "wild rumors about race troubles here and in neighboring cities."

AUG 1 4 1942

In his approval of Mr. Owen's plea Mr. Arnall said:

"I pledge that I will do my best to eliminate this false issue from the campaign. When our nation is fighting for its very existence it is little short of treason for any professional demagogue to undertake to destroy our national unity in an effort to save himself politically."

Mayor Hartsfield said rumors of race trouble in this area were false. He reminded Atlantans that there were "Federal wartime laws covering the spreading of rumors intended to excite or upset the morale of the people during the war."

BETWEEN THE LINES

By DEAN GORDON B. HANCOCK

NEGRO DEBUNKING SOCIOLOGY?

John McCray, editor-publisher of the Lighthouse and Informer, one of the most recent stars to rise upon the Negro journalistic horizon, is threatening to go places. McCray is a concrete refutation of the unfounded allegation that southern Negroes are afraid to contend for the rights and responsibilities of full-fledged citizenship. Located as he is in Columbia, S. C., in a city of the South where the voice against lynching was first lifted by the Columbia State in the long ago, he has the moral support of some of the finest white citizens of this country.

The heart of South Carolina Negroes is best shown by the way they are rallying around the McCray standards. As a South Carolinian of South Carolinians, I hail John McCray whose auspicious beginning is heartening. In one of his recent editorials entitled "Figures Don't Lie," Editor McCray puts to shame one of the feature writers of the News Courier of Charleston, S. C. This writer was attempting to excuse the high incidence of crime in Charleston by falling back on the hackneyed assertion that Charleston's large Negro population was the logical explanation. The population ratio being nearly 50-50.

But when our feature writer broke down the crime by races it was found that of the total of 17,412 arrests, 12,122 were white and 5,290 were Negroes. Or if we consider it from the percentage point of view, 70 percent of Charleston's crime is white and 30% Negro. In other words, the Negro's 50 per cent of the population is affording 30 per cent.

This writer was not only startled but confounded by this revelation! It seems too strange to be true. Sociologists for lo these many years have been saying that if we could banish poverty and ignorance and poor housing and low wages, humans would be regenerated after such manner that crimes would largely cease. As a teacher and student of sociology for 20 years, this was one of my strongest points. Within the last 5 years it has been my privilege to address 20,000 young whites in some of the best universities North and South and when it came to "laying it on" about the correlation between crime and poverty, I never grew weary. Now we have it that the poorest, most poorly housed, the most flagrantly underpaid, the most disadvantageously segregated, the most underpaid group has a lower incidence of crime than the more privileged group.

What are we poor sociologists going to do for explanations of the Negro's shortcomings? We environmentalists who have so persistently contended that the environmental nature of the Negro's economic and cultural retardation was the one explanation of the Negro as he is, are dealt a knockout blow by the figures submitted by McCray. The Negro's economic plight has been our trump card as played at the table of interracial discussions. Yet we find here in Charleston something bordering on the revolutionary in sociological and economic thinking of the ages.

But this is not all. One of the officials of the state penitentiary here in Richmond has lectured often before my classes in sociology during these 20 years. He told us ten years ago that the proportion of whites and Negro criminals was gradually changing with Negroes declining in numbers while the whites were increasing. In other words the ratios were gradually changing with the Negro in the favored position. I ran into my white friend at the stadium last Saturday; he came to sit with me and the question of these crime tendencies came up. He was further confirmed in his position that these crime tendencies that the percentage of Negro criminals was declining while that of the whites was on the increase.

It would be interesting to know how general is this tendency which is leaving the sociologists and economists high and dry. If Negroes are going to be good without an improvement in their economic status just what are we Negroes going to quarrel about? If Negroes can be good and law abiding in their misery and squalor the white man will be accordingly tempted to let them remain there. Are Negroes by their declining propensities towards crime going to debunk our sociologists and incidentally Negro leadership? Unless the criminal elements of Charleston and elsewhere wake up and give us some crime, we are going to lose one of our finest arguments in race relations. Unless we can have more crime, we sociologists will be forced to the inconvenience of doing some head clinching to save our face! Negroes, wake up Criminals, to the rescue!

MOULTRIE, Ga., July 6.—Red-suspendered Gov. Eugene Talmadge, two-bit fuehrer from the Georgia hills, is going to run for a fourth term—on a color-line plank.

To keep Negroes forever from attending white schools.

JUL 7 1942

He told a questioning cracker:

"Before God, friend, the Negroes will never go to school with the whites while I'm Governor. Our Constitution forbids it and I swore a mighty oath to uphold our Constitution and you know I'm a goin' to do it."

Talmadge declared he would "drive carpetbaggers from the state"—including leader "Jim Cox of the Atlanta Journal." Cox, ex-Governor of Ohio and one-time Democratic candidate for President, publishes the Journal which opposed Talmadge's purge of University of Georgia faculty last July for supposedly favoring admittance of Negroes to Georgia's white colleges.

Rep. Rankin

PM

Rep. John E. Rankin, the hatemonger from Mississippi, is still hopping mad at us for insisting that the Red Cross reverse its policy of segregating the blood of Negro and white donors in its blood plasma banks.

Mr. Rankin has inserted two frenzied attacks on PM in the Congressional Record because we had the temerity to suggest that the Red Cross cease allowing itself to be used as an instrument of national disunity and race prejudice. PM reprinted the first attack as a remarkable example of hate-bitten, divionist oratory.

PM answered the Rankin peroration with hard facts, citing the scientific evidence that there is absolutely no difference between the blood of Negroes, whites and any other race.

56K

The errant knight returned to the jousts with a second attack on PM in the Congressional Record of June 8, accusing us of "slandering the Red Cross." On what grounds? Because we had said:

"The American Red Cross already has taken large quantities of Japanese blood and mixed it with white."

NEW YORK N.Y.

We felt this was praiseworthy, since blood is blood, whether it comes from Japanese or Caucasian veins. Mr. Rankin is horror-struck at the idea. He quotes our statement in the Record, and comments as follows:

"I checked up on the proposition, and I am prepared to brand that statement as a deliberate, malicious lie. The Red Cross is not banking any Japanese blood without labeling it as such.

Mr. Rankin's characteristic contempt for truth is here coupled with his penchant for personal abuse when protected by the shield of Congressional immunity. I did some checking myself, and here are my findings:

"So far we have no instance of Japanese blood donations. There is no rule requiring segregation if any is donated."

I will show that the first part of this reply is strangely inaccurate. Note, however, that the Red Cross flatly disclaims the policy of segregating Japanese blood.

Item: Several months after Pearl Harbor a group of Japanese residents of New York donated their blood to the American Red Cross as a symbol of their loyalty to the U. S. A. The group was organized by the Japanese American Committee for Democrocy. Yoshitaka Takagi, the Committee's secretary, received a letter from Dr. Earle Booth, director of the local Red Cross blood donor service. It read:

It is a fact that neither the donations of this group, nor those of individual Japanese donors, was ever segregated.

Item: At the Los Angeles County Jail last February, 625 prisoners made a mass donation to the Red Cross blood bank. Of the 29 prisoners bled the first day, the blood of 10 Negroes was carefully segregated, but that of 3 Japanese prisoners was pooled with the white blood.

Nowhere in his outpouring does Mr. Rankin cite a single scientific justification for segragating the blood of Negroes and whites in plasma banks. There is none. He has on his side only blind prejudice. It is a shameful thing that the American Red Cross must depend on this montebank for support of a policy that is universally condemned by science. (For further glimpses of Rankin's mind at work on racial issues, see Page 13.)

RACIAL WAR OR RACIAL BROTHERHOOD— WHICH?

Colored Peoples and the Cause of World Democracy

William B. Barton

Nineteen centuries have passed since Christ admonished His disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature. Although the fulfilment of this command began with the Jews, oddly enough it was the wihte people's of Europe and America who carried to the ends of the earth Christendom's missionary program. In the wake of the missionary program went semblances of the white man's culture, commercial enterprise, and government. Thus to the colored races throughout the world the missionary, the business man, and the government representative have through the centuries been the symbols of the white race. In the far corners of the earth these groups have presented the only means by which the colored races through actual human contact had opportunity to know the white race.

Unfortunately, the white man's business methods and governmental processes, as seen by the colored peoples in the far corners of the earth, have seldom lent support to the program of Christianization. Indeed, they have frequently worked at cross-purposes to the program of Christianization. Too often the efforts of the missionary teachers and preachers to Christianize have been nullified by the white man's unchristian business dealings, which in turn were interwoven with and protected by his processes of government. Up to now, judged by material standards, these unchristian business practices have generally succeeded. This material success has at least to a large degree been made possible because the white man's governmental processes could exercise sufficient force and intimidation to protect business dealings, unchristian though they were. On the basis of such ill-gotten material gains, the white man has often assumed an attitude of racial superiority. At times even the missionary program of the Christian religion has been prostituted and betrayed by some of its erring sponsors who have assumed the attitude that the white peoples as a superior race were condescending to lend a helping hand to inferior colored peoples.

Not only is the white man's claim to racial superiority unchristian, but it is also unwise. The pitfalls in any such claim are now being demonstrated. Eye-witnesses of Allied setbacks in the Far East give testimony to the fact that at least in part these setbacks have been caused by failure of the native colored populations to support the Allied cause. The years of mistreatment of native populations by the chicanery of unchristian business dealings, which have been interwoven with and supported by the white man's governmental processes, have undermined the good will created among colored peoples by the genuinely Christian missionaries and by those few business interests which have approximated the Golden Rule.

A far greater calamity to civilization than the present war itself would be for the military campaigns in the Far East to develop into a racial conflict. It is to the discredit of the white man that by his past misconduct he has made it possible for the Japanese to appeal to other colored peoples to make the war in the Far East such. Not only would a racial war at this time be per se a calamity, but it also would undermine the one righteous appeal that lies back of the Allied cause, the appeal that its purpose is to defend the democratic way of life.

The support of the Allied cause by the Chinese, by most of the Filipinos, and by a good share of the Indian population indicates that it is not yet too late for the white man to make amends for past offenses against colored peoples. If such amends, however, are to have any genuine and lasting effect, the white race must not adopt the attitude of grudgingly making certain concessions to colored peoples. It must rather convince them by word and deed that the great majority of white people are themselves opposed to white exploitation of colored peoples. It must also take in as full partners such members of the colored race as wish to make their contribution to the cause of world democracy.

If the English speaking peoples can learn and practice in the present struggle the lesson of human brotherhood as applied to their colored allies in the Far East, a victory for the Allied nations would in that event present the first opportunity in history for world-wide participation in democratic forms of government. Does the white race prefer that result or future centuries of racial struggle and hatred?

Mr. McNutt, who is Mr. Roosevelt's federal security administrator, seems to be imbued with Mrs. Roosevelt's ideas. He says the nation can not stand for the kind of "nonsense" under which some employers bar certain jobs to Negroes. The nation, in equipping the armed forces for the greatest war in history, has no time for "nonsense" either. What the employers need is the cooperation of the government, not the meddling of Mr. McNutt, Mrs. Roosevelt, and various commissions.—Greenville Advocate.

Strong words, those. But you mustn't forget that the administration, along with equipping the armed forces—and we give it credit for that—also wants to keep itself equipped to hold the Negro vote up there in those Northern states.

Negro America Spoke for Victory, Equal Rights in Great Harlem Rally

"Victory in the desperate fight for freedom and independence our country is waging, together with our allies," Ferdinand Smith, a vice-president of the National Maritime Union, declared, "requires the effective and full use of the human material resources of the nation, and the wiping out of discrimination and segregation of Negro Americans."

In outlining the 12-point draft program of the Conference, the Negro trade unionist called for the effective use of American manpower in the war against the Axis.

"The hopes of all freedom-loving people rest with complete victory over fascism. The Negro people know that. They know that only through a victory by the United Nations can their aspirations be fulfilled. They want that victory and want it soon," he said.

Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the War Manpower Commission, was the main speaker of the meeting. He represented the White House, according to a telegram from Stephen Early, secretary to President Roosevelt.

McNutt declared that the Roosevelt administration is pressing the fight to break down discrimination.

"America cannot stand that kind of nonsense," he said.

ON THE MARCH

Councilman A. Clayton Powell warned the appeasers and Negro baiters that a "new Negro was on the march."

"A new Negro is on the march," he said. "We know our place now. It is out front fighting for our rights together with labor."

The Negro Councilman asserted that the Negro's fight to improve his conditions and participate in the war had also brought about "a new white man" who is trying to help us win these rights.

He lauded the CIO citing examples of labor solidarity which had broken down Jim-Crow in Detroit and at the Chevrolet plant.

Marcantonio explained that he threw his whole-hearted support to the war when its character changed from an imperialist war to a people's war.

"It was the will of the British people that made Churchill come out in support of the Soviet Union the day after it was attacked," he asserted.

The peoples of the United States, the Soviet Union and Britain have made this war a people's war, the Congressman added.

Mrs. Connery Miller, mother of Dorie Miller, Negro hero at Pearl Harbor, reassured the audience

Negro America in Harlem pledged its life and sacred honor to the cause of victory over fascism, and demanded that the jim crowism which bars them from equal participation in the war effort be immediately shattered.

In one of the most splendid demonstrations of patriotism ever seen here, 6,000 Negroes and their representatives symbolically speaking for 13,000,000 Americans, asked for a chance to participate fully in war production and the armed forces.

They cheered, shouted and bravoed every reference to the war, which proclaimed that the fate of the Negro people is at stake in this struggle against fascism.

This was the temper and tenor of the meeting organized by the Negro Labor Victory Committee which took place Sunday night at the Golden Gate Ballroom in Harlem.

MARCANTONIO SPEAKS

Congressman Vito Marcantonio, who received an ovation from the audience, was introduced by Councilman A. Clayton Powell, who called upon the audience to return overwhelmingly the militant anti-fascist Congressman to Congress.

Marcantonio, well known to the audience for his fight against discrimination, hailed the rally as a "demonstration of the people's will to open a second front."

Blasting the Peglers, Dies, Smiths and Coxes for fostering disunity, Marcantonio declared that every available man, Negro or white, must be allowed to participate in industry and the armed forces in order that victory may be ours in 1942.

that there was "something to fight for."

"Some say we colored people have nothing to fight for," Mrs. Miller said. "We have freedom to fight for. . . ."

Charles A. Collins, business agent of Local 6 of the Hotel and Club Employes Union acted as chairman.

The Negro people are behind the war, he said, and those who are trying to split us on other issues are guilty of treason.

Miss Winifred Norman, chairman of the National Conference of Negro Youth, asserted that Negro youth would have no freedom at all if Hitler won. "We must help the youth of all nations which are fighting Hitler."

She recited instances of Negro history from Crispus Attucks to Dorie Miller, which demonstrated the loyalty and devotion of Negroes to their country.

HEAR TRACK STAR

Former Olympic track star Eddie Tolan, also declared that there would be no Negro people left in the United States were Hitler to win."

"We know what plans Hitler has in mind for us," he said.

There is only one thing for us to do, Tolan insisted, and that is get out there and lick Hitler and his stooges as quickly as possible.

Politics and Politicians

Some of our state politicians seem determined to inject the race problem into the campaign for Governor. The latest development on this threadbare issue came when superintendent of state schools, M. D. Collins, asked Attorney General Ellis Arnall for a ruling as to whether Negroes could be taught vocational subjects in white school buildings with the equipment used for white children even though there were no white children in the building at the time. Mr. Arnall promptly ruled that no such thing could be done under the Constitution of Georgia. The fact that the question was asked by Dr. M. D. Collins just at this time seems somewhat intriguing, considering also the fact that Mr. Collins is listed as one of the owners of the Statesman, political organ of Governor Talmadge.—Brantley Enterprise.

Governor Talmadge has announced that he will open his campaign (for re-election as Governor, presumably) at Moultrie on Saturday, July 4. On that occasion we may expect His Excellency to rant about "white supremacy" and tell all about how the issue in this is "nigger, nigger." All of which is pure poppycock and will appeal to none but the uninformed and unthinking. Even the Governor knows that the state Constitution forbids the mixing of races in the state's schools and colleges and that no one in his right mind entertains the idea that any effort will be made to alter that provision of the Constitution. But the Governor, now in extremely bad standing with thousands of Georgians because of his pernicious political meddling with the state's University System (which meddling has caused most Georgia colleges to be dropped from the accredited list), is going to build himself a straw man—"white supremacy"—and attempt to go back into the Governorship on the prejudices of those who are gullible enough to swallow the stuff he plans to dish out in this campaign. We do not believe there are enough voters of this type to re-elect him to another term as Governor.—Early County News.

THE NEGRO PROBLEM.

To the Editor: The weather was hot and sultry. In the humid atmosphere of the bus the strident voices of the passengers mingled with the pulsation of the motor. The bus was loaded to capacity except for one seat. The grinding brakes, jerked the bus to a halt and a young Negro entered. The voices quieted; tension was in the air as the people waited to see whether the Negro would sit down in the empty seat beside a banal white farmer. The Negro proceeded to the seat. The bus driver sensing his plan, rose and ordered the Negro to stand.

This scene is repeated numerous times every day here in the South. Law suits are dragged from the humblest county court to the Supreme Court over the Negro's "place" in the South. The day of Abe Lincoln's "I can just leave them alone" has passed. We, in this section of the country, must clean the stigma of our past treatment of the Negroes from our record.

The President has promised complete freedom and privileges to all men after the present struggle. Does this mean to all men except Negroes in the South? The Negro has fought and is fighting and dying beside the white man today; he has a part in our future.

This country was not created in a day. This problem cannot be solved in a day. It must be devised over a period of time. Time to correct the white man's prejudice; time to allow the Negro to adjust himself. Any intelligent Southerner cannot avoid seeing that this time is approaching.

U. S. GOVERNMENT VS. SHREVEPORT, LA.

Because of an anti-discrimination clause in the Federal Works Agency's contract, Mayor Sam S. Caldwell of Shreveport, La., has cancelled plans for the city's sponsorship of an $83,000 health project to be erected by the FWA. Mayor Caldwell argued that he was "convinced that Negroes are trying to secure not only social but economic equality with the white people of the South." Therefore he has refused to approve the city's participation in any project where Negro workers will be hired and paid on an equal basis with white workers.

His views were made known in a letter to Senators Allen J. Ellender and John Overton and Representative Overton Brooks. The issue might well be interpreted as a contest between the federal government and the prejudiced South which has failed to live up to the basic fundamentals of democracy.

From reliable sources, it was learned that in spite of the mayor's objections the FWA will assume the entire responsibility for the construction of the health center without the assistance of the city. This is what we call democracy in action. Of course there will be much political pressure brought to bear to force a change in the decision of the FWA officials. If southern politicians have the best interest of the country at heart,—which we sometimes doubt—they will not press for denial of work opportunity to Negroes or any other minority group at a time when national unity is so much needed to win the war.

We are certain that President Roosevelt and enlightened public opinion will support the officials of the Federal Works Agency in their decision to enforce the terms of their contract.

The Journal's Republic of LETTERS

Go, write it in a martial-hand, be brief—it is no matter how witty.—Twelfth Night.

WHO STARTED IT?

Editor, The Journal—Dear Sir: Your report by the various newspapers of the other cities of Georgia on Governor Eugene Talmadge and the race issue is most interesting. May I ask a few questions? It may be that some of the small town editors are not aware of some things happening in Atlanta.

Who started this purge? Did Talmadge do it, or was it our affable attorney general? Here are some incidents that I recall, first it was during the Rivers second administration that with a group of citizens I attended a session of the Economy Committee where a protest against subversive text books and literature was made. Then again it was at an open hearing in the Senate chamber with Governor Rivers that Professor Harold Rugg appeared in defense of his subversive text books. Then it was none the less than our attorney general who ruled the Rugg books out of our schools and who took credit for doing so. This same attorney general has in his possession enough information about Communism and its activities in Georgia so that he is obliged to know that it is not and was not the race question (except those Negroes involved in Communism) any more than his own attempt to stop the spread of that deadly gang in Georgia.

The method is different but the result should be the same. Certainly Governor Talmadge has nothing against the colored people of Georgia, they know it, too. When the Governor made his last race against Rivers I asked our colored postman who he was voting for. He replied, that he could not vote in the white primary, but if he could he would vote for Mr. Talmadge. I asked him why, he said, well he says awful things about us, but he does things for us. Then he related how the Governor had been responsible for the reduction of our phone, light and other bills.

Certainly this is no time for a race issue, there never was and never will be such a time. We must remember that God created the three races of men, the white, colored and yellow. God must have known what He was doing. He must have a job for each of us to do. Those who would destroy both the white and colored races and build a brown race are defying the Creator of all of us. Who really started this issue? The attorney general ruled the books out, and the Governor ruled out the professors. They both are to be congratulated.

The Poison Spreaders

In South Carolina, in every Southern state, is a ruffian element in the population, on the alert to attack and misuse negroes. The constant effort of self-respecting Southerners and their newspapers, The News and Courier and The (Columbia) State conspicuous among them, for more than half a century has been to prevent oppression of the negro population.

Year in and year out they have denounced lynchers, denounced all injustice to the negroes. The trial judges and the juries too have been, generally, indulgent in dealing with negro cases, possibly so indulgent that crimes to which only negroes are parties have been too numerous and are numerous now. The most serious problem of the Southern negroes is crime confined to negroes. In The News and Courier from week to week are stories of carvings or shootings of one negro by another. Regretfully it is observed that no "campaign" among the leaders and pretended friends of the negroes is proceeding to solve this problem.

Conflict between the races has come to be less and less common the last forty-odd years. It is now rare. Meanwhile, the attention and energy of negro leaders, white and colored, in the North appear to be absorbed in agitation for abolition of poll taxes, admission of negroes to white colleges and schools, as if those things would improve the manners and habits of the criminal negro class from which respectable negroes suffer.

These agitators undoubtedly have many disciples, black and some white, in the South. What are they gaining by it? They are arousing the passions of the ruffian element of the whites, they are making it extremely difficult for the white leaders friendly to the negroes to protect them.

This has had illustration in South Carolina in the last week or ten days. In instances white men have, causelessly perhaps, assaulted a negro. What is at the bottom of it? The knowledge has seeped into the minds of rough and "dumb" white men that a national effort, an effort of principal men, women too, on a tremendous scale is carried on and is backed by abundant financial resources, to break down the social barriers between the races.

Not surprisingly outbreaks are first occurring in districts in which the races are and always have been separated in certain important industries employing tens of thousands of white women and white men. In the hearts of these white people is fear—fear that government will undertake to introduce negroes into the industrial plants. We think that government will not undertake it, that, for the present, the fear is groundless, but the agitators are fanning the fear into flames of anger.

The miserable side of these conditions is that if the agitation continues the poor negroes will be the sufferers. No army can be had to invade the South and break down the racial barriers. The "Liberalites" are a pitiful minority wholly unacquainted with the facts. The white Americans, in or out of the military services, will not take sides with the negroes against other white Americans. Once, when the country was at war twenty-five years ago, a number of negroes were killed in a Southern town. The inhabitants of that town had no more to do with the chasing and killing than had the people of Zanesville, Ohio, or of Cheyenne, Wyoming. The fight was between white men in military service on leave, strangers in the town, and negroes. It began in "dives". Why will not the leaders of the negroes, of the North, and their Southern disciples, face the facts? They are the facts of nature.

Again The News and Courier declares, as so often it has declared, for equal and exact justice, always with racial separation preserved, to the colored people. Left alone they prefer to live to themselves. They have the last four decades voluntarily sought to live in their own residential districts. The News and Courier distinctly favors the payment of salaries to negro school teachers according to their qualifications.

The agitators for racial amalgamation, against separation, or segregation, are poisoners. They are poisoning a race. They are at the same time poisoning simple-minded and prejudiced white people. There are always ruffians to lead mobs, and the memories of the first "Reconstruction" are not dead in South Carolina.

It was only twenty-one or twenty-two years ago that a secret society was organized, a society that stole a name, that included prejudice against negroes in its program—and it had more members in Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania and other Northern states than it had in any state of the South. In the South it was demolished by the press.

Some of the poisoners mean well. They imagine themselves "humanitarian." They are the more dangerous spreaders of the poison—far more dangerous than the pot-house politicians of political parties in Chicago, Detroit, New York, Pittsburgh, who go out to buy the votes of negroes in election years, who sell their little souls for votes.

JOE LOUIS is the idol of many Negroes, but he was widely and vigorously criticized in Negro circles when he donated the proceeds of a recent prizefight to Navy Relief. The immediate cause of the criticism was the Navy's known anti-Negro bias. More important, Louis' donation to a service which until a few weeks ago admitted Negroes only in menial capacities added to their feeling that the free world they are being asked to defend is one from which they have been largely excluded.

Although the Gallup Poll was showing a steady rise in interventionist sentiment before Pearl Harbor, Negro interventionists were few. They consisted mainly of New Dealers and Negro trade unionists like A. Philip Randolph, the president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and Frank Crosswaith, the chairman of the Negro Labor Committee. The Negro trade unionists saw clearly their stake in the war, and so they led in the effort to swing Negro opinion into interventionist channels. But their efforts were by no means successful.

Pearl Harbor created a more receptive audience for fight-for-freedom propaganda, but didn't alter the Negro community's basic attitude that all it has to defend is a kind of second-class citizenship. The continued discrimination against Negroes in the armed services and war production plants has strengthened this attitude. The Navy's delay and apparent reluctance to release information on the heroism of a Negro mess attendant at Pearl Harbor, the refusal to accept blood for blood banks from Negro donors, and a host of similar incidents have brought resentment in some quarters to a new pitch.

Racial sentiment has also been intensified. Negro trade unionists and those in the "interracial fringe," represented by the Urban League and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, have struggled against this growing racialism, but even they are bitter.

George Schuyler, the most widely read Negro columnist, has repeatedly referred to the war as a white man's affair, despite the fact that China's four hundred millions make the non-whites fighting the Axis more numerous than the whites. His remarks may be discounted somewhat, for he consciously follows the Pegler style. But his views are widely shared among Negroes, although often more discreetly expressed. Many Negroes have a sneaking admiration for the Japanese success in deflating white prestige. They tend to speak of the Japanese as "brown," rather than "yellow," so as to bring them closer to the Negro.

Anti-white sentiment is definitely increasing and in Harlem has even taken the form of anti-Semitism. It is significant that Arthur Reid, a tireless purveyor of anti-Semitism on Harlem street corners, was made chairman of Adam Clayton Powell's speakers committee, when the latter recently ran and was elected to the New York City Council by an almost solid bloc of first choice votes from Harlem. Powell is neither anti-White nor anti-Semitic, but he regarded himself (and was) the Negro people's candidate, and he thought Reid had a following significant enough to be worth cultivating.

Virgil Jordan, a Negro who boasted of being a Nazi, was arrested by the FBI early in March and jailed for failure to register as an Axis agent. But before Pearl Harbor the Amsterdam Star News, the leading Negro paper in New York, had employed him as a columnist, apparently in the belief that his dubious supporters would increase its circulation.

Liberal Negro leaders have been trying valiantly to direct the growing resentment against discrimination into constructive and democratic channels. A year ago they organized a "March on Washington" Committee, with the slogan, "Equal Participation in National Defense for Negroes." Led by A. Philip Randolph, Walter White of the NAACP, and some Negro church and labor leaders, the "march" tried to end discrimination against Negroes in the armed forces and in defense industries. It proposed a mass demonstration of Negroes in Washington on July 4 as a dramatic "pressure" move. The idea spread rapidly among the Negro population in the urban centers of the North and East. An Administration-inspired attempt was made to have the demonstration called off, and some leading Negro newspapers, including the Pittsburgh Courier, also opposed it. The leaders persisted until mid-June when the President summoned them to Washington. Their conference resulted in a Presidential proclamation, or executive order, forbidding discrimination in employment in defense industries or in the government service on racial grounds. Shortly thereafter the President created the Fair Employment Practice Committee.

The proclamation and the activities of the FEPC have had some good results in the way of increased employment in war industries. More such employment probably will be made available for Negroes as the need for man power grows; an all-out effort on the production front obviously cannot ignore the potential labor power of 10 per cent of our population. However, results on the whole are as yet pitifully inadequate. Only a few large firms in war industries have taken the President's proclamation seriously. Some have refused to comply at all. In most instances firms with war contracts have hired a few Negroes, chiefly in unskilled capacities, as a sort of token compliance, and then have continued their discriminatory practices. The subterfuge may have misled a few government officials in Washington, but the Negro community is undeceived, and its morale has suffered.

What Must Be Done

If we want wholehearted participation by Negroes in the defense of freedom, we must give them some more genuine freedom to defend. It will require such steps as passing the Federal Anti-Lynching Law, now held up in Congress by a bloc of stubborn Southern Senators, and ending the widespread discrimination in our educational system, both in the pay of teachers and the opportunities for Negro pupils. It will require much less grudging action than the Navy's announcement that ratings for Negro enlistment would be opened up, but with the understanding that they will not be used as fighting men at sea and will receive no commissions.

There has been more of an effort to alleviate the situation in the Army, but here too the cure has not gone to the roots. Many Northern Negroes, when inducted, have been sent to camps in the South. While they have been used to discrimination in employment back home, they have enjoyed basic legal and civil rights. It will require the elimination of the more severe and insulting forms of discrimination Negro soldiers have faced in the South. They and their folks back home, weighing this treatment against the soldier's sacrifices for his country, have flamed in resentment. Racial injustice, even if slightly less than ever before, stands out more glaringly against the background of our professed democratic war aims. The necessary moves are up to Washington and the white community.

THE RACE ISSUE CROPS UP

HARVARD University at Cambridge, Mass., is conducting an institute at which many pertinent questions are up for discussion and consideration. Upon attendance is T. R. Waring of The News and Courier editorial staff, and he is writing a series of interesting articles appearing daily in that newspaper. In the issue of Tuesday he reports a discussion of the negro question and quotes from the addresses made upon the subject. Much of this is informing and leads to thoughtful consideration of the problem.

Mark Ethridge, general manager of the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, spoke of the president's order to give equal opportunity in war production jobs. He stated that on June 1, the navy would accept negroes for other branches of service than mess attendants, and that the army is now training them for other branches of the service.

Mr. Waring said that the speaker opened his address with references to the race issue in Malaya, Burma, Singapore and India as warnings of its seriousness in war-time. He quoted Gandhi's statement expressing doubt that India would "accept United States leadership" because of discrimination. There are 140,000,000 negroes in the world, 920,000,000 Caucasions, 785,000,000 members of the yellow race, 39,000,000 brown, and 1,000,000 American Indians in North and South America. In the United States there are 13,000,000 negroes, 6,000,000 Jews, 1,000,000 American Indians and Orientals, 26,000,000 Catholics and 5,000,000 aliens whose status comes under the study of "prejudice."

In South Carolina there has been recent discussion of the matter of allowing negroes to vote in the primary elections of the democratic party. The matter was "hushed up" at the recent state convention by being allowed to rest in the rules committee for the next two years. During the past ten years negroes have made the greatest progress in obtaining civil rights since their emancipation. They are making rapid progress in education, in industry and in home and land ownership. In fact their progress in these lines has been stupendous. It seems that their only "bone of contention" now is the matter of being allowed to participate in the white man's primary.

The Press and Standard would urge continued patience and a continuance of their progress in education and in industries. When one contrasts the position and the condition of the negro today and seventy-five years ago, one marvels at the progress made. We are glad to see this, and we hope to see them continue to grow and develop. They have all been going to school during the years since 1865 and we trust they will continue to grow and to develop.

Negroes must remember that they are the victims of a very unwise policy of placing them in command over their former masters at the conclusion of the war and there was created by that action a very deep-seated prejudice which, like the animosities between the Confederate and the Federal advocates, will have to be tolerated till it finally wears out. Little by little the negro will be accepted in industry and in other positions and the final result will be to grant a limited suffrage. There need be no hurry for nations are not made by the hurried process. The proof of this is in the fact that when the conquerors of the South tried to force the issue, it could not be done. Mr. Ethridge said, "My position is that the negroes have great justification, but prejudices cannot be cured by law."

Just at this time it is bad policy to attempt to force the issue. Our entire nation is geared up to war production and to war efforts and it is perhaps just as well to await a determination of this great struggle before attempting any great adjustments.

We are glad to see that nothing is being said now as to social equality. Neither race desires this and it is just as well to let it be known that this fact is true. There is no place here for a mongrel race.

Leaders of Macon Negroes Disavow Agitators, Assert Desire for Racial Harmony

Definite efforts looking to the maintenance of harmonious relations between the white and Negro races of Macon have been taken by leaders of the Negroes of Macon. Disavowing radical acts of agitators and disclaiming any intention of sanctioning programs which would disrupt pacific cooperation of the two races, officials of the NAACP last night declared their aim was to avoid racial disputes.

Several incidents in Macon recently have aroused fear among some citizens that many years of peaceful relations between the two races might be broken.

STENNETT HAS STATEMENT

The Rev. R. Waite Stennett, pastor of the Washington Avenue Presbyterian church, secretary of the inter-racial board of directors of the Booker T. Washington Community Center, acting leader of the Negro division of the defense council and chairman of the executive committee of the Macon chapter of the NAACP, acted as spokesman for his race.

Explaining the objectives of the Macon chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Rev. Stennett said:

5-6K

"There has been some needless misunderstanding or propaganda against the NAACP. The NAACP is a national organization, whose membership is not confined to any one race. It does not seek to foster racial animosities but rather tries to soothe and solve racial disputes. It is a thorough American organization and does not condone any subversive or criminal activities among its members. It seeks the benefits and blessings of the democratic way of life for all Americans. The charter in Macon welcomes any true American to its membership."

AD DISCLA[illegible]

JUN 9 1942

Rev. Stennett said the NAACP disclaimed any connection with an advertisement which appeared recently in the Negro edition of the Macon Telegraph, declaring the wording was at cross-purposes with the organization.

He stated that conferences had been held with officials of transportation companies in an effort to adjust difficulties and prevent the repetition of such disorders as have occurred on busses recently. He said he was confident satisfactory progress had been made along this line.

Rev. Stennett said the Macon organization of the NAACP had named the following officers, all of whom are well known Macon Negroes:

Dr. E. M. Calhoun, president; C. R. Woodward, vice president; J. A. Jenkins, secretary; T. B. Hooper, treasurer; E. A. Henry Jr., corresponding secretary; Rev. R. W. Stennett, chairman, finance committee; Attorney R. L. Smith, chairman, legal redress committee; Martha Hooper, chairman, press and publicity; C. D. Ingram, chairman labor and industry; J. A. Colston, chairman education committee; Fannie Moore, chairman entertainment commit[illegible] Lillian Reid, chairman of junior a[illegible]outh council work. The executive committee consists of officers and the chairmen of committees with the following: Dr. C. W. Dyer, C. W. Moore, Z. C. Clay, V. G. Fullmore, L. H. Mounts and Vernon Colbert.

USC Seniors Hear Weldon At Services

Ministers on Carolina Commencement Program Are University Alumni

Understanding, steadfastness and courage are the three prerequisites to winning life's highest degree, the Rev. Wilson O. Weldon, pastor of the First Methodist church of China Grove, N. C., told members of the graduating class of the University of South Carolina at services conducted on Melton Field last night.

Preaching the annual baccalaureate sermon, Mr. Weldon took these three words, whose initials make U. S. C., as the theme of his address, urging his hearers to find the courage that comes only with reliance on God so that they may hold steadfast through the difficult days that lie ahead.

"It's going to take a lot of courage to win the war," the minister declared, "and we will win it. But it's going to take a lot more courage to face conditions which will prevail after the war is won."

"We in the Southland have not been practicing Christianity with the Negro," the Rev. Mr. Weldon said. "In the days ahead, will you have enough courage to face that situation?"

"The days that lie ahead are terribly difficult days. . . . We must have Christlike courage that knows no turning back in the quest for truth and service," he declared.

The invocation was delivered and scripture read by the Rev. L. D. Gillespie, pastor of the Shandon Methodist church. The benediction was pronounced by the Rev. George K. Way, Orangeburg district superintendent of the Methodist church.

President J. Rion McKissick pointed out that all three ministers participating in the service are Carolina alumni, and paid tribute to their worth and service.

Music was furnished by the University chorus.

The first prerequisite to winning life's highest degree is understanding, the Rev. Mr. Weldon said—understanding of God.

"This is eternally true, that every time you fail to begin with God you fail completely in the long run," he declared.

Such understanding of God brings keen sensitivity of our relationships to others, makes their problems and suffering ours also.

"We were not so greatly concerned when our scrap metal was being used to destroy Chinese coolies, but when it was turned against our sons and brothers and friends then we became deeply concerned," Mr. Weldon declared.

After understanding must come steadfastness, Mr. Weldon said.

"We must develop a steadfastness that knows something of discipline and sacrifice," he declared. "Our generation has been drunk with pleasure and ease."

"This is no time to face life lying down. . . . Miracles are not wrought by the sleeping and the dead; they are wrought by those who give their lives with a mighty abandon.

"Not to think is a sin. Thinking calls for discipline of our minds. . . . We must be steadfast in our devotion to the best that we know."

In the church lies the future of building a better world, Mr. Weldon declared. The basis of all social redemption must be in morality rooted in conviction.

Open Letter To Bill Robinson

JUN 13 1942

Dear Bill:

That stunt you pulled at the Greater New York Interracial Rally last Wednesday evening at Lewisohn Stadium burned up a lot of Negroes. It would have been a little less objectionable if it had, happened at the Apollo Theatre or at some private gathering. But the grandeur, the dignity, the utter seriousness of the occasion approached the ridiculous when you stood up on that platform and told us colored folks that if we wanted to get some money to buy War Bonds we need only play the numbers you were about to give us.

ROBINSON

That was mighty hard to take, Bill, and it's making you even harder to take. There were thousands of us whose throats sank in the pit of our stomachs and we wanted to die on the spot. Some of us felt that you were throwing us back to the cotton fields.

Pearl Buck, Thomas E. Dewey, Marian Anderson, not to mention the biggies from the War and Treasury Departments, were seated on the platform right behind you. Never in life have I been less curious to know what they were thinking.

Just moments before, friends of our race were pleading for equality for us, blasting their own race's theory that they were intellectually superior to us. They were fighting for breaks and opportunities for us and they were laying the groundwork for a permanent integration.

Possibility of Disaster Unless America Changes Attitude Toward Negro

JUN 13 1942

NEW ORLEANS, La.—Thirty-four graduates received their degrees at commencement exercises at Dillard University on Wednesday. The address was delivered by William H. Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, who declared that a new type of mind is being evidenced by Negroes in this country.

He asserted that Negroes have never been satisfied with the place assigned them in American life, but as a matter of expediency have allowed white people to assume that they belonged to a pleasant, docile, and easy-going race, in order to ease the tension under which they were compelled [illegible] live. However, since Pearl Harbor, Negroes who usually counseled "soft pedaling" and "going slow" in seeking their rights were now boldly and militantly demanding that America accord them their rightful sphere of influence in a democracy. Judge Hastie said: "Either outmoded ideas of the Negro's place must give way, or America will suffer a lack of unity and a waste of human resources which can be disastrous to all of us."

Paying a tribute to those Negroes who are serving the country today with distinction and efficiency in positions of trust and responsibility, Judge Hastie asserted that Negroes have come to the point where they can meet the test by any standard that might be set up as a possible deterrent to their employment. He cautioned the graduates that Negroes in the past have depended too largely on protest and too little on process.

Marcantonio Will Hit Jim-Crowism In Congress

One anti-Soviet argument after another has been taken from the U. S. enemies of the USSR, Congressman Vito Marcantonio declared Friday night, so that there is nothing left for them now except grudgingly to praise the Soviet Union while attacking the Communists in this country.

"I deem it to the best interests of our nation, however, not only to unite with the Soviet Union but with all peoples, all political parties here opposed to Hitler and willing to fight Hitler," Marcantonio said.

Marcantonio was among several prominent speakers at an anti discrimination mass meeting in Park Palace, 110th St. and Fifth Ave., Friday night.

Referring to the agreement signed by the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain last week, the Harlem Congressman reminded the cheering audience of Negroes, Puerto Ricans, Italians, Jews and representatives of other peoples who make up his district, that he had proposed in October, [illegible] that a second front be opened against Hitler.

Certain persons had wanted to "crucify" him then, he said, but now the President himself has vindicated that stand and made it the national policy of the United States.

He added amid loud applause:

Marcantonio promised that hereafter he would even the score of Congressmen who discriminate against American citizens by attaching riders to their bills denying the use of funds to so-called Communists.

"Hereafter I'll attach riders saying that none of the funds provided herein may be used for concerns who violate the President's Executive Order 8802 and decisions of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee."

Councilman Adam Clayton Powell said that "despite the efforts of certain people, the common people may win this anti-Hitler war this year." He said the "death blow to the old world ended with the signing of an accord by the United States, the Soviet Union and Great Britain."

"After [illegible] war the people representing the USSR, China, Great Britain and the United States will sit down at the peace table and they'll see to it that the old mistakes of the first world war are not made," Powell said.

Councilman Peter Cacchione urged the people to pay more attention to what goes on in the City Council. If they could sit in on some of the committee meetings, he declared, they would be ready to sweep the Council clean of the obstructionists.

Race Rule Erased

The oldest and hootiest U.S. pedagogue's fraternity, Phi Delta Kappa, which for 31 years has drawn a sharp color line, manfully erased it last week. Observing that if their country's black-brown-yellow allies were good enough to die for they were good enough to live with, Phi Delta Kappans decided to admit Negroes, Chinese, et al. as fellow members.

Phi Delta Kappa is the No. 1 professional society of U.S. educators, with 28,000 big & little wigs as members. Ever since the fraternity wrote its constitution in 1911, restricting membership to "white males of good character," there has been wig-pulling over this clause. Two years ago the Ohio State chapter ruled that Negro George Wright and Chinese Dai Ho-chun were "white men" despite the color of their skin, admitted them as members. The chapter was promptly suspended by Phi Delta Kappa's national council.

Though some Phi Delta Kappans protested, and the Harvard chapter went so far as to stage a defiant meeting with Negro Philosopher Alain Locke as lecturer, Ohio State remained in Coventry—until Pearl Harbor. Then the fraternity's biggest chapter, at Columbia's Teachers College, led a revolt which forced a national referendum. Result: for keeping the color line: [illegible] chapters (mostly Southern); for repeal: 67 chapters, more than the necessary two-thirds.

Talmadge Lauded For Stand Against Race Co-Education

ATLANTA, June 6. (AP)—Governor Eugene Talmadge was praised by the Georgia State Democratic Executive Committee today for opposing co-education of whites and Negroes, and administration leaders indicated he would make racial questions a principal issue in a campaign for re-election.

Byron Castellow of Cuthbert, a former congressman, keynoted the committee's endorsement of Talmadge with praise of Talmadge's fiscal management and a declaration that Georgia today faces a challenge of its state rights, as it did in the War Between the States.

"There's an element in the Northern states which ever since Lee's surrender at Appomattox has been trying to wipe out the color line. It's been trying to get racial equality," he said. "I commend Governor Talmadge for what he did. If he hadn't done it, he wouldn't have been fit to be governor."

Dean Cocking of the University of Georgia school of education was dismissed last summer after Talmadge charged—and Cocking denied—that the educator had advocated racial co-education.

'Forget Color' Author Tells Howard Grads

JUN 13 1942

Negroes Must Interest Selves In All Problems, Pearl Buck Says

WASHINGTON.—"How can you ask the white man to forget the color of your skin if you cannot forget it?" With these words Pearl Buck, noted author, closed a speech made at Howard university Friday prior to receiving an honorary degree.

Miss Buck made the statement in admonishing the graduates and audience that they should "stop thinking of yourselves as colored people in a white country. You must instead, think of yourselves as people determined with other people to make democracy come true."

Speaking of the question of meeting race prejudice Miss Buck suggested that Negroes should enter wholeheartedly into the fight to preserve real democracy rather than draw off into a group within a group.

Understand Others

She madea plea that colored people of the nation try to understand and interest themselves in the problems of China, India and the other great nations of the East, declaring that these nations are watching the development of the race problem in America as evidence whether the democracy they hope from this country can really come true. "For if America, the great, the good, treats its dark citizens less kindly than its white, what hope have they? What is left for them to do except prepare themselves for war and fight for themselves?

Freedom and Equality

"Well, one may say, let this be so. The white man has had his day, and now let the colored man have his.

"To which I can only say that freedom and equality are the precious things and that these will still be lost. It does not matter from the viewpoint of eaons of history which is uppermost, colored or white. But it does matter from the very bottom of life whether or not the trend of our hope is toward freedom and equality or away from it."

Hogan Surprised At Answer By Manning

To the Editor of The State:

I noticed my name in an account given of the campaign meeting in Lexington Tuesday in which I was quoted as asking the two candidates for governor for an expression on the state convention postponing for two years the question of Negroes voting. Knowing that one of these men would be elected governor for a four-year term and that this question would come up again in all probability in the next two years and noticing the presence of some of the men who advocated the vote for the Negro in the Democratic primary in prominent seats in the building, I was constrained to ask the position or attitude they hold on this matter. Mr. Manning's answer surprised me when he said that he was surprised that such a question should be asked of him in the campaign for the office of governor of South Carolina. If not at such time and place, then pray tell me, Mr. Manning, when and where you would like to be asked this momentous question? I would like to ask Mr. Manning where he has been for the last eight or ten years, and more particularly for the last five or six weeks, including the time the question was brought before the state Democratic convention. Does he plead ignorance of this vital question, or is he sidestepping? Again I would say I was simply seeking information to know how to cast my ballot in the coming primary. One of the gentlemen said he was surprised at such a question being asked while the other gave a very clear answer.

A. H. B. HOGAN.

The State's report of the Lexington meeting, written by a member of its staff, quoted Mr. Manning's reply as follows:

"I'm surprised that such a question should be asked. The Democratic party is a white man's party and must be so maintained."

(Mr. Hogan's letter is reprinted this morning because inadvertently four words were dropped from text in putting it into type).

SHOULD HAVE EQUAL FACILITIES.

(Mark Etheridge.)

War always brings tensions, history-minded, sane Southern white people will recognize that. It makes the obligation all the greater to act with sanity. It is to be hoped that all of us will conduct ourselves so that the tensions will not be increased. The decent Southern white person can make the greatest contribution to that. If he is not willing to break down segregation—and he is not—he can at least see that it is not achieved on the brutal standards of a Ku Klux Klansman. He can see that it is made as painliess as possible. . . .

Moreover he can interest himself in the legitimate aspirations and the legitimate demands of the Negro population. He can see to it that the distribution of public utilities and public benefits—such as sewer and water connections, street and sidewalk paving, parks and playgrounds, public health, public nursing and hospital facilities come to the Negro upon the basis of population and need and fairness rather than upon his ability to muster votes. He can give him jobs, for the white man has almost all the jobs to give out. He can interest himself in full justice in the courts for the Negro. . . .

Race Riots in Georgia

Wonder if those unthinking persons who are about to loose the ugly red snake of race prejudice on the people of Georgia this summer realize what a terrible thing they are about to do. Digging among the dead bones in the War Between the States graves to resurrect the red, bloody shirt of race hatred at a time when unity and an era of good feeling are our greatest need. A terrible consequence of this policy of evil minds may be an outbreak of race riots in Georgia. Human beings may be beaten and murdered as a result of this selfish project of shortsighted politicians. Such incidents may be instigated by henchmen of office seekers in order to aid their selfish cause. This hellish idea that anything is fair in politics may destroy this America. One can only say, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do."—J. P. Mahaffey in Hoschton News.

Mixing The Unmixable

If Mrs. Roosevelt wishes to weld all races, creeds and colors into one big happy family, she should go to India, (and what a relief that would be), for in India there would await her some experiences that might prove informative.

By the time she had gotten through some social equality arrangement under which the individual preferences of different elements of society were ignored and all were forced to mix, mingle and eat at the same board and live under the same roof, (and the land had been soaked in blood as a consequence,) she might learn something of value about the human family—and also learn to respect the wishes of human beings.

And knowledge of this character is of the utmost importance if one is to exercise a constructive influence upon the world. Human beings, whether Moslems, Untouchables, Hindoos, Chinamen, Malayans, Burmese, Negroes or Anglo-Saxons, have a supreme right to choose their own associates within the scope of their ability to choose, and no person having proper respect for the rights or preferences of others, will seek to interfere.

Mrs. Roosevelt has a perfect right to associate socially with Negroes, as she does on numerous occasions, but she has no right to say that her neighbor shall form such social contacts, or to attempt to create by governmental pressure a condition under which such associations would be forced upon any person.

The phrase "Give me liberty or give me death," did not refer merely to the right to be out of jail. It meant freedom of every nature, including freedom in the matter of choosing one's associates, and Mrs. Roosevelt, nor any one else under heaven, has the right to try to deprive any individual of this liberty, or to force upon any individual conditions under which this liberty is threatened.

Consideration for the feelings of others is not only a test of intelligence but a test of culture.

Mayor Bans Negro Workers, U. S. Funds Are Withheld

Shreveport Executive Against Hiring of Skilled Mechanics

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—An interesting sidelight on the failure of the city of Shreveport, La., to receive an allotment of $76,000 from the federal government for the erection of a public health center is shown in the letter which passed between Gen. Philip Fleming, administrator for PWA, and Sam Caldwell, mayor of the Louisiana city.

Mayor Caldwell disagreed with the federal agency in the matter of hiring skilled Negro workers on the erection of the project and refused to budge from his stand Whether or not he could have obtained these workers the PWA could not ascertain, but when the mayor refused to budge from the stand he had taken the federal funds were withdrawn.

"In view of your letter of May 11, "wrote Gen. Fleming, "The contract created by the acceptance by the City of Shreveport on Feb. 3, of the offer dated Jan. 31, by which offer, the United States agreed to make a grant of $67,000 to the City of Shreveport for the construction of a health center under War Public Works Docket No. Louisiana 16-115, is hereby cancelled and rescinded. This action is taken because of the city's refusal to comply with the terms of the offer, particularly Paragraph 15 of the Terms and Conditions which are attached to and made a part of the Offer, and the city's consequent abandonment of the project."

The paragraph referred to has to do with the hiring of workers on the federal projects, specifying that a certain percentage of workers must be Negro skilled workers.

The argument could be prolonged into a "name-calling" thing but Gen. Fleming let the case rest as he stated in the initial paragraph of the letter sent out in May..

A temporary structure will fill Shreveport's needs, it is reported until such time as the Mayor sees fit to comply with the terms and conditions set forth in the governmental agreement.

This, however, is dependent upon reports from army medical men and the ability to get the materials necessary for the construction of the temporary public health center.

Race's Struggle Reviewed By High In New Article

Negro's Loyalty Is Pointed Out By High Churchman

PLEASANTVILLE, N. Y.—(SNS)—In the Reader's Digest for July, Stanley High, well-known writer, discusses at length the struggle of the American Negro to obtain fair representation and the recognition in the nation's war effort.

The article becomes extremely important from the fact that the Readers's Digest with a circulation in excess of 6,000,000 copies is an outstanding American magazine.

Mr. High's theme is that the Negro knows he has what it takes and he is equally certain he can deliver. And so, says Mr. High, he is combining his fight abroad with fighting for more freedom at home

FACES MANY CLOSED DOORS

That the Negro has faced and still faces many closed doors is an established fact, according to Mr. High, but he adds "there is no doubt he is far ahead of where he was in World War 1. In one instance Negroes employed by the aviation industry have increased during the past year from 300 to 3500 and a majority of them are in skilled or semiskilled production work. Other strides of similar magnitude have been taken in the recent past by the Negro who "from New York City's Harlem to red-soil Georgia is on his way."

"Mr. High points out that many of the leaders of the race, looking at these advances in the light of the country's 13,000,000 Negroes, are proclaiming them as "token" achievements only. More realistic are the Negro leaders in the Federal government, men and women who look after race interests from positions of key importance and are among the best educated and most constructive-minded leaders in the country. These "token" advances, they say, are opening the door. The next job, they declare, is for the Negro to make good. How well is he prepared to do so?

BETTER EDUCATED

Answering this question Mr. High states: "Today only eight percent of Negroes are illiterate, as compared with 30 percent in 1910. Three were 64 Negro hgih schools in 1915; today there are 2500. Between 1930 and 1939 there were 16,500 Negroes graduated from college, more than tiwice as many as in the preceding decade. Ten years ago only 15 percent of Negro supervisors of education in the South were college graduates; today 70 percent are graduates and many have master's degrees. . . Proof of what the Negro can do—collectively and on his own as a better-educated, better trained American—is appearing from many quarters."

Claiming that "the Negro is more positively American than he was in 1917" the author describes some of his civilian defense activities, and the pride Negroes generally take in the Negro units established under new Army policy in every branch of its service. There is no evidence of fifth column work among them; only one Negro is known to have been arrested for Axis leanings.

Neither disloyal nor ungrateful, the Negro believes in Mr. High's opinion that he is realistic and logical in being "prepared to use the war and the white man's global embarrassments to speed up his advance." In the words of one Negro publication quoted in the Reader's Digest article: "The loyalty of our race to the ideal of democracy remains unshaken, but we have a legitimate grievance and we intend to be heard."

WILLKIE SAYS BIAS IS A NATIONAL EVIL

Racial and Religious Discord Will Weaken Us in War, He Warns in Current Article

ASKS ALL TO BE ON GUARD

Each of Us, if Not Alert, May Carry 'Germ' That Will End Our Freedom, He Declares

The development of intolerance and oppression in American will weaken our fighting arm immeasurably, Wendell L. Willkie warns in an article in the current issue of The Saturday Evening Post. A preface to the article, signed by the editors of the magazine, says Mr. Willkie was invited to write his views after the publication of an article by Milton Mayer on the Jewish people in the same magazine earlier this year.

"Today we are living once more in a period that is psychologically susceptible to witch-hanging and mob-baiting," Mr. Willkie declares. "And each of us, if not alert, may find himself the unconscious carrier of the germ that will destroy our freedom. For each of us has within himself the inheritances of age-long hatreds, of racial and religious difference, and every one has a tendency to find the cause for his own failures in some conspiracy of evil.

"It is, therefore, essential that we guard our own thinking and not be among those who cry out against prejudices applicable to themselves, while busy spawning in tolerances for others."

Mr. Willkie says the full recognition of the rights of minorities has been part of the evolution of America and part of its present strength, which must not now be dissipated.

"Minorities are rich assets of democracy, assets which no totalitarian government can afford," he continues. "Dictatorships must, of necessity, fear and suppress them. But, within the tolerance of a democracy, minorities are the constant spring of new ideas, stimulating new thought and action, the constant source of new vigor. To suppress minority thinking and minority expression would tend to freeze society and prevent progress. For the majority itself is stimulated by the existence of minority groups. The human mind requires contrary expressions against which to test itself."

While there is some record of intolerance in our history, we have found in America the most reasonable expression of freedom that has yet existed in history, Mr. Willkie points out, warning that it must not be torn asunder, for "no man knows, once it is destroyed, where or when man will find its protective warmth again."

New Dixie Technique?

FROM THE SOUTH come reports of a practice which should cause grave concern once it becomes more widely known. Travelers from certain parts of Dixie arriving in New York have reported that Negroes must fill out questionnaires in the railway stations before being permitted to purchase tickets to come North. It seems, from the scant information we have been able to gather, that the South is faced with a labor shortage, with the Selective Service Act and war industries riddling its ranks of common laborers. The farmhands, the handyman, the washwomen, cooks, maids, general factotems and ordinary flunkies have dropped plows, brooms, washboards, pots, rakes and aprons, and are making a bee-line to the nearest defense factory or town in which they might find better opportunities.

The same thing, more or less, took place shortly after the United States entered the war against Germany in 1917. Negroes by the thousands quit the South in the greatest inland migration in history, coming North for better opportunities for freedom and for some degree of equality that was denied them at home. The South at that time, as old timers can recall, took extreme measures to keep its labor at home, even to the extent of violence and false promises that things would be better.

What the South has for Negroes to do in wartime is best illustrated in a recent issue of the Amsterdam Star-News in which it reprinted an editorial from the Laurel (Mississippi) Ledger calling on Negroes to go to work as cooks, maids, porters, etc., so the white women of the town could do Red Cross work. The Larel, Miss., viewpoint can be correctly applied to most of the South today.

Race Bias Is Chief American Problem, Says White Educator

In 1935-6 the value of all $2,000,000 for transportation of white pupils, but reported not 1 cent for that of Negro pupils.

And this in spite of the fact that Negro pupils represent 49 per cent of school enrollments — and that more than 50 per cent of such Negro pupils live in rural areas.

In 1035-6 the value of all school property used for Negroes in Mississippi was $3,194,500, and that for white pupils was $45,456,000.

It seems pointless and cruel to say the least, declares this writer, that invidious reflections and references should be made in the light of the calculated purpose of a sovereign State to keep nearly 50 per cent of its population in blind ignorance.

A PORTENTOUS FUTURE

These are but two recent examples of practiced democracy as upheld and praised by representatives of a section which debases citizenship, and unashamedly makes a mockery of our declared war aims and purposes, matched only by our U. S. Treasury Department which sought "Federally" to discriminate between its white and colored employees in their railroad travel to Chicago. Those responsible, however, did not get away with their discriminatory plan and intent.

The future is ahead of us. It is portentous. Crystal clear however is one fact: Individual human worth, and the dignity and equality of citizenship, the rights of the common man, are to be recognized for what they are in any planning for the future.

Bigotry and intolerance are on the way out, and those who seek to obstruct the orderly processes of human growth and development, and to perpetuate traditions that seek the subordination of men and women of different colors and races, are on the way to deserved frustration and disappointment.

America Concerned With What Negroes Think, Dr. Bethune Tells Audience

JUN 23 1942

In that forceful Bethune style, the prominent educator and Government official told her hearers that "America is concerned today about what 14,000,000 Negroes are thinking."

Considered one of the influential spokesman for the colored race Mrs. Bethune said on many occasions she has told President Roosevelt:: "Never doubt the black [illegible] Mr. President."

CONGRESS GUEST SPEAKER

Mrs. Bethune was the guest speaker for the pre-Congress musical, an opening attraction to the National Baptist Sunday School and Baptist Training Union Congress, which opens officially at noon today.

A masterful orator and a great showman, Mrs. Bethune called on members of the audience to "get your dark faces in higher places.' She went on to cite the many jobs and positions now open to Negroes, telling them that "this is your day; your greatest opportunity to make real history for the Negro race."

In a very timely introduction, Mrs. Ida F. Henderson, prominent in local and national Baptist affairs, called Mrs. Bethune "A Woman Moses."

Mrs. Bethune wasn't all of the show Monday night, but she was a great part of it.

JUN 23 1942

Sharing the limelight was the 500-voice chorus, composed of Atlanta voices and directed by Lawrence C. Mann, of Atlanta, and Cornelius V. Ford, of Buffalo.

Mesdames Florence M. Hogan and Roseland Days served as accompanists.

Mann and Ford proved themseves fancy directors and too much can't be said about Mrs. K. A. Huggins who appeared as soloist in the featured number "Inflammatus" by Rossini. Mrs. Huggins was exceptionally good.

MASTERS OF SPIRITUALS

Members of the chorus proved themselves master of the Spirituals.

The program started 40 minutes late, but once under way, it satisfied the entire gathering from beginning to end.

The Rev. S. P. Pettagrue, chairman of the music committee, presided. The Rev. C. N. Ellis, president of the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Union, served as general chairman.

Miss Lucy Campbell, national director of Congress music, occupied the platform along with Mrs. Bethune, Mrs. Julia Pate Borders, Mrs. Henderson and Mrs. L. L. Craig, president of the. Young People's department of the National Baptist Convention. Inc.

HELP DEMOCRACY AT HOME

Beginning her address, Mrs. Bethune said "We are here as great Americans; we are here with all we have to fight for this America. We women stand shoulder to shoulder with other women of the nation to help make democracy at home.

"All we ask is a full chance to participate in every activity of human life. America needs this faith, this courage, this loyalty that we possess and we are going to give it to our fullest extent. But while we do this, we ask that we be given the full protection that the American flag offers us."

"MONGRELIZATION PLAN" FOR THE SOUTH

There is more serious consideration being given to winning the war than ever before and yet we find in this country a condition that betokens a sad lack of intelligent and sound operation of the functions that affect our morale and our racial integrity.

There are two considerations now paramount— to win the war and to prevent the assimilation of racial integrity in what is known as mongrelization, or so-called by a certain of our outspoken congressmen, who knows conditions and the horrof of miccegentation that faces us if we do not heed the warning.

Winning the war is not going to be easy, in fact it is already outlined as an exceptionally dangerous mission. If Russia fails to stem the German tide there will be definite attack on England and the United States shortly. If winter intervenes and Russia can hold we will be able to arm to the teeth before such an event transpires or will be able to offset such chances by an attack on our own part.

The people of America however will have to eliminate some of the present outrages and deliver the country into the hands of a just and reasonable plan of adjustment before it can be done. Our progress is not encouraging and our labor troubles are among the most disastrous that we face, despite all the claims of the administration that it is being handled. We all know that it is not and that the government is most influenced by the labor lobby, which is growing more and more powerful and as it grows in power is being more and more dictatorial and unworthy of American ideals.

There is no doubt of the fact that the administration of our government is being led around by the nose and that labor racketeering is going on in certain restricted quarters in certain sections that threatens our safety and is a serious blow to the agricultural interests of the country. The Teamsters Union in New York is cited as one instance of the outrages and it is certainly enough to give a rather sinister pattern of the whole cloth. The congress seems impotent to create a surcease from such activity and all the while we are at war. Unity of purpose is forgotten in the fury of selfish and aggrandizing efforts on the part of certain labor leaders led and controlled by Lewis.

This condtiion is bad enough but there is one that is worse and that is the social plans of the government, at least of the controlling factors in it, unless they have been grossly misrepresented. Every sign points to a "mongrelization plan" as it was termed by one vigorous congressman, insofar as it affected the south. This merely means that the federal powers are going to be exercised to offset state laws and to make every person in the country submit to any and all forms of miscegenation.

This is the question that intimately concerns the south but which will be more and more dangerous as the days pass unless there is an aroused public sentiment that will chart the course of the projected plans and oust without compunction those who are back of such a wicked and indefensible scheme, presumably invoked in the name of political prestige and power. If all that is said is true, we do not face any more serious danger in the South than this. It will be faced however and regardless of party lines we will be fighting for the integrity of our white race and fighting a battle that ought never to have been made necessary except for the low and vicious activities of political marplots and rascals.

'Cracker' Governors Take Defiant Stand Against Roosevelt and War Effort

Fifth Columnists Utilize Disunity In Southland to Foment Trouble; 'Uncle Toms' Add to the Confusion

AUG 1 1942

(BY DAN BURLEY)

The South is heading for a showdown with the administration on the Negro question, and the future is fraught with grave consequences, thinking ~~persons of both~~ races agree. The stand taken by the Governors of two key Southern States last week gives evidence of the attitude in Dixie toward the war effort and toward President Roosevelt, who is doing all in his power to unite all groups solidly behind the drive to crush the Axis.

Governor Frank M. Dixon, of Alabama, last week, in refusing a contract with the Defense Supplies Corp. for 1,750,000 yards of convict-made Osnaburg cloth so long as the contract contained a non-discrimination clause, charged Mr. Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practice Committee with attempting to force through policies designed to "break down the principle of segregation under which the white and Negro races have lived in peace together in the South since Reconstruction."

Tobacco-Chewing Talmadge Speaks

"The clear intimation," the Governor declared, "was that unless the Southern people changed their way of living and abandoned the principle of segregation, they would be forced to do so by the Federal Government."

Tobacco-chewing, rabble-rousing Governor Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, issued a public statement last Thursday, in which he advised any Negro who objected to the State's segregation laws "To stay out of Georgia." This was the comment of the Governor on the numerous telegrams of "indignation" he had received after police at Rome, Ga., had brutally beaten Roland Hayes, internationally famous singer, and had thrown both Mr. Hayes and his wife in jail for refusing to sit in the back of a shoe store.

"We are going to keep the Jim Crow laws and protect them and will not allow the whites and the blacks to be taught in the same schools and colleges in the State of Georgia," Talmadge declared in his political weekly, "The Statesman."

In Louisiana, home State of the late Huey (Kingfish) Long and the Rev. Gerald K. Smith (considered one of the leading American Fascists, along with Father Coughlin and others), Mayor Sam Caldwell, of Shreveport, challenged the national war effort with this Hitleristic statement of [illegible]:

"The white people of the South will never be bribed by grants or otherwise in accepting the Negro as an equal upon any basis, and before the city of Shreveport will be high-pressured into using Negro labor, we will reject the proferred grant of $67,500 (to build a public health center), and as badly-needed as this building is for the public health of the people of Shreveport and Caddo Parish, we will do without it. . . . This is damnable . . . the race issue will never die in the South and the people of the South will never accept this."

Mr. Ethridge, a Disappointment

Mark Ethridge, vice president and manager of two Louisville, Kentucky, dailies, the Courier-Journal and the Louisville Times, original chairman of President Roosevelt's Fair Employment Practice Committee, is on record in two statements in the South, one in New Orleans before the National Conference of Social Work, last May, and the other, at the FEPC hearings in Birmingham, Ala., last month, as being in favor of maintaining the South's policies of social segregation and Jim Crow even in face of the war effort and the Federal fiat that it is against the policy of the national government to discriminate in the employment of workers in defense industries.

Ethridge's famous statement that "there is no power in the world, not [illegible] in all the mechanized armies of the earth, Allied and Axis, which could now force the southern white people to the abandonment of the principle of social segregation" has been accepted as the battle cry of the South which still puts the race question before the crushing of Hitler, Hirohito and the other Axis satellites

Fascists Busy As Beavers

The South, the Star-News has been informed, is being overrun by saboteurs of the national morale and other dangerous enemy agents seeking to foment racial strife in a well-organized campaign to disrupt the program in war industries in certain vital Southern areas. Others in Texas are just as rabid in their Fifth Column activities to wreck the war effort. The lynching of Willie Vinson, at Texarkana, Texas, was perpetrated against the background of a $150,000,000 war industry program located in that section of the Lone Star State.

The Star-News has information that Fifth Columnists are busy as beavers stirring up trouble between Negroes and whites. The rumor was calculatingly spread for two months before the lynching of Vinson that Negroes planned an uprising against the whites in Texarkana, which borders on Arkansas. The Negroes were supposed, according to the rumor, to have a number of secret ammunition dumps and were only awaiting a certain time to turn on the whites with shot and shell.

The rabble whites and many of the leading white citizens fell for the rumor. The lynching of Vinson, said to be an innocent dishwasher, followed. From New Orleans this newspaper has unimpeachable information that Negroes in the Mississippi Valley are being held in bondages far worse than actual slavery—bonds of mental fear and intimidation, by the cracker elements in power.

"A definite, unhappy and perilous disquietude smoulders in the Louisiana Negro's bosom because he is discriminated against as a citizen, having not yet been able to enjoy the practical citizenship granted him by the Constitution of this great and glorious America, for whose defense he so many times has given his blood and for which, even now, in foreign fields he is giving his life," reads a plaintiff letter smuggled out of the heart of the Bayou country and in possession of the Star-News.

That the South is preparing for a showdown with the Administration on the issue of whether Negroes are to be treated as citizens and whether segregation and prejudices will be carried on "as usual" in spite of the war, is a calamity expected to break any day. With the Federal Government ready for any eventuality, the situation is fast approaching a head. Those elements in the South which are committed to discrimination and racial abuses regardless of what the Government says, hailed with great glee the suggestion by Horace Wilkinson, of Birminghom, that there be organized a nationwide campaign to protect white supremacy because the Negroes have the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The Anniston (Ala.) Star editorially condemned Wilkinson's theory on the ground that "in effect, it is an invitation to a resurgence of the Ku Klux Klan, and if a greater calamity could befall the South or the nation than that, we do not know what it could be in this crucial period of our history when we need harmony among all races and creeds in order to save ourselves (the white people, Ed.) from slavery."

On the other hand, the Anniston Star declares: "Abolishment of the segregation policy is a step that would be distasteful to the Negroes as well as the whites. Both want the system retained, for they realize that abandonment of this principle would lead to disastrous conditions. Under the principle of segregation, the two races live in near-perfect harmony. Both realize the other's problems and limitations. While there are instances of misconception on parts of both, these are isolated incidents, and can be blamed upon human failings rather than that of the system."

The Anniston Star then goes ahead to commend the action of 12 "Uncle Tom" Negroes in Gadsden, Ala., in commending the remarks of Governor Dixon. Said the Star: "In this connection, the action of 12 of Gadsden's leading Negroes Saturday in wiring Governor Dixon their approval of his remarks provides a striking example of the success of the system. The wire in part stated: 'Our past and present relations with our white people are satisfactory and we do not want any strife to mark our present relationship.'

"Thinking people of the South, both white and black," the Star editorial continues, "want the Negro educated and trained. They realize, however, that these things must be done, can be done, and are being done within the framework of the existing social structure. The present war emergency must not be used as a pretext to bring about abolition of color lines in the South." (Representative John Rankin, of Mississippi, and other Southern reactionaries will be the subject of a story next week.)

Governors On The Spot

Governor Frank Dixon, of Alabama, and Governor Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, were definitely on the spot in their respective states during the past week, when the Montgomery Advertiser, influential daily [illegible] Alabama, and the Atlanta Constitution, sometimes called the "bible of the South," emphatically branded each of the chief executives with demagoguery of the worst type. Both governors stand charged with raising in their respective states the race issue where no such issue really existed.

Frank Dixon, governor of Alabama, in a lengthy statement printed in the Montgomery Advertiser Friday, July 24, based his refusal to sign a Federal government contract upon the inclusion of the "seller's clause," which forbids discrimination on account of race or color. Dixon went even further than refusal to sign, to say that Alabama would not be bound by any Federal Committee, regardless of where said committee's authority might come from. This was a direct slap at the President of the United States, and in our opinion is little short of sedition and sabotage of the nation's war need.

Talmadge in Georgia, campaigning for a fourth four-year term, with "all the newspapers of the state against him," charges there is a movement on foot to establish mixed schools in Georgia. The Atlanta Constitution in a ringing editorial Sunday, July 26th, not only brands this charge of Talmadge as a deliberate misstatement of fact, but repudiates the whole Talmadge administration in a broadside, which for absolute candor in the discussion of this whole delicate matter of race relations, is only surpassed by the editorial, two full columns in the Montgomery Advertiser, Saturday, July 25th, in which Dixon is thoroughly castigated for his raising of the issue of social segregation in the matter of acceptance of Federal war production contracts.

We cannot recall a time in our history when the governors of any states have been more completely repudiated by the most reputable papers in their respective states than these mentioned. In the case of the Montgomery Advertiser vs. Dixon, the former admits having helped to elect him, but now condemns him in the most sincere fashion for his betrayal of the state at a time when its fullest devotion to the national cause is demanded.

No 'Showdown' Will Solve This Problem

"The Courier-Journal"

Louisville, Ky.

JUL 20 1942

This newspaper has previously expressed the hope that friends and sympathizers of the executed Negro sharecropper, Odell Waller, would not make of his case a cause to incite further frictions and hates between two races which must live together and which must solve their difficulties by patient education, not by an accentuated defiance and suspicion.

This hope seems destined to remain unfulfilled. The unfortunate Odell Waller, so much of whose life was a struggle for existence, seems destined in his death to become a symbol for division.

This much is evident from the letter sent to President Roosevelt by a group of Negro leaders, led by the head of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, A. Philip Randolph. Hints of a coming "showdown" on the question of total democracy for the Negro are linked in this letter with a charge that the Waller execution unleashed "barbarous forces" responsible for two recent lynchings and the beating of the noted Negro tenor, Roland Hayes.

That barbarous forces are abroad nobody can doubt. But they were not unleashed by the unhappy Odell Waller. They were in evidence long before his death, long before the crime for which he was executed. And, unhappily, you cannot legislate barbarous forces out of existence.

There exists in this country today every necessary legal device to insure to the Negro his full political equality under the Constitution. There is nothing more the President can say to implement those devices that he has not already said. Presumably the writers of this latest manifesto are asking for another Presidential proclamation, another guarantee that the Negro is entitled to the rights of citizenship.

Unhappily you cannot educate a people by proclamation. Unhappily, the solution of the painful problems existing between white and Negro citizens of the United States must be sought by the long and patient processes of education. It cannot come from some magic word which will abolish suspicion, misinformation, arrogance and cruelty, all of which exist in black men and white men alike, and which must be weeded slowly and painfully from the heart, not banished by some verbal hypnotism from the mind.

The road to better racial understanding is long. Some progress along it has already been made and moderate and patient men in both races will make more. But it is a tragic pity that men who should, as natural leaders of their people, be more imbued than others with wisdom and forebearance, are now the very men who speak out with haste and anger which cannot fail to harm instead of help their cause.

Governor Backs Race Segregation

5-6X

Montgomery, Ala., July 23 (AP). Gov. Frank M. Dixon of Alabama charged today that Federal agencies had adopted policies "to break down the principle of segregation under which the white and Negro races have lived in peace together in the south since reconstruction."

He also criticized "those who seek to foster their own pet social reforms in a time of national crisis."

The governor's accusations, including one that the fair employment practice committee had intimated the U. S. Government would force abandonment of race segregation, were included in a letter declining to sign a contract with the Defense Supplies Corporation for 1,750,000 yards of convict-made osnaburg cloth so long as it contained a non-discrimination clause to which he objected.

Nonsegregation Clause

The clause as set out in Dixon's letter to Ralph D. Williams, New York agent for the corporation, reads:

"The seller, in performing the work required by this contract, shall not discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national orgin."

Dixon told newsmen his primary objection to the clause was "the effect it would have under announced Federal policy," and said in his letter to Williams:

"Should we sign the contract with this clause included, we can expect the fair employment practice committee immediately to descend upon the State with the demand that Negroes be put in positions of responsibility in that (corrections and institutions) department in approximately the same proportion that the Negro race bears to the white race in Alabama. I will not permit the State of Alabama to be subject to the whims of any Federal agency, and I will not permit the employes of the State to be placed in a position where they must abandon the principle of segregation or lose their jobs."

Release of Dixon's letter followed by one day a statement by Horace Wilkinson, a Birmingham attorney long at political odds with the Governor, that "a herculian effort is being made to break down and destroy segregation."

Wilkinson, speaking to a Bessemer civic club, said: "If there is room in this country for a National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, there is need of a League to Maintain White Supremacy."

Talmadge Enters Fight To Keep Segregation

Atlanta, Ga., July 23 (AP).—Gov. Eugene Talmadge today advised any Negro who does not like the State's segregation laws "to stay out of Georgia."

JUL 24 1942

He made the statement in his political weekly, The Statesman, in commenting on telegrams of "indignation" he received following charges by Roland Hayes, Negro concert singer, that he was beaten recently by Rome, Ga., police.

A Political Faux Pas

Considering the campaign for the United States Senate from all angles it must be admitted that Judge Eugene S. Blease was unwise in his injection of the race question in the midst of a war that threatens the survival of democratic government in this country and throughout the world. If the United States forces are victorious it will be due to the united effort of soldiers of all classes, races and creeds.

Drawing the color line by Judge Blease was untimely as it was unjust. While he was making his speeches in various counties of South Carolina white and black men from the state probably were serving on several fronts. Negro troops are fighting the Japanese in the almost impentrable jungles of New Guinea. Who knows how many of them are from this state.

The Filipinos are of a different race from the majority of American soldiers, yet they fought valiantly at Bataan and in that memorable "charge of the tanks" General Wainwright (or was it General MacArthur) referred to the fight as one of the most glorious in the annals of American arms.

Would Judge Blease say of the Filipinos what he has been saying about the Negroes of South Carolina? There may be a few persons in the state who feel that way about Filipinos. Recently a young Filipino, in training at Camp Croft, visited a neighboring city. He went into a restaurant and was promptly ordered out by the proprietor. He was not permitted to explain and a threat was made to call the police.

The Herald had all the details of that incident, which occurred several weeks ago, but they were not printed because this newspaper was unwilling to carry a news story that might cause racial friction. Since Judge Blease was not so considerate we feel that reference to it now may be made.

We cannot think that Judge Blease would draw the color line on the Chinese. Many of them are serving in the United States Army in this country and American airmen, under General Stilwell in China, are proud to fight with the soldiers of Chiang Kai-shek.

Considering the campaign of the former justice of the state supreme court from all angles we believe the unbiased historian will pronounce his drawing of the color line the outstanding faux pas of recent politics, that it was a blunder from the standpoint of economics, religion and politics. Of its economic error we hope to have something to say before the close of the campaign.

Addressing of Negroes By Surnames In Washington Not Permitted

Washington, June 3 — Southern girls, many of whom are from the Carolinas, now find that they must address Negro co-workers as "Mr," if males, and "Mrs" and "Miss" if females.

This was revealed today when a girl from the Carolinas, employed in the Library of Congress, received a notice from Herman H. Hinkle, director of the Processing department, as the cataloging and filing department of the Library is known, telling her that the custom of addressing Negroes by their surnames was no longer permitted.

56K

Practically one-fourth of the employes of the Library are Negroes and Negro employes as well as other Negroes dine in the great Library cafeteria, which is on the top floor of the main building, along with whites. This is a custom that has been in practice for several years and since social equality is now gaining a strong foothold in all governmental departments and agencies in Washington under the New Deal, this new order is the first that has been promulgated by which Negroes can not be addressed by their surname.

"To the Staff of the Accessions Division:

"It gives me sincere satisfaction to be informed that since March 11, members of the Assessions Division staff have cooperated in observing the normal formalities of business address.

"The altercations engaged in by certain members of the staff on March 11 are well known to all members of the division They appear to have been settled on a personal basis to the satisfaction of all parties concerned without the necessity of any direct administrative action. It is my wish that no further occasions of this kind will arise in this department, and to this end I make the following statement:

"The long standing custom of some members of the staff of addressing Negro men employes by their surnames only is a discourtesy which violates the spirit of General Order 1052, declaring the opposition of the Library administration to discrimination against any employe, regardless of race, creed, or national origin. The use of the surname as a form of address is an informality commonly practiced between men and in itself obviously harmless. Where the practice is followed, however, as a mark of racial discrimination, it should not and will not be condoned.

"To each of the parties concerned in the present instance, I extend my most cordial thanks for your full cooperation.

"HERMAN H. HINKLE,
"Director of the Processing Dept."

Gov. Talmadge Not Unfriendly to the Interests of the Negro in His Sphere

—By W. T. Anderson

IT IS NO SURPRISE to me that several well-known leaders among Macon Negroes, in a statement to the public, published in Tuesday morning's Telegraph, denied connection with or endorsement of an outside group which has no interest in the Southern Negro except to use him in the North for political purposes, in its agitation to "smash" what this carpet-bagger group terms "racial discrimination."

In last Sunday's Telegraph and News Negro edition, there appeared an advertisement which read: "Join the NAACP today. Racial discrimination must be smashed. Contact J. A. Jenkins or J. T. Collier."

THERE WAS another advertisement to this same effect brought in for the same issue, but it was withheld because of its incendiary and veiled nature, and the one quoted above caused a surprise when it was found in the paper on Sunday morning.

For several days all sorts of rumors have been current in Macon as to Washington officials and certain Negro agitators from outside of Macon having been working here to "smash" racail discrimination.

Some citizens have been inclined to believe or said it was "fifth column stuff, promoted in the interest of Germany and Japan," but certainly whether it was fifth column or 100th column, it is regarded as subversive, and many Macon white people have denounced it and stated they felt sure no Macon Negro had anything to do with it. Macon whites and Negroes have donated their money to construction of a Negro community center, and have also furnished quarters for entertainment of Negro soldiers, providing Macon Negroes with all facilities for showing Negro soldiers all the courtesies and consideration given white soldiers.

ON SATURDAY LAST a conference was held in my office regarding the stories and rumors as to this agitation, and I stated that we should keep cool heads and not be led into even indirect support of anything that would promote the purposes of this "smashing" group—that Macon Negroes are our people, as we are theirs, and after all this war business is over they are going to live with us as we must live with them, and that we should not be a party to any friction that might arise.

I recalled that the chairman of the Democratic Executive committee of Pennsylvania, with about 300,000 Negro votes, was quoted some time ago as saying Negroes should have equality and be given public office on pro rata basis of population as compared with white population.

Also that the same kind of chairman in Missouri, seeking the large Negro vote in that state, went Pennsylvania one better, and said he not only figured the Negro was entitled to and should have political equality but he should have social equality, with all that term implied.

MY COMMENT was that this attitude was based altogether on politics, that Negroes as a rule had as much self-respect as anybody, and that social equality was something to be arranged between individuals, and not by law. I stated that I had never seen anybody more uncomfortable and out of place than a Negro on a social equality among a lot of white people—that he loved his own kind, naturally, and wanted to be with his people; that the forward-looking and fair-minded white people wanted the Negro to make all the progress possible, not only for his own sake, but as a matter of self-preservation on the part of the whites—that whatever the Negro lacked of being self-supporting and carrying his part of civic responsibility and obligation must be supplied by white people, and it behooved all of us to help him do his part; that what he wanted was justice and fairness, and in his own way and with the encouragement and proper example and help of white people he would work out the destiny the Creater had set for him, among his own, and not mixed up and crossed with whites.

THE TELEGRAPH [illegible] editorially in reference to the many recent deplorable cases of rape in Macon, that extreme caution should be used in passing on such cases by the courts—that it should not be assumed as of yore that any accused Negro was guilty. As to progress being made by respectable Negroes, it should be noted that in former years in these rape cases there would have been all kinds of lawlessness threatened or indulged—as witness the terrible Atlanta riots when no Gestapo crimes ever exceeded the butchery of innocent Negroes because one or more of their race was accused of some crime.

Witness the recent Detroit riots, when the United States Army had to be called out to enable Negroes of that city to move into a housing project built for them by the United States government.

I dare say the Negro housing project in Macon was in every way as closely situated to white residents as was that in Detroit, and yet to this good day there has never been the least suggestion of protest in Macon against it, or any discouragement of the Negro moving into it.

JUN 10 1942

PROMINENT Negroes have come in to see me from all parts of the United States and expressed their appreciation of the fine spirit and racial co-operation that exists in Macon—that everywhere Macon had a good name for the fine relations and mutual understanding that obtained in this city.

And now we must have some strange group come in here and demand "smashing" of somebody or something.

The Negro has come a long way with "his Southern white folks" since he first set foot on American soil. He has made more progress and faster development with the least cost to himself than any race on earth—but fitting himself into the picture and working with the whites and not against them. "Carpet-baggers" came in here after the Civil War, and they tore up the finest relationship and development the world ever saw—they set Negro against white and taught the art of rape, with what result? One of the finest unwriten chapters of loyalty and fatihfulness and rectitude the world ever witnessed was the Negro's taking care of "Ole Miss" and the children during the Civil War, making the food and clothes to send to the front where "Ole Marster" was, so far as the Negro knew, fighting to keep him in slavery.

He was for his folks, as ably attested by Harry Edwards' great story of Aneas Africanus. Aneas had his troubles and his trials, but like it is with all Americans of today, there were matters of future adjustment, to be handled when the enemy at the gate was disposed of.

SOME [illegible]ORT is made to drag Talmadge into this racial discussion. Talmadge told me that he was fond of the Negro as he knew him from boyhood, that some of his best friends are leading Negroes of the state; that he desires and works toward being fair to the Negro and helping him to succeed among his own kind; that they can progress better as a race working together and living together than they can mixed up with white people, and he intends to see that policy observed insofar as possible—regardless of what outside politicians and carpet-baggers from the North or elsewhere may do about it.

Governor Talmadge feels that if any Negroes and white people want to get together on social and schooling basis, the North is open to them, and that is the best place for them to go, rather than taking all the time and trouble to make the South over—Detroit, the mecca of "social" equality, for instance.

I REPEAT I am glad our own Negro leaders repudiate what we hear about "smashing" established customs in the South and trying to re-instate all the villainies these carpet-baggers of the sixties brought to us.

"Let the Dead Rest; Get Live Leaders" -- Pearl Buck

JUN 13 1942

Charging that the "colored people lack leadership," Pearl S. Buck, noted novelist, told Howard University's graduating class last Friday to forget the dead leaders who are spoken of too often, and to begin now to develop leaders among the living.

"We hark back too much to the people who are dead. Crispus Attucks, hero that he was, is dead. So is Booker Washington and Harriet Tumban. We need living heroes of our people," she said.

One Living Leader

Citing an instance when she served as judge of an essay contest for colored students, Miss Buck said that of the scores of essays, the students, both high school and college, mentioned the same half-dozen heroes of their people. "The only living one mentioned," she said, "was Dr. George W. Carver, noted scientist of Tuskegee Institute."

Admitting that Dr. Carver was a scientific genius, the speaker said that one living great man was not enough for a race of 13,000,000 people.

"In China," she said, "any bright child might be chosen by his village for special education and development, with the express purpose of his reflecting honor upon his region and his people."

Emulate Gandhi

She suggested that Negroes could do likewise, at their own expense. She called for leaders among the Negro people as Gandhi is to the people of India.

"To be sure," she said, "this would be a slow process. At least a generation would have to pass before there could be results. But there would, I think be results sooner or later, not only in leadership for the colored, but in opening the eyes of the blind white people and forcing them to see that a man's color made no difference in his ability to achieve great things.

"In the long run of our national life, the training of all unusually able children would result in the [illegible] of conditions and even in some measure work against race prejudice, for history shows that two groups tend to approach each other with lessening prejudice as they become more alike in the economic and social standards. Yet to do this it would be necessary to develop colored industry and colored enterprise in all fields, so that colored leaders could find scope."

Says All Races Kin To Negroes By Blood

JUN 14 1942

To The Editor:

In the June issue of the Ladies Home Journal Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was questioned on the point, "Do you have colored blood in your family?" Mrs. Roosevelt gave a Biblical answer by stating, "I suppose we can find that we all stem from the same beginning," Her answer is found in Acts 17th Chapter, 24, 25, 26, 27 and 28th verses.

These verses show that all races have some colored blood in their veins. King Solomon's Mother was a colored woman by blood. The Queen of Sheba's father and mother were colored by blood. Judah, the father of the tribe that Jesus Christ was born out of married two colored women (by blood). These wives of Judah gave birth to five children, they were all males; three by his first wife and two by his second wife. The names of the two are Prarez and Zerah. They are quoted in the genealogy of Jesus Christ in the first chapter of St. Matthew and the 3rd verse. According to this Jesus had colored blood in his veins. God is surveyed this matter. God is surveying a "Colored Man with wooly Hair to Come and Stop all Wars." He was rocked in the black man's cradle in Africa, all of this is according to Biblical History and Prophecy. I am a witnessed reader of the same.

The Chicago Tribune portrayed a cartoon during the rumors of the Ethiopia War picturing if Mussolini struck Ethiopia he would germ all nations into War. So we behold that prediction now. The Cartoon portrayed a prophetic prediction.

MME. CHIANG ASKS EQUALITY OF RACES

Chinese Fight in Expectation of New World System, Wife of Generalissimo Says

SHARING OF 'RIGHTS' URGED

Alumnae of Wellesley Request the President to Equalize Shipments to Fronts

JUN 14 1942

Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Chinese Generalissimo, in a message broadcast yesterday from China to a luncheon marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of her graduation from Wellesley College, declared that America's freedom and belief in the equality of all races had inspired China in her war against Japan.

The 1,000 alumnae and friends of the college who attended the session at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria contributed $5,279 toward relief in China. Groups in other parts of the country made similar contributions.

JUN 14 1942

Mme. Chiang's message followed several addreses in which tributes were paid to her personality and accomplishments as well as to the morale of the Chinese armies and people in their long war against Japan.

Asks End of Exploitation

"Exploitation, imperialism and all other anachronisms of the prewar world society must be swept out of existence," Mme. Chiang declared.

Assuring her listeners of the ability of the Chinese people to hold on in the face of apparently insuperable difficulties if China is given the necessary equipment now," Mme. Chiang explained that she had encouraged them to believe that after victory the world system would be entirely altered, that we would be all free peoples and that nations strong or weak would deal fairly and squarely with each other."

"If our people and army had not been induced to believe this," she asserted, "the war as far as China is concerned would have been over a long year ago.

"I have faith that from the crucifixion experienced in this war the democracies will learn the lesson that prevention is better than cure; that it is better to prevent wars than win wars. But war can only be prevented if the world society is so constituted that all races are given equal opportunity to develop their native genius, not hampered but aided by stronger and more advanced races.

"It is paradoxical but true that nations, like individuals, can only permanently enjoy privileges and rights if they are willing to share them with others. If they attempt to reserve them solely for themselves they will lose them."

Part of China in War

Dr. Lin Yutang, author, referring to China's part in the war, declared that at least 15,000 had been killed or wounded in the battles of the last week.

Other speakers were Mme. C. L. Hsia, a cousin of Mme. Chiang; Owen Lattimore, personal political adviser of the generalissimo, and Dr. Yu Tsune-chi, Consul General for China. Mrs. Clare Boothe Luce introduced the speakers and Mrs. Maurice T. Moore presided.

JUN 14 1942

A committee headed by Mrs. H. P. Pattison Jr. sent to President Roosevelt a message urging that bombers and fighting planes be sent immediately to China and that "a consistent ratio be established between aerial assistance to our Allies in the Far East and to those in Europe."

The Louisiana Fuehrer

DOWN in the state of Louisiana one man who identifies himself as E. A. Stephens, candidate for democratic nomination for the United States Senate rants and raves about the question of keeping the Negro in his place and says that if the people of that state elect him to Congress he will work towards that end. This is the major plank in his platform.

In one of his speeches he is quoted as telling the voters that "if you folks send me to Congress I shall modify the draft laws to suit the South." It appears that the candidate is not exactly satisfied with the Selective Service act as it was devised and enacted by Congress. He explained it in the same speech. Said he: "We are fast taking our white men and leaving the Negroes on the street to present an increasingly menacing social and economic problem."

Candidate Stephens, who is America's vest-pocket edition of Hitler, seems to object to seeing Negroes in the streets while white people are fighting. Of course, he sees white people in the streets also, but that doesn't count.

In his lucid moments he should be told that if this is a war to maintain the status quo in this country the white people of the South have more to fight for than colored people. Status quo in the South for colored citizens means the right of white men to lynch black ones without any reason. It means the right of the white man to continue to exploit the colored citizen. It means the right of the white citizen to go to school all year around while the colored citizen goes at "convenient times" and with gross inadequate educational accommodations.

But, with Candidate Stephens, we would not say that he is living in the wrong age; we would, however, say that he is living in the wrong country. His statements regarding the place of a minority group would have a more familiar ring if heard in Nazi Germany.

Since we are in an all-out effort to win the war most everything is valued in view of that fact. Along that line it is not difficult to see the danger that is being done to the war effort by the disruption of national unity in the race-baiting speeches of Herr Stephens.

It would appear that if the leader of the Silver Shirts and the Bund movements could be prosecuted for unAmerican activities, their spreading of race hatred and their subversive tendencies, then the Department of Justice should stop the blatant, venomous, race-baiting candidate for nomination to the highest deliberative body in the world with the most effective action at its command.

Obey Segregation Laws, Enjoy Peace Good Will

Some superficial editors and commentators have become exercised over an incident in Rome the other day in which Roland Hayes, well known tenor, became involved in a row when his wife was asked to be served in the colored rather than the white section at a retail shoe store.

The whole incident was exceedingly unfortunate but any unpleasantness which arose grew out of failure to observe the segregation laws and regulations which are as fixed in the South as ever the laws of the Medes and Persians were in ancient times. These laws are fixed, unchangeable and indestructable and are wisely conceived for the best interests of the white and colored people of the South who can and must live in peace.

So long as these laws and regulations are strictly observed no one's feelings are going to be hurt, no one is going to be subjected to mistreatment of any nature, and no one will have occasion for ill feeling. It is as simple as that: obey these wise precepts and live in harmony while enjoying mutual respect. That's the course which was insisted upon by Booker T. Washington, one of the wisest and most influential Negro leaders, and it is the course that must be followed regardless of what ill-advised agitators in Washington and elsewhere may say upon the subject or may do to influence public thought and action.

It is too bad that Mrs. Roosevelt, Mr. Ickes and a lot of others who are stirring up racial misunderstandings haven't as much sound knowledge on this subject as was possessed by Booker T. Washington. Were this true there would be little friction, little disorder and little misunderstanding. The great majority of Southern Negroes are well-behaved, law-abiding and are as polite to white people as white people are polite to the well-behaved in their groups. It is only when outsiders, who know little or nothing about Southern conditions, or who deliberately seek to stir up strife, begin their agitations that real troubles are made likely.

It was this sort of agitation, originating in Washington, that undoubtedly led to the tragedy in Flagstaff, Arizona, the other day when six misguided Negro soldiers attempted to force their way into a social club where white girls were dancing with their escorts. These ill-advised soldiers, no doubt having read of the entertainment of Negroes at the White House by Mrs. Roosevelt, of her having Negro escorts and having her picture taken with Negroes, felt that they were licensed to go where they wished to go, regardless of segregation laws.

Feeling thus, these six soldiers returned to the camp, obtained machine guns, automatic rifles and pistols, and, returning to town, began to "shoot up" the ordinarily peaceful community of Flagstaff. As a result of these wild disorders Flagstaff police had to use their weapons and when the fight was over one Negro soldier was dead, another was wounded, and a vast amount of unnecessary friction had been created. All because thoughtless persons had been incited to violate segregation laws and regulations.

These incidents, and they will become greatly multiplied if the social equality drive by Washington is not dropped like the hot potato it is, are deeply deplorable, but they grow out of one thing, the disregard of wisely conceived laws and regulations designed to maintain peaceful relations between whites and blacks. Misguided mischief makers who provoke disregard of these wise rules of conduct are rendering an ill service to the Negro race as a whole, and especially to the well-behaved Negroes who constitute the great majority in the South. They would render a better service were they to remember that there is a war on and devote their energies to the winning of that struggle instead of meddling with things they know nothing about and which tend to destroy unity.

It Won't Work

Voters of South Carolina have given deserved rebuke to a candidate for the senate, Eugene S. Blease, who injected racial issue into his campaign. Senator Burnet R. Maybank, strong supporter of the Roosevelt administration, defeated Blease in the primary of Tuesday last.

That a candidate who raises the racial issue is raising an utterly unfounded and false issue is self-evident. At least in the south, the relations between the two races are not such as to cause alarm. The candidate for office who raises the ancient cry of "nigger, nigger," is doing so only because he thinks thereby to gain votes and has no scruples whatsoever as to how he gains them.

For Blease, of South Carolina, it may be said he did not, at the start, predicate his campaign upon such an unworthy issue. He adopted it when he realized he was trailing in the race.

Not so much can be said for Talmadge, of Georgia. He laid the groundwork for that shameful issue in equally shameful manner in his notorious legal lynching of professors at the University of Georgia. His act was premeditated and deliberate, not done in the stress of a campaign.

AUG 28 1942

Georgia will join her neighbor state South Carolina in repudiating such political chicanery at the polls on September 9.

"Solid South" Effective Barrier To True Democracy In United States

THE states of Arkansas, Texas, Virginia and especially Gene Talmadge's Georgia are doing everything possible to help Hitler and Hirohito win the war.

These states during the past several weeks have given Germany and Japan effective material for their propaganda machines.

JUL 25 1942

"Judge Lynch" is on [illegible] march again in these poll-tax states In Arkansas and Texas mobs lynched two men. In Virginia Odell Waller was lynched by judicial decree. Gene Talmadge, the chief executive of Georgia, does not have time to bother when Roland Hayes, an international character is insulted and beaten. His Excellency is too busy attending "fish fries" and informing his followers that his chief campaign issue is no Negro shall be permitted to attend schools with white folk, to investigate the imprisonment of a world-famous singer and his wife.

The teeming millions of India will ponder these American incidents before they give aid to American and British soldiers who are there to protect the "Four Great Freedoms discussed by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

The Chinese who are fighting gallantly to defeat Japan will question the kind of democracy which accepts, if not actually condones, these kind of occurrences.

x x x x x x x x x x x

Wendell L. Willke made a great and powerful speech before the NAACP in Los Angeles on Sunday. He pointed out that the Japanese had knocked our racial superiority ideas sky-high. Mr. Willkie stated, "When we talk of freedom and opportunity for all nations, the mocking paradoxes in our own society become so clear they can no longer be ignored."

Mr. Wilikie has been more vigorous in his denunciation of racial prejudices than any important man in high public place.

However, much of the effectiveness of Mr. Willkie's work will be wasted if the United States of America permits the reactionary South, with its poll tax laws, to continue to shape and control its policies on the race problem.

It is time for this great nation, which at heart is truly democratic, to crack down vigorously on its "economic poorhouse." America will never be what it could be so long as the solid South sits in the saddle, riding roughshod over all that is honorable and decent in human life.

Contends Negro Already Has Second Front Opened

Attacks on Race at Home Worries Black Americans, Whites Are Told

HAMMOND, Ind.—(ANP)—Negroes already have a "second front," the one opened by race prejudice here at home, Dr. Dennis A. Bethea, prominent physician, told members of the Hammond Rotary club at their luncheon meeting Tuesday as he spoke on "The Negro's Second Front Fight."

"Perhaps during this emergency it would be a mighty fine thing for the black folk to suspend lot of their complaints, but would it not be just as fine for some of the white people to suspend some of their Negrophobia?" he asked.

ANSWERING CALL

Asserting that colored Americans were answering the call to the colors, Dr. Bethea said:

"But there is a second front which is to him none the less urgent. A success on this front will make the first more secure. This is the home line. Here he is denied employment except in the more menial jobs, and very little opportunity given for advancement.

"Untill recently he has had to fight to get a chance to fight in the armed forces of his country. Being the man farthest down, everyone has felt free to kick him around at will.

"The question is frequently asked: Should the Negro use the war to better his conditions?

REMEMBER LAST WAR

"In this connection the colored people remember painfully well what was told them in World War I. They were led to believe that if they fought for democracy abroad, they would be given a reasonable portion of it when they return to the states. But alas! They found their last plight worse than the first."

Declaring that it was "pure nonsense" to think of Japan as a champion of the darker races, the physician asserted, "Japan is for Japan and Japan alone."

Bund Threat Bared in L. I.

Declares War On Negroes; Seeks To Ban Protest Rally

By J. ROBERT SMITH and ELLEN TARRY
(Star-News Staff Writers)

JAMAICA, L. I.—Continued investigation into the activities of fifth column elements directly pointed against the Negro led the Star-News into this town last week when reporters learned that a segment of the German-American Bund known as the "White Knights of America" has been operating here undercover for quite some time.

The subversive group loomed into the spotlight when its leader who bears the title, "Sir Peaceful," emerged from secrecy and directed an edict to the Jamaica branch of the N. A. A. C. P. informing the organization that its program was "devoted to the extermination and banishment of savages from this country."

In order to thwart the efforts of the Jamaica N. A. A. C. P. to stage a mass meeting last Thursday night at Allen A. M. E. Church, "Sir Peaceful" and a Jamaica lieutenant of police who said that he was acting under orders from Mayor LaGuardia, attempted to scare Dr. John A. Singleton, chairman of the N. A. A. C. P., into calling off the protest gathering.

The meeting was the result of the Sperry Gyroscope Company, an anti-Negro defense plant, refusing to hire colored high school girls who were referred to the plant by the N. A. A. C. P. through the request of the War Production Board.

Declaring that the fascist organization is to protect whites, "Sir Peaceful" in his four-page letter to Dr. Singleton said, "I have read your disgusting notice in the paper (The Long Island Press) as to job discrimination, and I hope you also read this accompanying article as to the beast that you are trying to advance.

Called "Hairless Animals"

"It's about time the people of this city do something to put you hairless animals back where you were before the Civil War. After almost one hundred years of democracy you barbarians have proved their gratitude by such revolting crimes as have been happening in Harlem.

"We send our boys overseas to fight for freedom while a lot of mad animals attack their families at home; now we've decided to organize and fight a freedom fight right in our own city.

"Yours is the organization of N. A. A. C. P. and ours will be the N. A. O. P. W., or the National Association of Protection of Whites and our whole cause will be devoted to the extermination and banishment of savages from this country.

"The people of this country saw fit to corral and put on reservations as well as otherwise restrict the American Indians, who by comparison to your aborigines were perfect gentlemen, so you had better start to clean your own house first, before crying about discrimination, because we won't discriminate once we get started, everyone of you blacks will wish you had learned to behave."

The lieutenant of police on the other hand approached Dr. Singleton as an envoy of the "Little Flower," declaring that it was common knowledge the N. A. A. C. P. was conducting an employment agency without a license and on that score the meeting could not be held.

Church Packed

Having as speakers Roy Wilkins of the national office of the N. A. A. C. P. and John Beecher, of the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee, the townspeople packed the church despite the threats and listened to first-hand accounts of the tactics used by the plant's officials to hinder their employment.

The audience adopted a resolution protesting the Sperry Gyroscope Company's discriminatory policies and sent copies to the President of the United States, the War Production Board and the firm.

In the meantime an extensive investigation into the activities of the "White Knights of America" is underway. Reporters learned that it is an infant organization on the style of the German-American Bund and having as its definite objective an anti-Negro campaign.

PUBLICATION REVEALS ALABAMA RACIAL HATE CAMPAIGN

Effort Centers Around Plants With War Work

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(A N P)—Disclosures here this week by the News Digest, labor publication, revealed that officials of the Tennessee Coal, Iron and Railroad company and the Republic Steel Corporation were providing financial backing for a statewide campaign designed to stir up racial hatred in industrial plants engaged in war work.

The hate campaign was touched off recently by Governor Frank M. Dixon who refused a contract proffered by the Defense Supplies Corporation, a division of the War Manpower board, on the grounds that it was an attempt by a government agency to force "racial equality" upon the south.

E. D. Lemay, assistant to the president of the coal and iron concern, attempted to secure the support of the Alabama Press association meeting here July 24-25, by having them endorse Dixon's stand no the maximum use of manpower during the national emergency. The editors, however, refused to allow introduction of his resolution.

ATTEMPT TO SPLIT EMPLOYES

E. M. Ball, superintendent of the same company, has been busy attempting to split employes in the TCI and Republic Steel Corp. ore mines along racial lines, by belaboring the question of whether white man should work under Negro supervision, the News Digest charges.

Before either of the companies was unionized the practice was to employ Negro foreman with crews of from eight to ten men of both races working under them. When the union came, company officials allowed only Negro men to work under Negro foremen.

Ball said: "There is one thing I won't do, work a white man under a Negro."

INCITING CHARGED

E. N. Thompson, assistant general manager of the RSC, was accused of inciting white non-unionists against his Negro employes by maintaining a pistol-carrying auxiliary police force at the mines.

Union leaders reported that affidavits on statements and activities of the directors of the race hate campaign are being submitted to the FBI, the National Labor Relations board, and the War Labor board.

The News Digest, sharply criticised Dixon for his fascist doctrines and polices declaring that if the governor is not checked, his campaign against Negroes will extend to a movement against Catholics, Jews, labor and other minority groups, split the nation, and lose the war.

JUSTICE IS ASKED

"Our position," stated the paper, "is that 90 per cent of the people in the United States are white and 10 per cent are colored, and this 90 per cent should be able to give justice to the 10 per cent, get justice for itself, and live with them in peace and harmony.

"Our position is that the use of manpower, white, black, red, yellow or any other color, race or creed is a war problem and not a racial or social problem, and that if the white people of the United States are half as just, as charitable, as law-abiding and as Christian as they should be, they can find ways and means of using all our manpower, black as well as white, to the best possible advantage toward winning the war."

WE MUST HAVE PROGRAM TO STAMP OUT EXPLOITATION JUST AS LABOR UNITED TO DO

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

LAST week Charles S. Johnson of Fisk university gave me an idea which I am going to pass on to you. It seems to me that his notions places our problems and present struggle for status and greater participation in the American scene, in a frame of reference and gives it greater perspective which affords much more insight.

Mr. Cayton

There have been two fundamental principles which from the beginning of our history have directed the channels in which our institutions and our way of life developed. In a virgin country with great wealth and natural resources capitalism, with its emphasis on free competition and the exploitation of both resources and men, seemed to be the quickest and most efficient method of developing the country. The opportunities which the Western Frontier provided made it possible for individuals with ingenuity, strength, and courage to escape from the Eastern wage system and become in turn trappers, then farmers, and, finally, business men. With the closing of the frontier, after it reached the Pacific Ocean, this same type of free and unrestrained competition led to the development of huge fortunes and through a period in the 1800's it received its greatest expression in the ruthless economic behavior of the "robber barons."

SOCIAL CONTROL IS RECOGNIZED

But in time it became evident that unrestrained competition lead to the aggrandizement of wealth and power into a few hands, and allowed the exploitation of the great working population by a few powerful economic barons. As this concentration of wealth and power developed, there also came a consciousness on the part of the masses of the people that some social controls must be enforced.

BEGINNING back in the early part of the last century, a series of social legislations, which controlled the conditions under which women and children would work, were begun. There has been a constant development of such social legislation in regard to labor which finally culminated in the National Labor Relations Act—labor's Magna Charta. This legislation established legal mechanisms to enforce collective bargaining and to protect the rights of working people.

RACIALISM TO THE FORE

The control of our economic system has been pushed even further and in addition to safeguards for labor, we have in recent years determined the conditions under which the most competitive of all of our economic institution, the stock market, should be operated.

THE SECOND fundamental force in our national life has been racialism. This is evident when we realize that slavery played the important role which it did in the development of entire sections of our country. The subordination of darker people was just as important in our early history, and to an extent now, as was the economic principle of free competition. Indeed the two are not unconnected.

LAXITY IN CURBING RACE EXPLOITATION

We have similarly had a history of social legislation which has attempted to curb the racialism in this country. This movement has paralleled the development of social legislation to curb unrestrained economic competition, but has not developed to the same extent. Both were embarked upon because these two forces seemed destined to destroy the country if left unregulated.

THE PASSAGE of the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments was one great step which raised the Negro to the legal position of a full citizen. Since then, though there has been some small progress, there has not been the recognition on the part of the people and on the part of the government, that it was necessary to continue to curb racialism by legislative means. This has been true, perhaps because economic competition is easier to control by law, or perhaps because the pressure groups for labor are stronger than those fighting racialism, or perhaps because the acceptance of racialism was more deeply planted in the mores of our culture. In any case, from the period of the Civil War until present administration, we have not had much of a development in this direction.

NEED LEGISLATION

From time to time this column has stated that we must have a legal bed rock and that we must fight for a whole program of legal protections to stamp out racialism in this country. Although in many respects we have had a democracy, we know that in the case of the Negro it was not existent. Now it is becoming evident to whites as well as to Negroes that to preserve anything of our democracy it is as necessary to legislate against racialism as it is to control the relations between employers and employes and the operation of the stock market.

LEADERS SUCH as Randolph and Walter White, as well as many others, should see our problems in this historical perspective. They should realize that we, as a racial group, are beginning the fight to achieve our rights which labor embarked upon a hundred years ago. Now, because of the fluidity of the social structure due to the impact of the war, enormous gains can be made.

MUST HAVE PROGRAM

We must conceive of and develop a program of legal protection to stamp racialism just as labor united upon a program of legislation which would protect them against exploitation. We are fortunate in that an increasing group of white people recognize the fact that continued racialism will destroy even the veneer of democracy which we have had in the past and will prevent any expansion and strengthening of this concept in the future.

As the Crow Flies

By DR. W. E. B. DUBOIS

Mr. Du Bois

WHEN I was in New York at Christmas time I was sitting in a physician's parlor. We had just finished dinner and his office hours were about to begin, and his wife reminded him several times that the office was full of patients.

Nevertheless, he drew his chair toward me and bent over. As he talked he became more and more interested and excited. He touched the sleeve of my coat to emphasize his points. He was singularly impressed and even uplifted.

The ordinary run of physicians whom I meet seem curiously cold and hard considering how closely they are dealing with life. But this man had an idea and despite the call of his consulting room, he had to express it. He said, "Do you know I have been thinking of one thing a long time and that is the fact that young Negro writers do not get the proper encouragement. They are writing continually for an audience that does not care about what they feel or what they want to say but only is interested when they say the sort of thing that this white audience wants to hear, and say it in the way and in the manner that they want to hear it." Now this white demand thus imposed and borne upon the Negro author is not a natural but an unnatural thing, a convention, an old and outworn pattern, rooted in Negro minstrelsy with the wisecracks of Mr. Bones; the remarks of "our cook," "my old mammy," a "nigger I used to know"

"Work Necessarily Artificial"

The black man who wants to write is not writing of this world and its experiences because he knows little or nothing of it. He may, of course, realize what white people want to hear about Negroes and adapt himself to it but that is necessarily artificial. It has made and will make no authentic literature.

The black man is living in a new world; new not only to him but to all men. Its facts and complications are new and unusual. They give rise to all sorts of thoughts and emotions. He wants to tell about this and explain it; he wants to make re-live this world of strife, of love and hate, of birth and murder, or the building of homes and of cities and of star-clusters. Here is something real and authentic for the founding of a new art and a new literature, but the black man has little or no chance to build it. Publishers could not sell such literature or at least do not believe they could. Writing it means not simply sacrifice; it may mean starvation, ostracism, persecution.

"Want to Encourage Writers"

All this the physician and I explained to each other in interchange of thought, coming to substantial agreement. Then he said, ignoring the door bell, "Now what can be done and how? I have a scheme," he added. "I want to encourage young writers to write what they want to say and what they know and can say and not simply what white folk will pay for by way of entertainment. I want to encourage a natural, normal and real literary development." Then assuring him that this was in line with my thought for many years past, we agreed:

1. We must get a definite book-buying colored public, say one thousand persons pledged to buy at least one book a year for cash.

2. We must offer prizes for young colored writers. Perhaps at the beginning five hundred dollars annually for a book worth publishing, with publication guaranteed.

3. We must secure, through the selection of a committee whose knowledge and judgment command respect, the choice of at least one book a year for this new Negro Book-of-the-Year Club.

4. We must start selling this plan to the public by establishing a center and find for that center the right secretary and give him (or more probably her) funds for propaganda through correspondence and travel.

"Dear, your patients!" interrupted the wife, but the physician only moved nearer and talked faster.

"I would be willing to put money into a scheme of this sort, money and time. My income is large enough to spare a little and I have few ties and commitments. How can I start?" I caught my breath and my hostess' eye at the same time, as the physician arose. "I will write you about this," I said.

FEB 7 - 1942

I am writing.

By HORACE R. CAYTON

FEB 14 1942

LAST week Charles S. Johnson of Fisk university gave me an idea which I am going to pass on to you. It seems to me that his notions places our problems and present struggle for status and greater participation in the American scene, in a frame of reference and gives it greater perspective which affords much more insight.

There have been two fundamental principles which from the beginning of our history have directed the channels in which our institutions and our way of life developed. In a virgin country with great wealth and natural resources capitalism, with its emphasis on free competition and the exploitation of both resources and men, seemed to be the quickest and most efficient method of developing the country. The opportunities which the Western Frontier provided made it possible for individuals with ingenuity, strength, and courage to escape from the Eastern wage system and become in turn trappers, then farmers, and, finally, business men. With the closing of the frontier, after it reached the Pacific Ocean, this same type of free and unrestrained competition led to the development of huge fortunes and through a period in the 1800's it received its greatest expression in the ruthless economic behavior of the "robber barons."

SOCIAL CONTROL IS RECOGNIZED

But in time it became evident that unrestrained competition lead to the aggrandizement of wealth and power into a few hands, and allowed the exploitation of the great working population by a few powerful economic barons. As this concentration of wealth and power developed, there also came a consciousness on the part of the masses of the people that some social controls must be enforced.

BEGINNING back in the early part of the last century, a series of social legislations, which controlled the conditions under which women and children would work, were begun. There has been a constant development of such social legislation in regard to labor which finally culminated in the National Labor Relations Act—labor's Magna Charta. This legislation established legal mechanisms to enforce collective bargaining and to protect the rights of working people.

RACIALISM TO THE FORE

The control of our economic system has been pushed even further and in addition to safeguards for labor, we have in recent years determined the conditions under which the most competitive of all of our economic institution, the stock market, should be operated.

THE SECOND fundamental force in our national life has been racialism. This is evident when we realize that slavery played the important role which it did in the development of entire sections of our country. The subordination of darker people was just as important in our early history, and to an extent now, as was the economic principle of free competition. Indeed the two are not unconnected.

LAXITY IN CURBING RACE EXPLOITATION

We have similarly had a history of social legislation which has attempted to curb the racialism in this country. This movement has paralleled the development of social legislation to curb unrestrained economic competition, but has not developed to the same extent. Both were embarked upon because these two forces seemed destined to destroy the country if left unregulated.

THE PASSAGE of the 13th, 14th and 15th Amendments was one great step which raised the Negro to the legal position of a full citizen. Since then, though there has been some small progress, there has not been the recognition on the part of the people and on the part of the government, that it was necessary to continue to curb racialism by legislative means. This has been true, perhaps because economic competition is easier to control by law, or perhaps because the pressure groups for labor are stronger than those fighting racialism, or perhaps because the acceptance of racialism was more deeply planted in the mores of our culture. In any case, from the period of the Civil War until present administration, we have not had much of a development in this direction.

NEED LEGISLATION

From time to time this column has stated that we must have a legal bed rock and that we must fight for a whole program of legal protections to stamp out racialism in this country. Although in many respects we have had a democracy, we know that in the case of the Negro it was not existent. Now it is becoming evident to whites as well as to Negroes that to preserve anything of our democracy it is as necessary to legislate against racialism as it is to control the relations between employers and employes and the operation of the stock market.

LEADERS SUCH as Randolph and Walter White, as well as many others, should see our problems in this historical perspective. They should realize that we, as a racial group, are beginning the fight to achieve our rights which labor embarked upon a hundred years ago. Now, because of the fluidity of the social structure due to the impact of the war, enormous gains can be made.

MUST HAVE PROGRAM

We must conceive of and develop a program of legal protection to stamp racialism just as labor united upon a program of legislation which would protect them against exploitation. We are fortunate in that an increasing group of white people recognize the fact that continued racialism will destroy even the veneer of democracy which we have had in the past and will prevent any expansion and strengthening of this concept in the future.

As the Crow Flies

By DR. W. E. B. DUBOIS

WHEN I was in New York at Christmas time I was sitting in a physician's parlor. We had just finished dinner and his office hours were about to begin, and his wife reminded him several times that the office was full of patients.

Mr. Du Bois

Nevertheless, he drew his chair toward me and bent over. As he talked he became more and more interested and excited. He touched the sleeve of my coat to emphasize his points. He was singularly impressed and even uplifted.

The ordinary run of physicians whom I meet seem curiously cold and hard considering how closely they are dealing with life. But this man had an idea and despite the call of his consulting room, he had to express it. He said, "Do you know I have been thinking of one thing a long time and that is the fact that young Negro writers do not get the proper encouragement. They are writing continually for an audience that does not care about what they feel or what they want to say but only is interested when they say the sort of thing that this white audience wants to hear, and say it in the way and in the manner that they want to hear it." Now this white demand thus imposed and borne upon the Negro author is not a natural but an unnatural thing, a convention, an old and outworn pattern, rooted in Negro minstrelsy with the wisecracks of Mr. Bones; the remarks of "our cook," "my old mammy," a "nigger I used to know"

"Work Necessarily Artificial"

The black man who wants to write is not writing of this world and its experiences because he knows little or nothing of it. He may, of course, realize what white people want to hear about Negroes and adapt himself to it, but that is necessarily artificial. It has made and will make no authentic literature.

The black man is living in a new world; new not only to him but to all men. Its facts and complications are new and unusual. They give rise to all sorts of thoughts and emotions. He wants to tell about this and explain it; he wants to make re-live this world of strife, of love and hate, of birth and murder, or the building of homes and of cities and of star-clusters. Here is something real and authentic for the founding of a new art and a new literature, but the black man has little or no chance to build it. Publishers could not sell such literature or at least do not believe they could. Writing it means not simply sacrifice; it may mean starvation, ostracism, persecution.

"Want to Encourage Writers"

All this the physician and I explained to each other in interchange of thought, coming to substantial agreement. Then he said, ignoring the door bell, "Now what can be done and how? I have a scheme," he added. "I want to encourage young writers to write what they want to say and what they know and can say and not simply what white folk will pay for by way of entertainment. I want to encourage a natural, normal and real literary development." Then assuring him that this was in line with my thought for many years past, we agreed:

1. We must get a definite book-buying colored public, say one thousand persons pledged to buy at least one book a year for cash.
2. We must offer prizes for young colored writers. Perhaps at the beginning five hundred dollars annually for a book worth publishing, with publication guaranteed.
3. We must secure, through the selection of a committee whose knowledge and judgment command respect, the choice of at least one book a year for this new Negro Book-of-the-Year Club.
4. We must start selling this plan to the public by establishing a center and find for that center the right secretary and give him (or more probably her) funds for propaganda through correspondence and travel.

"Dear, your patients!" interrupted the wife, but the physician only moved nearer and talked faster.

"I would be willing to put money into a scheme of this sort, money and time. My income is large enough to spare a little and I have few ties and commitments. How can I start?" I caught my breath and my hostess' eye at the same time, as the physician arose. "I will write you about this," I said.

I am writing.

KNOX, TALMADGE AND COOPER

JAN 2 - 1942

Among public officials, who in 1941 aroused the ire of Negro citizens and with impunity, were Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox and Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia. The end of the year finds both with plenty of trouble on their hands and, naturally, Negro citizens are shedding no tears over their plight.

JAN 2 - 1942

Secretary Knox, long regarded as a liberal Republican, and therefore SUPPOSED TO BE a friend to the colored race, proved to be just about as reactionary as any politician from one of the backward states, when it came to considering the rights of Negroes seeking induction into the U. S. Navy on par with other American citizens. Mr. Knox provided a classic excuse for not receiving Negroes in the Navy in any capacity except that of servants to the other men. Negroes, he stated, would show so much intelligence as to entitle them to be promoted to positions of petty officers in the Navy, and that would be "demoralizing," according to Mr Knox.

Gov. Talmadge worked himself into a frenzy over a report to the effect that Dr. Cocking and other Georgia educators had said they thought it would be economical to admit colored teachers to the University of Georgia to take post-graduate work.

Mr. Knox is being blamed for the disaster which took place at Pearl Harbor. His resignation is being demanded by the powerful Chicago Tribune, which contends that Mr. Knox was a failure both as a politician and a newspaper publisher when he was appointed to the important post of Secretary of the Navy. His appointment never did please Democrats, who logically insisted that a member of their own party should have been appointed to this important cabinet post.

Mr. Knox got a lusty bronx cheer from a member of the Illinois Legislature this week, when Representative Charles J. Jenkins, a Negro member of that body, cut loose with the following:

JAN 2 - 1942

"None of the Axis powers would keep a man in charge of the Navy or Army who hadn't been a Navy or Army man substantially all of his life. Instead of taking command from Admiral Kimmel, Knox ought to resign. Both he and Secretary War Stimson were political appointees."

JAN 2 - 1942

As for Gov. Talmadge, his antics have virtually wrecked the educational system of that state. He has been denounced by educators from one end of the country to the other and Georgia colleges have lost their accredited status. It is certain that Georgians are not going to let Talmadge wreck their educational system and lose the financial support of the great philanthropic boards of the North

Both Secretary Knox and Gov. Talmadge appear on their way out, "the public welfare demanding it."

Incidentally, Gov. Prentice Cooper who lectured Negroes last year on the theme "This Is a White Man's Country" isn't wearing any halo of public favor himself, these days. His wisecrack didn't seem to make any big a hit with his own race than it made with the Negroes of Tennessee and the nation.

'Negroes Interlaced In Social Pattern'

5-6K

Editor of The Knoxville Journal:

Among the numerous questions asked during Negro History Week by those who have only a passing fancy of Negro achievement is:

What have Negroes done for America and why aren't they satisfied with what they have?

An answer might be found in the statement that Negroes are interlaced in the pattern of our social order to the extent that every impact upon that pattern is felt equally by him. He is compelled to share, whether he wills or not, hence he is not satisfied with less than an equal chance at sufficient growth, without which he cannot produce his best.

Rapid gains have been made in the field of Social Service. The National Urban League, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have played major roles in the orientation of Negroes to new thinking and combined social action for the common good. The Young Men's and the Young Women's Christian Associations among Negroes are aware of this concept of the unity of mankind, and are committed to the task of incorporating in their working philosophies the truly Democratic ideal. To be sure, the Negro recognizes his part in the present economy, and knows that he must be considered in any long range program of social planning if such a program is to be effective.

If Democracy, about which we are all concerned at such a time as this, is to withstand the onslaughts of encroaching dictatorship, her Negro constituents must be given equal chance for participation and growth. Our social forces must produce a co-operative order because one ideal cannot maintain itself without the strength of the other.

Push Drive Against Prejudice in Want Ads

Cacchione, Mintz Bills Pressed by Jewish Committee Here

A campaign for the passage of the Mintz Bill in the New York State Assembly and the Cacchione Bill in the City Council, for the eradication of discriminatory help wanted advertisements has been undertaken by the Jewish People's Committee, Bernard J. Harkavy, national secretary announced yesterday.

The Mintz Bill provides that any newspaper that publishes want ads with reference to race, creed or color of applicants, shall be barred from getting advertising from any department of the New York State government. The Cacchione Bill is similar except that it forbids any department in New York City government from advertising in such a paper.

MAR 19 1942

In announcing the campaign Mr. Harkavy called for a flood of telegrams, letters and postcards to be sent to Assemblyman Oswald D. Heck, chairman of the Assembly Rules Committee where the Mintz Bill is now under consideration. He urged that New York City members of the Committee should be informed immediately of the desirability of the bill's passage. They are Patrick H. Sullivan, James J. Dooling and Abbot Low Moffat of Manhattan; Irwin Steingut of Brooklyn and John A. Devany, Jr. of the Bronx.

The Cacchione measure has been sent to the Finance Committee of the City Council which is headed by Councilman Kinsley. Members of this committee include Councilman Isaacs, Klein, McCarthy, Carroll, Schick, Quin and Vogel.

The Jewish People's Committee is organizing a series of meetings throughout the city in support of these measures.

Accommodations for Negroes.

To The Observer:

Recently my husband and I have journeyed to Louisiana and back to see our son, going afar as a soldier. We had great difficulty in finding any place for our driver, not chauffeur, to eat, sleep and comfort stations. A man can't live for days on drug store sandwiches. We were not willing to have our car parked away from us and very few places would sleep Negroes.

The Observer is a liberal paper and I think it would be rendering a service if you brought this problem before the public. In Biloxi we asked where the man could eat and they sent him five miles away; and at only two very modern Standard Oil stations did we discover any accommodations for Negroes.

At one tourist camp I asked why there was no provision for drivers and they said so few calls came that it was not worth while. Here is an activity Colored people could engage in, the color of one's skin has nothing to do with the needs of the human body.

I was glad to see the letter to The Observer about Kress store accommodations and that somebody has some consideration.

NEGROES' LEADER ASKS POSTPONING OF RACIAL ISSUES

AUG 26 1942

Louisville, Ky., Aug. 25 (AP).—The American Negro was advised today by one of his leaders that "this is not the time for the Negro to unduly press for advantages."

Speaking before the two day planning session of the American Teachers association, Dr. F. M. Wood, former president of Kentucky State college for Negroes at Frankfort, Ky., and now a supervisor in the Baltimore school system, said that "regardless of the shortcomings in the United States system of government wartime is no time to raise such issues."

5-6K

AUG 26 1942

The conference of Negro leaders replaces the canceled national convention, and problems of administration, educational differentials and postwar adjustments are under discussion.

Dr. Wood declared that: "I am thoroly in accord, and all Negroes should be, with the war against aggression. Japanese and German appeals to racial prejudices are not getting them anywhere and I hope that continues the case."

40 MILLION DARK AMERICANS

On this Western Hemisphere and within the confines of the Americas and the islands that are included in the plan for "hemispheric solidarity," there are admittedly forty million and more individuals who are identified with the darker racial groups and this does not include Mexico, whose subjects are just as swarthy as the Indians to whom Sir Stafford Cripps offered the famous "post-dated" check. The rights of these people must be given serious consideration if there is to be any lasting peace.

This nation of ours, this glorious United States of America, has been repeatedly warned that racial discrimination against darker people has far-flung and dangerous repercussions. President Roosevelt correctly recognizes that the "issues of fairness to the Negro in our armed forces and war industries is now a major issue."

Pittsburgh, 21

Adversity, exploitation, poverty, misery and color antipathies have embittered the hearts of fifteen million swarthy souls in the United States, sixteen million in Brazil, four and one-half million in Cuba, and many more millions in the islands of the Caribbean and in the scattered South American countries. This bitterness will gradually result in a community of interest and express itself in "hemispheric resentment." It appears clearly that there will be no solidarity of the hemispheres of the Western World until the despicable systems and customs of the white world are ameliorated or abolished.

Representative John M. Coffee warned the Congress scarcely a month ago that "sad things have been happening to governments whose officers and bureaucrats failed to keep abreast" and "who showed inflexibility, stodginess and race prejudice." Since that time Burma has fallen.

Forty million dark-skinned Americans are vitally interested in the Good Neighbor program and in Pan-Americanism. They are now witnessing examples of the effects of prejudice and plutocracy. Brazil, described as the largest Negro nation on earth, cannot help but be aware of the inside fight that we in the United States are being compelled to wage to gain a place to stand, a fulcrum and a lever. Venezuela, Colombia, Ecuador, Central America and Peru with their heterogeneous population must also have their attentions fixed. All the world is watching the battle for human freedom and liberty. The darker races of this continent have an interest and a stake in the great conflict and that interest and that stake will fix the rights and privileges of nations yet unborn.

We are proud to observe that definite recognition of the seriousness of the hemispheric plight is now recognized by this nation. Only the bourbon Southland and fanatical Northern segments seem bent on clinging to the sins of yesterday and they may well make sure that "their sins will find them out."

A new day appears to be dawning over the horizon, for after this dreadful shedding of blood, there perhaps will be a remission of sins and a change in the relations of man to man. Out of the shell holes of war, we dark folk of the United States may be able to fly down to Rio on some Sunday morning and gain inspiration and hope in the knowledge that color lines can be wiped away and man can live by the side of man in peace and harmony. If it can be done in the Latin Americas, it can be done here.

ALTHOUGH Mrs. Bethune called a special meeting of the "Black Cabinet" Thursday night to discuss affairs which have taken a peculiar turn, she was unable to be present because of a Baltimore engagement which necessitated her appearance in that town. The topic? No one knows, but the group that was present climbed all over a proposal to establish a "super-duper" bureau here to be known as the Bureau of Negro Affairs, suggested by a high-ranking Negro official who hasn't exactly been in close touch with things for about eight years. That was the way the evening was spent, and if that gentleman could have heard the things that were said, would he be sore?

More talk arises about Dr. Robert Weaver going over to the Civil Service Commission to fill a needed spot there. Only the doctor is keeping quiet on the topic.

The Ted Postons have two Persian kittens, yclept, "Scotch" and "Soda."

MAY 23 1942

They are talking about Chandler Owens' "consultant" job with OFF here at a nice per diem rate of pay. Mr. Owens' chief interest was in the publication of a booklet with some strange ideas in it, which was to have been distributed to the soldiers now in service. They do say that Walter White, Judge William Hastie (who had endorsed something else for Owens) thrashed out right and left, withdrawing whatever they had said, once they learned what was intended. OFF is still in the middle.

The bane of Negro journalism is not Westbrook Pegler and his ilk, but the "part-time boys," most of whom have axes to grind and shout loudest for free doings.

New addition to President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices—Gosh, all hemlock, soon as Dutton Ferguson and Al Smith get a fairly complete list of the Cabinet ready for mimeographing, something pops up. Either they are on or they are off. Gracious knows, they move fast; 'tis said the general didn't want his name listed in the danged thing.

Howard University is denying that Otto McClaren represented that institution in his famous "reply to Pegler." He represents some journalistic fraternity or other.

Newest wrinkle here—a mass meeting to tie up the two names, "McArthur and Miller," referring of course to Dorie Miller, on a victory button. That is a rather wide stretch, isn't it?

This is the town of intrigues, rumors and cliques. Everybody has a story to tell; everybody has it "hot from sources higher up"; others know it "off the record," and everyone wants to know "what do you hear?"

How are the war stamps and bonds going around Harlem? They are better plays than the digits, can't lose on them.

With the growth of the Negro press, the place of the "sun down" editor is definitely relegated to the ashcan—that is, those brethren who hold jobs elsewhere and do newspaper work in the evening when the sun has gone down.

The plight of the dancing teacher who was trying to make ballet dancers out of a group of little jitterbugs. As fast as she would turn her back after having them on their toes going through the gyrations of ballerinas, the little scamps would swing out.

The colored brother got it in the neck as usual in the new plans of the CPTC (which trains civilians in aviation). Pointing to the waiting list at Tuskegee, the whites say there is no need for additional schools. Just as soon as some money can be realized out of the proposition for the students' training, the colored schools are cut out of the picture.

What did the Civil Service Commission want with all of the available comic strips from Negro newspapers? A man was busy cutting them up all Friday afternoon. Monkey business?

With the signing of Abram Harris to teach at the summer school at City College, that institution gets a chap who used to live just at the ~~foot of the hill and~~ daily, en route to Columbia, he used to look at the massive Gothic pile and wish he could teach there. A wish realized.

Lunching at Howard University the other day with a prominent professor just returned from an extended trip, heard a discussion of a proposed "forum program" which will bring Howard before 5,000 listeners. There will be four discussants to the side and the topic have to do with post war relationships between races, or something similar to that.

"California" Jones, erstwhile newsman, was a visitor to Washington last week. On business, of course, as who isn't in this section these days?

This new influx of young Negroes is certainly pepping up the old town. You see them everywhere and all of them are filled with the same idea—making democracy work.

Old line government agencies are in for a thorough going-over by a certain agency here which is investigating the reasons why so many Negroes are kept in certain low grades and never receive promotions to other jobs no matter how many civil service registers they are on. And a general commotion is in the making. But that's what is needed, something to stir up these complacent agency heads.

Friendship Of South Americans Stymied By Attitude Of U. S. Towards Own Colored Citizens

NEW YORK—Virtually two-thirds of the 150,000,000 people of Central and South America are of African and Indian descent—of colored blood by North American standards—and are not unaware of the marked prejudice against colored persons existing in the United States, declared Attorney Charles H. Mahoney, former Michigan Commissioner of Labor, and now president of the Great Lakes Mutual Insurance Company, commenting on our "Good Neighbor" policy in South America, in an interview here at the Hotel Theresa this week.

Recently returned from his annual visit to Central and South American countries, whose culture and folkways he has studied for many years, Mr. Mahoney, on a suggestion from this reporter, spoke of some of his observations in regard to the working of our "Good Neighbor" policy, what it appears to be accomplishing and not accomplishing.

First of all, Mr. Mahoney asserted, the people of the United States will not get very far toward building hemispheric solidarity with the Caribbean and Latin American countries, without a careful regard for the racial composition of their populations. "This is not to say," he advised, "that these countries are not willing to cooperate with the United States in opposing the Axis menace, in fighting Hitler and his 'New Order.'"

Rather is it to say that a great many—all too many—of these people, whatever temporary collaboration may be effected between them and the United States, will continue to regard with suspicion and distrust a country whose official policy permits and even encourages, race and color discrimination. It is clear, it seems to me, that the long-range objectives of the 'God Neighbor' policy will be difficult of realization so long as South Americans suspect the motives and aims of North Americans," he said.

Treated Most Graciously

Mr. Mahoney said he and his party found themselves always, wherever they went in the several countries visited, treated most graciously, adding that a distinctly North American accent was so far from being cause for coolness, actually, the apparent ground for the most cordial treatment. The Latin Americans, many of them seem to seek out for special friendliness and conversation colored persons from the United States. One got the impression, re-enforced by many incidents and on many occasions, Mr. Mahoney said, that these people, whether black, brown or fair, felt something in common with the North American of color.

Continuing, Mr. Mahoney declared that while he noted no special brusqueness exhibited toward white North Americans, he observed that there was a sort of special concern for the comfort and well-being of colored people from the United States. This seemed even more noticeable during his last visit than on previous ones.

U. S. Should Send Commission

In view of easily observable facts, Mr. Mahoney says he believes the U. S. "Good Neighbor" policy would be considerably advanced if the Government would send a commission of representative colored Americans to the Latin American nations to further the "Good Neighbor" policy and strengthened hemispheric solidarity. Instead of so many Southern white Americans and imperialist Yankees, "who, whatever their conscious intentions, seem chiefly to succeed in patronizing our Latin friends to the south."

Such a commission, Mr. Mahoney believes, could do much, by the very nature of its composition, to promote a different and, in the nature of the case, a better understanding between the United States and the peoples of Latin America.

U. S. ATTORNEY BIDDLE ASKS NEGRO EQUALITY

JUN 6 - 1942

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 4.—Speaking at commencement exercises of LaSalle college last week, United States Attorney-General Biddle stated that this country must give Negroes their promised equality of opportunity to keep the faith with the democratic ideal.

JUN 6 - 1942

Biddle called for tolerance in American relations, and added the warning that there were points beyond which "compromise becomes intolerable."

Particular emphasis was placed upon the demonstrations surrounding the Detroit Housing riots, which ensued when Negroes attempted to occupy the Sojourner Truth Housing Project, he declared such bigotry must be stamped out to make democracy work.

The Daily Worker
New York, N. Y.

This page is a contribution to Negro rights, which stand out so largely as a factor in America's success in the war.

Progress has been made in this respect during the past week. This has been seen in the Navy order for Negro enrollment in the sea fighting forces. It is to be noted in extended activities against discrimination based on the President's executive order, and in the initiative taken by a number of unions for Negro rights.

MAY 24 1942

There is much more to be done—in the establishment of democratic equality in the armed forces, in the throwing down of all bars against Negro employment, in the abolition of the whole anti-American discrimination system.

MAY 24 1942

Such measures, reflecting the strong feelings of the American people, will speed the war effort. They will enhance the determination of the Negro people to give their full energies to the fight against the Axis. Those measures will, at the same time, remedy a gross injustice.

THE STRATEGY OF GOOD-WILL

Since this war is too big for any human imagination to grasp in its entirety, a newspaper and its readers must emphasize one part of it at a time. For instance, most of us have been watching the Russian front during the past two weeks, with a side glance since Wednesday at the flare-up in Libya. In China the Japanese were trying to choke off Chungking's access to the outside world by going up the Burma Road and by getting control of a long strip of the southeastern coastline. This news came to us, but it had to take second place.

There is another kind of news, hard to get because it calls for a knowledge of what is going on in millions of human minds. Just what are people thinking, in China, in India, in Burma, in Malaya, in the Philippines, in the Netherlands East Indies, in the heart of Africa, in Arabia and the Near East, about the course of this war, its seeming objectives and the kind of peace that will follow it?

Pearl S. Buck throws light on this crucially important field in an article published today in THE TIMES Magazine. The fact that she finds dominant in the Far East is the end of "the colonial way of life." The unquestioned rule of the white men over the much more numerous Asiatic races, she believes, is over. The East Indian or the Chinese does not care to be ruled by Japan, but if he must be ruled by an arbitrary outside power he may prefer one of "his own kind." The attitude may be shortsighted, for white control in the Orient has been in process of relaxation for many years, whereas Japanese control is new and brutal. But the attitude exists. We have to deal with it.

The only way we can successfully deal with it is to concede the equality of the Eastern and Western races: not their present equality in education, in industrial power or in living standards but their equality in rights and responsibilities, individual for individual, given the same freedoms and opportunities. The Eastern peoples owe much to the benevolent aspects of Western imperialism: medical services, sanitation, lowered death rates, in many cases better living conditions, sometimes protection against domestic anarchy or native tyrannies. But benevolence, as a quality shown by a superior toward an inferior, is out of date. We can henceforth be of real use to peoples like the East Indians and the Chinese only if we let them be equally useful to us as fellow-citizens in a democratic world civilization.

There is an alternative, which Mrs. Buck is not afraid to state. We can eliminate the color barrier, or we can prepare for "a war between East and West in which the Chinese will not be on our side." The path which every liberal-minded American wishes to take is also the highway toward victory in this war and peace in years to come. Where good-will and the understanding heart have gone, there the mechanized battalions may not have to follow.

Gains On The Home Front

AMERICA'S "Tenth Man," who, in the war effort particularly, has been having difficulty in sharing the "democratic way of life" on a scale comparable with his fellow-Americans, may find fresh courage in recent developments.

In the past it has been almost impossible for the Negro to get his case before the bar of public opinion. He would ask and be refused; he would protest and be not heard, and the upshot of it all would be a distortion of his asking and of his protesting in an unsympathetic press. There have been exceptions, of course, found mostly in liberal Southern newspapers.

The Negro newspapers have tried to list and interpret the difficulties and present the case. Their efforts, in important respects did not go far enough. The Government has gotten much information from the Negro newspapers, but the important industrialists, the big business men who influence decisions and make policies, the great body of American people whose reading is confined to the white press have received only a distorted picture of the Negro's case from casual articles based upon misinformation and misunderstanding.

This situation is being changed. In the June issue of Fortune, the business man's magazine, published by Time Incorporated, who also publish Time and Life magazines, there is a factual, well considered article entitled "The Negro's War."

This article does not undertake to make it appear that American Negroes are trying to start a war within a war, nor trying to take advantage of the present war to bring about a drastic revolution in American life, but it does set forth in dispassionate words which have their basis in fact, the way that Negroes are being prevented from making their contribution to an American victory over our powerful enemies.

In doing this, some interesting revelations are made. In September, 1941, the U. S. Bureau of Employment Security inquired of defense industries how many job openings they expected during the following six months, and how many would be available to Negroes, and found that 51 per cent of all anticipated openings, or new jobs, were barred to Negroes as a matter of policy. These answers came in at a time when labor shortages were getting in the acute stage.

Later, in December, 1941, an inquiry by the National Industrial Conference Board disclosed that management's experience with Negro labor had little to do with practices of discrimination. It is often said that Negroes are not employed because they are "undependable, shiftless and inefficient." The NIC Board requested 102 selected industrial managements employing Negro labor to rank colored employees on comparable skilled and unskilled work. As to ability and skill 70 employers graded their Negro employees equal to their white colleagues, 31 thought they were poorer, one graded them better. On production 85 found Negroes equal to, 12 poorer and five better than whites. As to regularity in attendance, 64 reported Negroes equal to, 32 poorer and five better than white workers. This score speaks for itself, especially when it is considered that white management was doing all of the rating, and, in many instances, white management had numerous reasons to be either prejudiced or evasive.

Importing Labor With Lots Of It At Home

The Fortune magazine article made another interesting disclosure. Selecting Baltimore as a typical seat of defense activities, it found that the city, after exhausting its native white labor supply and importing a great many—for whom new housing had to be provided—still needed 35,000 additional workers, which if produced from outside, would have to be provided with new housing. While Baltimore pondered this problem its 167,000 Negro workers remained untapped. No arrangements had been made to use workers from this local reservoir. No training program had been set up for them. The article quotes the Baltimore Sun as saying: "We are not here concerned with the long-range social consequences which might result from the removal of these barriers (against the use of Negroes for skilled work).We are thinking simply of the ironic situation Baltimore finds itself in now: on the one hand a desperate shortage of skilled and semi-skilled workmen for our war industries, and on the other hand the existence of a large reservoir of labor which is rarely considered when there is need for skilled rather than unskilled workmen." Of course, the situation in Baltimore was duplicated in practically every area in which war industries needed labor.

Employers Explode Old Fallacy

Perhaps the most important revelation in the Fortune article is that whenever or wherever management takes a firm stand the objections to Negro workers that are based on race generally disappear, with no bad results to management, white workers or production. The article analyized carefully the widespread exclusion of Negro workers due to objections on the part of plant foremen, white workers, and occasionally to management, and did not undertake to discount altogether the human factors entering into these objections. It was found that the Employers' Association of Chicago had set a salutary example for the solution of this problem by issuing the following memo: "Some employers have raised the objection that the attitude of their own employees force them to discriminate. However true this may have been in the past, it is now the job of employers to influence their employees to sacrifice such prejudices as a matter of patriotic necessity. It is not going to be easy—nor is it going to be easy to train a whole new army of unskilled men and women—but both must be done, and the employer must do it." The Fortune article then pointed out how several large industries had proceeded to do just what the Chicago group had suggested.

More Light on the Labor Unions

The Fortune article then turned the light on the labor unions, and their part in the exclusion of Negroes from participation in the war effort in a manner to fully utilize this large reservoir of manpower. It was found that 19 international unions, 10 of them affiliated with the A. F. of L., "explicitly exclude Negroes from membership." Officially the A. F. of L. frowns on this policy, but most of the unions are self-governing and make their own rules bearing upon membership. Where the constitution does not specifically exclude colored men ingenious ways are found to do it. The machinists for example, accomplish exclusion by a "ritualistic oath." Each white man taken into the union must make a solemn oath that he will introduce into his union only "competent, white men."

The pressure upon the unions to forego their exclusion tactics has brought about a device known as a "permit," for which the union makes colored men pay for the privilege of working in a defense industry, or on any other kind of work where the closed shop prevails.

Into the field on organized labor the Congress of Industrial Organizations has brought a breath of pure air to many Negroes. This labor organization, which is far more centralized than the A. F. of L., is officially opposed to racial discrimination. The Fortune article, however, cites some cases in which discrimination has been practiced by CIO, and other cases in which the A. F. of L. has saved Negroes from discrimination.

Where U. S. Office of Education Stands

The most interesting revelation made by Fortune's writer is in relation to where the United States Office of Education stands in this picture of "The Negro's War." It is pointed out that "What America's Negro community resents as employment discrimination is in part due to the fact that the bulk of Negro labor is still unskilled." Despite the great impetus of the Booker Washington idea of educating the Negro's head, heart and hand—with emphasis on the hand—it is not generally known that industrial training of Negroes has been restricted so much during the past quarter of a century that today only one out of every eight Negroes belongs to the skilled or semi-skilled groups, while every third gainfully employed white man is skilled or semi-skilled.

Early in the defense program Congress, at the urging of the President appropriated $60,000,000 to start preemployment and refresher training courses in order to step up the reservoir of skilled workers. The money is disbursed through the United States Office of Education. Here is what Fortune's writer found in 18 selected border and Southern states and the District of Columbia: "Over 22 per cent of the population in this area is Negro; but in the preemployment and refresher-training courses, supervised by the United States Office of Education, only 3,215 Negroes were enrolled last January—less than four per cent of the trainees. Out of 4,630 training sources only 194 accepted Negroes." The bill which provides for this defense training specifically undertook to take care of the situation which its framers knew would arise in the states where separate schools are provided for the races, by adding this amendment: "No trainee . . . shall be discriminated against because of sex, race or color; and where separate schools are required by law for separate population groups, to the extent needed for trainees for each group, equitable provisions shall be made for facilities and training of like quality."

A Norfolk case illustrates how poorly this arrangement has worked. Four trade shops which were completed—as to building—by the end of 1941, are not yet functioning fully, in June 1942!

The Public Gets The Facts

Essence of the Fortune magazine article is that it is incontrovertable as to the facts; it gets the facts before intelligent, sober-minded Americans, who otherwise would have remained in ignorance of them. The cold, startling facts, in themselves are bound to arouse action among influential Americans who do not want to see one-tenth of their country's manpower wasted in the hour of its greatest peril.

It is also worth saying here that other great newspapers and magazines are beginning to look into the Negro's case, and to present their findings to the American people. The May number of Harper's Magazine carried a remarkable article by Herbert Agar, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal. "The Truth is Good News," which every patriotic American ought to read. The June Atlantic monthly has an illuminating article by Dr. Robert C. Weaver, entitled, "With The Negro's Help," which ably implements the article in Fortune. Time, Life, Colliers, and New York's unique newspaper PM have been making striking contributions to this liberation of the truth, and all of this adds up to a gain for democracy on the home front. It is especially a notable gain for America's Tenth Man.

Man's Faith In Man

Is there a basis for a world in which all men will have respect for all other men? Have we that basis now? Will men soon be able to live with one another in a spiritual unity that will be the peace on earth so sought after?

"Is There a Basis for Spiritual Unity in the World Today?" was the inclusive question before America's Town Meeting of the Air Thursday evening, broadcast from Howard University in Washington, D. C.

Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of the university, joined with one of his faculty members, Dr. Doxey Wilkerson, to attempt to establish that there is, today, such a basis. Man, Dr. Johnson said, is a religious animal, who has been searching since the eighth century before the Christian era for the means of creating a spiritual unity among men. He has been successful. True enough, Dr. Johnson admits, there are still, even after so long a struggle, great obstacles. But today there are men—many of them—who have a radical sincerity of belief in the possibilities awaiting men. This is evidence that the basis now exists. With such a basis, Dr. Johnson contends, the task now is to spread it into the hearts of all men everywhere.

Now the entire world, Dr. Wilkerson, Howard University's assistant professor of education, said, is in the midst of great social and economic changes. It is now being realized that men can produce enough goods for all men. This realization will do much to bring about the spread of that basis of spiritual unity which now exists. Trends, he believes, are plainly evident. Men can make their great peaceful world if they so desire.

Dr. Alain Locke, head of the department of philosophy, could not agree that such a basis now exists. Christianity when institutionalized, he believes, is too closely interwoven with worldly matters. Notions of Christian goodness have wandered throughout the world almost alone. Selfish nationalism, cultural self-satisfaction, racial animosity, even now are widespread, despite the easily accepted belief that we are fighting now for freedom for all men.

Dr. Leon Ransom, acting dean and professor of law, agreed, generally, with Dr. Locke. He emphasized that the ability to subjugate our own interests in favor of world spiritual unity is within us—but is yet to be developed. Both he and Dr. Locke firmly emphasized that today the Negro has yet to achieve a spiritual unity with the white majority of this nation, though he has long been "free."

The speakers for the affirmative are, we believe, sound in their contention that a basis for spiritual unity does exist now. But there are many evidences even today, as the negative speakers emphasized, of selfishness, of nationalism, of the desire of people to set up their own standards and demand conformity of others.

Dr. Wilkerson said that spiritual unity could be spread widely after the necessary change in social structures. The argument of the chicken or the egg, which first? is digressive, though interesting. Dr. Mordecai Johnson, a great educator, is, it seems, nearer the truth when he says that spiritual unity must come from deep within individuals. Such unity must come from all men, from inside all men.

The faith and, too, the realism, of the speakers were emphasized to listeners with the knowledge that this fine program came from a great Negro university. The four Negro educators who spoke seemed to have greater depth to their beliefs, their hopes and faith, by virtue of their own inclusion in a minority race, a race still sometimes oppressed, and lacking, too often, just opportunities.

SOAPBOX -- by Adam Clayton Powell, Jr.

IF IT WERE NOT FOR district attorneys of forthright honesty like Tom Dewey, Bill O'Dwyer and now Frank Hogan, Jefferson's words would be an absolute lie in New York City.

MAY 30 1942

Do you know that in our town when a policeman kills or beats a citizen no investigation is made by the district attorney unless a complaint is made?

Do you know that witnesses to such incidents are ofttimes escorted to the district attorney's office by policemen?

56

Do you know that hearings are invariably held before the grand jury which meets behind closed doors?

MAY 30 1942

And do you know DESPITE THE FACT THAT NEGROES ARE 20% OF THE POPULATION OF THIS BOROUGH, NOT MORE THAN 1 OR 2 NEGROES SAT ON THE GRAND JURY IN 1941?

Let us go over Michael Curley's slaying of James Morrow in the Greyhound bus terminal. Curley was acquitted on this basis: The witnesses to the actual crime testified THEY HEARD OTHERS say, "Look out, he's got a knife." When they opened Morrow's hand, he was clutching a bus ticket. A day later, after the body had been searched by the police, a morgue attendant said that as she was moving the body she heard a noise and there on the ground lay the knife.

Fundamentally, the Negro in New York is not much better off than in Alabama. The false democracy of Alabama is dressed up a little bit more in New York. The basic principles of a full democracy are just about ignored in this "free" North.

It is true we go to theatres, eat in some restaurants (and are the objects of curiosity). Our children can go to mixed schools. There are a few Negro teachers in the elementary division, some in the secondary, almost none in the senior high and absolutely none in the colleges. We do have a chance to take civil service examinations but immediately ole man Jimcro begins his dirty work. Citizen after citizen has been called up, some as many as 15 times, for appointments in Federal civil service, but when they showed their dark faces the interviewer stuttered an excuse. Our city and state civil service is much better, but when it comes to question of advancement, qualified people are passed over just because they are Negroes.

And so the story goes and we could cite many more instances. Ole man Jimcro is just dressed up in the north. Instead of blue jeans he's togged in striped pants and a cutaway coat. He's still ole man Jimcro.

Probably the most serious similarity of New York City to Alabama is the administration of justice. Thomas Jefferson's words are carved over the entrance to the New York Criminal Courts building: "Equal and exact justice for all."

MAY 30 1942

Last year the Esposito brothers ran wild on Fifth ave. They shot people. They were criminals of the worst type. Yet they were never killed. They were subdued, arrested and given a fair trial. Every effort was made to save their lives.

BUT—THE GREATEST DISSIMILARITY BETWEEN ALABAMA AND NEW YORK IS THAT HERE WE CAN VOTE. Remember that.

White Harlemite Asks His Race to End Prejudices

APR 30 1942

By A. C. MAYNARD

AT last America's at war. She has enlisted her heart, her soul and every possible resource at her command to the service and victory of mankind.

May I in all sincerity appeal to my fellow citizens to forget all past religious and racial prejudices—let us bury the hatchet—pitch in and forget the past. The writer is an American white man very happily married to a true blue American colored girl. He has established a home, he is indeed happy to see his wife contented in her surroundings, and is indeed willing as he did in World War number one "to give everything to help defend that home."

Both Are Good Americans

APR 30 1942

"Yes—he is American."

The ignorant public sometimes look at us with a question mark when we are on our way to church, a picture show or our household shopping. That very look too has its humorous side, for no matter what the outsider's look may be, she at least cannot be taken for a German or Italian.

"No—she is an American."

An American who is behind Douglas MacArthur, Franklin D. Roosevelt and please don't forget General Davies.

I am now asking my fellow Americans to give up their stupid traditions of the past, their silly customs of living in a fool's Paradise of segregation; which is the basis of most of our difficulties. We need to know each other! Yes—let me get away from the request and move on to "demanding." Let me suggest not in a humble way but in a firm respectful attitude that we consider one another.

Urges Whites to Unite

They are now drafting men in this country to fight for our 48 Stars and 13 Stripes. These men are called upon regardless of race or color—let us remember that. Let us keep in our mind the colored mess boy on a United States battleship at Pearl Harbor who when his white comrades were put out of action, manned the gun alone, without any help. Let us honor the first man who gave his life before the Japanese guns in the Philippines—he too was a Negro.

APR 30 1942

Let's be AMERICANS!

Let me ask my fellow white men to join our whole nation behind Douglas MacArthur. If you knew as much about the colored race as I do, perhaps you would immediately change your mind. Perhaps you would have guts enough when an aged colored lady comes on the subway or bus

Between The Lines

MAY 5 - 1942

By GORDON B. HANCOCK

Hypertension is a fancy name for high blood pressure just as delinquency is a fancy name for old fashioned devilment, or prevarication is a fancy name for old fashioned lying. Scientist have a way of giving new names to ailments and disorders they cannot correct; and the ordinary laymen in his confusion of names, is disposed to forget his afflictions, momentarily at least. When we call our old fashioned "consumption" tuberculosis, we are not getting anywhere especially, except increasing our vocabulary. Hypertension if not properly treated will result sooner or later in a stroke and all that follows.

There can be no doubt that there is a hypertension in race relations today, which unless treated with greatest care, is bound to result fatally. After all of our smooth talk about Christianity and education as they bear on the problem of race relations, the fact remains we are entering a dangerous phase of the interracial conflict. The outbreak of riots here and there about the country is symptomatic of an undercurrent of racial bitterness that demands the most careful thinking and planning on the part of the best elements of both whites and Negroes. It is not enough for Negroes alone to take great care in this matter, neither is it enough for whites alone to guard carefully against certain aggravations of the color question.

If we are to avoid serious trouble, both whites and Negroes must face the ugly fact that race relations are in a state of hypertension and rupture; and that our best is demanded if certain important previous gains are to be preserved. Riots and rioting are not going to settle the race problem in this country; and those short-sighted Negroes and whites who would precipitate riots are enemies of the country we are trying to save. Just as no great moral issue has ever been settled on the battlefield; so no victory in race relations can be won by out-breaks of rioting throughout the nation. However resentful the Negro may feel towards the injustices and indignities to which he has been subjected, it is just as well that he know that these are not to be corrected by riots.

This article is inspired by a speech I heard by a prominent Negro made within recent weeks. Before an audience of nearly a thousand this prominent man stood for nearly an hour and delivered one of the ablest speeches we have ever heard. But from beginning to end the speech was one continuous rehearsal of the wrongs that the Negro had suffered in this country. By inuendos and direct charges he built up one of the mightiest cases against the white man that I have ever heard. Subtly he was casting himself in the role of hero, by merely enumerating his race's wrongs. The audience of course responded with an enthusiasm that was contagious. When the speech was over, there fell over that vast audience ominous spell of resentment and bitterness that is bound to do damage somewhere, somehow and somewhen.

This prominent speaker did not seem to know that when only one side of a question is stated the statement becomes propaganda and not information. Here we had a Negro, the victim of a propaganda of the most hellish sort, resorting to propaganda equally hellish. He was following the same procedure that has wrought damnation to Negroes a thousand times. He called himself "fighting fire with fire" appearing himself oblivious of the fact that in the fight of fire with fire that there can be no victory, but defeat. Not a word was said about the resurgence of justice for fair play in the heart of the new south that is forcing itself upon the attention of the nation. Not a reference was made to the Abolitionists and northern philanthrophy that laid the foundations of the schools that shelter 40,000 young aspiring Negroes.

No mention was made of the fast revising policies of the southern press whereby the voice of justice for Negroes is becoming louder and more insistent. Our prominent speaker seemed to overlook the fact that everybody knows what the south and nation have done against the Negro; but many do not know what they have done for him. Even the south is not totally loss when it comes to race relations; for if it had been all-bad the Negro could never have made the strides of which we boast from time to time. Strangely enough the Negro's greatest advancement is in the south. Durham, the Negro's business capitol and Atlanta the Negro's educational capitol, are in the much maligned south. The south is fast becoming a haven for northern educated Negroes. Just as the white man is not getting anywhere by cultivating hatred for Negroes, Negroes are not getting anywhere by cultivating hatred for whites and thereby increasing interracial hypertension. Negro leadership had better look well the problem being created by a few of our power-maniacs and honor-hungry orators; for Negroes themselves, will pay the greater price of their folly!

War Aims

NEW YORK, June 1.—This nonsense about the war aims of the United States is beginning to get out of control, so, before we become a lot of confirmed political hopheads walking around in a dream of international and interracial fellowship and love, it should be stated with such force as to snap us out of our daze that the fighters and people of the United States are at war for the sole purpose of defending this country from a combination of enemies who touched off the fight by a treacherous attack under cover of protestations of friendship.

That is all there is to it.

When the war is over the United States had better continue to exclude Asiatics, except under very careful restrictions, because experience has shown that they work harder and live on less than we can and tend to colonize, monopolize and drive native Americans out of our own American areas. We found that out a long time ago and we will get ourselves in a fix if we don't have the courage to say that this is going to be a white man's country with the sole exception in favor of the 13,000,000 Negroes among us who are here because our ancestors brought their ancestors here. This was a very great wrong, as leading Negroes agree, and we can only try to work out agreeable relations with the colored men who are all native Americans and, in all respects, belong.

Oriental Swarms

Even if the Asiatics would let us, we just wouldn't migrate to their countries in any numbers, whereas they would come here in overwhelming and highly prolific swarms. But we should be able to handle that during the emotional period by stopping all immigration, including the European which, incidentally, in the years since the other war, has been very bad because it brought over hordes of continental no-damn-goods who didn't like anything at home but don't like anything here either because we don't adopt their European ideas. The The result is that this nation, which was founded as a New Deal and refuge for white Europeans who were glad to put Europe behind them forever, has been infected with the very poisons which produced the present condition in Europe and has, unconsciously, turned back to Europe for advice and example.

I am more firmly than ever convinced that full citizenship should not be granted to immigrants and that they should not be eligible for public office—a provision which we could adopt within our right and with apologies to nobody. This might discourage immigration, but the club rolls are full up now and we need time to settle some strictly domestic affairs which, incidentally, would not be nearly so bad if they had not been complicated with suggestions from Europeans, or native Americans who look to Europe for their thoughts.

Russian Attitude

To the objection that such a rule would have deprived us of the services of Senator Bob Wagner and Felix Frankfurter my answer is that their contributions to our present state of affairs are some that I have in mind in offering the suggestion.

Many Europeans think they do things rather well in Russia, but the only reason they can't go to Russia is that Russia does things just as well that immigration and suggestions from outsiders as to how she should run her domestic affairs both are rejected. Russia will not be letting down the bars to immigration after the war and it takes no prophet to foresee that the new Chinese nation, strong and proud in victory and wise and hard in the ways of war, will put up with no more superior nonsense from the pink people. China will be China for the Chinese and their leaders are no such fools as to think that the United States has any intention to act out this brotherhood scenario in our own country, so why should we kid ourselves?

I notice that Russia is keeping a very level head about her objectives. Russia is fighting to kick the ears off a hated enemy who attacked her, and for no other reason, and yet we who also were attacked in the same treacherous way, drool on about freedoms and brotherhood, everywhere in the world, as though we had to find some sentimental excuse to fight for our very lives.

Play Fair

ANY baseball umpire can tell you about the temper of Americans who suspect that the rules of fair play aren't being strictly observed. Yet the most powerful "umpire" of them all, Judge Kenesaw Landis, Commissioner of Baseball, refuses to hear the cry "Fair play!" when it is addressed to him. He refuses even to acknowledge that there is such a cry, though it comes from millions—those who demand that Negroes be permitted to play on the big league teams. It can't be that Landis hasn't heard the demand yet; it has been directed at him for several years now. It can't be that he doubts the ability of Negroes in baseball; managers of big leagues, as well as players, have testified that at least twenty Negro ball players have demonstrated their qualifications for a place on the big teams. Even southern papers, like the Louisville (Ky.) Courier-Journal, have editorially urged Judge Landis to throw off his Jim-Crowism. But he is silent; he does not even give a reason for his refusal. It is no more than fair, then, to suggest a reason for him: which is simply that Judge Landis is so prejudiced against Negroes that he will act contrary to the best interests of baseball in order to "keep them in their place." This would be intolerable enough in other times. But in the year 1942 it is flagrantly unpatriotic.

Underprivileged Southern Negro

All this talk about the poor, underprivileged Southern Negro irks me. It is done, as a rule, by persons living outside the South, where the Negro population constitutes a small minority, instead of those living in the South, where the ratio is about 50-50. I lived in the South 21 years and feel bettter qualified to understand the situation there.

Let us take, first, the question of education for Negroes. In the Southern city which I call home there are several high schools and grammar schools for Negro children, and one college. The Negro teachers in those institutions are well educated and well respected in their profession. Of course the schools in the rural districts are not so good, but neither are the rural schools for white children. Our present superintendent of education is seeking to raise the standard for rural schools for both white and colored.

Nov. 18, 1942

Of course the plight of the Negro sharecropper is sad, in a lot of instances, although I have known of some sharecroppers who prospered. The plight of the Negro sharecropper, however, is no worse than that of the white sharecropper, and you don't hear of anyone ready to go down there with fire and sword and liberate them. In fact, the most of them don't want to be liberated. They are shiftless and lack ambition, and their lot in life is a direct result of that rather than a result of any suppression from outside sources.

I deplore the fact that there are lynchings in the Southland I love so well, but Negroes are not the only ones who are lynched. There are white men lynched, but that news rarely ever goes outside the State. It's the news of the lynching of a Negro that spreads like wildfire and is played up all over the country.

I don't know of any section of the South which, in recent years, would prevent an intelligent Negro from voting. There is a high percentage of illiteracy among rural Negroes and whites, and these ignorant people are easily "bought" by unscrupulous politicians. It is this group which is discouraged from voting.

Now, I am all for the advancement of the Negro race. They are now advancing in fact and, in time, will be able to take their place in the sun. This racial agitation, however, is not the way to do it. It is being stirred by radicals and those who are communistically inclined, who know of no way of accomplishment except by the "strong-arm" method. If they are allowed to persist in this, they will stir up quite a bit of trouble here in our land for which there is no need. They have no love for the Negro himself; they merely seek to divide us among ourselves and thereby destroy ourselves. It is the Christian people who should take the lead—the Christian Negroes and the Christian whites, working together. We know that the Christian principle of love is the solution to every problem. We must show the Negro that we love him and are interested in his well-being. I also plead for patience. Rome wasn't built in a day; neither can this problem be solved within a year or two—possibly one generation.

Let us turn a deaf ear to those who would seek to divert our attention from the Axis wolves who are at our door. The lot of the Negroes, and other minorities, would be infinitely worse if we should lose this war. There will be time enough to work out our internal social problems amicably among ourselves after we have put the Axis in its place.

A TRUE SOUTHERNER.

SAYS FOUR FREEDOMS INCLUDE JEWISH ARMY

Representative Grant Says Its Opponents Are Appeasers

Nov. 16, 1942

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15 — Speaking in support of the proposal for the setting up of a Jewish army to be composed of Palestinian and stateless Jews, under British command, Representative George Grant of Alabama, a member of the National Committee for a Jewish Army, declared in a radio address here tonight that the "right" of the Jews to form such an army was part of the four freedoms guaranteed by the Atlantic Charter.

He took to task those who oppose the proposal as pursuing a policy of appeasement and discrimination. The Jews in Palestine as well as those deprived of nationality by Axis persecution have the same right to fight as an entity in the ranks of the United Nations as do Poles, Czechs, Belgians, Norwegians and members of other oppressed nations, Mr. Grant declared.

He ridiculed as baseless the contention that the formation of a Jewish army as proposed might anger the Arabs, saying that the Arabs and their leaders had been consistently hostile to the British. Moreover, he added, now that virtually the whole of North Africa was in the hands of Great Britain and the United States there no longer was reason for placating the Arabs. Mr. Grant also rejected as untenable the contention that lack of shipping space constituted a valid argument against formation of a Jewish army.

"The right to fight or die for self-preservation or for a cause is the right of all people," the speaker asserted. "Deny this right to one and the rights of all are in jeopardy."

Counter Attack Started

WITH a timing that grooved with the landing of an American expeditionary force in North Africa, "deep" Southern Governors opened a political offensive against the Roosevelt administration. We have particular reference to South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, and Texas.

A few days later this offensive was implemented by the opening of a filibuster by "deep" Southern Senators against the anti-poll tax measure now before that body. Senator Bilbo, of Mississippi, proposes to talk until Christmas, if that is necessary. If the Mississippi Senator does that the anti-poll tax legislation will have to start from scratch in the new Congress that will convene January 3d.

This double-barrelled offensive is political, of course, but it has military value for the Axis. Nothing has happened on the domestic front since the war started that demonstrated more definitely that a section of the United States is in thorough accord with Hitler's theories of race.

The offensive started by the Southern Governors is based on opposition to the whole Roosevelt philosophy of aiding the common people to rise in the economic scale. It happens that in the South, one-third of the common people are Negroes. But let no one get the mistaken idea that the Southern political oligarchy is after suppressing the Negro one-third only. The white common people in the South are as much the object of suppression as the Negroes. It happens that the plutocrats can fool them by dinning in their ears the dodo that improvement of the Negro's status will destroy white supremacy.

The Southern Governors met in Nashville recently in what purported to be a "war-time conference." At that time they agreed to contest the Roosevelt administration—or rather the War Administration—"on its stand with regard to the Negro situation in the South."

The only "stand" the War Administration has taken on the Negro situation in the South is the President's executive order 8802, which forbade discrimination in employment in defense industries "on account of race, creed, color or national origin." The order was a war measure, which the political South has interpreted as a move to nullify Southern racial separation laws. This is not true.

Thousands of Southern white people are opposed to the imposition of a poll tax as a prerequisite to voting. The bill that is being filibustered in the Senate is co-sponsored by Senator Pepper, of Florida, a Southern of Southern states. But the Congressmen from the eight Southern States which retain the poll tax as a suffrage obstacle, pretend that its elimination will destroy supremacy, and contend that it is in violation of state rights, which among other things, means the right of Southern states to nullify the 14th and 15th amendments to the constitution.

Elimination of the poll tax as a prerequisite to voting will affect vastly more white than colored people. But from the sound and fury now emanating from the Senate chamber, the world might well believe that only Negroes will be affected.

One of the aspects of the Southern offensive is the withdrawal of financial support from the Democratic National Committee. On November 10th, Gessner T. McCorvey, chairman of the Alabama State Democratic Committee, wrote the treasurer of the National Committee that contributions would be withheld until—> we first had some assurances . . . that our party was going to turn over a new leaf insofar as handling of the Negro situation in the South was concerned.

EDUCATED PEOPLE ARE EXPECTED TO BE CIVIL

Nov. 26/1942

Instance after instance of discourtesy and near boorishness can be cited in people whose formal training must have taught them better. When business and other kinds of letters are received by Negroes from white people in very high places, one naturally expects to see some kind of title to the Negroes' names. One does not expect certain other types to know any better, or if they do know better, to be able to subordinate their several prejudices to their better knowledge and judgment of what is proper. We cannot believe that the English classes, in which our educated white friends sat, were classes in which they were told to use titles only on he written correspondence of certain races.

SCK

Writer and reader alike have listened with disgust to accounts of Negroes who made sizeable cash purchases at local stores only to find that the "Mr.", "Mrs.", or "Miss" which appears on some of the invoice forms was not only ignored, but carefully ruled out by definite pencil lines. We have also noted that some firms mark their accounts with "col" for colored. We have yet to learn what difference there is between a Negro dollar and a white dollar. Many Negroes are farsighted enough not to pay a second time for insults like these.

The Informer

Cases like those cited above do not surprise Negroes as much as do cases in which the cream of the white crop stoops to the use of little demeaning techniques. Even if Negroes did not expect quality in white leaders, the leaders should expect themselves to be bigger and broader than the common run of men. We realize that clerks often forget that their firms are in business for money, and not for the cultivation of racial hatred. Hence, as we say, we are not surprised at the attitudes which some few display toward Negro customers.

Houston, Tex.

Negroes who seek to defend these biggies who use all opportunities to demean Negroes, explain that the influence of white associates is mainly responsible. These staunch defenders seem to forget that a truly educated man with something other than running water in the spine stands by his principles and convictions until he has proof that they are based upon fallacies. There are several fine white persons in this city who regard men as men irrespective of color of skin; they are just as popular with people who really matter as those who waste their otherwise useful energies debasing Negroes.

THE NEGRO. Amid other vital problems here is something that the South is going to have to start thinking about seriously---we are speaking of the so-called "Negro problem." Now if the South could be left alone it would solve in the best way what needs to be solved regarding the colored man. But the South isn't going to be left alone. After the war is over when certain types of fanatics get around to it they are gong to start working on the South about the Negro. It almost got started in Congress several years ago with the "Anti-lynching bill" but the war sidetracked it. The main trouble is going to be that pressure groups from New England, or perhaps the Steppes of Russia, who know about as much about the Negro as a flying squirrel does about the Air Corps is going to tell the South what to do and vice versa about the Negro. The world will be so small after the war that so-called "Reformers" from as far away as Head Hunters Town, New Guinea, will point their little finger at Georgia and shout "You have just won a war that spells "Equality for all" so you are going to have to cut out those white primaries. You are going to have to quit having separate coaches and hotels for different races." It is true that many practices with respect to the treatment of the Negro in the South need correction, and there must be some adjustment of the problem to new conditions that this war will create but these changes, whatever they are, must be made by the Southern States themselves and not by a racial commission that might be set up in Moscow. The South is going to contribute its full share of what it takes to beat Hitler and the Japs, news dispatches from all over the world show that this is being the case as this column is written, but one thing that the South must gird itself for after this war is to see that its right to local self-government is maintained. We believe that what is wrong about the South should and will be corrected by Southern people. There is enough intelligence and enough integrity down here to see that all minority groups get a square deal.

A FINE CONTRIBUTION

This newspaper cannot refrain from paying tribute to the excellent contribution made by Rev. A. W. Hill, colored, to the spirit of yesterday's Armistice Day celebration.

Few people have made a more intelligent and impassioned address than he made from the speaker's stand at the Junior high school.

SCK

His eloquent emphasis upon the Negro's sense of responsibility to the nation during this emergency should have been an eye opener to any prejudiced white people who fear Negro defection.

He spoke as an intelligent voice interpreting the heart of his race. He breathed the humility, the devotion, the sacrificial spirit which have always made his people great.

What he said and the way he said it were a forceful reminder of what this newspaper has said before, that the Negro problem is primarily the creation of the white man, not of the Negro.

Rebel South, "Fighting Civil War," Must Be Forced To Uphold The Law

THE time has come to make the "Solid South" a part of the United States of America.

Nov. 21, 1942

The old Confederated States have been holding the other states in contempt too long. It is necessary for America to get tough with the rebels, who act as though the Civil War is still being fought.

The enlightened sections of America have been trying for 75 years to appease and placate the bad boys south of the Potomac. What they need is a good spanking. Southerners just do not understand anything except force. They are unable to profit by education.

It is the only section of America which makes the payment of a poll tax a condition precedent for voting in Federal elections. While the majority of Senators are anxiously waiting to vote to destroy this ancient system, the poll tax Senators begin a filibuster.

Because the poll tax Senators have absolutely no respect for their oaths of office or the rights of majority rule, they attempted to stop the work of the Senate by staging an absentee strike. Last week it was necessary for the sergeant-at-arms to force members to attend the Session under threat of arrest.

And when a quorum was finally present, Senator Bilbo, who represents the most backward State in the Union (Mississippi), threatened to talk until Christmas in order to prevent the majority from voting to abolish the poll tax.

The Solid South has been running the U. S. A. long enough. It is the only section which does as it pleases. The Southern States flaunt the Federal Constitution; deny citizens the equal protection of the law; abridge the right to vote; create first and second-class citizens; and refuse to protect the lives of citizens.

No other section of America could do these things and get away with them. Why then does the Federal Government permit the South to conduct its affairs outside of the farmework of the Constitution? Why should not the South be forced back into the Union? Abraham Lincoln declared, and the Civil War was fought on the proposition, that no state or group of states could secede from the Union.

But the South has seceded. Its laws, customs and practices are different from those of the remainder of America. The Federal Government must force the South back into the Union and make it abide by the same laws and regulations as the other sections of America. Until this is done: Southerners will continue to make our democratic institutions a mockery.

27,000 Mississippi Negroes Urge Stop Lynchings, Poll Tax

Nov. 21, 1942

JACKSON, Miss.—Pledging "unyielding determination to devote our resources and our lives to the cause of victory," twenty-seven thousand Negro citizens of this state last week praised Governor Paul B. Johnson's forthright condemnation of the fifth columnists responsible for the state's three recent lynchings, and urged him "to take further steps to apprehend and punish these offenders against our war effort."

They also urged that "Our National Congress speedily enact anti-Poll Tax legislation as a vital war measure broadening the democratic rights in America, thus strengthening the faith of the whole people in democracy."

Speaking as members of the Knights and Daughters of Tabor, Mississippi Jurisdiction, they made their win-the-war sentiments known through one thousand delegates who attended the Fraternal Order's fifty-third annual Grand Session here and passed a resolution which called upon Mississippi's white citizen's to "speak out boldly against the evil of lynchings as a dagger at the heart of our country's battle for freedom."

HIGHLIGHTS OF TEXT

The text of the resolution, which was passed unanimously by the convention, included the following pointed paragraphs:

"We call on our fellow-Americans in the great State of Mississippi—Negro and white alike—to make every effort to foster friendly relations among Americans of all races, thus encouraging deepest national unity, so vital to the security of America.

"Such events as the recent lynchings in our State can only serve to bring aid and comfort to the axis enemies of our country by impairing the morals of Negro Americans and shaking the faith of hundreds of millions of America's Allies in the vast continent of India, Africa and China.

"We commend the forthright declarations of Governor Paul Johnson condemning this grave blot on the fair name of Mississippi. We urge him to take further steps to apprehend and punish these offenders against our war effort.

"We urge our white fellow-Mississippians to rouse their deep-seated Christian conscience and speak out boldly against the evil lynching as a dagger at the heart of our country's battle for freedom.

"We urge the Federal government — and especially our great Commander-in-Chief, Franklin Delano Roosevelt, to move swiftly and fearlessly against mob violence and lynching in the interest of American security on the home front."

PEARL BUCK HONORED BY COUNCIL AGAINST INTOLERANCE

UNITED WE CONQUER

Nov. 19, 1942

She receives the original of the 1942 “United We Conquer” seal for her work for the minorities throughout the world. The presentation was made by the designer of the seal, Henry Koerner (right), a Viennese refugee. Witnessing the ceremony are George Gordon Battle (left), co-chairman of the council, and James Waterman Wise, research director.

Pearl Buck warned yesterday that “in this war are already being sown the seeds of the next war” and called upon the people of America to sacrifice their prejudices and intolerances along with their sugar and gasoline. Asserting that a permanent peace must be based on the principle of equality for all peoples, she declared:

“Unless we begin to act on that principle here and now in the midst of the war, victory will not bring peace.”

Mrs. Buck’s remarks were made in connection with a ceremony held in her office at 40 East Forty-ninth Street by the Council Against Intolerance in America. In recognition of her work on behalf of minorities throughout the world, the council presented the author the original painting of its 1942 “United We Conquer” seal.

The presentation was made by Henry Koerner, a young Austrian refugee artist who donated the painting to the council.

Pass Resolution By A Mexican Woman

CALL UPON MOTHERS, WIVES AND SISTERS TO FIGHT PREJUDICE

WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday, Nov. 20—Closing its first wartime session here, the Inter-American Commission of Women last week vigorously denounced racial discrimination in all its forms and pledged itself to work for “an American multi-racial unity as a guarantee that America will be an independent free Continent which will present an example to the rest of the world.”

Senorita Offers Bill

Attending the third annual meeting of the Commission, official delegates of twelve American republics unanimously adopted an anti-discrimination resolution introduced by Senora Amalia Cabalerro de Castillo Leon, a member of the Municipal Council in Mexico City and her country’s representative at the conference.

Nov. 27, 1942

The full text of the resolution declared:

“Whereas, the principal task for women of the American Continent is to work for unity, and to achieve this unity it is necessary to break down national and local prejudices between classes and races,

“Whereas, the ideology that can unify the American Continent is a true democracy which requires the abolition of racial discriminations which are fundamental obstacles to unity and a cause of dissension that can easily be taken advantage of by the common enemy,

“Whereas, mothers, wives, sisters, and daughters have a powerful influence on the attitude of men towards other men, and therefore have a positive responsibility in the rapid abolition of racial prejudices,

“Whereas, among the different ethnographic groups of the Continent the common denominator is the American which includes the Indian, the English, Spanish, French and Dutch, Indian, etc.,

“Whereas, the chief menace to American unity is discrimination not only against Indians but against all colored races, and while these prejudices prevail America faces a deadly menace, “Whereas, against the movement of racial discrimination which is the keystone of the Nazi-Fascist organizations, we must encourage a movement against all such discrimination. The inspiration of this movement must be derived from the historic comingling of Indian and white blood which characterized the settlement, growth and present development throughout the Americas. Other ethnical groups will form an integral part of this strong multi-racial unity which is Pan-America.

“Whereas, when real democracy will have been established, we will count as sister forces in Europe, England, the Soviet Republics and other countries now subjugated by the Axis:

TWO FRONTS

Weekly Review, B'ham Alabama

The United States must fight on two fronts.

First, there is the military front. American soldiers, sailors and airmen are fighting and dying in the Pacific. They are living up to the highest traditions of this nation's military history. They must be given the finest battle equipment in the world, and they mus be given it in lavish quantity. All the resources of this nation, human and material alike, must be used to that end.

Second, there is the home front. We have said, time and again, that we are fighting to defend and perpetuate freedom. That is true. But the defense of freedom at home, as on the war front, demands more than lip service. It demands straight thinking from all. It demands a people who will look squarely at the facts, no matter how unpleasant they may be. It demands the kind of national toughness that knows precisely what we are fighting for, and that will prevent nothing to stand in the way of victory on the home front no less than the military fron.

We will, of necessity, demand and accept a large measure of economic dictatorship during the war. Whether that dictatorship ends when the war ends, will depend upon the resolution and the understanding of the American people. The future of this country and this kind of government is in the balance. The people will decide which way the scales are tipped.

JAN 9 - 1942

The free enterprise system is at stake in this war. Upon the maintenance of free enterprise all the other freedoms—freedom of press, freedom of speech, freedom of religion—hinge and depend. Anything which weakens and emasculates free enterprise is the enemy of the nation. We cannot have an ever-expanding bureaucracy and have efficiency. We cannot allow non-defense spending to go on unchecked and expect to avoid economic collapse. We cannot punish industry and expect it to be able to do its utmost.

There is nothing dramatic about these statements. They are simply homely truths. The winning of this war—and the winning of the peace that follows—will depend on how well the American people understand them.

There has never been such unity as this country has at present. Every American stands solidly behind the President in the pledge to wage war until international gangsterism is destroyed. The spirit of the nation is one of grim, uncompromising determination. But let all remember that the home front is as vital to war and to the perpetuation of our way of life as the battlefront. There will be subversive influences on both fronts. Only an awakened, aware people can prevent their depredations.

We fight for freedom, then. And we must fight for it all the way—fight for it here in America, no less than in the broad reaches of the oceans and the lands beyond.

Repudiated By Ford

Anyone who attempts to divide America by stirring up anti-Semitism or antagonism against any racial or religious group, does so without the benediction of Henry Ford. We have Ford's word for that, in a letter to the B'nai B'rith, prominent Jewish organization, in which he disavows any such activities and concludes, as many others have already concluded, that "the hate-mongering prevalent for some time in this country against the Jew is of distinct disservice to our country, and to the peace and welfare of humanity."

5-6K

If Ford is sincere in this, and there is no reason to doubt it, he completely repudiates anyone who drags out and recirculates the ill-advised matter put out by the Dearborn Independent in the '20's. Let those who have from time to time done this emulate Ford, and they will also help to foil those who would divide the American people and thus weaken their united struggle for freedom.

University Professors Support Condemnation of Talmadge

JAN 10 1942

CHICAGO.—The American Association of University Professors meeting in its 28th annual convention at Stevens Hotel here last Sunday rebuked Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia for his "political interference" in the State university and indorsed the action taken December 4 by the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools, which suspended several Georgia educational institutions from membership in the association.

JAN 10 1942

Talmadge ejected Dean Walter D. Cocking from the university last Fall because he charged the dean favored a graduate school for both Negroes and whites. At the time of the dean's dismissal, the Governor stated, "There'll be no Negroes in the same schools with white folks in Georgia and there'll be no men in our system who advocate it."

JAN 10 1942

In the closing session of the association's meet, which was composed of professors representing universities from all sections of the country, a formal statement was approved protesting the Governor's action.

Said the statement, "The association views with unqualified disapproval the recent interference by Governor Talmadge in the university system of Georgia.

"Arbitrary action and political considerations in educational affairs are not in accord with sound education administration and are inimical to the welfare of education. They are particularly harmful when they involve an attempt to arouse racial prejudices, especially at a time when it is imperative that the races learn how to live together in accord with each other."

THE JOURNAL COMMENTS ON GEORGIA'S TALMADGE

JAN 9 - 1942

The Kansas City Journal took Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia to task in its Sunday editorial column. Governor Talmadge became a national figure a few months ago when he let the nation know that he stood for racial intolerance and was willing to hold the progress of a state and the entire South, back in the Dark Ages.

The Kansas City Journal, writing under the caption, "Talmadge of Georgia", had this to say:

"Eugene Talmadge, the Hitleresque governor of Georgia, once said he could carry any county whose inhabitants had never seen a streetcar. That was another way of saying that his appeal as a politician is to the backward and illiterate, and that it is to his advantage to keep them backward and illiterate.

JAN 9 - 1942

"This apostle of the hillbillies was severely censured this week by the American Association of University Professors for his high-handed interference with academic freedom at the University of Georgia.

5-6K

"The United States is at war to preserve the 'freedoms' outlined in the Roosevelt-Churchill 'Atlantic charter'. We would have no comeback if Hitler pointed to Talmadge of Georgia and called the Atlantic charter a fraud and a deception. If the other 47 states had governors like him, American participation in a war for any kind of freedom would be a farce.

JAN 9 - 1942

"Georgia has elected Talmadge governor three times. Will Georgia ever return to the Union?"

This is a pretty good statement and it has great significance coming from the pen of a white editorial writer. However, there was nothing mentioned to give the readers the background of Talmadge's actions in Georgia, but it is generally known that he "blew his top" on the question of Negro rights.

If America is going to have the type of democracy for which we are supposed to be fighting, then the white press is going to have to be more liberal in its editorial policy in helping to blot out those damnable practices of Negro-hating white men like Talmadge in the South. And democracy will never come until they are driven out because they are disciples of the devil and Hitler. All of the present movements made by our great President and Prime Minister Churchill as well as other statesmen will be as a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal in bringing about a democracy unless men like Talmadge are put out of business in America.

We commend the Journal on its liberal attitude for speaking out against this Hitlerite. We hope to see more editorials of this kind appear not only in the Journal but in all white papers.

Nine Freedoms

Heartening vision of a freer, finer America after the war is presented in a report on planning for the future by the National Resources and Planning Board.

JAN 1 9 1942

President Roosevelt has transmitted the report to Congress. He says it outlines "some of our major objectives in planning to win the peace." He also called for "democratic participation by all of us" in planning to win the war and win the peace.

56

"Through efforts to state our objectives and public discussion of their merits," the president said, "we play our part as free citizens." This emphasis by the president, it seems to us, is of the utmost importance. A free nation at war can achieve its maximum unity and strength only by extensive understanding and participation by the people in the national effort. A free nation seeking to set up a sound and creative order for peace must have a similar popular participation if that endeavor is to succeed.

Basic to democratic government, under any conditions, is a broad understanding by citizens of what is being attempted, what is being done. Without this understanding there can only be more and more direction or even dictation from above.

The National Resources and Planning Board set forth nine freedoms as our objectives: 1, the right to work; 2, the right to fair play; 3, the right to adequate food, clothing, shelter and medical care; 4, the right to security; 5, the right to live in a system of free enterprise; 6, "the right to come and go, to speak or be silent, free from the spying of secret political police; 7, the right to equality before the law; 8, the right to education; 9, the right to rest, recreation and adventure."

The board declared we must plan for full employment and for maintaining the national income at not less than 100 billions a year.

It will take a lot of thinking and discussion by all our people to develop the general spirit and practical program essential to progress toward achievement of these great objectives. Now is the time to be giving some thought to such things.

YOU CAN DEPEND ON GEORGIA

JAN 1 5 1942

The name Georgia conjures up in the mind of every Negro in America the lynching mob, peonage, the KuKlux Klan and practically every loathsome anti-Negro institution to be found in America. It was not surprising, therefore, to read an Associated Press report that Governor Talmadge said he would recommend to the legislature of his state the burning of all books in Georgia schools and libraries that advocated racial co-education. He has gone so far as to pack the Board of Regents of the University system of Georgia, so that it might remove from office Dr. Walter D. Cocking, who was accused of the unforgiving crime of advocating "the establishing of a teacher-training center for white and Negro teachers."

JAN 1 5 1942

Democracy has no more vicious enemy than Governor Talmadge. He may be true to his understanding of the sentiment of the majority of the white people of his state, but he and his ilk are a more serious menace to democracy than Hitler or Stalin could ever be. As Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, frankly states,

> "....rancor and bigotry, racial animosity and intolerance undermine the very foundation of democratic effort."

A democracy, such as we boast of, is sustained by the faith of the people in its institutions and the men who guide or control them. We knew that Georgia could be depended upon to be in the vanguard of states which exploit their Negro populations politically, economically, educationally and socially. We dared to hope, however, that during the current national crisis, when the treatment of its Negro population is a most embarrassing reminder to the world that we have not succeeded very well in making democracy work in the United States, even Georgia might liberalize its attitudes toward Negroes, at least "for the duration." Such a probationary period of experimentation with a healthy liberty and freedom for all its citizens, without regard to race, might convince even as reactionary an official as Governor Talmadge, that such a way of life is good for all. Any contradition of brotherhood within the state weakens the moral fibre of the nation and puts us at a great disadvantage in the conflict that looms before us today.

We saw Negroes and white attending the Ecumenical Conference of Methodism in Atlanta, Ga., in 1931 enjoy what I presume southerners would call 'social equality' "for the duration" of the conference. The interesting thing about the experience was nothing terrible happened to white southerners.

The hour has struck when even Georgia must take seriously the claims of democracy upon her institutions and officials. It is sheer folly to let political opportunists of the Talmadge tribe continue to lead the State of Georgia away from the light.

56X

We can thank God that on the other side of the picture there are some fine brave spirits, like Dr. Will Alexander and other members of the Interracial Commission, and some members of the press who shine as lights in a wicked and pervere environment.

FORD DENOUNCES HATE-MONGERING

Industrialist Urges End To Race Agitation In Public Letter

JAN 1 3 1942

NEW YORK, Jan. 11—(AP)—A letter signed by Henry Ford and made public Sunday by the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith quoted the industrialist as urging "my fellow citizens to give no aid to any movement whose purpose it is to arouse hatred against any group."

The league said the letter, addressed to Sigmund Livingston, of Chicago, league chairman, and dated Jan. 7, was released as "a matter of public interest." The letter said:

"In our present national and international emergency, I consider it of importance that I clarify some general misconceptions concerning my attitude toward my fellow citizens of Jewish faith. I do not subscribe to or support, directly or indirectly, any agitation which would promote antagonism against my Jewish fellow citizens. I consider that the hate-mongering prevalent for some time in this country against the Jews, is of distinct disservice to our country, and to the peace and welfare of humanity.

"At the time of the retraction by me of certain publications concerning the Jewish people, in pursuance of which I ceased the publication of The Dearborn Independent, I destroyed copies of literature prepared by certain persons connected with its publication. Since that time, I have given no permission or sanction to anyone to use my name as sponsoring any such publication, or being the accredited author thereof."

"I am convinced that there is no greater dereliction among the Jews than there is among any other class of citizens. I am convinced, further, that agitation for the creation of hate against the Jew or any other racial or religious group, has been utilized to divide our American community and to weaken our national unity."

The letter added that it was Ford's "sincere hope that now in this country and throughout the world, when this war is finished and peace once more established, hatred of the Jews, commonly known as anti-Semitism, and hatred against any other racial or religious group, shall cease for all time."

VISIT TO VETERANS' HOSPITAL

56X

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Carter were in Tuskegee Monday to visit the Veterans' hospital where an old farm worker from Mr. Carter's home plantation is confined. They were welcomed by the darky with tears of joy in his eyes. He said the treatment to the inmates was splendid with every consideration of their physical welfare and pleasure. He spoke pleasantly of their "President's message" and the advantages they have at the hospital. It made him happy to introduce to his doctor, his "white friends."

JAN 8 1942

You may be indifferent to the appreciation of your friendships to your colored friends but to see their appreciation when they truly need it, is well worth any ones time to give it. The enthusiasm shown and the hospitality from the officials made the trip well worth while.

His Excellency, The Governor

DEC 7 - 1941

GOVERNOR Dwight Green did not appoint a colored person to fill the Superior court vacancy created by the death of Judge Walter Stanton. As a matter of fact, knowing the governor as Negroes have come to know him during his short administration, no one is surprised at his failure to put a Negro on the judiciary.

Numerous requests went to the governor to give the post to a Negro. We do not know whether the governor even dignified the requests with replies. When the Chicago Branch of the NAACP telegrammed him to name a colored person his secretary answered that the governor would give it his consideration. No word has been heard from his excellency by the NAACP.

For a long time following his inauguration it was a little difficult to categorize Governor Green with respect to his attitude toward colored people. He made a few appointments mainly of his good colored friends or those whom he was personally obligated to for helping him in his campaign. Suffice it to say that the former Indianan has not bothered himself about the colored people in this state.

Of course, he did sign the bill continuing the Commission on the Urban Colored Population of this state. But that's all he did. He is holding the entire commission up because he has not bothered to appoint members to it. He has been asked to appoint the members but, true to form, the requests have fell on disinterested ears.

Well, perhaps, he will appoint some of his friends or campaign workers to the Commission a few days before the next session of the legislature and the $10,000 will be accordance to their recommendation.

If that is not his way of thinking then he has done nothing to indicate otherwise.

A Species Of Madness

One can understand why some representatives from states where the balance of power rests with the Negro voters will subscribe to the subversive program being carried forward under the auspices of the American Society for the Advancement of the Colored Race—some men being so constituted that they will do anything to hold public office—but it is not possible to understand why any Southern representative would remain silent in the face of what is going on.

Every person connected with industry has become aware of what the Negro politicians are attempting and of the fact that they have enlisted the active and determined aid of certain departments of government. Their purpose is to break down social barriers under the guise of a movement to give equal representation in industry to the Negro.

The thought is not merely to have more Negro laborers employed; the idea is to cause the employment of a certain number of clerks, bookkeepers, stenographers and other workers, the same work along with the white employes. The thought is that if in the South a condition can be forced under which black men, white men, black girls and white girls, can all be made to work together in the same offices, the effect will be to break down social barriers and bring about the idea of the Society for the Advancement of the Colored Race, which is one of complete social equality.

A movement of this nature would be disruptive enough and dangerous enough under normal circumstances but that it should be permitted at a time when the nation is fighting for its life, is almost unbelievable. Yet every industrialist who is in touch with Washington knows what is going on and certainly it should be known to all those in Washington whose duty it is to look after the interests of their constituents.

The social equality that is utterly unobtainable even under war conditions, is sought nevertheless—and at the expense of the war effort. The pushing of such an issue in such times is a species of madness and should be stopped before great harm is done.

A Good Beginning

MAY 12 1942

MR. AND MRS. WALTER JACKSON and their five children moved into a new home on April 29. They were escorted by policemen, to protect them from fascist hoodlums—for the new home was the Sojourner Truth Housing Project, originally built for the Jacksons and other Negro families but barred to them for many weeks by certain realtors and Ku Kluxers of Detroit. On February 28, when the Negroes tried to enter, they were forced back by a demonstration of violence that made news columns all over the country. This completely lawless action against a decision of the United States government redoubled a public protest which had begun when the realtors first started their campaign to take the project away from the Negroes. Now the government is seeing to it that the Negroes are protected in their rights. The Department of Justice has secured indictments of three officers and members of the Nazi-minded National Workers League, and of the Seven Mile-Fenlon Improvement Association, representing the diehard realtors. They are charged with responsibility for the February 28 riot. But Detroit, where Gerald L. K. Smith and the Klan devote themselves to fomenting pro-fascist disorder, is far from protected completely against their dirty work. Just four days after the Sojourner Truth tenants moved in, violence broke out in another part of the city, brought about when a white restaurant proprietor shot and seriously wounded a Negro.

As NEW MASSES has pointed out before, the Sojourner Truth issue was far from local. It involved opposing forces of racism against democracy, of disruption against national unity. The outcome, therefore, is a national victory. For its part in that victory the federal government deserves the praise of all American citizens who called upon it for decisive action. We hope it indicates a stancher opposition to the whole ugly business of racial discrimination. We hope, to be more specific, that there will be just as decisive action to carry out Secretary of the Navy Knox's order to permit the general enlistment of Negroes in the Navy, Marines, and the Coast Guard. That order was issued on April 8; yet, at this writing, Naval Commander B. B. Ralston, who has charge of recruiting in New York, states that he has received no instructions to accept Negro recruits. Certainly there was no lack of applicants—hundreds of Negroes jumped at the promised opportunity to serve their country in those branches of the armed forces previously denied them. They must be given that opportunity, and not only because it was promised them: America needs all the manpower available to fight Hitler and his chums abroad. Any vestige of Hitler's racism here impairs the fight both morally and militarily.

Obligation On Two Sides

The complaint is, of course, very sound that Negroes have suffered grievously, in their striving for progress as a race, from the fact that law enforcement has tended to take less seriously crimes by Negroes against Negroes than crimes by white men against white men or by Negroes against white men. And Judge Russell, in reply, is sound, too, when he says that one difficulty is that too often the anger that originally caused violence by a Negro to a Negro dies out soon so that by the time of trial the injured person and his partisans are friends again with whoever inflicted the injury and don't want to prosecute.

The difficulty may also go deeper than that. Among a people for long years accustomed to seeing their misdoing against each other treated as of comparatively minor social consequence, there would inevitably grow up a feeling of solidarity outside the law, a belief that retribution, when thought necessary, could best be exacted privately, a conviction that testifying against each other could serve no good purpose.

All this, to whatever extent it exists, will have to be broken down by conscious Negro effort, just as the condition to which it is a reaction will have to be broken down by conscious white effort.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

THIS MORNING
By John Temple
Graves

Agreeing with this column that there is a simon-pure brand of patriotism existent among many of our Southern colored people and that this is a time when all of us need to have such patriotism encouraged, Editor Jessie Daniel Ames, of The Southern Frontier, writes: "The Negroes of the South are more eager for inter-racial cooperation now than I have found them to be at any time in the past. They are not wanting to follow the cynical and destructive leadership of the Northern Negroes. If we white leaders of the South hold out to Southern Negroes the right hand of fellowship it is my belief, though it is not susceptible of proof, that they will turn to their friends and neighbors for help and guidance rather than to what I feel is alien voices . . ."

ONE WOULD NEVER KNOW

Last Sunday was a gala day for whooper-uppers for our-way-of-life (without reference to its fascist elements), and ALSO for 6000 lovers of unadulterated democracy who protested brutal anti-Negro irregularities which are becoming a vogue—the latest of which was the useless "murder" of a defenseless Harlem Negro. BUT one would never know the true facts from the daily press. All dailies gave the first group a big play, but the second—a minority group's desire for fair play—was omitted by all papers except PM and the Daily Worker. The day after these contradictory expressions, NY papers that did not consider the Harlem rally "fit to print" let the public see the Negro as follows:

The Sun did not shine at all—one way or the other. Neither did the World-Telegram. The same was true with the Herald-Tribune, Times, and Journal-American, except for pix of Joe Louis and "white" only help wanted ads. The Daily News and Mirror only mustered out pix of Louis at the "I Am an American Day" rally, making believe all's well with the Tenth Man. There just had to be a crime story, so the Post informed that a "Cop Smashed Harlem Gang" to mar whatever desirable impression its feature on musician Lionel Hampton may have made.

That's the way the daily press informs hungry readers yearning to know. BUT one would never know the true pic of what's going on from the so-called celestial fourth estate —By S. Wycliffe Garlington.

NEGRO ANTAGONIST.

To the Editor: It looks very clear to me that Mr. J. W. Stroud's disposition of the Negro is based on prejudice to the extent that he had rather see the entire military and economic program of the United States defeated rather than exercise a fair disposition toward a minority group and thus get this struggle over by helping unite its efforts to a good end.

Mr. Stroud asserts: "Negroes are desirous of things they don't merit. (Error No. 1.) He further asserts: "They are striving, working and scheming to obtain social and political equality." (This is error No. 2.) Again he asserts: "The Negro question is too insignificant to disturb me." I think the entire reading public knows whether or not there's an ounce of truth in a ton of such propaganda. His expressed attitude labels him as Negro hater No. 1. And he has become so absorbed that he had rather himself and country be defeated and enslaved by a wicked and barbarous Axis than to give over to a principle that his conscience tells him is right and just. (If he has a conscience.)

Instead of the charges he asserts, the Negro only wants fair play in the economic struggle for life, which every human being is justly entitled to, regardless of who or where he is. This the Negro has not had only in a very few exceptional instances. History, statistics and human experiences proves this conclusively.

And if Mr. Stroud thinks he is correct in any such assertions he has only to remove the blinding scales of Negro hatred and prejudice from his eyes and he will readily see that he has another thought coming to him.

"... NEVER THE TWAIN SHALL MEET"?

Pearl S. Buck, writing in the last New York Times Magazine, digs several very dark ideas from the woodpile of white race complacency. Reviewing the progress of the war in the Far Eastern theater she says, "The plain fact of the matter is, and the sooner we realize it the better, that too many of the people of the East have not helped the people of the West in this war. The white man has been fighting a desperate and in many parts of Asia a hopeless war, and he has been afraid to tell how desperate and hope[illegible]s."

When one remembers the recent Jap advance through Thailand, Malaya, the Dutch East Indies, and finally through Burma into China, one is impressed by the truth of Mrs. Buck's disquieting statement. She goes on still more disturbingly: "This Second World War has taken on a new and dangerous aspect, most of all because of Japan. Although we may not be willing to know it, it is possible that we are already embarked upon the bitterest and the longest of human wars, the war between the East and the West. . . ."

Mrs. Buck further points out that it will not do for the white race, and she particularizes the American people, either to deny that a question exists, or to evade the plain answer to the question by the time-honored expedient of sticking their heads, ostrich-like, under the sand. Asians neither deny nor evade the question. It has become the chief issue with India's seething millions. It explains the ease with which Japanese legions infiltrated the Burmese and Malayan jungles. Even the Filipinos and Chinese fought beside their white allies only because they have had the promise of freedom and have seen the vision of their independence in an Asia of, by, and for Asiatics. The white man may still think, if he is foolish, in terms of colonial empires, but the Asian knows in his soul that the colonial era of human history is over. There can be no ground of mutual understanding between the Asiatic and European-American civilizations other than a frank admission of the right of all people to independence, to self-determination, and to the enjoyment of completely autonomous government.

Mrs. Buck thinks [illegible] in order to avert an unimaginably brutal struggle between a resurgent East and an imperialistic, chauvinistic, intolerant West, our "attitude" must be changed. We must remember those basic principles of freedom on which our own nation was founded and the right of all peoples to determine their national destiny. Not a thing wrong with this philosophy if the "liberated" Asiatics keep within their proper national metes and bounds. But taught by the white man's science and armed by the white man's weapons and implemented by his own illimitable populations, will the Asian stay within his own territory and be satisfied when he finds himself smothered "in his own too much" of teeming millions?

Surely there is food for long thought about Mrs. Buck's glance at the future in these anxious days when we have—

"Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rain'd a ghastly dew
From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue;

Far along the world-wide whisper of the south wind rushing warm,
With the standards of the peoples plunging
thro' the thunder-storm;

Till the war-drum throbb'd no longer, and the battle flags were furl'd
In the Parliament of Man, the Federation of the World."

The Tragedy of China

Editor of The Times-Dispatch,

Sir:

Never in the history of mankind has there been so great a movement of men, women and children as during these past few years in China, where the Japanese armies have fought the defenseless Chinese and brought about such trying conditions that they have had to leave their homes, farms and places of business.

The Chinese are a peace-loving people, as are we, and did not prepare for war, even as we, too, had not prepared. Chinese troops have had to fight with well-equipped Japanese forces both along the coastal regions and also interior far up the Yangtze River. When retreating, these Chinese have found it advisable to use the "scorched-earth policy," as the allied armies are doing in The Netherland East Indies, Burma and elsewhere. Everything of value to the enemy is destroyed, thus making it hard for the Japanese to find suitable shelter, food and fuel; also railways, bridges and roads. Even the carts, wagons and animals are sometimes taken so these will not fall into the hands of the invaders. This, of course, works a hardship on such people as are left behind. Then when the Japanese are sometimes driven back, they, when retreating, destroy whatever is left. This is done because they hate the Chinese, and so these will be put to a disadvantage. The people are, it will be seen, left with almost nothing.

But worse than all this, wherever the Japanese soldiers go they kill off many young men who may not have fled, and all men of military age are slain, if thought to have worked against the Japanese, or they are forced to take up arms against their own people as soldiers for Japan.

The Japanese took no prisoners in Manchuria, but killed all who fell into their hands. Then, too, where the Japanese get control they take from the people everything of value.

Now that China has been entered as an enemy country, Japan is bleeding the people and the country to the very limit, as she has bled Formosa and Korea. In Manchuria, where we have now labored these past 16 years, the 35,000,000 Chinese, Korean and Russian inhabitants are virtually slaves. All firearms have been taken from them, so they are defenseless. The people have been so cruelly treated and intimidated that they fear the Japanese as they would devils. Not only was the country seized politically, but everything that brings in money has been taken over by the Japanese people or by their government. Yes, conditions there are indeed very bad; but in China proper, where Japan has met with greater resistance and the people poorer, the state of affairs can be described only by the expressions "hell on earth," a terrible situation, involving such destruction and distress as has never before been known in the history of the world.

Under such conditions does one wonder that some fifty millions of people have fled before these terrible, cruel, ruthless armies, which have invaded the most densely populated regions of China? It is gratifying to note that Baptists of the South have determined to raise this Spring in their churches $300,000 to save from starvation the millions in China who have been so mistreated and are dying for lack of food, clothing and shelter?

Bonds for Attack

Editor of The Times-Dispatch,

Sir:

For the last year or more our government has been selling "defense" bonds and stamps to the amount of billions, and no one objects for they all know that money must be had.

This money has been spent for defense with the result that up to today we have met with defeat after defeat, and have now lost almost everything we and our Allies had in the Western Ocean.

A war of defense, in past history, has never won a victory; it has always been victory after the offense has been taken.

So I, for one, know that if you can read, and have a little intelligence, it can be done.

During these times, everyone should be encouraged to try and do his part.

Starlings As Songsters

Editor of The Times-Dispatch:

Sir,—The issue raised by Mr. Hunter's assertion that starlings do not sing might have passed, almost unobserved, at another season of the year, but, in Springtime, the fancies of birds, like those of a class of human beings, lightly turn to thoughts of love.

When Mr. Hunter first made the statement, I concluded that starlings around him no longer sang because they had migrated from Piedmont, Va., to the Northern Neck, and that they were depressed, but the testimony in opposition to Mr. Hunter's observations is too widespread to support that theory.

Now that Mr. Hunter has established by the opposing evidence that the starling is a songbird, we hope that the music lovers will not insist on another importation of the darn things, as soon as the present obstructions to navigation are removed. When the war is over we would like to have peace.

I. N. SUSPENSE.

Why not stop selling defense bonds and start selling "offense" bonds? This would meet the approval of almost everyone. They are tired of this continued retreat. Even a small offense would do for a beginning. For example, the boost we all got at the news from the Marshall and Gilbert Islands.

If we are to believe the figures of our government, we have made upward of 6,000 planes of all kinds since the outbreak of the war. This is more than it was thought that Japan had at that time. What has become of them? Ten per cent of them would have saved Java.

We would all like to see some action even if there is some risk, as there always is.

W. H. B.

Black and White America

Editor of The Times-Dispatch,

Sir:

Let's understand each other. Here we are, black and white, living in America, a land dedicated to the proposition that "all men are created equal" and are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among which are "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." For more than a century and a half now, we have been struggling to realize this goal for our nation. Yesterday we had not arrived; we shall not arrive tomorrow. Let's all Americans admit that we have not yet attained a society or government in which these "inalienable rights" are guaranteed to all individuals. It will be best for all of us to face this fact frankly and honestly and then make a sincere effort to correct all political and economic practices which undermine the pillars upon which our democracy rests.

At the present time, democracy, as never before, is being subjected to the scrutiny of friend and foe. Our American way of life is being challenged by forces within and without. These enemies of our system would substitute for our liberties and freedom, tyranny and regimentation. Most Americans, black and white, are against these common enemies. When Negroes insist upon full participation in the war effort of his country, we do so because we believe that it will require the full use of all available man power and material resources to win this war. We further believe that individuals or groups who use the present emergency to realize purely selfish ends are just as much enemies of democracy as the totalitarian powers whom we fight.

Each day brings new evidence of the need for an all-out effort on the part of every one, and we feel that those who deny every loyal American citizen the chance to do his part, whether in the armed forces of the nation, the training centers, or industrial plants, are a menace to our successful prosecution of the war. On the other hand, citizens who permit themselves to be denied the chance to help win the war without protest and without exposing to public opinion those individuals or groups who engage in these un-American and, at present, subversive activities are also aiding and giving comfort to the enemies of democracy.

Negroes want to win the war. We are willing to fight and work to win the war, and we do not propose to stand silently by and see democracy crucified on a cross of gold, greed, prejudice or self-centered selfishness.

To Negroes, this is not a racial war. It is a war between conflicting and diametrically opposed philosophies. On one side are those who despise any semblance of individual liberty and freedom. Against these are those peoples of every race who have been struggling toward democratic government and increasing liberty, opportunity and freedom for the individual. It is inconceivable that the Negro, having desired liberty, opportunity and freedom all these years, should about-face and cast his lot with those who seek to destroy the very things he prizes most.

As American citizens, we shall continue to strive for a full measure of the rights, opportunities and obligations which the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution guarantee to all Americans. At the same time, we are irrevocably opposed to any nation that makes war upon our country.

And How My Garden Grew!

Editor of The Times-Dispatch,

Sir:

I am making this reply to the gentleman who said on the radio last week that only experienced gardeners should plant victory gardens.

During the last World War, I had a garden and it was a success. I had never dug one inch of ground before. But that didn't stop me.

My seeds were bought from one of Richmond's reliable seed stores. And I dug my garden, followed instructions, and raised bush beans, beets, corn, lettuce and butterbeans.

The soil was half-clay and cinders. But I raised enough vegetables for home use and my neighbors and one of the leading citizens of Richmond will tell the gentleman that she received beans and lettuce from the same. I did this with no experience and while quite young.

WHAT'S THE AIM?

SOUTH SAYS THERE WILL BE NO CHANGE. WE SHALL NOT PASS

BY JOSEPH D. BIBB

FROM all sides we have listened to the persistent inquiry of "What are the war aims of this nation, what do we intend to accomplish after the war?" No specific, comprehensive reply has been officially given. There are those, however, who are openly asserting what the nation will not and can not do after the war. Many audacious and brazen Southerners are even now laying bare their post-war schemes.

Mr. Bibb

Last week, I rode on the Carolina Limited as it rattled Southward through the great Smoky Mountains of Tennessee. I heard a distinguished Southern educator state his views, plans and opinions. He came and sat by me as I puffed a cigaret in the lounge car. Not knowing my racial affilation, he politely commented on the threatening, steaming weather, and then inquiringly solicited, "Colonel, where are you from and where are you headed?" When I replied that I was from Chicago and was headed South to make a speech, he enthusiastically rejoined by voicing his desire to tell me something.

WILL OPPOSE EQUALITY

"Colonel," said he, "we are not going to permit the ideals and traditions of this heah country to be changed by any New Deal Crackpots. You see this beautiful region. Well, our pioneer forefathers built it and developed it and established certain standards that we will not stand to be destroyed." I interrupted to find out just what he meant. "Well, by George, we ain't going to stand for the Administration to put N——s on the same plane as white folks. By God, we will fight and die first." When I asked him if what he said was the controlling and prevailing opinion of the Southland, he replied: "That is all we are thinking about and all of the best people of this country feel the same way about it."

IN the course of my trip South, almost every white man to whom I spoke expressed the same identical views. I learned the post-war aims and ambitions of many Southerners and they all avowed that "we shall not pass."

WANT COALITION WITH LILY-WHI[illegible]

Another striking revelation that was made was the growing resentment of some Southerners to the New Deal. Many people expressed the opinion that the solid Southern voting bloc should be broken, and that the South should split its vote and in many cases line up with the Lily-White Republicans. With this exception, I found the people of Dixie still virtually fighting the Civil War again.

WHEN I saw the ignorant, struggling masses of poor white people basking in ignorance and reveling in delusions, I realized the stupendous task that devolves upon the Administration to lift this beautiful country out of its doldrums and traditional grooves. The South must be enlightened. It must be protected from the cruel, cold-blooded exploitation of the great hordes of common people by the ambitious politicians and "Colonels" of predatory and entrenched wealth. The Southern leaders that I met desire to perpetuate the status quo in order that they can live without working and receive the benefits of "the unrequited toil of the laboring millions."

The post-war aims of this nation should include a program of debunking in the South. Southern leaders keep the festering sores of the "lost cause" erupting in order that they might abide on the time-worn system. A crusade must be made on the South. A barrage of publicity and propaganda must be unloosened, to the end that the masses be put to thought.

GOVERNMENT MUST ACT

The people of America have already been deluded with philosophical optimism about the race problem. This present crisis and this all-out war effort should cause the best thinkers of both races to get down to the grass roots of the problem of the backward States.

There will be no peace in this nation, no freedom, no liberation from fear until the Nation's major internal problem is fairly and honestly confronted.

WHEN our Government presents its post-war program and enunciates its ideals and aims, the political and economic vexations that exist below the Mason-Dixon line must be courageously considered. As it stands now, the Civil War is still being fought and scheming demagogues of the benighted States intend to keep the flames of sectionalism, race and tradition burning. It will result in a sweeping racial conflagration if the Government does not deal with it with firmness and understanding.

WELLESLEY HEARS MME. KAI-SHEK TALK

By Radio She Tells Alumnae, Including Her 25-Year Class, That China Will 'Plug On'

FIGHTING FOR NEW ORDER

President McAfee in Response Urges Training Others to Share Service of Honored Alumna

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WELLESLEY, June 13—Hundreds of Wellesley alumnae returning to the college for their "day" in the commencement program heard a special broadcast by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek from Chungking to her fellow-graduates and particularly to the members of her class of 1917, celebrating its twenty-fifth reunion. Members of the audience rose at the beginning of the broadcast in tribute to Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, and at the close of the recording President McAfee answered the message of the distinguished alumna.

Mme. Kai-shek, speaking over the Columbia Broadcasting System, reminded her hearers that in a few weeks China would enter upon her sixth year of war.

"You, no doubt, are wondering how our outlook has been affected by five years of intense suffering and strain," she added. "I can assure you the Chinese people are confident of their ability to hold on in the face of apparently insuperable difficulties if China is given the necessary equipment now.

"The morale of our people has been the main factor of this resolute determination never to admit defeat but to plug on in sheer dogged resistance. Their resolution was buttressed by the belief that after the war there would be a new world society, with the sure foundation of freedom, justice and equality.

"I, personally, during these years encouraged them to believe that after victory when the war is won the world system will be entirely altered, that we would be all free peoples and that nations strong or weak would deal fairly and squarely with each other. If our people and army had not been induced to believe this the war, as far as China is concerned, would have been over a long year ago."

Mme. Kai-shek suggested that her hearers suppose China had not elected to fight her war of resistance or had collapsed, and then asserted that if it had been otherwise, "all the man power of this nation of 450,000,000 people and the resources of the country, larger than the whole of Europe, would have been thrown into the scale against the United Nations instead of being on their side."

"At first when the Chinese people were told that there would evolve a new world order after the victory, they remembered 1931 and were skeptical," she went on. "It was evident that a promise did not always mean performance. When the invasion of Manchuria took place I confess that I myself was bewildered, because although China's sovereignty and territorial integrity had been guaranteed by international treaties none of the powers signatory to those treaties took any effective action.

"Notwithstanding the Manchurian disillusionment," Mme. Kai-shek said later, "China's leaders urged our people to fight on, assuring them that the new era of international justice was certain to come when the victory was won. Upon that I personally have staked all my hopes of being of service to my country in the future. Consequently, if after the war a world is allowed by the democracies to relapse to outworn ideology and the system of the past, the Chinese Army and people will feel that I misled them and that they have suffered, bled and died in vain."

In closing Mme. Kai-shek said she would like to say a few words expressly to her Wellesley friends.

"I am not speaking figuratively when I say I am with you in spirit today," she said. "I often recall with abiding affection my happy college days and you my friends whose problems and ideals I shared."

About eighty members of her class were in the Alumnae Day group which heard the broadcast, and the response by President McAfee, who said:

"Wellesley College feels itself honored by its association with our distinguished alumna, Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, and her countrymen. Perhaps the most effective way we can honor Mme. Chiang Kai-shek will be to make every effort to train others who will share with her the responsibilities of high office and the privileges of free citizenship. This the college will continue to do, encouraged by the example of an alumna who has demonstrated to succeeding generations of students that the privilege of education involves the responsibility of national and world service."

The annual alumnae parade was led by three members of Wellesley's first graduating class in 1879, Mrs. Henry Johnson of Brunswick, Me., Miss Mary R. Bartlett of Brighton, Mass., and Miss Mary E. Whipple of Worcester, Mass.

Prizes were awarded to the class of '97 for the most effective costume at least cost, and to the class of '17 for originality.

After the parade the reunion classes, members of the senior class, and members of the Boston Wellesley Club met in the auditorium of Alumnae Hall for the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association.

The Watchtower

By Roy Wilkins

Mr. Wilkins

SOME little Negro hoodlums from Harlem and some little Irish hoodlums from Broadway above 125th Street are going to start something which may end up in a race riot if certain matters are not checked at once, and if sane adults, both black and white, do not take a hand.

The situation has got so bad north of 145th Street that no Negro boy dares to go over to Broadway on any kind of errand by himself, and no white boy dares to come over to Convent and St. Nicholas Avenues by himself.

It is reported that one night last week the fathers and older brothers on both sides were ready and waiting for a pitched battle. One block of whites had clubs, stones, bottles, baseball bats and what have you—"ready for the Negroes." The young colored potential gangsters also had their baseball bats, stones, knives, etc.—"ready for the white folks." Only effective action by the police, ordered, it is said, by Commissioner Valentine himself, prevented a clash.

Neighborhood Fights Senseless

This neighborhood fighting is senseless. Both the Irish and the Negroes are stupid if they keep it up. The Negroes are here to stay. They have survived paving block fights with the Irish in downtown West Side New York years ago. All over America they have survived bombings of their homes to keep them out of certain neighborhoods. They have survived economic shackles, unfair police treatment, unfair courts, dirty propaganda, lynching and death. This is their country and they intend to live here.

And the Irish are here to stay, also. This is their country and they intend to live here. But neither the Irish nor the Negroes must get the idea that they own so much of the country that they can tell other Americans to keep off certain streets and out of certain neighborhoods. The Irish came to America to get away from just that sort of thing, Many thousands of Negro New Yorkers came here from the South to escape that same thing.

Neither the Irish nor the Negroes ought to get "too big for their pants," just because they are both in a relatively free atmosphere. This America, including Broadway, Convent, Amsterdam and St. Nicholas Avenues, belongs to all Americans, not some to the Negroes and some to the Irish.

Adults Should Intervene

The little hotheads on both sides cannot be expected to know all this, but the adults know it. The tough young Negroes from Bradhurst and Eighth Avenues are said to be coming up through Colonial park hunting for trouble on "the Hill." The tough young Irish, some of whom belong to a gang called the "Rainbows," are said to come all the way down from 168th Street, also hunting for trouble.

The police, under Captain Moore of the precinct at 152nd and Amsterdam, are doing what they can both in patrolling and consulting with community leaders. The first thing needed is to break up the gang fights and have it clearly understood that the streets of New York are free to anyone who behaves himself. To accomplish this the police should "crack down" on black and white alike. A whack with a police club might knock a little sense into these Harlem toughies and Broadway belligerents. Then the responsible community leaders, white and colored, ought to sit down and thresh out the neighborhood problems. We Americans have enough war on our hands now without opening up another front in the Washington Heights section of New York City.

Watch Your Genius Children

The quality of commencement addresses this year has reached a new high, and one of the greatest was that delivered by Pearl Buck at Howard University.

The AFRO is the only paper we have seen to publish the full text of this address, and readers will do well to clip it and read not only her ten points for victory and peace, but the entire speech.

We have space this week to comment upon only the first point of this remarkable utterance. Miss Buck said is effect this:

> Watch for your genius children, and at common expense develop them and make them responsible to their own people.

First, we must watch for them. The intelligence tests of every city uncover children of unusual ability, but if we are not on guard they are often lost in poverty and the lack of opportunity.

Secondly, we must develop them at our own common expense and make them feel responsible to us. Too often we leave the education and training of our outstanding children to philanthropic white agencies.

We have allowed the Rosenwald Fund, the Guggenheim Fund and hundreds of white individuals to pay for the education of our superior children, and wake up too late to find them with no feeling of responsibility to their own group.

College fraternities and sororities are already at this job of discovering and training super minds of college grade, but many a boy and girl of high talents never gets to college; some not even to high school.

The search for superlative minds should reach down into elementary schools in every colored community. Each parent-teacher association, church, and civic organization should be giving financial aid and encouragement to some child whom it hopes to build into a great man for its own home town.

When they are in confusion and trouble they can look to him for wisdom and spiritual leadership.

If the great minds of the present hurry to leave the small towns for the larger cities, it is because their own communities rejected, rather than encouraged, them.

Too Few Leaders

Pearl Buck is right: we have too few peerless leaders for thirteen million people. Douglass, Booker Washington, Harriet Tubman and Crispus Attucks are dead. A living people require living heroes who are so close to us that we touch them every day.

If every community began today to develop its foremost child it would still require a generation before it could reap the benefits of its investment. Perhaps it would need to choose two or three to be sure to get one who could make the final grade.

But sooner or later results would come, for history shows that cultured, spiritual, and intellectual leadership is the greatest asset in the public treasury.

When our leaders can match the best leaders of other groups, we have made the first step to lift the common people to their proper level.

Letters to the Editor

Fine Gold Changed

Editor the Telegraph:

In the 4th chapter of Lamentations we find the expression, "How is the most fine gold changed?" It had reference to the gold that was found after the destruction of the temple in Jerusalem. It also had reference to the peace of the people of God. They had allowed friction and sin to get among them.

I am thinking about the condition of our fair city, having lived here for 22 years and I am proud to state that a fine spirit has existed between the two races. But here of late there seems to be a breach which some think is widening each day. Why has this change come about? The original Macon citizen of my race did not show any sign of having any desire to mix with the opposite race in any way except in business, civic and human uplift. He had no desire for the so much talked about social equality. All he wanted was a chance to live his life as a citizen, being given equal opportunities to educate his children and equal justice in the courts and an equal opportunity to earn a livelihood for himself and family.

That is all the original sensible Macon Negro citizen wants today. But we have had seven attempted rapes here recently. Such an unexpected outbreak should cause the best citizens of both races to begin to ask questions as to why such unusual outrages have been committed.

Mr. W. T. Anderson attributes this to the carpet baggers like those of the 60's. I will admit that there are always some thoughtless ones among both races who are trouble-makers. In times like these the best thinkers of both races should work together and put down any and everything that will disturb the peace of our fair city

Every American citizen delights to see every man contend for his rights under the law, it matters not whether he be white or black. But the thing that is disturbing the peace of Macon today is what every decent white man and every decent Negro abhors, and that is social mixing outside of the race to which he belongs.

The self-respecting Negro does not want to be disturbed by the lawless element who have come or may come to our city. Many of us have lived in and around Macon all of our lives. And we live here because we love the city and the South. We know he ahbits and the customs and have conformed to them and have contributed to every worthwhile movement in the city and have co-operated with city government in trying to make this a great city. We have been clearly shown that the city appreciates our interest in that the city and county officials and individuals have contributed to our institutions which only benefited our group. Why then should this spirit of co-operation and peace be disturbed by a few who drop in to spend a day and pass on, or by a few hot heads in other cities who have never lived South?

We would have the city to know that the leaders of my race and substantial citizens here deplore all crime just as much as any other men We speak out loud and strong against the things of which our people are being accused when we can get to them. But the sad part about it is that the lawless element do not come near our churches and civic institutions where we can even speak to them. I am afraid that we as a race are too often judged by the lowest type among us. It is surprising to know that there are thousands of our group here who believe in law and order.

We realize that it takes many years to make a strong race, that is why we teach honesty, decency and thrift. We believe that races like individuals will have to work our their destiny with patience. Once more let me state that the Macon self-respecting Negroes believe in law and order and are against all crime, it matters not who commits it. Something unusual is causing this crime and all of us should work together and find it, remove it and punish the guilty THIS IS NO TIME FOR DIVISION

Blood Bank, Japs Negroes Big Topic

Mississippian Talks Plainly for the Record

WASHINGTON (ANP).—Blood banks, Negroes, Japanese and whites, came in for some plain and fancy going over last week when John E. Rankin, congressman from Mississippi, in a fresh outburst wrote into the Congressional Records his vituperations on the subject of "mixed" blood, castigating the newspaper "PM" throughout his remarks.

Began the Mississipian, "The radical Communistic elements that are trying to browbeat the Red Cross into taking the labels off the blood that is being furnished to the Army and Navy for our boys who are wounded on the various fighting fronts so one could tell whether it came from a white or a colored person, is spreading the false propaganda that some of this blood is already being sent out unmarked by the Red Cross.

"That is a deliberate falsehood and is calculated to stir resentment, dissension, and disunity in this country, and especially among the men in the service who may have to depend on this blood in cases of life or death.

JUN 20 1942

"On Sunday, May 31, that radical New York paper called PM, which we so often hear referred to as the uptown edition of the Communist Daily Worker, and which has been leading this attack on the Red Cross and the leaders of our armed forces who refuse to mix this blood, or to take the labels off it, not only made a vicious attack on me for defending the Red Cross against their loathsome assaults, but it deliberately slandered the Red Cross."

Noted Lawyer Suggests Seat For Democracy

JUN 20 1942

He Would Make Discrimination Offense of War

CHICAGO — (ANP) — A Presidential order making race discrimination a treasonable offens and creation of a new cabine position with a Negro as Secretar of Interracial Affairs were aske by Hugh E. MacBeth, prominen Los Angeles attorney, in an address before the Pobla Club her Saturday night.

The noted lawyer, a graduate c Fisk and the Harvard law schoo executive secretary of the California Race Relations Commission and Liberian consul at Los Angeles, also proposed the organization of an interracial organization to be known as the Defenders of Democracy with Miss Pearl Buck, famous novelist and liberal, as one of the organizers,

Mr. MacBeth based his discaurse to the Pobla, composed of Southside leaders, on Miss Buck's celebrated letters on democracy and the color question originally appearing in the New York Times and reprinted in the Negro press.

According to the attorney, the issue presented by this war is that of human slavery with which the Negro is familiar. Despite his technical emancipation, he has never been free and is still subservient to the master class which also enslaves its own kin.

REFERS TO CONGRESS

"For proof of this attitude by our ruling class, read the debates in the Congressional Record and tally the votes on pensions and unemployment when our economy bloc performed in Washington and found the treasury empty for peaceful, constructive human needs," he said. "Then tally the votes of these same statesmen less than six months thereafter, as without debate they found billions in the treasury for other purposes.

"There you will find the imperishable record of the ruling class in the greatest democratic nation of our civilized world at a moment of crisis. Consistently they followed the world trend of civilization as we know it — that of interracial human exploitation."

"This is a war in which the fascist, or slave owning elements of the world, are using the human misery of nine tenths of the world to wipe out the one strongest effort of democracy in the world — our beloved United States of America," the barrister asserted. "And truly it is our United States — our hope, which we have ever cherished, never tarnished, and for which we have given our blood, our toil and our sweat as no other group of people in this country has given."

If the white nations unite for the sole purpose of wiping out Japan as threatening the domination of the world by the yellow races, then the yellow races, brown races, and black races will rise behind Japan for an interminable racial war, he pointed out. This war will have the stimulating effect on the colored races of a thorough pruning of their racial stock, but will leave the so-called white races with scarcely enough "seed corn" left to start a new crop.

Contending that the only way for the nation to prove to colored people throughout the world that it is serious in its claims of democracy is by fostering democracy at home, Mr. Macbeth suggested a "plan of offense" which includes:

Formation of the Defenders of Democracy composed of fearless leaders of races, national and religious groups in the world;

Congressmen have not yet been convinced that cooperators are serious enough about the bill to make it an issue.

Church leaders have added their support to force the bill out into the open.

He Won't Give Your Business His Undivided Loyalty If He Has One of His Own

APR 29 1942

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

56k

No man can serve two masters. That was true when the words were spoken, nearly 2,000 years ago, and it is no less true today.

We all have single-track minds

If a man is mastered by his business or profession, he feels little concern for anything else. All other matters, public and private, form a hazy background of which he is scarcely aware. Politics and civic matters concern him only as they affect his business. He hasn't time to read a book. He can't even serve his own true interests, for he won't take time for a rest ordered by his doctor.

It is a limitation common to us all. The young man in love; the young genius studying music; the author writing a book; the inventor in pursuit of a new idea; the scientist in his laboratory; the missionary trying to establish his religion; the gangster building his racket—all alike are mastered by one loyalty and enthusiasm, and all other matters seem of little importance.

We all know this is true, for our own experience and observation prove it. And we must quickly realize its significance, if we are to save ourselves, for our very lives depend upon it.

We have reached the point where we can have no master, under God, except our country. And we cannot serve this master if we have another.

No man can serve his country if his master is greed.

No man can serve his country if his master is organized labor.

No man can serve his country if his master is hatred for Russia.

No man can serve his country if his master is the New Deal.

APR 29 1942

No man can serve his country if his master is lust for profits or power.

No man can serve his country if his master is party politics.

No man can serve his country if his master is personal or group advantage.

No man can serve his country if his master is race or class prejudice.

It is simply impossible to serve our country with singleminded devotion while serving a smaller and more selfish interest. And if we do not accept our country as a master, a foreign master will be thrust upon us.

THIS MORNING

by JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES, II

"Save him from his friends . . ."

Many imagined or pretended "appeasers" of the Negro who are really his agitators and enemies operate under one fallacy so dangerous it needs emphatic pointing out. It appears even in an article on Negro patriotism by famed R. H. Markham in The Christian Science Monitor. "This Negro loyalty," he writes, "in spite of rope, torch and guns in city streets, is not mere words . . ." It isn't mere words, true. The Negro's patriotism is the genuine article. But the merest of words are Mr. Markham's about "rope, torch and gun." He implies that these are typical of Negro treatment in America. That is a ghastly untruth. There are instances of them, all too many, but they are not the ordinary lot which professional and sentimental champions are making them out to be. Discrimination, yes, and denial of economic opportunities, and cheating and underprivileged—but not "rope, torch and gun." One lynching in Sikeston—among a nation of 140,000,000—is that the "rope" to which Mr. Markham refers as if there were hangings on every other tree in the land? It is cruel, vicious, dangerous nonsense, preached and played up until many actually believe it.

And a solemn truth is that white people are being aroused against colored (in the South, at any rate) as well as colored against white. We know this from letters and messages we get, from partisan periodicals we see, from many conversations in course of travel. Champions of the Negro who seize on some isolated atrocity story and circulate it as if it represented something typical don't realize that enemies of the Negro are circulating their own atrocity stories of Negro misbehavior. It is something for some of the professionals to think about as they go to the point of treason in stirring up the Negro now against his country.

It is something, too, for sentimentalists to consider as they single the Negro out for special solicitude and discussion, making him more race conscious at a time when he should be more country-conscious. Both sentimentalists and professionals persuade themselves that they are trying to appease an unrest already existing, but more than half the unrest is their own making. The true friend of the Negro at a time like this when passions are gathering on both sides and war psychologies make all sorts of excesses possible is the friend who encourages him to think of his country, not just of himself, to think of a country which has carried him farther than he ever went before and which promises him more when the war is won—unless Hitler wins it. It is ghastly to think of the evil that can come to this nation and most of all to its Negroes if this hot race consciousness in the very midst of a supreme national crisis continues to be encouraged by professionals and sentimentalists.

MAY 2 1942

From Editor Virginius Dabney, of The Richmond Times-Dispatch, who is both a Liberal and a liberal and one of the best friends the Negro ever had, comes the best statement yet against those who are using the war crisis to demand that all the wrongs be righted at once. Agreeing with this column's long contention, Editor Dabney writes: "The race has made great advances since its release from slavery, and it will make many more, if it pursues its objectives wisely and sanely. But nothing could set it back more disastrously, and more certainly prevent legitimate and much-needed improvements in health, education, living standards and welfare than an attempt to force immediate revolutionary revision in customs and practices which have grown up over decades and centuries of usage. The small minority of Negroes who make such a revolution the price of enthusiastic cooperation in their country's fight for survival, are their own and their race's worst enemies . . ."

Mr. Dabney doesn't hem-and-haw and generalize. Specifically he names the agitations of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and its magazine, Crisis, as well as two leading Negro dailies, The Pittsburgh Courier and The (Harlem) Amsterdam Star News. And he quotes the now famous letter of Tuskegee's wise and sane President F. D. Patterson against these agitators.

Some who agree with the position taken by Mr. Dabney and this column tell us that, nevertheless, such things were better not discussed. But old-fashioned hush-hush policies don't work when agitators on both sides accept no hushing. Nothing is more important to the South now than that the patriotism of our people and the genuine good will between races which exists in real measure here be protected from these professional and sentimental agitators. Most of us of both races love our country and have no quarrel with each other. This is a time of times for staying that way.

Having had now what we consider a vitally necessary say, we shall take pleasure in discussing other and happier matters hereafter, for the most part.

HAMPTON INST. HEARS ADDRESS BY FIRST LADY

Cites Danger to American Democracy From Denial Of Minority Rights

APR 1942

56K

HAMPTON INSTITUTE, Va.—Four things are necessary for maintenance of a democracy, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said Friday night, April in an address at Hampton Institute, equality of all persons before the law; equal opportunity at education; equal employment opportunity in ratio to ability; and equal chance to participate in the government.

If anyone is barred from these four equalities, the President's wife said, the "obligation of democracy cannot be fulfilled." This followed a statement that it is "the job of civilians at home to set certain patterns for the soldiers to find when they return home."

Mrs. Roosevelt presented to Isaiah Grant, of Hopewell, Va., the National Youth Administration award offered to "the youth most valuable to war production" on the Hampton Institute NYA defense project.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Roosevelt and other members of the Julius Rosenwald Fund board of trustees, at Hampton for a two-day session were taken on an inspection tour of Langley Field.

The First Lady said that if the nation can say it has proved that a democracy can be made to work, it has something with which to go to other nations and make a peace.

The United States has not treated other races in other countries on an equal basis, she said, adding that Americans have an idea that whites are set apart.

"Then suddenly," she added, "the nation is at war and finds itself allied with the Chinese and the Filipinos."

1942

Mrs. Roosevelt said that after the war, when the country starts to make a peace it has to realize "we are in a world growing closer daily. If we are going to live in peace, we must have respect for each other. If we hope to keep the peace, we must face world problems that affect everybody," she said.

This country, the First Lady said, is fighting so it can establish cooperation with all the world in order to remain at peace. There is only one way of being at peace, she said, and that is "by having love and respect for our fellow man."

"We cannot rightly talk about American Negroes after the war, or any of us after the war, without considering the war itself and its effects," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "We are all going to be affected by what happens during the war; what happens now has a lot to do with the situation after the war."

The war must be won, she told the students, because it is basically a war between two opposite philosophies—totalitarianism and democracy.

"I am not saying we have a perfect democracy," she said, adding that as long as this country can hold on to that philosophy "that is what we must fight for." In many places, democracy has not achieved the things it set out to do, she said; but to win the war the people must think of the objective, of what democracy stands for, and work toward that goal.

There is every evidence that people are gradually becoming educated to a more democratic way of life, Mrs. Roosevelt said, adding:

"We need as individuals, to win the war and the peace afterward, to face the problem of what democracy really means to us as equal citizens, not as minorities. Through this we must clarify many things in democracy at home and abroad.... Before this war is over we are going to be one people, allied to and fighting with other races. We must respect them and treat them with as much consideration as any other of our allies." People must learn respect for each individual as a human being, she said.

In a world rapidly growing closer together she remarked that, "if we are going to live in peace we can't have contempt for each other. We must have respect for them and think of all our problems as world problems."

Civilians "left behind" have an obligation to make this country one for which it will be worthwhile to die; and it will be only worthwhile and a better country if the soldiers know those they love have a better place in which to live, the speaker said.

As the whole basis for peace and planning, "we must say we have proved that democracy can be made to work," Mrs. Roosevelt said, and this country must be made a living example to the rest of the world of what can be done. The post-war American policy, she said, should be one of "enlightened selfishness," designed to open new ways of intercourse between nations and help other nations develop.

It is evident, she said, that there is a better spirit of cooperation in the land. This nation, she said, is fighting for more than self-preservation; it is fighting that we in the future can establish cooperation with all the world. In the last war we failed; thousands gave their lives thinking they gave them for something they did not get."

Mrs. Roosevelt's citation to Grant was presented because of his outstanding work over a nine-month period on the war production project at Hampton Institute.

Young Grant is participating in a woodworking project at the Tidewater Virginia college, making necessary furniture for the Norfolk Navy Yard and for various United States Housing projects. His group is now preparing for a program to turn out gun racks for the United States army.

He was selected as the most outstanding of 65 young men of the project and probably will begin work at the Norfolk Navy Yard within the next month as a ship joiner. The award is similar to 10 that will be given in each state April 15, to outstanding youths on the 10 largest NYA defense projects of these states.

The National Youth Administration has announced that awards will later be presented to the youth most valuable to war production in each state, and eventually a national winner will be selected.

The project at Hampton Institute began December 1, 1940 and has had enrolled 178 young men. According to local authorities, 68 percent of those who have finished the course are actually working directly in defense industries, the largest group being at the Norfolk Navy Yard.

Grant was picked for the Hampton project by the NYA, directly after graduating from Carter G Woodson high school.

Other members of the board of trustees of the Julius Rosenwald Fund who were present at the annual meeting on the Hampton institute campus and guests were: Marshall Field, III, of the Chicago Sun; Mr. and Mrs. Richard Frank, of Chicago; Leonard Rieser, of Chicago; Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund; William C. Haygood, director for fellowships for the Rosenwald Fund; Dr. M. O. Bousfield, director for Negro health for the Rosenwald Fund; Fred G. Wale, director for rural education for the Rosenwald Fund; Mark Ethridge, of the Louisville Courier-Journal, and member of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice; Dr. Franklin McLean, Mrs. David Levy, Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Stern, of New Orleans; Lessing Rosenwald, of the War Production Board; Charles S. Johnson, of Fisk university; Will W. Alexander, of the War Labor Board; Mrs. Dorothy Roosevelt, Robert C. Weaver, of the War Production Board; Miss Lillian Smith, Miss Paula Snelling, Raymond Paty, Miss Margaret Utley, and Miss Mary Elizabeth McKay.

Looters and Nudes

JULIEN BINFORD, the distinguished artist whose preliminary sketch of the burning of Richmond was commented upon in these columns on Saturday, writes us in today's Voice of the People that we did not interpret one section of his design correctly.

Whereas we had assumed the figure in the upper lefthand corner to be that of a Negro woman looting a home, he points out that it is, in fact, "a white woman handing her bundled baby to a man in the street." We are glad to have this explanation, and to withdraw our complaint on that score. We had felt that it would be unfortunate to overemphasize looting by Negroes, in view of the splendid behavior of the race throughout the entire war.

MR. BINFORD makes no comment on our proposal that the nude lady lying in the street be given some clothes. Nobody contends that there is any real authority for placing such a figure in the mural, and the lack of authenticity was our sole reason for raising a mild objection to the unclothed figure. References in one letter which we published yesterday to our "reactionary" attitude, and the regret expressed therein that we are unfamiliar with "the art which now hangs in the museums of the world," are beside the point. Having spent nine months in Europe, a good portion of it in art galleries, we shall try to bear up under the impact of this epistolary shillelagh. And while we do not pretend to be authorities on matters artistic, we certainly are not "shocked" by the sight of the female form on canvas.

We repeat that the issue is whether a mural depicting an historic episode ought to conform to actual events, or whether the artist should feel at liberty to introduce extraneous factors for the sake of the design. Perhaps he should, but it is debatable, and in this instance we incline to think that the imperatives of historic fact should outweigh other considerations.

THE NEGRO QUESTION.

To the Editor: I noticed some weeks ago, and occasionally later, some persons criticizing J. W. Stroud's letter in the Forum. Mr. Stroud (of Richmond) is like myself. He wants to know, and so do I, what these writers, presumably professional Negroes who demand their rights as American citizens, and I am curious to know what they desire. Do they desire social equality with white people? And if they obtain that, will they desire and expect to obtain an amalgamation of the races?

They are being drafted into the military forces of this nation, and claim to be patriotic, and they lay claim to "equal rights," which may have in it a sense of justice to a certain extent, but just what do they want?

My idea is—my honest opinion is—that to adopt social equality would be coming down for all of us, both white and black, and if they think they should share in the officeholding in this country, it would be no more satisfactory now than it was prior to 1900.

Official Attack on Prejudice

The investigation of the Sikeston lynching by the department of justice and the arrest of the leaders who caused the mob to attack Negroes about to occupy federal housing in Detroit are a new departure in official action in this country. Race prejudice has come to be regarded as the regular order of things. Not only does the public do as it pleases with us, but officials under oath to administer the law are surprised that we expect equality.

The free rein given prejudice reaches its climax in the attacks upon Negro soldiers in southern communities. There were not many of them, considering the number of new contacts the thousands of Negroes from other sections created. But at that there were too many because the strangers came in the uniform of our country at a time when it is imperiled. Attacks upon them meant that prejudice outweighed patriotism. Now that the mob terrorists in Detroit and Sikeston are frowned upon officially, we look for the government to tell prejudice that attacks upon Negro soldiers must cease and desist for the duration, or suffer the consequences.

At the same time, let's be reasonable. Our boys are not turned into Sunday school goody goodies by donning the uniform. Therefore some trouble is to be expected just as it occurs with white soldiers.

To our way of thinking we Negroes have been victims of prejudice so long that we blame on it many things which are only human. At any rate the federal government by these two official acts shows an attitude which we like.

Governor Talmadge has changed his mind about Georgia accepting federal aid for the common schools. Apparently somebody must have let him know just how the teachers and patrons think about it.—Valdosta Times.

Perhaps Governor Talmadge's latest outburst on the subject of the danger of letting Negroes into white schools was merely a trial balloon sent up to see if Georgia was so absorbed in the war it wouldn't react to political skullduggery.—Quitman Free Press.

We were yet a small boy in knee pants when we tried to steal a little piece of cheese while in a large supply store and got caught. Since that time we've never entertained any thought or even had a hankering to steal. It's best to work and buy cheese.—Abbeville Chronicle.

Mrs. Roosevelt said that after the war, when the country starts to make a peace it has to realize "we are in a world growing closer daily. If we are going to live in peace, we must have respect for each other. If we hope to keep the peace, we must face world problems that affect everybody," she said.

This country, the First Lady said, is fighting so it can establish co-operation with all the world in order to remain at peace. There is only one way of being at peace, she said, and that is "by having love and respect for our fellow man."

"We cannot rightly talk about American Negroes after the war, or any of us after the war, without considering the war itself and its effects," Mrs. Roosevelt said. "We are all going to be affected by what happens during the war; what happens now has a lot to do with the situation after the war."

The war must be won, she told the students, because it is basically a war between two opposite philosophies—totalitarianism and democracy.

"I am not saying we have a perfect democracy," she said, adding that as long as this country can hold on to that philosophy "that is what we must fight for." In many places, democracy has not achieved the things it set out to do, she said; but to win the war the people must think of the objective, of what democracy stands for, and work toward that goal.

There is every evidence that people are gradually becoming educated to a more democratic way of life, Mrs. Roosevelt said, adding:

"We need as individuals, to win the war and the peace afterward, to face the problem of what democracy really means to us as equal citizens, not as minorities. Through this we must clarify many things in democracy at home and abroad.... Before this war is over we are going to be one people, allied to and fighting with other races. We must respect them and treat them with as much consideration as any other of our allies." People must learn respect for each individual as a human being, she said.

In a world rapidly growing closer together she remarked that, "if we are going to live in peace we can't have contempt for each other. We must have respect for them and think of all our problems as world problems."

Civilians "left behind" have an obligation to make this country one for which it will be worthwhile to die; and it will be only worthwhile and a better country if the soldiers know those they love have a better place in which to live, the speaker said.

As the whole basis for peace and planning, "we must say we have proved that democracy can be made to work," Mrs. Roosevelt said, and this country must be made a living example to the rest of the world of what can be done. The post-war American policy, she said, should be one of "enlightened selfishness," designed to open new ways of intercourse between nations and help other nations develop.

It is evident, she said, that there is a better spirit of cooperation in the land. This nation, she said, is fighting for more than self-preservation; it is fighting that we in the future can establish cooperation with all the world. In the last war we failed; thousands gave their lives thinking they gave them for something they did not get."

Mrs. Roosevelt's citation to Grant was presented because of his outstanding work over a nine-month period on the war production project at Hampton Institute.

Young Grant is participating in a woodworking project at the Tidewater Virginia college, making necessary furniture for the Norfolk Navy Yard and for various United States Housing projects. His group is now preparing for a program to turn out gun racks for the United States army.

He was selected as the most outstanding of 65 young men of the project and probably will begin work at the Norfolk Navy Yard within the next month as a ship joiner. The award is similar to 10 that will be given in each state April 15, to outstanding youths on the 10 largest NYA defense projects of these states.

A New Negro Has Arisen In America

By DR. MARY McLEOD BETHUNE

Editor's note: This is the text of an address delivered by Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, director of Negro Affairs, National Youth Administration, president of Bethune-Cookman College, during the mass meeting of the March-On-Washington Movement, Tuesday, June 16, in Madison Square Garden.

JUN 27 1942

YOUR chins are out, your eyes are clear! I see determination written on the faces of everyone of you.

Your militancy and resoluteness are among America's most valuable assets in a day like this. We must not let America ignore the powerful service that can be rendered her by these attributes you possess. America needs today, as never before, your fighting hearts, your courage, your refusal to surrender or retreat in the face of discouraging odds.

Mrs. Bethune

You who are here tonight are a new experience to America. Throughout the history of your life in this county — over three-hundred years — you have been regarded as the patient, submissive minority — your first two and a half centuries were spent in enforced slavery. You had no rights, the supreme court held—you were chattels like any horse, or plow or iron pot.

You were not permitted to use a voice and so had to express your hopes and dreams for freedom, your bravery and courage, through individual rebellion, occasional mass uprisings and more often through the spirituals, the sorrow songs that gave the the first mass expression to our deep longing to live some day as free citizens in a democracy.

CAME THE EMANCIPATION

Then came your emancipation — to save the union which could not exist half slave and half free. The Thirteenth Amendment to the Constitution legally abolished slavery. The Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments took you out of the status of chattels and made you citizens, made the Bill of Rights yours. Still, you were patient — experiencing discriminations, injustices, segregation, and denials of equal opportunities.

56K

Here and there a clarion voice rose above the rumblings against injustice, a Frederick Douglass, a Harriet Tubman, a Walter White, a Phillip Randolph, and nameless and numerous unsung heroes. But, the pall of a slave experience still hung over the masses of our people. They had the right to speak out but dared not speak out.

But, today — a new Negro has arisen in America. He is here in Madison Square Garden tonight. He is you!

You are neither young nor old—You're just new! You have awakened as has the world. You are seeking full freedom, justice, respect, and opportunity.

MILITANT IN SPIRIT

You are militant in spirit. You are unwilling to accept less than the Constitution guarantees to you as citizens of the world's greatest democracy.

You are no longer begging—you are insisting, because you realize that America, the only country you know and the country you love, cannot be preserved nine-tenths free and one-tenth oppressed. You realize your insistence is necessary to save America from itself, to make America the ideal democracy that it professes itself to the world to be. Not, only are our enemies capitalizing on America's slightful failures to do so, but our allies and friends in China and India, Africa and South America, are weighing America's sincerity on her own "home" scales.

Thank God you have these qualities of militancy and insistence. And thank God you have a leadership to cultivate and to guide these qualities that are rising from the masses.

INTELLIGENTLY ARTICULATE

You know how important it is that this surging spirit be kept within the bounds of law and order. You know how necessary it is that your militancy be non-violent. But you must at the same time keep it persistent, keep it courageous, make it intelligently articulate.

Only by so doing can we win victory for democracy at home and for democracy throughout the world. Our insistence upon the practice of democratic ideals here does not in any measure detract from our loyalty to our country, nor from our militancy in our stand for the democratization of the world. Friends of freedom are aware of our purpose—they know our insistence is an effort to rid America of shame.

We have grown tired of turning the other cheek. Both our cheeks are now so blistered they are too sensitive for further blows. But regardless of our trials and tribulations at home, we must not for a moment lose sight of the fact that we must give our all-out unreserved effort to winning this war. Unless this war is won on the battlefields abroad, there can be no victory in our struggles here at home.

I want all America to understand — and I believe I voice the sentiment of everyone of you here—that we will never strike our flag. On the contrary, we will eternally protect it with all that we have in courage, in faith, in endurance.

At the same time, we want our flag to protect us—at home in our right to produce and to live, abroad in our willingness to sacrifice and to die.

As Individuals

BY ROBERT QUILLEN

JUL 8 1942

56K

To dislike or hate other people solely because of their religion or race is an evidence of senseless prejudice. It is not a result of reasoning, but is simply an emotion, usually inspired by falsehood and rooted in ignorance. Like other emotions which have no basis in reason, it can make man as cruel and merciless as the predatory creatures that are incapable of reason.

But race prejudice is often used as a convenient explanation of resentments and preferences that are neither shameful nor unreasonable.

A recent government survey of employers doing war work revealed that the great majority discriminate against Negroes—usually to placate unions or local public opinion. But in many instances this is true only of unskilled workers. The unskilled Negro would take a job desired by many white men; but skilled workers are scarce, and the skilled Negro is accepted because he doesn't take a white man's job. There are more jobs than men.

So in the deep South, much "race prejudice" is economic. Those who hate the Negro are not the prosperous, but the illiterate poor whites who are nearest his economic level. He is a competitor. If he prospers enough to build a decent house, those who wish to burn him out are not the prosperous but the envious who live in shacks.

The origin of Jim Crow cars was not racial arrogance alone. It was esthetic. As the white man has an odor offensive to Chinese, so the unwashed African was offensive to white people. Coast guard vessels hunting "slavers" could detect them miles away on the darkest night by the smell.

Now "race prejudice" is often nothing more than personal dislike. Asking people to accept all members of another race as equals and pals is silly. They don't accept all members of their own race.

The person who thinks he is hated or scorned because of his race is often disliked for more personal reasons. He may be ill-mannered, arrogant or otherwise offensive. And people would dislike any member of their own race who had his faults and his personality.

The only way to solve this problem is to quit thinking in terms of race and think of persons. Modest, charming, friendly and honest people are liked regardless of race, and offensive people are disliked. We can't change that, and we can't change taste.

20,000 Whites Sign First Petition Against Segregation

10,000,000 Names Are Desired by the Union on Democratic Action

NEW YORK—The majority of the first 20,000 names signed to a petition asking President Roosevelt to eliminate discrimination in the armed forces are those of white people, James Loeb, Jr., executive secretary of the Union for Democratic Action, announced this week, and ten million additional names are being sought in a national campaign.

JUL 4 1942

"The NAACP, the Urban League, the Negro Labor Committee, the national Elks, Walter White, Lester Granger, J. Finley Wilson, Dr. Mary McLeod Bethune, Frank Crosswaith, A. Philip Randolph and hundreds of other well-known churchmen, civic leaders and organizations are behind this campaign," Mr. Loeb declared.

Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia formally launched the nationwide campaign by signing the first petition to President Roosevelt in the presence of an inter-racial committee headed by Dr. Frank Kingdon, president of the union.

Signs Glady, Mayor Says

"I sign this petition gladly," the mayor told Dr. Kingdon and the delegation, which included Fannie Hurst, novelist; Alfred Baker Lewis, Frank R. Corsswaith, Jack Altman and Dr. William Agar, all members of the board of the Union for Democratic Action; J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler of the Elks; Mary L. Simkhovitch, director of Greenwich House and Rachel V. Corrothers, executive secretary of the Harlem Riverside Civilian Defense Volunteer Organization.

"I believe that advances have been made in combatting discrimination," the mayor said, "through the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices. But we still have a long way to go. Public opinion must be aroused to support every move for justice to all our people."

Mississippi Solon Raises Red Charge Over PM's Articles About Negroes

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 23—The PM considered by many Negroes one of the most outspoken and liberal publications in the country was branded by Rep. John E.Rankin, Mississippi Democrat, Monday as promoting a Negro march on Washington.

Speaking before the house he accused the publishers of Marshall Field's paper of catering to the Communist party in a move to overthrow and destroy the government. He said the publishers were working under the guise of campaigning against the poll taxes in Southern States.

JUN 26 1942

Poll Tax Bill in House

A petition, which has gained a number of signatures (218 would be necessary), is resting in the well of the house which would bring a bill to abolish poll taxes.

Rankin accused PM also of slandering the Red Cross by an accusation that it had taken large quantities of Japanese blood and mixed it with white person's blood for blood bank purposes.

"These communistic radicals are trying to stir up race trouble all over the country," he said.

"What these communistic trouble-makers are interested in is the destruction of our civilization. They are guilty of treason of the most flagrant type. While our young men fight abroad in order that this republic might endure, these communists within our borders are stirring up strife, sabotaging national unity, and threatening the destruction of everything we stand for."

THE OPPOSITION'S WILD PITCHES

The latest device of the Roosevelt-haters is to affirm that the man in the White House is twins

By SAMUEL GRAFTON.

ONE small-time Republican politician chose the Fourth of July to announce a new political theory. He recommended that we support the President as an institution, but not necessarily as an individual. One can almost hear the shout which must have echoed in the bathroom, when this idea burst upon our damp solon, undoubtedly while he was scrubbing his back. It bears the earmarks of a bathtub notion.

JUL 8 1942

Perhaps a new slang will now develop in Washington, and we shall hear the remark: "Do you know what that institution in the White House wants to do next?" maybe the glum and familiar: "I don't understand that institution."

A certain part of the opposition has, since Pearl Harbor, been seeking a way to get the President out of the White House just long enough to take one swing at him, for old time's sake. This new device tries to fill the bill by affirming that the President is twins, one of which may be had at.

The opposition made various other tentative gestures, this week, toward recovering its balance. One formula, heard on several platforms, was: "Please, please don't let them turn this country Bolshevik while our boys are away." "Them," when we were children, used to mean nameless shapes behind the stairway; today it means the duly elected Government of this country. A certain part of the minority firmly believes that the majority is composed of goblins and boojums.

"The Courier Journal
Louisville, Ky.

I MUST also report that the opposition is making increased use of sarcasm lately. This is perhaps not to be wondered at in the case of a group which has had to live on locker-room jokes instead of votes for going on ten years. The new sarcasm revolves about Secretary Wallace and his pious hope that, after this war, each individual in the world will be able to enjoy a quart of milk a day.

Of course I regard the Wallace statement as one of the most reassuring democratic utterances of my time, because it is my belief that a theory of government, like a theory of science, must, in the end, prove itself by producing results that you can hold in your hand, and heft. I like democracy when I hear it saying: "We hold these truths to be self-evident . . . and here's your milk."

But the opposition has been working itself into a spitting frenzy on this theme; it rolls its eyes sarcastically and bids you to contemplate Wallace running around the world giving everybody milk, and then it says that after that, of course, we'll have to give everybody our natural resources, and after that, we'll have to let a lot of pauper Chinese move into our country, etc., etc. It is a kind of Abbott & Costello routine, ending in the anguished cry: "Do you want a pauper Chinese to take your job away?" If the answer is no, down with Wallace.

THESE people still think it is up to us whether we shall help the rest of the world or not. They still think it is a voluntary choice, at best a bit of sappy kindness. They see Uncle Sam as a fat old gent, sitting on a porch; he'll help his neighbors if he wants to; if he doesn't want to, he doesn't have to. They can explain everything except the peculiar circumstance that after two decades of keeping himself to himself, Uncle Sam suddenly finds he has to take 5,000,000 boys out of their jobs, and spend $228,000,000,000 on war and has all of ten minutes to do it in.

JUL 8 1942

I follow these oppositional wild pitches because I conceive it my duty to do so, and to make reports to my customers. But I always remember, as I go through this depressing stuff, that in the last year of the American Civil War, four Northern States flatly refused to give the vote to Negroes within their own borders. A number of American and English intellectuals were badly upset when they heard of this. They shouted that, hell, the whole thing was a mess, look at that, now, what were we fighting for if some people will carry on that way, etc., etc.

It worked out all right. There are major trends, and minor trends, and the major trend will beat the minor trend, every time. It may sometimes happen that even the newspaper of largest circulation in a country will follow the minor trend; but, la, everybody has to make these discoveries for himself.

Baptists Discover A Neglected Field

5-6K

Editor's Note: The articles printed below, "Racial Barricades," and "Racial Unfairness" appeared in a recent issue of Southern Baptist Home Missions, published monthly by the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention (white).

RACIAL BARRICADES

THE SUNDAY VISITOR, a Catholic magazine, has this to say about the attitude of Catholics towards the Negro: "Our Christianity does not recognize barricades of social and racial inequality in dealing with the moral and temporal welfare of the Negro youth. Catholicity must render a helping hand to these young Negroes before the forces of anti-Christianity completely engulf them with their ever menacing program of sham equality and false promises."

The Catholics are making a tremendous effort to win the Negroes. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are being invested in schools and churches and mission work of various sorts.

It has been said that if the Negro is not a Baptist it is because some white man has been "monkeying" with him. We should face the fact that a great denomination is "monkeying" with the Negro, and unless we as Baptists assume the right attitude towards him and render the spiritual service that we should, this great race may be won to the Catholic faith.

RACIAL UNFAIRNESS

EDWIN R. EMBREE, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund of Chicago, said recently that the American attitude towards the Negro was "a threat to the whole theory and practice of democracy." In his address to the Yale Graduates Sociology Club, he emphasized the importance of getting rid of racial prejudice.

"We set," said he, "a pattern of caste and discrimination that may be easily transferred to other groups. No race or class can be firmly assured of fair play so long as we continue to treat any group unfairly."

In our religious and missionary work we must look upon the world as Christ looked upon it. There are no racial lines in the Great Commission, and surely there are no color lines in John 3:16.

Band Of Negroes And Whites To Dramatize Race Problems In 250-Mile Trek To Capital

NEW YORK, Protestant Voice—In an effort to dramatize the problem of racial discrimination, a small band of Negro and white men and women is taking a 250-mile hike to the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, D.C.

Sponsored by Rev. J. Holmes Smith, Methodist minister, and the Harlem Christian Youth Council the members of the caravan, enlisted on a "broadly religious basis," included representatives of the Protestant, Catholic and Jewish Faiths.

Marching approximately 18 miles per day the hikers are scheduled to arrive in the Capital City June 16, spending their nights at pre--arranged rest depots. Each morning a "simple period of meditation" is conducted in turn, by marchers of the various faiths.

Posters and literature condemning racial discrimination are distributed along the route. At the end of each day the "pilgrimage" disperses. Proceeding in groups of two— Negro and white —the marchers visit restaurants, hotels, theatres, YM's and YW's "in order to get a sample of the attitudes" prevalent in each locality.

No Program Planned

No definite program has been planned for the Washington end of the trek other than an "impressive service" at the Lincoln Memorial.

The possibility of presenting petitions against race discrimination to the White House was suggested by Mr. Smith.

"In these petitions," he said, "we might focus upon discrimination in industries and such specific recent episodes as the Sojourner Truth riots in Detroit, the lynching in Sykeston, Mo., and the Odell Waller case.

"The urgency of the problem of race discrimination," he added, "is beyond question. Some of us who live close to the racial cross currents cannot escape the sense of being near the edge of a volcano."

The "pilgrimage" according to Mr. Smith has the personal endorsement of Dr. George Haynes, secretary of the department of race relations of the Federal Council of Churches,, and Walter White secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Davis Calls Separation Foolishness

Senator James J. Davis Hits Separate Schools and Cars

By OLLIE STEWART

WASHINGTON

Segregation is bad for colored and for white, and is nothing but tomfoolery any way you look at it, according to U.S. Senator James J. Davis of Pennsylvania. But what to do about getting rid of it is something the Republican Senator from Pennsylvania can't answer.

"I'll do anything I can to help do away with segregation," Welsh-born Senator Davis told the AFRO this week in an exclusive interview. "It's nothing but damn tomfoolery to say a person can't go to school here, or take that seat in a street car because of the color of his skin—but how to get rid of the practice is more than I can say."

Born in Wales

The Senator, who was born in Tredegar, South Wales, and who migrated to Pittsburgh at the age of 8, revealed that he was one of the first white men to work with colored men as a puddler in Birmingham, Ala., and has had contact with colored people all his life.

"On many occasions," he declared, "I have spoken from the pulpit of a white church or auditorium one Sunday, and from the pulpit of a colored church the following Sunday."

Separation in Army

When asked about segregation in the U.S. Army, Senator Davis said: "I don't know what to suggest as a remedy. The South is big and its prejudices are big—and it will take education to change their way of thinking."

Reminded that this is a time of crisis when there may not be time for a long period of education, Senator Davis stated frankly: "I don't know what would be the best thing to do. If you can think of something, I'd be glad to help you put it over—but I'm unable to point the way."

THIS MORNING

by JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES, II

"May now in mutual well-beseeming ranks Move all one way."

A fact to be cherished amid stupid agitations, gathering antagonisms, wild demands and wilder alarms, is that Southern white people honestly like Southern colored people and wish them well. Colored people may be better treated elsewhere, have more privileges and equalities, but they are not really liked. And they are in the South. That liking is no sufficient answer to the race problems, of course, for it must surely be a part of the answer that comes at last. The campaign for a much-needed Negro hospital in Birmingham, which will be launched with a mammoth song festival and speaking program at the Municipal Auditorium next Friday evening, gives fine occasion for expressions of this Southern amity between races. Commission President Cooper Green, County Health Officer George Dennison, Dr. Henry M. Edmonds, Acipco's Dr. C. B. Bray, and other white leaders are to join colored ones on the auditorium platform in pleas for the hospital —and conditioning the whole program with harmonies will be the music of a great Negro chorus of 3,000 voices and the Acipco band. In windows of Birmingham's principal stores placards are now announcing this event. Local radio stations are giving it special programs, newspapers are playing it up.

It is the white people of Birmingham helping the colored people of Birmingham to help themselves in an undisputably worthy cause. It is good will between the two races for advancement of the one which needs it most. May it carry its own message, be its own sign, to hateful divisionists. The white and the colored people of Southern communities are going to have to live here in great numbers a long time together. They can get nowhere without getting along together.

The campaign is for $300,000 with which to build and equip a hospital and a nurses' home. It is hoped to raise the major part of the money among the county's 180,000 Negroes. With known and trusted local Negro leaders cooperating, every financial safeguard is presumed to have been put around the gathering of the funds. Bishop B. G. Shaw, of the A. M. E. Zion Church, heads the organization. The Rev. Amos Carnegie, experienced organizer, is executive director. The title is the Birmingham and Jefferson County Negro Hospital Association, headquarters at 1530 Fifth Avenue, North, phone 3-9851. For decency's sake, for humanity's sake and for this whole community's sake, the health and adequate hospitalization of our immense Negro population concerns every one of us here. In this hour of more suffering at large and more income at home than perhaps ever before, the Negroes owe it to themselves to engage enthusiastically in the hospital effort. And the white people owe it to themselves and everybody else—here and elsewhere —to help.

"Sane and level-headed counsel to the Negro" is what Editor Virginius Dabney, of The Richmond Times-Dispatch, calls Mark Ethridge's statement at the fair employment practices hearings. Mr. Dabney's record as a friend of the Negro is as consistent and long as Mr. Ethridge's. If they see eye to eye now against what ~~Mr. Dabney calls the~~ "unreasonable demands of certain Negroes," that is impressive evidence that the ~~demands have no hope in the South and that the pressing of them may cost the~~ race the very friends who can help it most.

Mr. Ethridge's statement has done ~~much to relieve a gathering racial tension. Since the tension~~ has been caused by radicals on both sides, perhaps as much can be done by quoting what he said, also, against radicals on the other side. "War always brings tensions," he said. "History-minded, sane Southern white people will recognize that. It makes the obligation all the greater to act with sanity. It is to be hoped that all of us will conduct ourselves so that the tensions will not be increased. The decent Southern white person can make the greatest contribution to that. If he is not willing to break down segregation—and he is not—he can at least see that it is not achieved on the brutal standards of a Ku Klux Klansman. He can see that it is made as painless as possible . . ."

"Moreover, he can interest himself in the legitimate aspirations and the legitimate demands of the Negro population. He can see to it that the distribution of public utilities and public benefits—such as sewer and water connections, street and sidewalk paving, parks and playgrounds, public health, public nursing and hospital facilities—come to the Negro upon the basis of population and need and fairness rather than upon his ability to muster votes. He can give him jobs, for the white man has almost all the jobs to give out. He can interest himself in full justice in the courts for the Negro . . ."

"And The Axe Did Swim"

Those who listened in on Governor Talmadge's political rally unfortunately staged for the fourth of July, must have hung their heads in shame at the desecration of the day made sacred as marking the birth of a new nation.

At Moultrie, the man from "Sugar Creek' turned loose a broadside against his opponents in his own peculiar style. All in all there was no attempt at statesmanship. It was the same old Talmadge with his old tactics of rural locutions, racial bias and hillbilly flapdoodle.

Surely Georgia, our great state is hard hit for a leader. It was a sad spectacle to see a governor of a sovereign state putting up cheap showmanship and appealing to the rabble in his rantings for office instead of discussing the constructive issues of the day.

At Newnan, Georgia, another Georgian, Ellis Arnall, was making his bid for the governorship. Attorney General Arnall's address and those of his aides were of a decent tenor. It is our hope Mr. Arnall will not descend to the level of his opponent's demagogue practices. There must be an appeal to all the voters of the state without regard to race, color or previous condition of servitude. In one of his utterances Governor Talmadge made the statement that he was the Governor of all the people, the whites as well as the colored and it was his duty to render justice to all alike. However the Governor did not recall that during his some twenty years of office tenure, the colored people had had no opportunity to express themselves for or against him. The Governor left his hearers wondering how he could claim to be the Governor of a people whom he shuts out by the barriers of his white primaries—truly a form of government without the consent of the governed.

It has come to a pitiful plight in Georgia when politicians must resort to petty tactics and family quarrels in an effort to gain office.

The disease that is sapping the life blood out of Georgia is her white primary system. which disfrancises a portion of the voters and flaunts the bloody shirt of disgrace and chagrin in the face of white voters.

The clouds burst, the torrents poured down at Moultrie making a part of the Governor's prepared speech unreadable even to himself—but—"the axe did swim."

American Fascists Using The War To Foster Hate Under Patriotic Guise

THE Native Sons of the Golden West seek to change the interpretation of the 14th Amendment made by the United States Supreme Court when it upheld the right [illegible] citizenship of Chinese born in the United States.

This organization desires to have the law exclude Chinese, Japanese and other races from citizenship despit the fact that they are born in America.

The Constitutional amendment provides that "all persons born or naturalized in the United States and, subject to the jurisdiction thereof, are citizens of the United States and the State wherein they reside."

JUL 11 1942

It is difficult to understand how any court can exclude from citizenship any person born in the United States.

But the representatives of the Native Sons of the Golden West made this significant statement: " — — — only white persons were present at Bunker Hill, Lexington, Valley Forge and in the drafting of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution."

That statement is historically incorrect. Negroes were at Bunker Hill. They fought bravely in the Revolution. But, aside from the inaccuracy of this assertion, it proves that the idea of white supremacy is firmly fixed in the hearts of the Native Sons of the Golden West.

Minority groups had better be on the alert for actions of this kind. The war offers Fascists excellent opportunity to spread racial hatred under the banner of patriotism.

Leaders Give Full Support

WASHINGTON—(SNS) — Delegates representing 29 Negro and white national organizations met here recently at the NAACP Washington Bureau, and voted to support a program which the cooperation of the organizations could be focused and unified through the NAACP Bureau on problems affecting the Negro.

JUL 14 1942

Discussion touched upon the Odell Waller case, the fight for the anti-poll tax bill, the color problem throughout the world at the present time with particular emphasis on India, Negroes in ~~stenographic pools~~ in government agencies, the elimination of crimination and segregation in the armed forces, integration of Negroes into the air force, the place of Negro doctors in the army, relations between Negro workers and organized labor, vocational training for war industries and the southern bloc in Congress.

All the delegates pledged support to the Washington Bureau. At the close of the meeting a Finding Committee was appointed to put into writing the specific ways in which the Washington Bureau and the various agencies could work together.

Present at the meeting in addition to Walter White and Frank D. Reeves of the Washington Bureau. were A. Philip Randolph, and T. W. Moore, representing the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Louise McDonald, Alpha Kappa Alpha sorority; Dr. Ivan A. ## Negro Leaders Seek Race Issue Showdown

NEW YORK, [AP]—A group of Negro leaders declared Sunday in a letter to President Roosevelt that the recent execution of Odell Waller, Negro sharecropper, had intensified determination for a "showdown" on the question of total democracy for the Negro.

Signers of the letter were headed by A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who declared that the "showdown" could not be held back long "by leaders who use the bargain and compromise method."

The execution of Waller, convicted of killing his white landlord, unleashed "barbarous forces" with the result that within two weeks two Negroes were lynched and the noted Negro tenor, Roland Hayes, and his wife were beaten and jailed at Rome, Ga., the letter said

Talmadge At It Again; Running Agin Negroes

Eugene Talmadge, the clownish, publicity-seeking creature of the red clay hills of Georgia, who walks like a man and occupies the Governor's chair, has taken out a full membership in a hitler's world-wide community of degenerate racial thinkers. Open admission of his full attunement with berlin philosophy came Monday of this week, when he announced his candidacy for a fourth term as Governor of Georgia.

His announced platform was:

- ● to keep Negroes from ever attending white schools.
- ● drive all carpetbaggers (anyone opposing him) from the state.

12-Point Program of Negro Victory Parley

The 12-point program of the Negro Labor Victory Committee presented at the rally on Sunday for the full mobilization of the Negro people in the war follows:

1. That the War Production Board order the immediate placement of available Negro workers in war production industries without discrimination; that "Jim-Crow" projects in war industries be abolished; that machinery with power be established in the War Manpower Commission to enforce this order;

2. That the War Production Board train 100,000 additional Negro workers for war industries by October 1, 1942; that funds be appropriated by the Federal Government to finance the workers during their period of training;

3. That additional war contracts be allocated to the New York City area in such a manner as to speed-up conversion and full use of all existing war production facilities; that new plants for war industries be built in greater New York area to absorb existing larger labor supply;

4. That a Negro be appointed immediately to the War Manpower Commission;

5. That Joint labor-management-government committees be established in each industry, upon the initiative of the War Manpower Commission, to assist in this program to end job promotional and wage discrimination;

6. That the War Manpower Commission, in cooperation with other government agencies initiate a joint national conference of government, management, labor and Negro organizations, to convene Labor Day, 1942, to hasten and insure the end of Job and Training discrimination;

7. That legislation be passed immediately empowering the FEPC to punish violators of its orders; and that federal funds be withheld without delay from industries violating Executive Order 8802 and/or clauses in war contracts which already forbid discrimination;

8. That the federal government take effective steps to protect the civil rights and personal safety of Negro Americans from police, mob and individual violence; and that in cases of/or police violence Negroes the federal government prosecute to the limit of the law guilty parties;

9. That President Roosevelt immediately extend executive pardon to Odell Waller and the Scottsboro Boys still in prison;

10. That Negroes be appointed to all government policy and regulatory bodies such as rationing and price control boards, and that the Office of Price Administration take effective measures to eliminate discriminatory food, rent and other prices in Negro communities;

11. That full equality and citizenship rights be guaranteed Negro Americans everywhere; that all laws denying Negroes their constitutional and civil rights be abolished immediately and that the Pepper Anti-Poll Tax bill be passed in this session of Congress;

12. That Jim-Crow and discrimination be ended in all branches of the armed services and that mixed volunteer units be established immediately as a step in that direction; and that Negro candidates be admitted to all existing naval training stations.

BETWEEN THE LINES

FORCING THE ISSUE, DR. LISTEN TO DABNEY ETHRIDGE AND PEGLER

It has been said that they are our friends who know our faults and love us still. It could also be said with equal truth that they also are our friends who tell us the truth about ourselves without regard to whether this truth be fair or ugly. Of course we want most of all to hear the beautiful truth about ourselves; but the ugly truth needs telling most of all.

Within recent weeks the Negro world has been stirred by statements coming from whites supposed to be friendly towards the cause of Negro advancement. Here in Richmond we have two white newspapers whose constructive attitude on the color question is a source of great pride and encouragement. One of these papers is edited by Virginius Dabney, one of the liberals of the new south. The cause of Negro advance never seeks in vain the support of Mr. Dabney's Times-Dispatch. He fought Ku Kluxism to a standstill. He went all-out for the question of equalization of teachers' salaries. He never falter before the challenge presented when Virginia had not yet assumed responsibility for the graduate study of Negroes. He has issued more than one stinging rebuke to Talmadgism in Georgia and elsewhere. He has advocated from the beginning the full integration of Negroes into the defense work. Whenever and wherever Mr. Dabney could tip the scales in the Negroes' favor he did so without equivocation.

Mr. Dabney recently delivered himself on the ominous outbreaks of race riots in the camps and what he said ran counter to the opinions of most Negroes. Negroes set upon him as if to rend him and their disagreement with him ranged all the way from friendly criticism to an attempt to discredit him before Negroes and the nation. All that he has done through the years to help the cause of Negroes' advance was seemingly forgotten in an attempt to refute his thesis on the riot situation. Negroes had full right to disagree with Mr. Dabney; but it was not necessary to carry the disagreement to such ugly point as was in some instances done. Here is a man who has put his neck out for Negroes more than once; yet Negroes themselves seem bent on tomahawking [illegible]

The way they "waded" into Editor Dabney is mighty poor encouragement for other whites to champion the Negro's cause; for they are warned that unless they say all that Negroes want said and say it in the way Negroes want it said, they incur a blistering wrath. The easier course for a white person would be to let the Negro paddle his own canoe, rather than put out their necks in Negro behalf.

More recently, Mark Ethridge of Kentucky has spoken after such manner that it can easily be construed as coming to Mr. Dabney's rescue. Mark Ethridge has exhibited one of the finest spirits in dealing with this all-vexing Negro question. He is one Southern white that Negroes have learned to esteem and trust. But Mr. Ethridge serves notice on Negroes that they need not expect any revolution in race relations during the war nor immediately after. He, like Mr. Dabney, fears that too much "hard pushing" on the part of Negroes will result disastrously unless there is greater caution. It is fervently to be hoped that Negroes will not try to decapitate Mr. Ethridge for his frank expression.

It is pro[illegible] that b[illegible] Mr. Ethridge and Mr. Dabney know something we do not know, and are trying to warn us in time. It might be well for us to take what these white friends say as essential information germane to the readjustments the war will make inevitable. Mr. Dabney and Mr. Ethridge are our friends; and we should hear them seriously rather than critically. They know what the silent group of whites is thinking.

Information

A few weeks ago Westbrook Pegler made a statement on the Negro press that might serve some high purpose if Negroes can see in it a constructive suggestion. If Pegler and Ethridge and Dabney by their statements can acquaint Negroes with an undercurrent of American opinion they are our friends and not our enemies. These men know as all intelligent men know, that the race issue cannot be forced even by the fiat of the President.

Some are saying that Roosevelt has an opportunity to be a Lincoln. What did Lincoln do besides sign the Emancipation proclamation? He did this for the same reason that Great Britain and the United States are in league with Russia—dire necessity. Mr. Lincoln's fiat did not free the Negroes because after nearly a century we are still far from the Promised Land. Mr. Lincoln signed the proclamation and turned the Negroes over to the south where they were jim-crowed, ku kluxed, and bushwhacked into subjugation.

The same thing will happen if Roosevelt attempts by fiat to settle in toto the Negro question. The painful fact remains that in the future as in the past the advance of the Negro must wait on the slow growth of an enlightened public opinion. Let us fight; but let us not fool ourselves nor let anybody fool us. This war is not going to settle the color question, nor any other more question. This is a painful conclusion but it is better to face it than to face disastrous disillusionment!

Strength In Justice

Fifty-six leaders of the Congregational-Christian churches of the United States have written President Roosevelt pledging their "solid support" for his administration's "progressive political and economic enfranchisement of our Negro citizens." Their letter warns that "nations of the world upon whose good will and aid we must rely in the present struggle will rightly suspect and condemn us as long as the open sore of racial discrimination persists among us."

"Shameful inequities continue among us," the churchmen say, and who can deny the truth of their charge?

These inequities primarily are centered in basic economic and political matters. The great majority of the American people, we believe, are anxious to overcome these inequities as soundly and as rapidly as is feasible. But they are held back by ancient fears and prejudices.

One cannot say that these prejudices and fears have no reality. On the contrary, out of them could grow conditions dangerous to the welfare of our white and colored citizens alike and setting back immeasurably the very considerable progress that has been made in racial relations in recent years. But these fears and prejudices will be the more dangerous if efforts to correct fundamental injustices are neglected, or if we think that these problems can better be met by attempting to sidestep or suppress them, rather than by creative efforts to solve them.

It is true that to the degree we are backward in this country in achieving fundamental justice in this respect, to that degree will we be weakened in our efforts to strengthen our own freedom and to contribute to the spread of freedom throughout the world.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

ROY WILKINSON, editor of The Crisis and conductor of the column "The Watchtower" in The Amsterdam Star-News, reports that Washington is disturbed about the general behavior and lack of manners on the part of the hundreds of new colored employees of the federal government now in the nation's capitol. In addition to being noisy and unmannerly, many of these new employees have "a chip-on-the-shoulder" attitude and seem over sensitive to real and fancied wrongs.

People in Harlem can sympathize with the Washingtonians for recently we have had several embarrassing experiences with our youth. Their lack of discipline and boisterousness is a growing and very real problem here.

But similar reports coming from such widely separated areas as Los Angeles and Chicago, Baltimore and Kansas City would indicate that this is no localized problem. That it is a sign of the nervousness of the country in general over the turn that the war has taken and the prospect of a long period of rationing and sacrifice at home as well as abroad is a more logical explanation.

Young people show their feelings more than the more mature and in their effort to hide their fears often go to extremes of bravado and noise making. Instead of censuring them and make them, we should try to sympathize with them and make them realize thta in addition to living in the most dangerous age in the world's hitsory they are also living in an age which offers the greatest opportunities to youth for personal bravery and heroism. For make no mistake about it, this is a war for survival of two ideologies which must be fought and won by our youth if it is won at all.

Those of us of the older generation would do well to adopt a less critical and more sympathetic attitude toward youth and realize that their nervousness is but a sign of the times—an indication that all the world is living as though it is sitting on the edge of an active Volcano.

Merit—A Basis for Cooperation Now and World Peace Later

In urging Negroes to stand for democracy wholeheartedly in this period of fighting, rather than attempt to make the nation's need occasion for bargaining, we are looking forward to the objective of all our struggles and sacrifices.

To the unthinking, victory is everything. Somehow or other, they expect the millenium out of it, forgetting that winning this war only swaps the devil for the witch, if we do not have a better way of life afterward. Take us, we object to our partial citizenship and so picture an existence free of prejudice as perfect. But that is not so. The dominant majority does not live in paradise.

Doing duty, contributing to the general good are the keys to success, not a care-free vacation. It is lack of understanding of this requirement that has given free rein to imperialism and plunged the world into this horror of blood and destruction. Because a man is born this or that, he is not relieved of duty. Once we let that truth be our guide instead of custom, the folly and waste of race prejudice will be realized.

We Negroes here in the United States happen to have our lot cast where conditions are most favorable for making merit instead of birth the test of a man. But to get others to accept that principle, we must live by it ourselves.

Our cause is hurt when we fight fire with fire, prejudice with prejudice. To those whites who tell us that this is the time for us to be Americans and supporters of democracy, there is but one answer. Tell them we are all that and their strong allies for principle. Let's not reply that they should practice democracy first, so that the natural instinct is to defend their action.

Each of us has lost a much wanted objective, though speaking our mind. Given the chance of hearing, we "got him told." Only a fool gets satisfaction out of that. Let's be sensible and by offering ourselves on our merit, throw all the influence we have to its adoption instead of race as has been the custom.

There is no sense in race being the first and only measuring stick for us. A Negro applying for work, trying to buy the necessities of life, or participating in popular government, under present custom is balked at the start. He seldom gets to state his case. Any one else has a chance given him as a right. The reverse is true of us. Against religion and law, prejudice bars us out. We have fought against it with such poor results that even now when war is upon us as the result of Germany and Japan determining to make race differences the basis for a world wide "new" order, it persists here in America though it hampers our defense.

We repeat—the old method of complaint has not saved Negroes from prejudice. From this time on, when a white man tells us to talk less about "race" and "rights" let's answer him that race is no subject for argument since it is from God, suggest to him the good old American principle of merit as a common bond and a principle worthy of our united efforts, and prove we mean it by being the first to take that stand.

PEARL BUCK AND FREEDOM

Evidence of the most heartening sort is piling up day by day, showing that some true Americans are doing straightforward thinking on the variegated aspects of the war and the equally complex peace that will ensue. Among those who sponsor the school of thought that emphasizes re-orientation of the democratic ideals toward a universal pattern of equalitarian justice and goodness, Pearl Buck stands prominently in the forefront. In all of her public utterances since the outbreak of hostilities, Miss Buck has exhibited a fortitude and foresight considerably in advance of the mentality of the privileged class.

Her commencement address delivered to the graduating class at Howard university, in which she gave her conception of what a truly representative, working democracy ought to be, will go down in history as one of the greatest pronouncements of our times. Commenting on the requirements for winning the war, she said:

"It is not enough merely to join the Army and Navy and the Air-force if they will have us, and to do nothing if they won't. It is not enough to pour our savings into war bonds. It is not enough to put our lives into factories and war work so far as we are allowed. We will not win this war unless we win it as a nation where human beings are equal and human rights are respected. The peace will be no peace unless it is based upon the principles of human equality. . . . Therefore, today I believe that discrimination in our country must go, because until it does, we will not have won the war. We cannot fight for freedom unless we fight for freedom for all. We are not better than Fascists if we fight for the freedom of one group, and not another; for the benefit of one race, and not another; for the aggrandizement of a part and not the betterment of the whole."

Here is an outline drawn in unmistakable terms that should and doubtless will have salutary effect on the stream of consciousness of large numbers of uncritical individuals. Miss Buck, however, believes that the Negro cannot successfully earn his place into the mosaic pattern of freedom and equality until he too drops his selfishness and broadens his scope of vision so as to include other peoples striving for recognition and freedom. Bemoaning our failure to link our battle to that of the Chinese, the Korean, the African, and the Indian, she declared:

"If I have a criticism to make of the Colored people of our country it is that they have been too selfish in their interest in equality. They have thought too often of equality only for themselves in this one country—and by so doing they have limited their own struggle and robbed it of size and force and meaning for the whole human race

You are not simply a group of people in one country—you are a part of the great war of the peoples for freedom. They are not only Colored peoples against white—there are many white people on your side, and white people in many parts of the world who are subject too, to tyrants. You must understand the meaning of the war, and you must wage it on its true scale. By linking your particular battle for your own place in your own country to the whole war for freedom and human equality in the world, you will enlarge your forces and strengthen your cause, and help to win the war for democracy."

Then, she added, "You must not yield to race prejudice. It is as wrong for you to hate the white man because he is white as it is for him to hate you because you are not white." This is sorely needed admonition. In our ranting against race prejudice, we often overlook the virulence of the disease in our owr system.

Turning her attention again to the world aspect of the peace to come, Miss Buck said:

"Be ready to speak for Africa at the peace table, and to speak for Korea. Make yourselves a part of America to whom these peoples turn for understanding. Today you belong to the world, and your demands in your country are part of the world demand for freedom and for human equality."

It is a pity that our Race leaders have not had the moral courage and conviction to say what Miss Buck has said openly, in unequivocal terms and without trepidation. No doubt they entertain similar views, with the notable exception that they give expression to them in some back room and in an undertone that is quite beyond the ears of those who would be benefited by them.

JUN 2

For her courage, and for her devotion to the ideals of a true democracy as well as for her glorious effort to reactivate a sagging Negro morale, Pearl Buck deserves not only an honorary degree from Howard university but also a Congressional award for distinguished service in the cause of American democracy and humanity at large.

Races and Creeds Are United in War Program

ONE of the best examples of cooperative war spirit is the State Defense Council school in civilian protection now being conducted at Florida A. and M. College for Negroes in Tallahassee.

The course opened with negro educators and civilian defense enrollees from all over the state in attendance. Major-General Albert H. Blanding, head of the Florida Citizens' Defense Corps, and George L. Burr, Jr., executive director of the State Defense Council, spoke during the two-day session of basic training.

Dr. Harold Richards, FSCW physics department head and chairman of the State Defense Council university department, is director of the school. Leading educators from here and elsewhere in Florida will participate in the instruction and Dale Mabry field contributed a room full of gas, gas masks and a realistic tear gas demonstration. Malcolm Yancey, chairman of the Leon County Defense Council, is cooperating and will appear on the program. Earl Russell, representing the Tallahassee fire department, conducted the demonstration with a practice incendiary bomb which fired real magnesium.

President J. R. E. Lee of the college opened the proceedings with an address of welcome and members of the college faculty will assist throughout the instruction period. Trainees are housed at the college under arrangements made by the college committee, Dr. Frederick D. Inge, Chairman.

One would look a long time to find a better cooperative spirit and mutual helpfulness between races than this. It gives the lie to the enemy propagandists and thoughtless citizens who have spread statements designed to create unrest and antagonism. The record speaks for itself and louder than any subversive rumor. The fact is, as shown by this record, Floridians of all races and creeds are working together in close cooperation to win a victory which is as important to any one person as it is to another.

This is everybody's war. Colored citizens of Florida know it and have shown on this and many previous occasions that they are willing and anxious to carry their full share of the war burden. In the volunteer registration last year more colored women than any other classification signed up to do unpaid war work. Negro children of Lincoln high school made a remarkable record in the sale of war stamps and bonds, a record which places them at the top of energetic and patriotic service here and throughout the State.

Trainees registered for the course at A. and M. show by their presence that they are ready to spend money and time to train for war service. We do not need any more proof than these examples to be convinced that our colored people are loyal and true to our country and state.

ALABAMA IN 1960

There was a day when the pick and shovel, the hoe and simple plow, the hammer and the handsaw were the major tools of production. That day is behind us.

For some years to come unskilled laborers will be used, but the world in which we now live is the world of the lathe, the drill press, the welding torch, the precision instrument.

Education may have been superfluous for a man who was to spend his life digging ditches with a pick. The proper operation and maintenance of a diesel-powered ditch-digger requires education.

JUL 9 1942

There was a time when "growing a crop" in Alabama meant going through the routine of a "set of inherited motions." Any person who has scanned through the pages of a bulletin on leguminous plants, attempted to mix an economic ration for poultry, watched the laying of a contour terrace knows that a revolution has taken place in agriculture—a revolution that will have as far-reaching effects as Hargreaves' spinning jenny.

As recently as a generation ago education in Alabama was an essential only as a preparation for a career in one of the traditional professions. True, Alabama people were impassioned in their demand for public education, but their interests had more to do with achieving the "quality" status than with its utility value. As late as 1910 Alabamians were hotly debating whether children of 12 years should be permitted to work in the mills. It was looked upon as an infringement upon "liberty" to require that a child of 10 attend school regularly when his pa needed him to go to the cotton field. Today any textile mill which has so much as been visited by a "personnel" expert is obstinate about hiring anything less than a high school graduate; and except for plucking boll weevils, children are looked upon more as economic liabilities than as assets on the farm.

The measure of material welfare which Alabama's people will enjoy in the future will be determined by the productivity of boys and girls now in school, and those yet to come. Which means that the goods and services we are to have will be in direct ratio to education.

It also happens that the degree of democracy we are capable of achieving will also be in direct ratio to the amount and quality of education we can afford. An uneducated electorate cannot follow the voting record of a congressman intelligently, much less understand the complicated economic, political and social issues which face us today.

What kind of life the people of Alabama are to have in 1960 is being determined today. An automobile can be produced, from mine to show room, in six months or less. It takes 21 years to raise a child to voting age.

Whether Alabama can or cannot provide an educational system comparable to that of other regions is not a subject for debate. There are immovable, inescapable limitations of income, private and public, which make such an achievement impossible.

There is now before Congress a bill which would allocate to the states grants for education on a basis of need. This bill, sponsored in the Senate by Senators Lister Hill and Morris Sheppard, would allocate $16,000,000 a year to Alabama — an amount which approximates monies presently available from state sources.

Similar legislation has been advocated since the 1880's when the Blair bill was defeated because Southerners were opposed to the link between this measure and income from tariffs. We got the tariffs, higher and higher, but never the educational money.

Today there is only one argument against federal aid: the fear that it would be used as a federal lever to force "mixed" schools. This argument is advanced in spite of the fact that federal funds for such educational purposes as extension work, land-grant colleges, trades education, and other special educational purposes have been coming into Alabama for more than a quarter of a century.

The welfare of Alabamians in 1960 will be determined more by whether the Hill-Sheppard bill passes than by any other single act of Congress, including the varied agencies and programs sponsored by the New Deal.

Misleaders And False Prophets

SINCERITY and truth are the most precious ingredients in any formula for improving Negro morale in the war effort.

MAY 2 - 1942

It is unrealistic and hypocritical to ignore the facts in any given situation. It is worse to try to conceal facts and to preach false doctrines to people on the assumption that they will be fooled into acting normally in the face of abnormal conditions.

Negroes are behind their country's war effort to an extent not surpassed by any other racial element in America. They are giving of their labor and material resources to the extent of their ability to give. They are offering their services everywhere services are needed, and in many instances their services are being rejected.

From the outset of the defense preparations they have volunteered for the naval and military forces of the nation, and are serving wherever they were accepted.

MAY 2 - 1942

Under the Selective Service no one has heard of Negro draft dodgers or conscientious objectors.

Negro banks, insurance companies and other business concerns are buying defense bonds to the limit of their ability. So are individuals. Even the children and pitifully small wage earners are buying War Savings Stamps. Negroes are in there fighting with everything they have.

But Negroes feel—and they have a right to feel—that this is no time to surrender their legal rights as American citizens. They are not taking the defeatist attitude that the Nation is going to lose the war. They are not taking for granted that Democracy will be lost as a result of this war.

Some Negro leaders are telling their followers that they should cease to strive for justice and fair play here and now, and lay those things aside until after the war.

Bishop M. H. Davis is quoted as having told the Virginia African Methodist Episcopal Conference at Roanoke last week that "all such issues should be shunted into the background in favor of the war effort." In an effort to justify his thesis Bishop Davis is quoted as having said:

> "I have been over two-thirds of this world, and I am telling you—and I don't hesitate to tell the colored people—that I had rather live in the United States under the worst conditions than live in any other country under normal conditions."

56k

Bishop Davis was dragging a red herring across the trail of the American Negro's quest for freedom. The question is not whether the Negro as an American is to be treated as subject peoples in other countries, but whether he is to be treated as an American in his own country.

MAY 2 - 1942

In this war the American white man is not yielding his determination to save and maintain his freedom. He is not saying to anybody: "Disregard the Bill of Rights for the duration; disregard the precious 'Four Freedoms' and let's not think of them until the war is over."

He is asserting and reiterating the integrity of these precious heritages as a tonic to his fighting spirit—his determination to win. He is not giving up his freedom.

The Negro leader who tells his people to relinquish anything, or to relax in his determination to win full participation in the American way of life is a misleader and a false prophet.

RACE, RELIGION AND PREJUDICE

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

MADAME CHIANG KAI-SHEK'S recent articles force us all to realize that one of the phases of this war which we have to face is the question of race discrimination.

We have had a definite policy toward the Chinese and Japanese who wished to enter our country for many years, and I doubt very much if after this war is over we can differentiate among the peoples of Europe, the Near East and the Far East.

MAY 16 1942

Perhaps the simplest way of facing the problem in the future is to say that we are fighting for freedom, and that one of the freedoms we must establish is freedom from discrimination among the peoples of the world, either because of race, or of color, or of religion.

5-6k

The people of the world have suddenly begun to stir and they seem to feel that in the future we should look upon each other as fellow human beings, judged by our acts, by our abilities, by our development, and not by any less fundamental differences.

Here in our own country we have any number of attitudes which have become habits and which constitute our approach to the Jewish people, the Japanese and Chinese people, the German people, the Italian people, and above all, to the Negro people in our midst.

Perhaps because the Negroes are our largest minority, our attitude towards them will have to be faced first of all. I keep on repeating that the way to face this situation is by being completely realistic. We cannot force people to accept friends for whom they have no liking, but living in a democracy it is entirely reasonable to demand that every citizen of that democracy enjoy the fundamental rights of a citizen.

Over and over again, I have stressed the rights of every citizen:

- Equality before the law.
- Equality of education.
- Equality to hold a job according to his ability.
- Equality of participation through the ballot in the government.

These are inherent rights in a democracy, and I do not see how we can fight this war and deny these rights to any citizen in our own land.

The other relationships will gradually settle themselves once these major things are part of our accepted philosophy.

It seems trite to say to the Negro, you must have patience, when he has had patience so long; you must not expect miracles overnight, when he can look back to the years of slavery and say—how many nights! he has waited for justice. Nevertheless, that is what we must continue to say in the interests of our government as a whole and of the Negro people; but that does not mean that we must sit idle and do nothing. We must keep moving forward steadily, removing restrictions which have no sense, and fighting prejudice. If we are wise we shall do this where it is easiest to do at first, and watch it spread gradually to places where the old prejudices are slow to disappear. There is now a great group of educated Negroes who can become leaders among their people, who can teach them the value of things of the mind and who ualify as the best in any field of endeavor. With these men and women it is impossible to think of any barriers of inferiority, but differences there are and always will be, and that is why on both sides there must be tact and patience and an effort at real understanding. Above everything else, no action must be taken which can cause so much bitterness that the whole liberalizing effort may be set back over a period of many years.—From "New Republic."

CONTROLLING FLOODS OF HATRED

When snows melt on the mountain tops and Spring rains fall, then those who dwell by the great rivers watch for flood waters. What may be life-giving streams to parts of our land are devastating torrents to other sections. Flood control is a vital subject to those who dwell in the lowlands through which the rivers course.

MAY 6 - 1942

MAY 6 1942

Government engineers have made long strides in the averting the damage of flood. They have built great walls to wall off the rivers; they have reforested tracts of land to absorb the excess water; they have built dams to hold back the torrents and to control their flow into other areas so they may make fertile great wastes.

MAY 10 1942

All this is most essential—but even more necessary today is a system of hate control. As the fortunes of war wage and wane, and as grief and loss touch us more and more closely, there is growing in this land increasing hatred and bitterness. Shall we let this flood warp and destroy much of what we hold dear?

We need to build walls of understanding to hold the hatreds out. For mutual understanding leads to mutual trust and in trust there is no hate.

MAY 10 1942

We need to reforest the scarred places in our minds—scars caused by hatred, bitterness, despair and intolerance—to reforest them with understanding, compassion, friendliness and love.

MAY 10 1942

We need to dam back the floods of hate with bulwarks of education—education is positive democratic living, in putting into practice in our everyday life the things we believe.

We need to divert the stream of hate into useful channels, concentrating it on an ideology, not on peoples or races—hating only the evil act or quality. Our hatred must run between such concrete walls of our wills, that we shall not be guilty either of injustice or intolerance to any member of any group merely because of race or creed or color. Thus only can we control the flood waters of hate.—Anniston Times.

Tattered Americans

TWO LITTLE NEGRO boys

wearing their first pants, tied on with string galluses; rags for shirts, skin showing all about, were searching for a penny they had lost in the Macon postoffice. They had hidden it somewhere in their clothing, but where they could not remember, nor could they recall whether it should be in the "clothes" of one or the other. Therefore they were willingly and anxiously searching each other. They had found the other nine pennies they had saved to buy a 10-cent war stamp of the government. But they knew they couldn't get a 10-cent stamp for nine cents.

"I stood off and watched them for some time," said F. M. Koen, the Java Oasis man on Clinton road. "After I could stand it no longer, I dropped down on the floor near them and told them I had found the penny, that it was on the floor I gave it to them, and also gave them a quarter with which to buy a 25-cent stamp. I never saw such joy and gratitude as they expressed in their simple way. And it did me good to see them walk off fairly srutting because they felt like real American citizens."

by Adam Clayton Powell, Jr.

People's Voice

New York, N.Y.

THE MARCH-ON-ANNAPOLIS by the Negro people of Baltimore last week is a milestone along the highway of human progress. It is a deed, regardless of the outcome, which will bring fresh courage to every member of the oppressed of the earth. We do not expect that out of this march will come a complete change of heart on the part of the Maryland cracker. The very courage of the deed, however, is more important, for it indicates a change of philosophy on the part of the Negro oppressed.

It is deeds such as this that will not only strike loose the fetters that bind us to the wheels of economic slavery but will save democracy itself. The way some intolerant bigoted whites are conducting themselves, more and more proves to me that it is up to the Negro group to save democracy. We who belong to the FIRST COLUMN OF DEMOCRACY are more and more awakening to this realization. In fact, one of the most thrilling things that comes out of this present holocaust is the emergence of a new Negro. Up and down the length and breadth of our land I find him—THE NEW NEGRO.

This new Negro is neither young nor old—he's just new. He had walked the earth too long with his feet on the ground, with his stomach empty, with his clothes in patches. He has been pushed back and back to the fringe of American life until his very back is against the wall and he can go no further. He sees here and there ever-increasing evidences that American fascism is on the march. He can stand brutality and oppression no longer. He has made up his mind that he can indulge in the luxury of bickering and pettiness no more. The fell force of circumstances is forcing him to come together, and as he is coming together all over America, he is voicing one song—AMERICA, YOU CAN'T WHIP HITLER ABROAD WITHOUT WHIPPING HITLERISM AT HOME.

Let no one mistake this new Negro for one who has no patriotism. It is because of his very patriotism, his very love and loyalty to the real democracy that he is voicing these protests. He knows that unless his protests are heeded, that though America might win the war, democracy will of a surety be lost. The Negro insists, yea, more than that, he demands to be heard. He will not be silent, he will not sell out and will not be sold out. He is rapidly evolving his own leadership. He needs no longer leadership from outside sources. THE NEGRO HAS COME OF AGE. HE HAS REACHED THE FULL STATURE OF MANHOOD.

Carl Murphy, Juanita Jackson and all the united hosts of Baltimore—we salute you! May your March-on-Annapolis be a pattern for Negro people everywhere. Whenever the minority of un-Americans can oppress us no longer than we can endure, may we rise up in the God-given strength of a united mass and non-violently, democratically refuse to be silenced. May we speak and DEMAND a hearing.

Negro Writers See Racial Injustice In Concentration of Japs in U. S.

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

One thought leads to another, and so my discussion of the negro journalism brings me to a phase of the racial problem which is seriously agitating the negro press. In brief, the negro papers are excited about the arbitrary deportation of Japanese and native Americans of Japanese ancestry from military areas of the Pacific Coast.

"We are at war with Japan," says a press release from Howard University of Washington, D. C. "Japanese citizens of the United States have been placed into what approximates concentration camps. White American citizens who may be descendants of Japanese receive similar treatment.

"We are at war with Germany and Italy. There are many thousands of American citizens who are Germans and Italians, or descendants of those nationalities. From all reports they continue to receive that freedom which every white American is entitled to. Why the inconsistency?

"Ignorant white persons in the Balkan states become voting citizens entitled to all rights and privileges. And yet the most educated and respected natives of India, China, Japan and many sections of Asia are not considered fit to become American citizens. Why?

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION

A colored journalist entitled E. P. H. writing in the Los Angeles Tribune, a negro paper, deals more intimately with the question.

"Because, to me, it represented the first major, overt government-approved act against the Bill of Rights, I was fearfully opposed to a mass evacuation of people who are, on the basis of a few cases, considered 'dangerous and a menace to the common good'." This writer says "Such generalization and resultant persecution of a whole community on an excuse of criminal charges, either real or trumped up, is familiar to most of us. While, occasionally, it has been on a political basis, usually it has been on a racial basis. But in all these instances the government, by numerous and sundry gestures and vague quoting of American ideals, has maintained the appearance of being against discrimination on the basis of race, color, creed or previous condition or servitude.

"But, to visit evacuation neighborhoods and talk with neighbors of the 'evil, treacherous, fifth column menaces' who are being summarily moved away, who have been adjudged guilty without any trial at which to claim innocence was to acknowledge an event with all the earmarks of a legalized community lynching. American citizens are prisoners of war, surrounded by sentries."

All points in both of these citations seem to me to be painfully true, but neither offers any less painful solution of a dangerous military problem. We know that some American natives of Japanese birth were traitorous spies who helped a treacherous enemy slaughter our people at Pearl Harbor and that many native American children of Japanese were educated by their parents to be Japanese, not Americans.

DICTATED BY FEAR

Our government's military action, then, in removing these people was dictated by alarm or fear and military urgency. To try even one such case and exhaust all the appeals would have taken a year and any attempt to try them at individually would have prevented a military precaution ordered by the judgment of men having the patriotic responsibility of defending their country against a combination of mighty enemies.

What would Howard University and E. P. H., the negro essayist, have done instead? They don't say, although the university's comments might be taken to suggest that all naturalized Americans from Germany, Italy and the Balkan countries now with the enemy and all descendants of these immigrants also be placed in the concentration camps.

In that case, of course, we would have no army or navy, no war industries and not much free population left to fight and work.

Or should these people have been let alone against the judgment of the army and to the mortal military peril of our whole population including the negroes, who, under a conquering Hitler, would be shipped to Africa as slaves in a Nazi empire while our Western Coast became a colony of Japan?

It Happened To Roland Hayes

Wounded, both in body and in spirit, 58-year-old Roland Hayes, internationally famous concert singer, is confined to his Angelmo home, 14 miles north of Rome, Georgia, recuperating from a merciless maulding and manhandling, inflicted upon him last Saturday by Rome, Georgia police, when he sought to ascertain the facts underlying a dispute between his wife and a Rome shoe-store salesman.

It developed that Mrs. Hayes, who was accompanied to the store by their nine-year-old daughter, occupied a seat in the section of the store reserved "for whites" unknowingly. When requested to move over to the jimcrow section, it is reported that she balked at this direction and was thereupon ordered to do so or "get out", which she did. Further inquiry revealed that Mrs. Hayes remarked upon leaving the store: "This sort of thing is out of place at a time like this. You ought to be over there with Hitler." The rest of the episode followed in rapid succession, ending up with Mr. Hayes and his wife being crammed into police wagon and speeded off to jail.

And thus it happened that the world's greatest tenor singer, winner of the coveted Harmon Award, and the man who has contributed more towards racial understandings and goodwill than any living American of color, suffered pain of body and agony of spirit, in an instance, where even in Rome, a little patience and tolerance could have averted international scandal upon the fair name of America.

It happened to Hayes, the Apostle of goodwill and Christlike humility.

It could have happened to George Washington Carver, the world's greatest agricultural chemist.

It could have happened to Joe Louis, the heavyweight champion of the world.

It could have happened to any Negro, no matter what his contributions or achievements may have been.

Indeed, one informant stated: "Judging from the severe tension everywhere visible, I dare say that Mr. Hayes would have been lynched, had they remained in jail for the night."

Early this week a young Negro was lynched in Texas.

The mob spirit is the most dangerous threat to American civilization. It overrules the best elements of our communities and it nullifies and undermines the constructive efforts of the upright and fair-minded people. We may well class it as an aid on the side of the Axis Powers.

The Hayes episode is but another sound and urgent reason why Negroes must insist upon and contend for the right to participate in the election of officials who shall rule them. At the head of our state governments we need governors who will not approve floggings, mob violence and brutality. In our municipal and county governments we must be prepared to see that men who fill these offices shall have a decent respect for the rights of all people. Color and race should have no part in the measuring of human justice and human decency.

Chinaman Adopts American Habit Of Placing The Blame On The Negro

SOMETIME ago a young white girl came home late.

When questioned by her parents, she stated that a "Negro" had picked her up and assaulted her.

The truth was finally developed; she had been out with her boy friend. She was positive that the easiest way to send her parents and officials on the wrong track was to say "a Negro" had molested her.

Even Chinese have gotten the idea that the way to get free of any action is to say "a Negro" was to blame.

John Kew shot his revolver. When the police came, he said 'I was shooting at a Negro robber." Of course, there was no evidence of the robber.

Pure Steel Is Made Stronger By Adding Other Metals in The Melting Pot

By ROBERT QUILLEN

"My people were all English," boasts an American, "and I am pure Anglo-Saxon." Then he adds, even more proudly: "I can trace my ancestry to William the Conqueror."

It is a harmless way to kid himself, but it shows little regard for history.

The English are mongrels. The first known inhabitants of England, whatever their racial stock may have been, were conquered and held in subjection generation after generation by the people now called Danes, Germans and Norwegians. These occupied the land and fought one another for it, and the blood of all was mingled with the native stock.

Roman armies occupied the land so long they were regarded as natural protectors, and there was fear and sorrow when they left to save their own land from the barbarians.

When William the Conqueror came, with his Norman nobles and gentle ladies, he taught the natives table manners and a few graces and forced them to choose family names, so that, for the first time, John the smith became John Smith, John the archer became John Archer, and John the son of William became John Williamson.

Norman blood was the proudest boast of the gentry, but of course it was mixed with that of commoners as generation followed generation; and now the gentleman who boasts of his pure English blood is in fact saying that his ancestors were French, Italian, German, Danish and Norwegian, plus a dash of Celts, whatever they were.

When that mongrel English stock came to America, it began a further process of admixture that continues to this day. A mongrel breed in the beginning, Americans are now a little of everything, and all are equally Americans.

There isn't a "pure" race in Europe. All have cross-bred in the last 1942 years, though each has inbred enough to produce a type. We, too, shall produce a type in the course of time; meanwhile we'd better forget race and judge one another as individuals.

Those who regret being "mongrels" should reflect that New York's wonderful dog show contains only mongrel dogs because they are the smartest and most able to learn.

RESERVED SECTION FOR WHITES???

In most of our editorials we go to bat with and for our racial group and factors affecting their welfare. In the next paragraph or so we go to bat alone unless someone else wants to come with us.

Many of the sponsors of dances at which major orchestras play include in their notices and publicity the statement "Reserved section for whites." We are fully aware of the fact that where certain laws are in operation it has been seemingly expedient to maintain separate public facilities for nordics and Negroes. We are also fully aware of, and appreciative of the fact that at some cultural programs, and programs of entertainment that are sponsored by some whites there are sections reserved for Negroes. We are raising the question, however, of the advisability of setting aside a section for spectators at social dances.

We are not making an effort to vilify the motives of whites who go to the types of dances under discussion. It is obvious that some go, not as spectators, but primarily to enjoy the music. The specially advertised provision for their presence, however, lays open to view by persons who already have erroneous convictions, the various cultural patterns that are existent among our group. There are varying cultural patterns in all groups. To invite certain spectators is in many cases to provide opportunity for crystallizing attitudes which we are trying hard to destroy. "The Informer" Houston, Tex.

It would never occur to some minds that Negroes, or whites at pay dances, like Negroes or whites on the streets, on jobs, or anywhere represent a variety of backgrounds, social participation, and even interests in styles and types of dancing. Because this is true, it might be well to ponder the advisability of going out of the way to encourage white spectators at the social pay dances.

If We Make Missouri Obey Law, Race Issue Will Be Solved In U.S.

JUL 10 1942

By C. A. FRANKLIN

5-6

Two weeks ago, I sat in Madison Square Garden, New York City, and heard the race's topmost men and women demand democracy here and now. I saw an enthusiastic audience of 20,000 wildly demonstrate its approval of that stand. To pay the cost of that protest, the "March on Washington" movement raised $6,000. When it was over A. Philip Randolph said it was worth what it cost.

If Negro citizens of New York can spend $6,000 to let the country know how they feel, it should be worth something for Missourians to see that educational facilities in the state are equal for all races.

When it refused to give a Negro an education, Missouri made it evident that it is bent upon evading the plain letter and spirit of the Gaines decision. To make the state obey the law, calls for plan and money. So I suggested that we raise a "Fight for Justice" fund.

I do not need to argue that it costs money to get things done. I do not need to argue that there is need of doing something here in Missouri.

The principle which runs through the supreme court's mandate in the Gaines case, namely the equal right of every citizen to public service bought with the tax dollar, is of wide application. Once applied in education, it means Negroes will share in public works, and in public services of all kinds.

The Peoples Finance Company of this city, the depositary of the "Fight for Justice" fund, tells me there is $72.60 in that fund to date. We've started.

These public spirited men and women who have contributed are the salt of the earth! But what of the many who have neither thought nor paid, nor tried in any other way to better their people's condition!

This community is No. 1 in the United States in organizing the fight to get Negroes work in defense industries. Fully 1,500 men and women in Kansas City are now drawing more money than they ever made in their lives because of what we have done. Where is their contribution? It would be easy for those workers to give enough out of their spending change to raise the "Fight for Justice" fund to $2,000.

We keep blaming whites for our plight. Let's get the beam out of our own eyes before talking about the mote in the other fellow's. Many an employer when asked why he did not hire Negroes, replied that none had ever asked him for a job. Today when the nation's need is being met by all-out production, many a white boss right here in Kansas City is telling white workers who complain of his hiring Negroes, that they are to do their work, not dictate who else shall work. Let's help ourselves, before we put the blame on somebody else.

With real democracy that knows neither race nor color looming up more and more as the absolute essential before the United Nations can organize for victory, and with white workers and white employers accepting us as never before, Missouri will be a push-over in our fight for equal public service! But we must do the pushing! By "we" I mean you, because I am already committed to this fight for justice.

The years have put snow in my hair, telling me that my strength must be spent wisely now. I could not do this job by myself even if I were younger, because the place of action is too vast for one man. But with the Gaines decision in hand, a lever that will lift our people out of limitations in every state when we make it work here, I can but try. You too, should try.

This fight for justice must be talked about in the churches and clubs, in the homes and schools, in the barrooms and on the corners. Liberty and democracy are in the making! Let's take up the sword of truth and fight for them while our boys offer their lives for them over seas.

Sit down with your conscience and make up your mind whether in this drive for rights, you are going to push or ride! You can't let others carry you forward and feel proud of yourself! I think there is one more good fight in me. I plan to make it trying to get Missouri to give my people the square deal which the supreme court says every citizen is entitled to.

We cannot get anywhere on wishing. Seed in the sack never grows a crop. Rights are not groceries to be ordered by phone from the corner store. We have got to go after them, and try and try until we get them.

Dr. George Haynes Gives Challenge To Black And White America In Speech

The Informer
Houston

JUL 1 1942

ATLANTA, (ANP)—Over 4,000 in attendance at the Sunday school congress and training union of the National Baptist Convention, Inc., in annual convention just closed here, lsitened to a challenge to black and white America when Dr. George E. Haynes discussed the theme, "What We Expect in White-Negro Relations in America."

"Negroes have a double stake in this war, to fight injustice and tyranny at home and abroad," said Dr. Haynes. "We Negroes know what slavery means; we still have the political serfdom of disfranchisement and the effects of discrimination and repression. . . . Hitlerite Germany, led by men who think they have the right to enslave all other peoples of the world, must be opposed by all the forces we have of war weapons, of body, of mind, and of spirit. . . Our churches, every one of them, have a stake in this struggle; a responsibility to point the way toward the solution of race problems in this country and the world.

"It is for the churches to say in no uncertain terms what democratic America should practice NOW in white-Negro relations in America. It is for the churches to give support to the expectations of minority groups who are in this struggle. Among these are 1. full civic freedom in all white-Negro relations in America; 2. the abolition of mob violence, and the guarantee to every person in every community of full protection of the law; 3) the removal of every inequality based on race in all types of employment in America. With this is expected the full support of the churches of President Roosevelt's Executive Order 8802 which calls for the abolition of discrimination in defense industries. 4) We expert also equality of opportunities for education everywhere in America; 5) full fellowship in the membership of our churches for everyone who seeks it regardless of race; 6) full opportunity for the use of public facilities everywhere—parks, hotels, libraries, etc.

"Our expectation today should not be for a utopia in the distant future of 2,000 A.D., nor for a Kingdom of God to come in the other world after we are dead. Christian America, white and black, has its greatest opportunity to demonstrate NOW, first to ourselves and then to Europe, to Asia, to Africa, that our way of life is a real democracy to include the people of all races, colors, and creeds. NOW is the opportunity to bring economic and racial brotherhood to work in our industrial plants, in our educational institutions, in our governmental offices, in our churches, in the neighborhoods and communities where we spend our lives day by day.

"Such is our defense. Such is the only defense of the democratic and Christian way of life for which the churches stand. It cannot be made in words; it has to be made in deeds. It calls for straight thinking and effective action for a better society here, now, in our own land. The issues of racial parity and interracial goodwill and justice are the bases of a just and durable democracy necessary to lead us toward a just and durable peace."

During this discussion Dr. Haynes read the recent pronouncement of Executive Committee of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America in which the churches of America were called upon to examine their own practices in race relations and work tward a fuller embodiment of the ideals of democracy, freedom and human brotherhood here at home. The federal council's department of race relations, of which Dr. Haynes is executive secretary, has just entered its 22 years of work in the field of better race relations through the churches of America.

By CHARLES PEARCE

DISCUSSING THE JOB SITUATION in the District of Columbia, of which there are two divisions, comes now the government worker. Thousands of Negroes work for the government in various capacities. Some are appointed; some are civil service; some are temporary; some are permanent; but most of them now are for the duration.

There are too many departments in the District to classify; in addition to the old line regular agencies like Treasury, Agriculture, State, War, Navy, Commerce, Labor Departments, there are some 40 or 50 temporary alphabetical agencies, many of them independent, others associated with the old line groups.

Most of the Negro gains in employment have been with the temporary agencies, excepting, of course, the War and Navy Departments.

Jobs range from the lowest janitorial work to administrative posts. All of the latter are in the newer agencies. There seems to be an unwritten law that Negroes are to fill only certain posts in the old line groups such as State, Labor, Commerce and the like.

Theoretically, all jobs are on the merit basis, with the Civil Service Commission holding the whip hand. Actually, this is not the fact with the exception that the commission does hold the whip—but final word in the placement of workers rests with the personnel director of the department to which applicants are sent. Here is where the dirty work occurs. The commission blandly wipes its hands of all blame in the matter and leaves the shunting of colored workers to the personnel people—and this they do not fail to do.

This is a complex problem, this employment in the government. Take for instance the teachers. They operate in a segregated, jimcro system and are the real "untouchables" of the District. Their pay is on par with the whites and, because of this, they resent any talk about jimcro. The first adjustment should come in this division. This statement will cause a great stir in the District where there are hundreds of Negro teachers, an assistant superintendent and an assistant to him with colored officials down the line. No one ever objected to this particular thing however and the jimcro persists, segregated into divisions 10-11-12-13, all of which are colored. It makes for poorer high schools and junior high schools and all that goes with it, but the subject is sacred in the District and cannot be touched, or you would have the aristocracy of the District (sic) on your neck.

Thousands of messengers, including many with degrees from the best schools in the country, tote papers in their daily rounds and are happy to do it.

Every Negro man in the service is a "boy." He never rises higher than this appellation. When he gets a post as an administrator, he is a "smart aleck" and a bumptious person who does not know his place.

Discrimination is rife in the service. But the advent of the new girl in the District has brought about a wondrous change. It was the new imports from above the M-D line that changed the Bureau of Engraving and Printing from a jimcro spot to a regular place to work. One story is worthy of telling—altho it did not happen in the Bureau. Two white girls were in a washroom. One got restive and asked her friend when she would be through. And the reply was in a thick Georgia drawl: "As soon as this 'n——r' finishes washing her face." Promptly the colored girl whirled, socked the white gal in the eye, knocked her down and dragged her to the supervisor's office. On her arrival here with the strange cargo, the colored girl said, "She called me a 'n——r' and this is what is going to happen to any others who do this." Nothing was done to either gal, but the white gal learned a lesson she passed on to her Southern cohorts.

Most of the trouble arises from just such instances where, in a city dominated by Southern Congressmen and Senators, naturally there is a preponderance of Southern "ladies" at work here. They can't stand the sight of a colored person doing anything but domestic and menial work. As long as this is the case, they are happy and do nothing at all about it.

Once a Negro gets above this type of work he is marked. The chief source of complaint is the famous Library of Congress which operates on a schedule all its own. Numerous complaints from Negroes arise in this spot, but because Negroes usually back down when the cards are down, there is nothing done. There was an attempt to make the public believe that no discrimination existed in this spot, but if there was ever a joke perpetrated on the public, that was it. The Library of Congress system is rotten from the core out and from outside in. A Negro is the most important person in the division of Chinese literature. But is this Negro accorded the post his training and experience warrants? You bet your bottom dollar he isn't. Imagine what would happen were he white. He reads Chinese, is charged with the filing of important Chinese manuscripts, knows more Chinese literature than the average Chinese scholar, but what is his post? He gets about $2200 per year.

THE NEED FOR CHANGING

We Outgrow Our Heroes

Speaking at the Howard University commencement, Miss Pearl Buck whose efforts in reducing racial prejudice, said something I have long since thought about. She said, in general words, that our constant reference to Crispus Attucks, Booker T. Washington, Frederick Douglass and a few others which go back as far as the 15th century, is without effect and show that the race has too few great people to whom it can refer as heroes.

I heard so much of Crispus Attucks, Booker Washington and the like when I was a little fellow that I know them about as well as I know my ABC's. Their accomplishments, their problems and contributions no longer excite me and it is boring to sit and listen to hour long lectures on these greats of years ago. As I react I believe so does the majority.

I can't explain why these heroes fail to move me. But it is probable that they are so far removed from my own time and my own problems in this land that I don't have sufficient faith in their methods to think of using them myself. Then, too, it is doubtful whether or not a second Tuskegee would be founded today with all of the opportunities about us. And there is no room for a Frederick Douglass right now. Most of all, I certainly have no intention of being a Crispus Attucks at the moment. There is no demand for such a sacrifice and, too, I am not so sure that Attucks really intended to die. Some historians say that his curiosity got his body in line for a bullet. He tried to duck but tried too slow and too late.

Miss Buck implied that something was wrong with our scarcity of greats and heroes to whom we could rfeer. A people, so numerous as we, certainly should have more heroes to worship. And this seems true but I believe many a great man has escaped attention.

"Heroes are made, not born", they say.

Some time ago I read an editorial in a southern daily which expressed alarm over Negroes' worship of Joe Louis. After all, it said, Joe Louis is just a man, quite talented at ear bopping, but just a man. It felt that the Negro's specific reference to his people as heroes tended to emphasize that, after all, the Negro wanted to be recognized as a "special" American. Of course, this may not be the case but it is deserving of thought.

But, as says Miss Buck, we are too shy on greats and have too few references. Here is a fine opportunity for historians and students of Negro life to do some needed research and discovering. Telling Negro youths today about what our greats did, in most cases, is like telling the Sunday School student over and over that Jesus died. He knows this so well that he fails to respond.

"Heroes are made," they say, let us make more heroes if it is they we need to lead us, like Moses, out of this wilderness of darkness.

Mrs. Mary McCleod Bethune

Following is an address delivered by Mrs. Mary McCleod Bethune, director of Negro Affairs, National Youth Administration, at a June meeting in Madison Square Garden. She is addressing herself to a throng of Negro people assembled there to demand their rights as American citizens.

Your chins are out, your eyes are clear! I see determination written on the faces of everyone of you.

JUL 10 1942

Your militancy and resoluteness are among America's most valuable assets in a day like this. We must not let America ignore the powerful services that can be rendered her by these attributes you possess. America needs today, as never before, your fighting hearts, your courage, your refusal to surrender or retreat in the face of discouraging odds.

You who are here tonight are a new experience to America. Throughout the history of your life in this country—over three hundred years—you have been regarded as the patient, submissive minority—your first two and a half centuries were spent in enforced slavery.

You had no rights, the supreme court held—you were chattels like any horse, or plow or iron pot. You were not permitted to use a voice and so had to express your hopes and dreams for freedom, your bravery and courage, through individual rebellion, occasional mass uprisings and more often through the spirituals, the sorrow songs that gave the first mass expression to our deep longing to live some day as free citizens in a democracy.

Still Patient

Then came your emancipation—to save the union which could not exist half slave and half free. The Thirteenth amendment to the Constitution legally abolished slavery. The Fourteenth and Fifteenth amendments took you out of the status of chattels and made you citizens, made the Bill of Rights yours. Still, you were patient—experiencing discriminations, injustices, segregations, and denials of equal opportunities.

Here and there a clarion voice rose above the rumblings against injustices, a Frederick Douglass, a Harriet Tubman, a Walter White, a Philip Randolph, and nameless and numerous unsung heroes. But, the pall of a slave experience still hung over the masses of our people. They had the right to speak out but dared not speak out.

But today—a new Negro has arisen in America. He is here in Madison Square garden tonight. He is you!

You Do Not Beg

You are neither young nor old—You're just new! You have awakened as has the world. You are seeking full freedom, justice, respect, and opportunity.

You are militant in spirit. You are unwilling to accept less than the Constitution guarantees to you as citizens of the world's greatest democracy.

You are no longer begging—you are insisting, because you realize that America, the only country you know and the country you love, cannot be preserved nine-tenths free and one-tenth oppressed. You realize your insistence is necessary to save America from itself, to make America the ideal democracy that it professes itself to the world to be. Not, only are our enemies capitalizing on America's slightest failures to do so, but our allies and friends in China and India, Africa and South America, are weighing America's sincerity on her own "home" scales.

Thank God you have these qualities of militancy and insistence. And thank God you have a leadership to cultivate and to guide these qualities that are arising from the masses.

You know how important it is that this surging spirit be kept within the bounds of law and order. You know how necessary it is that your militancy be nonviolent. But you must at the same time keep it persistent, keep it courageous, make it intelligently articulate.

Tired, Tired

Only by so doing can we win victory for democracy at home and for democracy throughout the world. Our insistence upon the practice of democratic ideals here does not in an measure detract from our loyalty to our country, nor from our militancy in our stand for the democratization of the world. Friends of freedom are aware of our purpose—they know our insistence is in effort to rid America of shame.

We have grown tired of turning the other cheek. Both our cheeks are now so blistered 'hey are too sensitive for further blows. But regardless of our trials and tribulations at home, we must not for a moment lose sight of the fact that we must give our all-out unreserved effort to winning this war. Unless this war is won on the battlefields abroad, there can be no victory in our struggles here at home. I want all America to understand—and I believe I voice the sentiment of everyone of you here—that we will never strike our flag. On the contrary, we will eternally protect it with all that we have in courage, in faith, in endurance.

At the same time, we want our flag to protect us—at home in our right to produce and to live, abroad in our willingness to sacrifice and to die.

GEORGIA

Change in the Weather

Georgia's high-handed, low-browed Governor Eugene Talmadge had the stage all set for one of his wild political rallies last week. A free fish fry—15,000 lb. of mullet and hushpuppies—had been a-fixing for two days. Little Moultrie (pop. 10,147) was packed with yellow school buses, highway-patrol cars, the sedans of Talmadge's "Palace Guard" at the State Capitol. There was even a bus labeled UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA STUDENTS FOR TALMADGE—though when the passengers stuck their heads out for a photographer only two seemed to be under 40.

Talmadge, his manner, as always, that of a great man enduring much for the plain people, stood up, clutching a thick manuscript in one bony hand, started shouting into microphones hooked up to 13 Georgia radio stations. As always, a stooge yelled, "Take off yo' coat, Gene." Talmadge did, showing his red galluses.

Rain and the Wool-Hats. Then came an unprecedented omen. Georgia politicos say that "the sun never sets on England and the rain never falls on Talmadge." But now, as the Governor turned the first page, rain fell in torrents. Talmadge threw away his melting manuscript, improvised under an umbrella in the downpour for 20 minutes, finally gave up.

Thus Gene Talmadge, opening his campaign for a fourth term, got off to a bad start. He had more than rain to worry about: the loyal crowd of "wool-hat" boys (small farmers) who always turn out to "hear The Man," was smaller than usual; of ten bands invited to add to the din, only the one from Moultrie High School showed up. The Palace Guard hoped this was the fault of gasoline rationing; but they feared that maybe Georgia at last had tired of Talmadge's witch-doctory.

Fire With Fire. At Newnan, 160 miles north, the skies were kinder to Talmadge's opponent, who put on a drier, better act. Young (35) Attorney General Ellis G. Arnall, boy wonder of Georgia politics, was out to beat Talmadge at his own medicine-show game. He served up 100 pit-barbecued pigs, 1,200 gallons of Brunswick stew, a two-hour vaudeville show featuring the Coweta Cracker Crunchers.

Stocky, pear-shaped Ellis Gibbs Arnall got elected to the Georgia legislature just 13 years after he had worked as a page boy. At his first session, whizbang Arnall was named speaker pro tem.

JUL 13 1942

Even the Palace Guard concedes that Arnall will give Talmadge a race. Talmadge's dictatorial hiring & firing of State officials has cost him many a friend. Worst of all, he got the University of Georgia blacklisted by firing two educators who thought Negroes too deserved higher education (TIME, Oct. 27).

Observed one ancient, Talmadge-hating cracker: "I reckon Ole Gene done more for education than any man ever to be Governor—he done showed us how bad we need it."

Bishop Ainsworth Said

The late Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, the beloved head of the Methodist church in Georgia, made a speech not many weeks before his death.

He made it before the Macon Kiwanis Club on April 1, of this year.

He began it by saying:

JUL 26 1942

"The people of Georgia are confronted with one of the gravest problems of this generation. Notwithstanding the improbability that a dozen grown persons could be found within the state who would advocate the mingling of the white and colored races in the educational system of Georgia, an alarm has been raised during the past year that somebody is about to start the scrambling process. The opposition to any such system is so nearly unanimous and fixed that no man could get halfway to first base in the advocacy of such a programme.

"WHILE INTELLIGENT PEOPLE OF THE STATE KNOW THAT NOTHING OF THE SORT IS REMOTELY POSSIBLE THE ISSUE HAS BEEN RAISED UNDER SUCH CONDITIONS AS ARE FRAUGHT WITH GRAVE DANGER TO THE STATE. . . .

"A CONSEQUENCE, AND ONE OF INCALCULABLE DISASTER, IS THAT, IF A POLITICAL CAMPAIGN IS RAISED IN GEORGIA OVER THESE ISSUES, AS FICTITIOUS AND BASELESS AS WAS THE ORIGINAL ALARM ABOUT THE MIXING OF THE RACES IN OUR EDUCATIONAL SYSTEM, THE PASSIONS OF THE PEOPLE WILL BECOME INFLAMED AND RACIAL RELATIONS WILL BE DISTURBED AND EMBITTERED AS THEY HAVE NOT BEEN FOR YEARS."

These were the words of the late Methodist Bishop of Georgia. They are not the words of some "Yankee" interracial person.

Every Georgian knows the Bishop's words to be true.

The Governor of Georgia knows them to be true.

Yet we have the sorry spectacle of the Governor and some of his henchmen, going about the state spreading falsehood and passion in an effort to get votes.

They know, as the Bishop and all literate people know, that there is no race issue.

They know that no person wants to mix the races in the schools, or anywhere else. It is a vicious and dangerous falsehood. It is, as the Bishop said, "fictitious and baseless."

The Governor uses this false and contemptible method to distract attention from what he has done to the state university system; from his parole and pardon record which shows he pardoned about four times as many as E. D. Rivers; from his dangerous platform for the state.

This voice of the late Bishop of Georgia should bring every Christian patriot person in Georgia to the recognition that he or she owes a duty to the state and its future to nail this vicious and false campaign.

Look to the real issues.

They are there.

Carmichael Pledges

James V. Carmichael, Cobb county attorney, yesterday introduced Ellis Arnall to a crowded courtroom at Marietta, Ga.

Mr. Carmichael spoke, not as an unsuccessful candidate for office bearing a grudge.

He spoke as a private citizen and a patriotic citizen interested in the University and in the future of the state.

He spoke as a man well-known to the politics of the state. It was he who headed the economy committee of the house which investigated state expenditures during the Rivers administration. No young man has a finer reputation than James Carmichael.

He said, of that investigation, that Ellis Arnall, as attorney general, gave this investigating committee his whole-hearted co-operation.

"Anyone who says Ellis Arnall is a puppet of anyone doesn't know whereof he speaks," said Carmichael. "And about this nigger-nigger talk that Gene Talmadge is putting out, there is no racial trouble in Georgia now—but there will be if Talmadge keeps talking about it.

"I thought the Ed Rivers administration was extravagant," said Carmichael, "but now it is revealed that Eugene Talmadge last year spent $7,000,000 more than Rivers or any other Governor ever had."

Ellis Arnall, in the beginning of a week's campaign, said that if it was necessary for him to be a demagogue and clown to be Governor; if it was necessary to consort with the petty crooks and racketeers in Atlanta to be Governor, he did not want the job.

He repeated his promise that the constitution of the state prevents racial co-education and that no Negro will attend a white school in the state.

He repeated his promise to appoint to office, not former politicians, but men of business ability in whom the state has confidence.

He promised a decent, clean government, with clean, decent men at the head of the state departments.

Ellis Arnall's campaign, free from any alliance with any of the influences of the past, is at once an inspiration and a challenge to Georgia.

Shall Georgia retain the same old system which has brought Georgia into disrepute with her university discredited and removed from the accredited list of American universities?

Or shall we take a clean, able young man, whose people have served Georgia honorably and well; who is not a part of the old system, and who is pledged to stand on his own feet, motivated by a sincere and honest desire to do something for Georgia and its people?

It is a challenge.

All the mud, all the fake issues, all the smoke screens thrown up by the same old Talmadge forces, will not obscure the fact there are issues.

Talmadge will not discuss them.

Arnall is taking them to the people.

—BE PATIENT—VICTORY IS COMING—

At the behest of the White House, the hunt continues for a short, snappy name for the war that is fit to print.

Today's Talk

By

George Matthew Adams

(©, 1942, by George Matthew Adams)

Dr. George Washington Carver

One of the most remarkable and useful men ever born in America is Dr. George Washington Carver, the Negro scientist of the Tuskegee Institute. Back in 1864 night raiders carried away to Arkansas an unnamed Negro baby and his mother. Moses Carver, owner of the slave mother and child, caught up with them, and traded his $300 horse for the child. The mother continued with the raiders.

So alert was this child's mind that he was given the name of George Washington. Up to the age of 20, however, he could neither read nor write, but as these accomplishments came to him, his spirit was aroused and he worked his way through high school and the Iowa State College of Agriculture. Later he joined the faculty and soon was invited to Tuskegee, where he has since been the director of the department of agricultural research, and where he has astounded the world with his almost miraculous discoveries.

Thomas Edison once offered him $100,000 to join him at his New Jersey laboratory and to aid him in his research in the making of synthetic rubber, but the modest Carver refused saying: "God didn't charge for his work in making peanuts grow, so I won't charge for mine."

A hungry man once stopped the great scientist and asked for a dime. Thoughtfully he turned to his companion and said: "It's pitiful, pitiful." Pointing to the weeds growing by the roadside, and to the wild plums overhead, he exclaimed: "Between here and town there's enough food to feed a town—and a balanced diet, too!"

In an interesting article that has been called to my attention, Rackham Holt says that Dr. Carver has exhibited more than a dozen weeds that have been classed as noxious, yet which he has proved are useful for food. And Mr. Holt remarks: "A weed is a plant out of place. Okra in a cornfield is a weed because it is out of place."

Dr. Carver is one of the greatest living authorities in plastics and synthetics, and recently Mr. Henry Ford invited him to join him in Dearborn at his experimental laboratories. Mr. Ford had a surprise for him in a beautiful small cabin that he personally designed and erected especially for him in his famous Greenfield Village. It stands next to the Lincoln Court House. The log cabin is a work of art and love—and the interior is finished with a piece of lumber from every state in the United States!

Gene Advises Negroes Not Liking Segregation Laws to Avoid Georgia

ATLANTA, [AP]—Gov. Eugene Talmadge Thursday advised any Negro who does not like the state's segregation laws "to say out of Georgia."

He made the statement in his

Statesman, in commenting on telegrams of "indignation" he received following charges by Roland Hayes, Negro concert singer. that he was beaten recently by Rome, Ga., police

"We are going to keep the Jim Crow laws and protect them and will not allow the whites and the blacks to be taught in the same schools and colleges in the state of Georgia." said the governor.

He added that in Georgia the whites and Negroes both approve of the Jim Crow laws providing for the separation of the races in restaurants, hotels and other public places.

Producing telegrams of protest that he said he had received from Communists in Birmingham. Ala., and a federation of Negro Women's clubs in New Jersey, the governor commented:

"We don't need any advice from any Communist party nor any federation of clubs from New Jersey or any other clubs who are trying to promote racial equality."

Talmadge Hits State 'Dictation' From Outsiders

Attacks Those 'Interested in Interracial League.'

CEDARTOWN, Ga., Aug. 1.—(AP) Outsiders interested in "breaking down" the south's racial traditions are trying to dictate who shall be elected governor of Georgia, Governor Talmadge declared in a campaign address here today.

"Who is it that wants to name the governor of Georgia?" he asked. "It is those who are interested in the Interracial League outside the state. They want to intimidate us, threaten us, buy us, and say, 'You must elect a crowd down there that we want.'

"Georgia has never yet bowed to dictation from within the state, or outside the state, and she will not bow down this time."

North Georgia Campiagn.

The red-gallused governor, a candidate for a fourth term in the September 9 primary, brought his campaign into northwest Georgia for the first time with his appearance here.

He has been hammering away at his determination to prevent the mixing of whites and Negroes in Georgia schools and colleges ever since last year, when a revamped board of regents ousted state educators whom he accused of advocating racial co-education.

The educators denied the charge, and subsequently numerous accrediting agencies, accusing the Governor of "unjustified political interference," voted to strike Georgia's University System from their approved lists.

In his prepared address Talmadge referred to his only opponent, Attorney General Ellis Arnall as one of the "plunderbund politicians" and said several of these "who want gravy out of the state want to abolish the county unit system.

Gas Boost Attacked.

"They want this now. They know that with the county unit system abolished they could have free rein to organize and have a boss in Georgia, as has been done in other states—a boss who would let them fatten and grow rich at the taxpayers' expense."

Pledging that "as long as I am your Governor the county unit system will stay intact," Talmadge said that once it were abolished the voices of the people in the small counties would "not be heard in Atlanta."

The Governor again assailed the recent 2 1-2-cent a gallon increase in the price of gasoline in Georgia and other seaboard states, calling it an effort "to build up a slush fund of $38,000,000 for Wiley Moore's oil company and others. He added that Moore is secretary-treasurer of the Rivers-Arnall campaign committee."

Urge Rationing Protests.

He said the price advance had not been rescinded when he left Atlanta despite earlier information that it would be. He urged his listeners to protest to their congressmen, not only against the higher price but also against gasoline rationing unless it is made nation-wide.

"A 10 per cent rationing all over the nation would save more gasoline than the present arrangement in a few states, which is punishing our people and will force good people on relief rolls unless something is done about it," Talmadge said.

The Governor said he had reduced the state's debts about $22,000,000 in his 18 months in office and had accumulated a surplus of $9,663,635 by the close of the last fiscal year on June 30. This he called a war emergency fund to offset anticipated tax losses.

Press Attacks Reiterated.

This surplus, he said, "has certainly kindled the appetites of Blalock (D. B. Blalock, Atlanta machinery dealer), Wiley Moore and a great many more and they will go to any lengths to try to get their crowd back."

The reason, he added, is "they know that if Talmadge is in the Governor's chair he will run a safe, economical administration and look after the welfare of the people and not the welfare of a few petty pampered individuals of the Rivers-Arnall, Blalock-Moore corporation."

The Governor told how he has pegged gasoline tax payments to the counties at $365,000 a month despite a decline in returns from the six-cent levy, and he also said he had provided more for the schools than the previous administration. Much of his address was devoted to reiterating his attacks on several newspapers, especially those in Atlanta.

Carmichael Hits Talmadge On Race Issue

James V. Carmichael, former state legislator, asserted last night Governor Talmadge is "carrying the race issue so far" in his re-election campaign that he has had the state guard notified that "race riots are on the verge of breaking out."

Speaking in behalf of the gubernatorial candidacy of Attorney General Ellis Arnall, the Marietta attorney added that Talmadge and "his henchmen are hoping and praying for an incident to help them in their despair."

"But," said Carmichael, "they won't fool the white people of Georgia."

He went on to declare that "all of this race talk is for the purpose of camouflage, to cover up the real issues" and then added that the Governor" has had Lindley Camp, the former head of his military storm troopers who ruled Georgia for four years under Gene with bayonets and guns, send out a letter to the state guard."

This letter, Carmichael said, states "that race riots are on the verge of breaking out, that rape and murder are stalking the state, that it isn't safe for our women to walk on our streets, and the state guard should be ready for trouble on a minute's notice."

Pure Politics.

Asserting the letter "was pure politics" and "not in the line of military duty," Carmichael said, "rest assured that if there is trouble Gene will be at the root of it."

As for Talmadge's "talks about placing Negroes in our white schools," Carmichael said "he knows the white people now rule and will always rule Georgia. His talk about there being danger of Negroes being placed in our white schools is ridiculous, absurd and preposterous.

"It deserves the contempt of every person who has sense enough to get out of a shower of rain."

In his prepared address, Carmichael said that Talmadge, by his race talk, hoped to divert the people from asking him about the disaccrediting of the University system, "the pardon racket, the number of people on the pay roll and the vast amount of money he is collecting from the overburdened and oppressed taxpayers of the state."

Vice chairman of the house economy committee during the administration of former Governor Rivers, Carmichael said he did not think he "would ever live to see a Governor who could and would bleed the taxpayers more than wasteful Ed Rivers did, but, lo and behold, Gene, the great economizer, the great saver, the great friend of the taxpayer, has gouged your already nearly empty pockets of $16,376,000 more than Ed Rivers ever did.

"Gene out-Riversed Rivers."

Talmadge's claim of economizing and saving "is bull of the rankest sort," said Carmichael, adding that the present administration had 721 more employes on the state pay roll on June 30 than Rivers had and has not otherwise cut down overhead or "stretched the state's dollars."

Turning to Talmadge's statement that he has paid $22,000,000 in debts in the last 18 months, Carmichael said this has not been accomplished by economizing but by collection of $16,376,000 more in taxes.

Furthermore, he said, "Gene settled $2,803,000 of Ed Rivers' debts by just cancelling the contracts. He just cancelled orders that had been placed. More than $8,000,000 of the Rivers debt, he went on, was in road contracts let to mature against revenues accruing in 1941 and involved no economizing.

School Debt.

He added that the $3,500,000 school debt paid off by Talmadge was created to tide the schools over the early part of the year because a large part of the revenue is not received until after the first school months. When it was collected, he said, Talmadge simply repaid the loan as required by law.

"And so it goes," said Carmichael, adding that the Governor's talk of paying debts by economizing is "just another instance where Gene is using your wool hat to pull the wool over your eyes."

He asserted, in indorsing Arnall as a man who will restore decency in the state government, that "I am sick unto death of black bow ties and red suspenders."

he Racial Question

Resolutions adopted by the executive committee which was controlled, of course by Talmadge, indicate that racial equality will be the chief plank on which Talmadge will seek renomination. This at a time when all Americans, regardless of race or creed, should be united in an effort to win this war, instead of being torn apart by the bugaboo which Talmadge has resurrected from its grave, purely as a matter of political expediency to cover up one of the greatest mistakes Talmadge has made in his political career. There is no issue of racial equality in Georgia. Racial co-education is prohibited under the constitution of Georgia, and there has been no movement to change that constitutional provision, not even among the Negroes themselves. It is a matter of genuine regret that the governor seems disposed to build his coming campaign on such a flimsy, boggy foundation.—Tifton Gazette.

Talmadge Tells Negroes To Stay Out Of Georgia

BY ASSOCIATED NEGRO PRESS

Eugene Talmadge, governor of eorgia, issued a public statement hursday, in which he advised any egro who objected to the state's egregation laws "To stay out of eorgia."

Talmadge made the statement his political weekly, The Statesan, as a comment on numerous legrams of "indignation" he had ceived after the brutal beating police at Rome of Roland Hayes, ernationally famous tenor.

We are going to keep the jim w laws and protect them and will not allow the whites and the blacks to be taught in the same schools and colleges in the state of Gergia." said Talmadge.

Whites and blacks in Georgia, he contended, approve of the state's separation laws in hotels, restaurants, and other public places.

"We are going to keep the Jim Crow laws and protect them and will not allow the whites and the blacks to be taught in the same schools and colleges in the state of Georgia." said the governor.

He added that in Georgia the whites and Negroes both approve of the Jim Crow laws providing for the separation of the races in restaurants, hotels and other public places.

Producing telegrams of protest that he said he had received from Communists in Birmingham, Ala., and a federation of Negro Women's clubs in New Jersey, the governor commented:

"We don't need any advice from any Communist party nor any federation of clubs from New Jersey or any other clubs who are trying to promote racial equality."

Talmadge Hits State 'Dictation' From Outsiders

Attacks Those 'Interested in Interracial League.'

CEDARTOWN, Ga., Aug. 1.—(AP) Outsiders interested in "breaking down" the south's racial traditions are trying to dictate who shall be elected governor of Georgia, Governor Talmadge declared in a campaign address here today.

"Who is it that wants to name the governor of Georgia?" he asked. "It is those who are interested in the Interracial League outside the state. They want to intimidate us, threaten us, buy us, and say, 'You must elect a crowd down there that we want.'

"Georgia has never yet bowed to dictation from within the state, or outside the state, and she will not bow down this time."

North Georgia Campiagn.

The red-gallused governor, a candidate for a fourth term in the September 9 primary, brought his campaign into northwest Georgia for the first time with his appearance here.

He has been hammering away at his determination to prevent the mixing of whites and Negroes in Georgia schools and colleges ever since last year, when a revamped board of regents ousted state educators whom he accused of advocating racial co-education.

The educators denied the charge, and subsequently numerous accrediting agencies, accusing the Governor of "unjustified political interference," voted to strike Georgia's University System from their approved lists.

In his prepared address Talmadge referred to his only opponent, Attorney General Ellis Arnall as one of the "plunderbund politicians" and said several of these "who want gravy out of the state want to abolish the county unit system.

Gas Boost Attacked.

"They want this now. They know that with the county unit system abolished they could have free rein to organize and have a boss in Georgia, as has been done in other states—a boss who would let them fatten and grow rich at the taxpayers' expense."

Pledging that "as long as I am your Governor the county unit system will stay intact," Talmadge said that once it were abolished the voices of the people in the small counties would "not be heard in Atlanta."

The Governor again assailed the recent 2 1-2-cent a gallon increase in the price of gasoline in Georgia and other seaboard states, calling it an effort "to build up a slush fund of $38,000,000 for Wiley Moore's oil company and others. He added that Moore is secretary-treasurer of the Rivers-Arnall campaign committee."

Urge Rationing Protests.

He said the price advance had not been rescinded when he left Atlanta despite earlier information that it would be. He urged his listeners to protest to their congressmen, not only against the higher price but also against gasoline rationing unless it is made nation-wide.

"A 10 per cent rationing all over the nation would save more gasoline than the present arrangement in a few states, which is punishing our people and will force good people on relief rolls unless something is done about it," Talmadge said.

The Governor said he had reduced the state's debts about $22,000,000 in his 18 months in office and had accumulated a surplus of $9,663,635 by the close of the last fiscal year on June 30. This he called a war emergency fund to offset anticipated tax losses.

Press Attacks Reiterated.

This surplus, he said, "has certainly kindled the appetites of Blalock (D. B. Blalock, Atlanta machinery dealer), Wiley Moore and a great many more and they will go to any lengths to try to get their crowd back."

The reason, he added, is "they know that if Talmadge is in the Governor's chair, he will run a safe, economical administration and look after the welfare of the people and not the welfare of a few petty pampered individuals of the Rivers-Arnall, Blalock-Moore corporation."

The Governor told how he has pegged gasoline tax payments to the counties at $365,000 a month despite a decline in returns from the six-cent levy, and he also said he had provided more for the schools than the previous administration. Much of his address was devoted to reiterating his attacks on several newspapers, especially those in Atlanta.

Carmichael Hits Talmadge On Race Issue

James V. Carmichael, former state legislator, asserted last night Governor Talmadge is "carrying the race issue so far" in his reelection campaign that he has had the state guard notified that "race riots are on the verge of breaking out."

White Case Worker Visits Houston; Blast Racial Prejudices

"The Informer" Houston, Tex.

JUN 20 1942

HOUSTON. — Miss Lois Sachs (white). case worker in the Foster Home Department of the Colored Orphan Asylum ,New York City, was a recent visitor to Houston where she, in an interview with an Informer reporter, outlined her program and revealed many interesting facts on racial prejudices, segregation and false concepts of members of her own race. This was her first trip South. having been born in Westport, Connecticut and attended school at Radcliffe, Bernard and is graduated from the New York School of Social Work.

Miss Sachs received the reporter and photographer in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Kobler, former New York City friends, and talked freely of her experiences as a social worker among Negroes. Young, suave, intelligent and very outspoken on all issues relative to delinquency among Negroes, the racial prejudices, segregation, and charming New Yorker covered every phase of her work in detail, making personal comments when necessary.

She revealed that the Foster Home project with which she is connected is more than 100 years old and the colored branch is more than 20 years old. 'I have many varied and beautiful experiences," she said, "and I consider the work with my staff, which is two-thirds Negro, to be most pleasant. The Negro staff is well trained and efficient, many of them graduates of the Atlanta School of Social Work. This is my first experience with a predominantly Negro staff and I certainly have gotten to know the community problems of the Negro . . . However, many of the school principals in New York City. though highly educated, are still blinded to real cause of delinquencies, maladjustment and slow progress of Negro children . . . For instance, in Harlem, you have there a congested area. Negroes must pay higher rent than the whites. This makes living conditions difficult for Negroes. The mother must leave home to work. The father is away. Congested streets and few play areas for the child and naturally the child will face different problems and might show different progress in school, not because he is a Negro but because he happens to come from this area and this environment. The same thing is true with children from foster homes. The living conditions, whether the child is happy and feels at home, will determine in a large manner his progress in school, black or white."

When asked about her opinion on segregation, jim crowism, etc., she replied: "I am not down here to criticize the South and its jim crow policies. We have jim crow right there in New York. But the South could do much better in its effort toward the Negro than it is doing. I understand too well the history and background of racial prejudice and intolerances, but it doesn't mean that I believe in them and I certainly do not. Why. one of the richest experiences that I have ever had was in a mixed camp, I believe, in 1938. Among the children there were no signs of racial differences and racial feeling. I thought it was simply grand and I believe that was one of my richest experiences."

JEWS ISSUE NEW BOOK TO ANSWER THEIR DEFAMERS

Reply to Many Rumors of Anti-Semites.

JUL 9 1942

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

A book, "Questions and Answers Concerning the Jew," which was prepared and published by the Anti-defamation league of B'nai B'rith, has just come from the press. It raises and answers with full documentation many of the queries which rise in sincerely interested minds as well as defamatory tales invented by anti-Semitic groups.

In the preface, the Rev. Dr. Everett R. Clinchy of New York, Presbyterian minister who directs the National Conference of Christians and Jews, said the book evolved from an experience in a friendly living room where a group of Christians discussed many questions concerning anti-Semitism. Sigmund Livingston of the league, was present and was asked to put into writing answers to the main queries which arose.

"This little volume can be used in neighborhood groups, family conversations, church classes, and college 'bull sessions,'" Dr. Clinchy explained. "It will make an admirable discussion basis for joint groups of Christians and Jews."

Examples of Questions.

JUL 9 1942

Following are some of the questions discussed:

"What is the historicity concerning the crucifixion of Jesus? What is the Talmud? What is the Talmud's teaching in regard to the relations between Christians and Jews? How did the ridiculous fable that Jews practice ritual murder originate?

"Who concocted the protocols of the elders of Zion, and why? Does there exist a 'Benjamin Franklin prophecy,' and a 'Charles Pinckney diary'? What rôle did Jews play in Russian communism? How many officials of the Soviet government are of Jewish descent? Who are the leaders of communism in America? How many Jews in the United States belong to the Communist party? What was the total Communist vote in Germany before the advent of Hitler? What portion of that vote was Jewish?

"What rôle do Jews play in American industry? Do Jews control banking in the United States, Great Britain, Germany, France? Do Jews control the American press? Do Jews control the radio? To what extent do Jews participate in the whole area of the motion picture industry? What percentage of Jews are in government employ? Jews in literature and music? Has Jewish philanthropy been confined to Jews?"

History of Crucifixion Discussed.

In the chapter devoted to the crucifixion of Christ, the book raises the question whether "The Jews" as an entire people, were responsible for Christ's death. Such a view, it added, "would be a monstrous injustice."

"It must not be forgotten," the book continues, "that the faithful followers of Jesus, his disciples . . . were Jews; the crowds which thronged to him and hailed him as teacher and friend . . . the women who were devoted to him and who brought their children to him to be blessed by him, they all were Jews.

"What could have happened, at most, was that Jesus was confronted with certain communal officers, probably a few despised Quislings who held with Rome, concerning Jesus' seemingly unorthodox utterances."

The question of the trial before the Sanhedrin and the historical soundness of some of the Biblical accounts of judicial procedure which the book says are "completely at variance with Jewish court procedure," has been given recent support by eminent historical scholars. This variance was pointed out by Prof. Albert T. Olmstead of Oriental institute, University of Chicago. He explained that the synoptic [Matthew, Mark, and Luke] gospels betray lack of historical knowledge of ancient judicial procedure.

St. John Blamed Priests.

JUL 9 1942

On the other hand, the gospel of St. John, he said showed correct knowledge of such procedure. He added that this gospel takes the blame for the crucifixion of Christ off the shoulders of the Jewish people and puts it on the high priests alone.

"While the synoptics blame the [whole] Jewish people for the death of Jesus, and Matthew tells of the whole people invoking blood guilt upon themselves and their children, John places the blood guilt on the high priests alone," Dr. Olmstead declared.

Dr. Olmstead also confirmed the view that the high priests "were not representative of the people of Palestine" but held their positions only under conditions imposed by Roman overlords.

Negro True To God And Nation Choir Leader Tells Kiwanians

"America can be assured that the negro will be true to God and his native land," declared Prof. Frederick Hall of the Alabama State Teachers' College, yesterday in a brief address to the Kiwanis Club during intermission in a musical program presented by the college Glee Club.

JUL 29 1942

Prof. Hall led the mixed choir in a series of spirituals, many of which fitted the pattern of need, he said, during this present world conflagration.

Featured on the special musical program, an annual feature furnished each year by the State Teachers' College choir, were "God's Gonna Build Up Zion's Wall," "Let Us Cheer the Weary Traveler Along the Heavenly Way," "Soldier of the Cross," "Ain't Got Long to Stay Here," "Dawn," "Swing Low Sweet Chariot," and "Let Us March On Till Victory Is Won."

Charlie Greer, co-chairman of the program, expressed the appreciation of the Kiwanis Club for the message brought to the club by Prof. Hall and his well-trained choir.

Mr. Greer read a memorial, written by Kiwanian John Lapsley, to "Uncle John" Pearson, 80-year-old member, who died recently. The entire membership voted by standing to send a copy of the eulogy to the members of his family.

In appreciation of the service rendered the community by William G. Bowman, the Kiwanis Club yesterday adopted a resolution of commendation for Mr. Bowman's acceptance of the responsibility for the charity and welfare drive which will begin shortly. The Kiwanis Club will lend its efforts and talents toward a successful conclusion of this drive, Fred A. Duran, club president, announced.

Returning to visit the club while on a short furlough, Second Lieut. Bee Jordan was introduced to his fellow Kiwanians and he told briefly of his experiences in Uncle Sam's army.

THE HIGHER VIEW

Disturbing rumors and some actual outbreaks of racial hostility, the latter chiefly due to congestion on streetcars and busses, have caused uneasiness among those interested in harmony in Chattanooga. One of the rumors spread by propagandists has been that Negro citizens "are not wanted" in this war.

The Rev. William A. Banks, farseeing Negro preacher, delivered an address on the radio here last week, which should have been heard by all citizens. "Let us dark-skinned Americans be reminded that character and brains know no color line; that loyalty and patriotic valor know no racial values; that duty and respect know no political boundaries," said the Rev. Banks. "We must never lose sight of the fact that the mean, selfish un-American attitudes and expressions of the ignorant and prejudiced of either race are not the mirror of the attitudes and sentiments of true American citizens."

Negroes have fought in every war since this country was founded and they will fight in this one. The Times on Sunday printed a photograph of a number of Negro army officers now taking a refresher course at Fort Oglethorpe. Recently five Negro lieutenants were given their wings at Tuskegee and many more will follow as officers in the air corps. Crispus Attucks fought on Boston Commons. He was a Negro. Peter Salem and Solomon Poor fought with distinction in the Battle of Bunker Hill. Negro troops held the line in 1771 when Colonel Green was attacked at Point Ridge. The Negroes were with George Washington at Valley Forge. They were with Commodore Perry in 1812. Two Negro regiments won praise from Andrew Jackson in the Battle of New Orleans. Negroes fought with Theodore Roosevelt in the Battle of San Juan Hill. In the first World War 200,000 Negro soldiers went to France. Among the first Americans to be decorated for bravery in that war were Needham Roberts and Henry Johnson. Four entire Negro regiments won the Croix de Guerre.

Negroes are already in the service in this war. They know that the Rev. William A. Banks uttered grim, solemn truth when he said to men of his race: "Our welfare as a group, our destiny, is wound up and bound up in America's. America's future, her very existence, will be determined by the outcome of the titanic struggle of freedom against slavery and the outcome of this struggle will be determined in no small measure by what we do. Let us not be deceived. If America loses, we lose! If America loses, the beacon light of freedom's throne may never more in radiant grandeur shine; the guardian lamp of victory's shrine will be extinguished by ruthless despotism, will be blown to oblivion while voluptuous Night restores her Stygian throne upon civilization's ruins!"

This Negro preacher thus expressed in eloquent metaphor the exact nature of this war. Darkest Night will, indeed, be restored upon her Stygian throne if America loses this war. For the black man and the white it will mean a relapse into slavery. Facing such an issue, The Times cannot believe that differences will divide America in such an hour of peril.

Negro Rally Urges Equal Rights as War Necessity

By Ted Bassett

Sunday's rally at the Golden Gate Ballroom, Harlem, called by the Negro Victory Labor Committee, was a demonstration of the rising militancy of the Negro people, their determination to win nothing less than full and equal participation in the war effort and their full citizenship rights.

When Charles Collins, business agent of the Hotel & Club Employes, Local 6 struck the chairman's gavel at 5 P. M., the scheduled opening hour, 6,000 people already jammed the hall to the doors, hundreds milled outside, thousands were turned away.

The afternoon was hot and the hall hotter but this was a serious business for the Negro people and thousands stood for three hours to hear the program for integration of Negroes into the war effort and for equal rights.

The Negro people were there; men and women; young people with eager faces; older people set and determined; elderly people with hope and confidence written in their eyes.

The Negro people were demanding their just rights as a war necessity. And they expressed freely their attitude to the program and statements of the various speakers. They applauded; they remained silent; they commented, "Yes, that's right." "It's deeds, we want." You could see that the spirit of freedom which grips the peoples of the whole world, grips the Negro people and impels them toward the solution of their century old grievances.

They applauded Paul V. McNutt, chairman of the manpower commission, vigorously, when he said:

"Discrimination-based on anything but a man's sheer worth must go. Discrimination against every race must go—just as economic discrimination must go."

"There are still too many employers who stipulate on their hiring schedules that certain jobs are barred to Negroes. There are still too many who hire them only for certain service jobs or assign them to work below their best skill. Such employers are projecting their prejudices at the cost of production for victory. And America cannot stand that kind of nonsense."

But there was silence when he said:

'There are others who believe that American Negroes will fall for the party line of fascism or Communism-trailing after the big balloon of promises and letting go of the firm cornerstone of American democracy."

They roundly applauded Rev Adam Clayton Powell when he declared that "Uncle Tom" was dead and that now we have a "new Negro" who isn't afraid, who isn't going to stop if he is called radical or red.

They vigorously applauded when Rev. Powell introduced Vito Marcantonio as a fighting Congressman who must be sent back to Congress.

They applauded Vito Marcantonio's remarks that every redbaiter is a Negro hater and a sympathizer with Hitler. They applauded his declaration that: "I am going to put an all-Harlem rider on every bill for the appropriation of armament from now on,' . . . this rider will demand that no funds appropriated 'shall be paid to any firm or individual which refused to abide by the fair employment practice committee decisions. They will beat down my rider, but I'll put it on every bill."

The Negro people gave unanimous approval and applauded the 14-point program as announced by Ferdinand Smith, vice-president of the New York State CIO, but the applause grew greater when Charles Collins said these 14-points together with the 8-points adopted at the Madison Square Garden meeting, forms a comprehensive program for the integration of the Negroes in the war effort.

This program had been adopted Saturday by 400 hundred delegates from AFL, CIO and Independent Unions and Fraternal, civic, and religious organizations from the Negro Community.

"Secret City" Air Skit Blasts Native Fascism

56K

By JOE BOSTIC

SPECIAL

From 5:45 to 6 pm Mondays thru Fridays, NBC's blue network, for several months has been engaged in one of the most militant campaigns against native American fascism. Major weapon in this offensive is the juvenile dramatic serial program, Secret City, broadcast at that time. Within the past few weeks especially, listeners have been treated to a stirringly dramatic portrayal of the struggle against hitlerian principles in America, which marks the program as one of the most valuable in the ether. Secret City concerns the organization of a model municipal government by a group of boys who discover a local mystery while filling city offices during a boys' day observance program.

The leading character, Ben Clark (Franklin Adams) Eddie Turner (Jerry Spellman) and Sid Miller (Gene Geisler) pass thru a series of adventures, are often helped by the young girls of the town. The youngsters rule their own "secret city" from their headquarters in an abandoned mansion.

The lads' current adventure strikes the high note in anti-fascist propaganda. The trio, seeking to help Lowell Prior, Negro high school student, earn enough money to finance a college education made possible by a scholarship he has won, encounter the race prejudice and bigotry in the story with which the average Negro is only too familiar in real life.

Lowell Prior's part is portrayed by 16-year-old Oscar Brown of Chicago, son of Attorney Oscar Brown sr, manager of the Ida B. Wells housing project in the Windy City. Young Brown, a junior at Englewood Hi school and former member of the Peter Pan Players, a children's dramatic group, made his first appearance on the Secret City program June 17.

The addition of the Negro youth to the cast, noteworthy in itself, is overshadowed completely, however, by the hard-hitting, truly democratic preachments woven skillfully into the show which make it a "must" for every believer in the way of life we must have in the peace to come.

The shows are written by Louis E. Hartman and produced by Burr E. Lee. The program came from an original idea by Jack Bentkover who also wrote the scripts until he entered the army several months ago.

Tune in on Secret City once You'll stick with it—Bostic.

To the Editor The News:

Wendell L. Willkie spoke several days ago in Los Angeles about race discrimination in the United States. Mr. Willkie's text is mostly confined to discrimination against the Negro race, and its articles point directly to the South.

Several weeks ago we celebrated Independence Day. That day extolled our freedom, independency and our right to the pursuit of happiness. Thus our great fight today—to preserve this freedom, and to free those of the world who are now in the bonds of dictatorship.

Back of our freedom lies a hard and bitter struggle, hardships which you nor I have ever endured. Our forefathers fought hand in hand with the Indians; they spilt their blood on many battlefields; they toiled and slaved to make this the greatest country on earth and a decent place to live in. We are now enjoying the fruits of their labors. By their heroic fight for liberty, our United States is known in every part of the world as the "land of the free and the home of the brave."

We have sent missionaries from America to parts all over the world. They organized churches and schools as well as spread the word of God. They made civilized beings out of heathens. Our doctors, too, have cared for their sick, forced sanitation measures, drove out plagues and pestilence, and made them a healthier and happier people. Our American Red Cross, an organization of which we are all proud, has always been on the scene of a calamitous disaster regardless of race or creed. You will perhaps recall several years ago, the great earthquake of Japan. Your American Red Cross was Johnny on the spot. The injured were cared for, the homeless and destitutes were clothed and fed, and pestilence kept down. How much was all this appreciated? We are Americans, though, and would do it again.

We invited our former foes, those who had opposed our high ideals, those who had suppressed us in our hour of peril, to come and share in this land of golden opportunities. They came in such vast numbers that we had to pass immigration laws to check the flow. We gave these immigrants jobs, let them build their homes in our midst, and shared goodwill as neighbors. Our churches, schools and public places were opened to them. Is this discrimination?

Mr. Willkie spoke of the whites and their discrimination against the Negro. We Southerners have helped ~~the Negro race by promoting its morals, elevating~~ its standard of living, giving it the chance of an education equal to ~~our own. We have~~ built fine brick schools for them, and with the help of the federal government they now have fine housing projects all over the South. The more education a man has and the more he applies it to practical use, the farther he will go in this life. The same is true with the Negroes.

A splendid example in the desire for higher learning in the Negro race is shown in the life of George Washington Carver. He had a hard struggle in his attainments but finally realized his ambitions. He has not only benefited his own race but all mankind as well. He was born of poor parents, but he had the will and the urge to go on. That, my friends, with the faith in God, is all anyone needs.

During this crisis it seems very foolhardy to cause disunity among the different races. These politicians should realize that there is a war going on and we haven't won it yet. Their political careers are in danger by a greater force, and if they don't get the lead out and get the arms and supplies flowing steadily to our expeditionary forces, some of our boys are going to wonder if some of these politicians are worth fighting for. Let's all pull together and do the things that have to be done, and assure ourselves of the victory which must be forthcoming.

Shall We Halt Our Fight? No!

JUL 23 1942

In many quarters it has been suggested that American Negroes halt their fight for full participation in the American way of life until the war is over. We confess we have sometimes had a little sympathy with the idea, until we discovered that those who were most insistent that Negroes go on and fight for the nation and wait until a more convenient time to demand rights, were the very ones who had been most vigorous in the denial of those rights.

We are, therefore, thoroughly resolved that the Double Victory campaign for victory at home and abroad is not only the most sensible, but there simply is no alternative. American Negroes or any other Americans cannot fight to preserve anything which they do not already possess. We have the utmost faith that America is and will continue to be the greatest nation on earth, if and when every citizen regardless of race or color shall enjoy the benefits which the constitution guarantees to all who abide by it and uphold it. American Negroes want no more, they will be satisfied with nothing less.

Leaders of the Negro group in the American nation will be faithless to the boys who are fighting on land and sea in all parts of the world to guarantee the continuance of those freedoms for which our fathers prayed, worked, lived and died, if we do not continue the fight in every possible sector of the home front. "Negroes have a double stake in the war," says Dr. George Haynes, addressing the Sunday School Congress and Training Union of the National Baptist Convention, one of the largest Negro youth groups in America. But he did not have to tell them that; American Negro Youth knows this better than we, and are determined that there shall be no repetition of what happened after the last world war. Negro soldiers fought and died on the battlefields of France to "Make the World Safe for Democracy" and came home to find he was not a part of the world in many instances. In the depression which followed, he learned what it was to be "the first fired and the last hired" in the industries which he had kept going while the European aliens went home to fight against the nation that had kept them from starvation. No, in God's name we shall not halt the fight for our God-given rights.

LET'S HAVE SANITY

> "In America, a minority can make tremendous gains toward equality if organized and led by men with sense enough to express the interests of that minority in terms of the interests of the whole nation. How otherwise can a minority cease to be a minority with special problems."

The above is a quotation from the timely article written by George F. McCray, Labor editor of the Associated Negro Press, and appearing in Negro papers this week. The quotation occurs toward the close of a sound criticism of the words and activities of A. Philip Randolph and Walter White, who were the principal figures in a big mass meeting held recently in Chicago, and attended by more than 12,000 persons.

Mr. McCray makes the point that the "March on Washington" gag which Randolph and White are promoting is intensifying racial antagonisms, making interracial labor cooperation more difficult and will undoubtedly weaken the Negro worker's desire, as well as that of other Negroes, to give enthusiastic support to the war effort.

If Mr. McCray's conclusions and observations are sound, then it will behoove the Government to take proper action to suppress such meetings, the welfare of the Negro masses demanding it. Negro leaders who are principally interested in publicity should not be allowed to do so to the detriment of the nation's welfare.

We are contending that thoughtless white persons who stir up racial antagonisms at this critical time should be suppressed. The same is true of Negroes who do so, and we shall not pretend that we do not have Negro leaders who are as much a menace to national unity as are whites who are steeped in bigotry and selfishness.

There has never been a crisis in the affairs of this country when the Negro minority had as many white men and women of good will ready to do battle for full justice for the Negro race as now. That battle is being won on many fronts and because these white friends will not compromise nor retreat.

Negroes can march to victory WITH these white friends, but not by breaking away from them and embarrassing them. The hope of the Negro becoming fully integrated into the nation's war effort rests upon retaining the confidence of those white friends who feel that Negroes also believe that winning the war is the matter of first importance. Sensible Negroes who fight racial discrimination in American life are doing so for the very sound reason that the persistence of racial and class discrimination is effective propaganda for the common enemy, and therefore weakens a nation dedicated to fighting for the liberation of the common man.

This newspaper, for instance, opposes the policy of the local Civil Service Board of advertising for competitive examinations for city jobs and specifying that WHITE PERSONS ONLY may take the examinations. We know that such advertisements can and do reach the enemies of democracy and are used in quenching the zeal of democracy's allies of the darker races for a victory over the enemies of democracy.

This newspaper realizes also, that marches on Washington, and windy speeches such as were indulged in at the big mass meeting in Chicago, and in Madison Square Garden, are effective propaganda for the Axis powers. It is certain that there is enough sense among patriotic Americans of both the white and Negro races to find a way to suppress publicity detailing "Business as usual" on the racial discrimination front, and there is as much obligation resting upon Negro citizens to oppose our radicals as there is for white people to suppress the bigots of their race.

Negroes mustn't forget the debt of gratitude we owe Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt for the brilliant and effective way she has crusaded for minority groups, including the entire working class of this country. This crusade has made the First Lady the target of the entire Fascist-minded clique in America. Walter White and A. Philip Randolph should have regard for Mrs. Roosevelt's position and avoid causing her the embarrassment that comes from seeing them "weaken the Negro's desire to give enthusiastic support to the war effort."

Mr. McCray states that Randolph and White appear to have reached the conclusion that the un-democratic elements in the United States are far more dangerous to the welfare of the Negro than a victorious Fascism will be. If so, we see no difference between these Negro leaders and the Big Boys of Wall Street who have concluded they CAN DO BUSINESS WITH HITLER.

Very definitely, a much saner leadership for the Negro masses is needed through this [illegible] than that being furnished by A. Philip Randolph and Walter White.

VIRGINIA UNION'S GLOOMY DEAN IS ALSO VERY TIMID

> Colored people cannot force the issue of race relations . . . Of course the time is ripe for some kind of bargaining, if thereby we mean efforts to improve ourselves in the affairs of the nation.

These two sentences are taken from a column by Dean Gordon B. Hancock, known as the "gloomy dean" of Virginia Union University. What he says is uttered often by ante-bellum leaders in the backward South where speech is not free and leaders are not free from fear and want.

By contrast, consider these sentences delivered by Pearl Buck at the Howard University commencement:

> Do not for one moment . . . accept the status which race prejudice puts upon you. . . . Do not yield for one moment to anything in our national life which denies democracy. Press steadily for equality.

Can anyone imagine Walter White, Philip Randolph, Adam Powell, Marshall Shepard, Raymond Alexander or any other dynamic leader of our day using the Hancock formula in this day, counselling his group not to force the issue of democracy and freedom?

In an interview with Peter Dana, Mr. Shepard, a member of the Pennsylvania Legislature, said last week:

> It is not enough to tell people that what they want and aspire to is not attainable or right. They want to know why. . . . They want leaders to point to the right and the attainable.

Behind effective leadership, Mr. Shepard says, is a master idea, an overriding passion to guide and compel people to unity of longing and action.

Read again the statements of Pearl Buck and Dean Gordon Hancock and determine for yourself which of them indicates the kind of leadership this war period demands.

Talmadge and Dixon Aid Hitler

Poll Taxers Defy U. S.

By Ben Davis, Jr.

Hitlerite practices against the Negro people in America are dangerous obstacles to our war of independence against Hitler.

The great statesman Earl Browder hit the nail on the head when he declared in Madison Square Garden on July 2, that the "'White supremacy' slogan of Southern Bourbons is one of the greatest dangers of the U.S. in this war...."

We have fresh proof of this fundamental truth in the latest outbursts of Governors Talmadge of Georgia and Dixon of Alabama. Talmadge upheld the lynch police-officials who assaulted the world-famous Negro American tenor Roland Hayes, because Hayes protested the lawless mistreatment of his wife.

Gov. Dixon attacked the President's Fair Employment Practice Committee because it holds that Negroes and other minorities must have equal job rights in order that this country can produce enough to beat Hitler.

Talmadge's latest eruption paid the Communist Party of Alabama, along with Mrs. Omega Mason, president of the New Jersey State Federation of Women's Clubs, a great compliment. Talmadge said they protested the Hayes beating and insisted upon equality for Negroes even in the poll tax state of Georgia. That, of course, is a crime before Talmadge and before Talmadge's hero, Hitler, although it sets very well with other Americans a large part of whom are in Talmadge's own state, plotting his eventual political oblivion.

Talmadge says that "furriner" Negroes and whites who don't like jim-crow should stay out of the South and particularly out of Georgia. No one of course would believe Talmadge intelligent enough to know that Roland Hayes is a native of Georgia, and was in his home, Rome, Ga., where he was slugged by Talmadge's chivalrous poll taxers.

Further information for Talmadge: none of the Negro people in Georgia like jim-crow oppression, and thousands of them are working with white labor and white liberals to rid Georgia of Talmadgeism.

Further, for poll tax Talmadge's information, Rob F. Hall, executive secretary of the Communist Party of Alabama and Georgia, is one of those white "furriners" who was born and reared in poll tax Alabama. Hall is a symbol of thousands of white Southerners in the labor movement and among the oppressed white sharecroppers, who, in solidarity with the Negro people, mean to rid the South of the blight of Talmadgeism, in order that it can play its full role in winning the war.

Talmadge's fellow poll taxer, Dixon, struck a direct blow at the war effort when he denounced the President's Committee. He turned down an Army order for 1,750,000 yards of cotton material, because the government contract called for no discrimination against workers because of "race, creed, color or religion." Mind you, it was a contract to the State prison, but Dixon couldn't stand for Negro and white prisoners to work together, even under gunshot of a chain-gang killer! Perhaps Dixon is haunted by the fact that one of the white prisoners might say "hello" to one of the five innocent Scottsboro boys still held hostage by the lynch system.

Governor Dix has given a practical example for all to see of how racial discrimination cripples our war effort—and actually endangers victory. He, by his unreconstructed devotion to "white supremacy," has shown how the wiping out of the poll tax system, and all its concommitant evils, is necessary for winning the war. He has proven—not some "furriner"—how jim-crow must go, along with Hitler.

But the Ku Klux rage of Talmadge and Dixon becomes a white heat only because the democratic spirit engendered by the war foretells the doom of the lynch system. Whom the gods would destroy, they first make mad. These two gentlemen are like Joshua trying to hold back the sun. Students of the University of Georgia—not "furriners"—burned Talmadge in effigy when he issued his blast against educational opportunities for Negroes. White citizens in Alabama praised the FEPC when it went to Birmingham and secured historic no-discrimination contracts with war industries.

It's the people of Georgia, of Alabama, of the South, who are beginning to build a fire under Talmadgeism and Dixonism. It's the representatives of the people in Congress, many of them from the South, who became so outraged by the fascist-minded Rankin's filibuster against the franchise for the soldiers that they signed the discharge petition for the anti-poll-tax bill in mass. (Only 23 more Congressmen's signatures are needed.)

The question is how long will the Talmadges and Dixons be permitted to defy the Constitution of the United States? How long will they be permitted to degrade the people of the South by their Hitler-like decrees and vile Negro-baiting? How long will they be permitted to defy the Commander-in-Chief of our nation and snap their fingers at national unity and the war effort?

Part of the answer is: Just so long as Attorney General Francis Biddle, slanderer of the Communists, persecutor of the anti-fascist leader, Harry Bridges, is allowed to go on blithely unfulfilling his sworn duty to unconditionally uphold the Constitutional rights of Negro Americans.

Ask Immediate Passage Of Poll Tax, Lynch Bills

Labor Leaders Urge Prosecution Of Texas Lynchers

BUFFALO, N. Y. —(SNS) — Immediate passage of Federal Anti-Lynching and Anti-Poll Tax legislation, as vitally needed War measures, and Federal prosecution of those responsible for the lynching of a 31-year-old Negro in Texas last week as traitors to the Nation, were called for in statements issued here Monday by the presidents of the Buffalo A. F. of L. and CIO Councils both of whom addressed the "Conference for the Full Use of Negro Labor to Produce for Victory" held here Sunday at 2 p. m. in Kleinhan's Music Hall. Approximately 1000 Negro and white citizens attended the meeting.

Characterizing the lynching of Willie Vinson in Texarkana, Texas as an example of "Hitler-like" injustice to Negro people that calls for "Prosecution of the mob leaders by the Department of Justice as saboteurs of democracy and the Nation's War effort," Thomas Casey, president of the Greater Buffalo Industrial Union Council, declared that "It is necessary now, more than ever to pass a federal Anti-Lynching law and the Anti-Poll Tax bill in order to wipe out discrimination and mob violence forever."

BACKED BY LABOR

Robert Smith, president of the Buffalo Federation of Labor (AFL), told representative of the "Conference for the Full Use of Negro Labor Power to Produce for Victory" that the Texas lynching "is an example of the kind of anti-democratic action against Negroes that labor and the American people are fighting this War to abolish. This is why the national policy of the A. F. of L. is squarely behind the passage of Federal Anti-Lynching and Anti-Poll Tax legislation.

Both Smith and Casey spoke at the Sunday conference which heard Alderman Earl B. Dickerson, member of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices. State Senator Walter J. Mahoney, Ferdinand Smith, National Secretary of the National Maritime Union, CIO; Patrick Ceracci, Secretary, Local 66, Hotel and Restaurant Employees, AFL; A. J. Smitherman, editor, Buffalo Star; Mrs. Bertha J. Diggs, Chairman, N. Y. State Republican Women's Organizations; and the Rev. William H. Horner, pastor of Lincoln Memorial Methodist Church, who, together with Thomas Casey, was Co-Chairman of the Conference.

MANY SPONSORS

Mayor Joseph J. Kelly and Congressman Alfred F. Beiter headed a long list of sponsors of the conference, which initiated action on questions involving job training in War industries for Negroes, employment of Negroes in Buffalo's war industries, including aircraft and rubber; and health housing conditions affecting Negro War Workers and their families.

Other Conference sponsors included: Victor Einach, Executive Secretary, Buffalo Committee on Discrimination in Employment. Frank Merriweather, editor, Buffalo Criterion; Rev. Edward J. Nash, chairman of the Buffalo Negro Ministers' Council; Dean Julian Park of the University of Buffalo; State Senator Walter J. Mahoney; Rev. D. Ormonde Walker, pastor Bethel AME Church; Alfred G. Larke, Secretary, Greater Buffalo Industrial Union Council, CIO. Emanuel J. Fried, District Organizer, United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers Union, CIO; Howard Kelly, Executive Secretary Municipal Housing Authority; Charles Brown, vice-president, Negro Youth Assembly; Mrs. Bertha J. Diggs, chairman N. Y. State Republican Women's Org.; Suel Jackson, president Local 39, Fur and Leather Workers, CIO; and representatives of a large number of other trade unions, Negro, Women, Youth and Church organizations. Julian Evans, president, Buffalo NAACP Branch, also endorsed the Conference.

Dixie Solons Dominate U. S. Committee Chairmanships

Walter White Touches on Issue in Speech Tuesday at Madison Square Garden Rally

By JULIUS J. ADAMS

JUN 27 1942

In his reference to the control of Congress, and therefore, to a great extent, the affairs of the Government by Southerners through important committee chairmanships, Walter White, U. A. A. C. P. executive, obviously didn't have time to tell the whole story during his speech before the 20,000 people attending the March-on-Washington rally at Madison Square Garden June 16.

Mr. White

To the uninitiated, Mr. White's remarks might not have been too significant, but to those who understand the organization of Congress, and its operations, it will readily be comprehended what he was driving at. However, some additional information concerning the makeup of the Congress and of the men who dominate the committees through chairmanships should serve to enlarge the picture Mr. White was seeking to portray.

Many Fascists Here

Said he, "The plain, bitter truth is that the thinking and action on the problem of race in our country are determined almost completely by the most Fascist-minded elements in the deepest and darkest South.

"This element," he declared, "which practiced Naziism long before Hitler was born—almost completely dominates our Federal Government. Our President, our Army, our Navy, our Government generally are afraid to challenge or to offend these southern demogogues by eliminating the color line.

JUN 27 1942

"Disfranchisement," he continued, "of black people has inevitably brought about the disfranchisement of an overwhelming majority of the white people of the deep South. Thus, today, the South with only a little over one-fourth of the population of the United States, holds more than 50 percent of the chairmanships in the United States House of Representatives and Senate. They have achieved this," he pointed out, "under a Democratic Administration through the ease by which demagogues can get themselves elected and re-elected with ridiculous ease through the rotten borough system of the South."

Mr. White then went on to invite attention to the list of Senate chairman of important committees.

"Chairman of the Appropriations Committee," he noted, "is Carter Glass of Virginia."

But before presenting the whole picture, it should be pointed out here that chairmanships of committees are attained through seniority, with the majority party in the House or Senate, electing the ranking member on the committee as its chairman. The ranking member of the minority party retains his seniority, and when and if the pendulum swings and his party becomes the majority, the House or Senate is thus organized by the new majority party and the individual who was the ranking member of the minority party becomes the chairman of the committee in the new Congress.

Glass Is Head Man

Now in the case of Chairmai Glass of the Appropriations Committee the second ranking Democratic member is Senator Kennetl McKellar of Tennessee, who, i the present Congress, would become chairman in case of th death of Senator Glass, or woul be entitled to the chairmanshi in the next Congress if Senato Glass were defeated, but th Democrats elected a majority.

On the other hand, if the Republicans won the Senate at th next election, Senator Gerald Nye of North Dakota, the preser ranking Republican member would be entitled to the chairmanship, and Senator Glass, if he is re-elected would thus become the ranking minority member.

Mr. White pointed to the Agriculture Committee, naming "Cotton Ed" Smith of South Carolina as its chairman. Second ranking member on the Democratic side is Burton K. Wheeler of Montana, while the ranking member on the Republican side (who, in fact, is listed as an Independent) is Nebraska's George W. Norris.

Speaking of Senator Thomas Connally of Texas, chairman of the powerful and extremely important Foreign Relations Committee, Mr. White said, "Tom Connally of Texas who Life Magazine recently said would be the most influential of Americans at the peace conference in troweling out the new world. I invite you to read," he said, "his bitterly sardonic comments on Negroes during the seven weeks' filibuster which he led against the anti-lynching bill in 1937. Having read them, I invite you to consider the kind of world Connally would trowel out with his attitude of contempt for colored people."

Fish Is Big Issue

Directly behind Senator Connally as number two Democrat on the enormously important Foreign Relations Committee is Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, while the ranking Republican member is Hiram W. Johnson of California.

With all the discussion centering around Republican Hamilton Fish of New York, it might be somewhat enlightening to reveal that Representative Fish is the ranking Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee in the House, and will become chairman in the event the Republicans win out in November and Fish is re-elected. Because of his views on the international situation, Fish, as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee might prove tremendously embarrassing to the Administration's war and post-war programs—that is, in case Mr. Fish is the arch-isolationist he is said to be. In some circles, this fact, coupled with the other fact that Representative Fish would also take over the chairmanship of the powerful Rules Committee of which he is ranking member is believed in some circles to have played a prominent, yet subtle part in the campaign to defeat Representative Fish. The Foreign Relations Committee's present chairman is Sol Bloom of New York, while the Rules Committee is headed by Representative Adolph J. Sabath of Illinois, dean of the House, who was elected to Congress in 1906 and has served continuously ever since. The Rules Committee in the Senate is bossed by Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, with McKellar of Tennessee, the second in command. Michigan's veteran, Arthur H. Vandenberg is the ranking Republican.

Referring to the committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, which he said is becoming increasingly important because of the global nature of the war and post-war world, Mr. White stated. "it is headed by Senator Tydings of Maryland." His second in command is Senator Carl Hayden of Arizona; the ranking Republican member is Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota.

Stifled Anti-Lynching Bill

Mr. White made special reference to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee in the House of Representatives where he said anti-lynching bills have been tied up for year. Of Chairman Hatton Sumners of Texas he said, "openly boasted he would never permit even a hearing on any anti-lynching bill as long as he was chairman, and today his committee refuses to report out the anti-poll tax bill."

New York's Emanuel Celler i next up behind Representativ Sumners, and ranking Republican is the Kansan, U. S. Guye who proposed an anti-poll ta bill, only to have it pigeon-hole for good by Sumners and hi crowd in committee. Incidentall an anti-poll tax measure sponsored by Senator Claude Peppe of Florida is now pending in Congress.

"In the light of the control our government by these me who spit upon democracy whenever the Negro is involved," M White said, "is there any wonde that meetings like this ar tragically necessary at a time lik this? Or that, irony of ironies we Negroes must fight for th right to fight when the world i threatened with distruction. Bu fight we must, and fight we will And it is a fight which we ca and must win."

Fish Is Big Issue

Directly behind Senator Connally as number two Democrat on the enormously important Foreign Relations Committee is Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, while the ranking Republican member is Hiram W. Johnson of California.

With all the discussion centering around Republican Hamilton Fish of New York, it might be somewhat enlightening to reveal that Representative Fish is the ranking Republican member of the Foreign Relations Committee in the House, and will become chairman in the event the Republicans win out in November and Fish is re-elected. Because of his views on the international situation, Fish, as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee might prove tremendously embarrassing to the Administration's war and post-war programs—that is, in case Mr. Fish is the arch-isolationist he is said to be. In some circles, this fact, coupled with the other fact that Representative Fish would also take over the chairmanship of the powerful Rules Committee of which he is ranking member is believed in some circles to have played a prominent, yet subtle part in the campaign to defeat Representative Fish. The Foreign Relations Committee's present chairman is Sol Bloom of New York, while the Rules Committee is headed by Representative Adolph J. Sabath of Illinois, dean of the House, who was elected to Congress in 1906 and has served continuously ever since. The Rules Committee in the Senate is bossed by Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, with McKellar of Tennessee, the second in command. Michigan's veteran, Arthur H. Vandenberg is the ranking Republican.

Referring to the committee on Territories and Insular Affairs, which he said is becoming increasingly important because of the global nature of the war and post-war world, Mr. White stated, "it is headed by Senator Tydings of Maryland." His second in command is Senator Carl Hayden of Arizona; the ranking Republican member is Senator Gerald P. Nye of North Dakota.

Stifled Anti-lynching Bill

Mr. White made special reference to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee in the House of Representatives where he said anti-lynching bills have been tied up for year. Of Chairman Hatton Sumners of Texas he said, "openly boasted he would never permit even a hearing on any anti-lynching bill as long as he was chairman, and today his committee refuses to report out the anti-poll tax bill."

New York's Emanuel Celler i next up behind Representativ Sumners, and ranking Republican is the Kansan, U. S. Guye who proposed an anti-poll ta bill, only to have it pigeon-hole for good by Sumners and hi crowd in committee. Incidentall an anti-poll tax measure sponsored by Senator Claude Peppe of Florida is now pending in Congress.

"In the light of the control our government by these me who spit upon democracy whenever the Negro is involved," M White said, "is there any wonde that meetings like this ar tragically necessary at a time like this? Or that, irony of ironies we Negroes must fight for the right to fight when the world is threatened with distruction. Bu fight we must, and fight we will And it is a fight which we ca and must win."

Is Hancock a Stooge for Ethridge and Dabney?

AFRO, Seeking Vainly for Eleven Years to Educate Him, Finally Gives Up—Sneers at Lincoln and Roosevelt Will Not Deceive Patriotic Americans

AN EDITORIAL

A reader asks, "Will you please answer Hancock, whose open letter to the AFRO was printed in the July 4 issue."

He expressed fear that Mr. Hancock (the Rev. Gordon Hancock, Richmond, Va., pastor and professor of economics at Va. Union University) is in league with John Temple Graves (Ala.), and Mark Ethridge (Ky.), the segregation boys; Governor Talmadge of Georgia, who approved the arrest and beating of Roland Hayes, and Virginius Dabney of the Richmond Times Dispatch, who says that colored people must remain inferior during the war and after it is over.

These are first-line defenders of white supremacy, and there is little difference between them except that Talmadge is the most vicious of the lot; and Mr. Hancock affords all of t[illegible] a sort of Charlie McCarthy to whom they can point as "my good friend." All of them are on the wrong side in this war. They should be with Hitler.

For eleven years, we have sought to educate Mr. Hancock, and we have had the help of eminent Americans like Dr. Rayford Logan. But we admit today that the job is impossible and that what we said of him in this column October 24, 1931, is equally as true today:

"Like John Jasper, another Richmonder, who claimed the sun moves and the earth is flat, Mr. Hancock's views are outmoded and mossback; for him mist and gloom cover everything."

Scatterbrained Ideas

In the interval since 1931, Mr. Hancock has fathered such scatterbrained ideas as the following:

1931—"Hard trials and tribulations for colored people are just around the corner." (Columbia University speech that earned him the title of "Gloomy.")

1932—"Color prejudice will eventually force colored people out of the cities, and our only hope is to go back to the Southern farms." (The facts are that the cities have proved a salvation to colored workers leaving the prejudiced-ridden rural areas.)

1935—He objected to the Richmond Times Dispatch's carrying a page of colored news on the ground that "this meant the death of the colored press." To that the AFRO answered, "Our press, which knows why it iives and what has given it vitality for over a hundred years, wants no sniveling apostle like Mr. Hancock speaking for it."

1936—Mr. Hancock came out for darker colored men as college presidents. (As if the color mattered.)

1939—Living in Richmond, which has been controlled by Democrats for fifty years, Mr. Hancock registers himself as a "Republican," which means that his ballot is virtually worthless in every city and State election.

1940—Mr. Hancock took Marian Anderson and Dorothy Maynor to task for employing white accompanists. He said this "violated traditions." (The traditions of the defeated Confederacy.)

These quotations bring Mr. Hancock down to date, and the following is what the gloomy Virginian, who calls the stooges of segregation his friends, is saying today:

Modern Hancockisms

While the rest of us fight [illegible] jim crow Red Cross blood bank and leading scientists condemn it as silly and stupid, Mr. Hancock, uninformed, says: "The white man has a perfect right to say whose blood shall go into his veins."

In other words, he defends the race haters who, unable to find any scientific reason to segregate colored blood, segregate it anyhow because it's colored.

MR. HANCOCK—"When Pearl Buck advises colored people to forget their color, she is indulging in pure piffle. . . . That is like advising a hairless dog to keep still at a fleas' convention.

Pearl Buck's advice is sound. The jim-crow South uses every medium to remind us that we are colored, different, and inferior. Miss Buck said we must believe we are the same as anybody else before we can convince the world that we are. "The fight for equality," she said, "begins in your own soul. You will never be bigger than you are."

If that is piffle, then it's piffle only to men with slavish minds.

Sneers at Lincoln

MR. HANCOCK—"Some are saying Roosevelt has an opportunity to be a Lincoln. What did Lincoln do besides sign an Emancipation Proclamation?"

What, indeed, but free the slaves, give them an army uniform, a musket to defend themselves, and throw around them the protection of the U.S. flag?

Mr. Hancock knows what Lincoln did, but the sneer at Honest Abe makes a hit with Southern whites, and Mr. Hancock prides himself that he lectures at white Randolph-Macon, the University of Richmond, and Westhampton College. That sneer goes over big in rebel circles.

The inference that the Southern disunionists are too strong for Roosevelt, and the President of the United States is powerless to protect colored citizens in the South, is also music to the ears of the Dabneys and the Talmadges. It is designed to keep the colored masses from protesting to the White House against jim crow. Mr. Hancock is saying to us, "Roosevelt can't help you."

And who can help the colored Americans solve their problems?

Pessimism About the War

MR. HANCOCK—"This war is not going to settle the colored question nor any question. . . . The one and only hope for colored people is a growing enlightened [white] public opinion."

Every war settles something. This war will. White supremacy in the Far East has suffered a setback. The yellow men have proved themselves equal to other races by force of arms.

We shall go on to defeat Japan and Japanese imperialism, but we shall not be able to inflict our ideas of race supremacy on Asia again, not even on China.

And if we fight for race equality of the Chinese, and freedom for the Russians, shall we fight less for the end of segregation in our own country?

Dr. Charles Thompson, dean of the School of Education at Howard University, was thinking of Mr. Hancock during his Union commencement address when he said: "My final exhortation to you is that you deepen the foundations of your faith."

This is the essence of our condemnation of Mr. Hancock: He has no faith in his own people, no belief in their right to total equality, no hope that we can guide our own destiny.

If we believe in ourselves and in our right to be free, we will be, because it is only then that we shall deserve freedom.

Once we spot the mealy-mouthed, the stooges, and the apostles of gloom and segregation—these Hitler aides among us—they cannot harm real patriots, because, as Joe Louis says, "God fights on our side." If we thought that God could be with Ethridge and Talmadge and Dabney and Hancock, He wouldn't be our God.

THE GREAT FOUR-FLUSH

Eight saboteurs, seven of whom are German citizens, were landed on our shores by a German submarine, and equipped with sufficient implements and explosives to carry out their avowed mission of destroying transportation and industrial establishments.

President Roosevelt ordered a military court martial, as these man were operating in civilian clothes and the Code of War provides that they be treated as spies. Three able lawyers of the Army Staff were assigned to their defense. The trial before the military court was almost concluded when the defense counsels sought to transfer the whole proceedings to our civil courts, by a writ of habeas corpus to the United States Supreme Court.

Despite the requirements of the law that an application for this writ must first be acted upon by the Federal Circuit Court which was not done, this august body, the most powerful court in the world, was convened in the summer for the first time in twenty-two years, to hear this case. These justices were literally called from the four corners of our country, their vacations suspended, in order to accord this unreasonable consideration to the enemies of our country.

Why this unheard of chivalry to our enemies? The white press ascribes various motives for the Supreme Court's action. However, the defendants' chief counsel and most writers said that it was for the purpose of showing the world the impartial justice that a Democracy administers, even to its enemies in time of war.

We do not know how this gesture has impressed the white people of this country, but we do know that it has left the Negroes stunned. The kindest name we have for it is "base pretense." This four-flushing is so transparent that history will record it as the war's greatest comedy; for how can a world that knows of America's lynchings and segregation of Negroes, keep a straight face.

But Negroes are NOT laughing. They do not object to the orderly process of the law being applied to these Germans, but they want to know why this ideal justice can be applied to everyone but them? They want to know why the Government which so scrupulously observed the rules of fair play in dealing with their enemies would be so callous in dealing with their most loyal citizens? They want to know if an administration is strong enough to convene the mighty Supreme Court in the summer, why it could not have enacted into law legislation against lynching and interstate segregation? They want to know whether the toil, tears, and loyalty, and the blood they have shed on every battlefield on which our country has fought, do not entitle them to as much consideration as is given our country's enemies?

Many Voicing Protests At Anti-Negro Trend

Silent Demonstration Planned For Saturday—Speakers to Greet Marchers

On many community and civic fronts, individuals and organizations were voicing public protest this week to what seemed to be an anti-Negro trend which has swept the country in recent weeks.

In the spotlight of resentment were the Odell Waller execution, the mob lynching of Willie Vinson at Texarkana, Tex., and the shooting of a Negro soldier, Private Jesse Smith, by an Arizona posse.

Many Will March

Most important development in the wave of protest was the scheduled silent demonstration slated by the March On Washington Movement, of which A. Philip Randolph is head. This demonstration will take place through Harlem streets on Saturday, July 25, at 2:30 P. M., and promises to be one of the most dramatic projects in recent history.

Featuring the demonstration will be the beat of muffled drums, tight-lipped marchers, men, women and children, wearing black mourning armbands and carrying signs of protest, and also a five-minute silence period throughout the city in Negro areas at 2:30 P. M.

The line of march will form at 56th Street and Eighth Avenue, will proceed south to 14th Street, east on 14th to Union Square, where the paraders will be greeted by music and prominent speakers.

Chairman of plans for the parade is Robert Early.

Others in Protests

Joining the outcry against injustice practiced against Negroes was the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties, 1123 Broadway, New York City. A release from the federation revealed telegrams and letters have been sent to the White House and to Texas' Governor Stevenson, stating:

"We cannot allow Hitler's lawlessness to continue to dominate the Southern poll tax States."

The Fiske University Club of New York City wired the mayor of Rome, Georgia, protesting the beating and jailing of Roland Hayes, celebrated concert artist, in that city. The wire said, in part:

"We resent this flagrant injustice, especially when such actions furnish aid and comfort to the Axis Governments as they point to America's wrongs to her own citizens."

Both the National Conference of Negro Youth and the Manhattan committee of the conference echoed these expressions of resentment.

In the Waller case, the failure of President Roosevelt publicly to urge Governor Darden, of Virginia, to save the life of the sharecropper, recently executed in that State, was assailed by a group of organization leaders led by A. Philip Randolph.

Taking the form of a letter to the nation's Chief Executive, the protest indicted the United States Government for "failing the Negro people."

Those who signed the protest were: A. Philip Randolph, national director of the March On Washington Movement; Frank R. Crosswaith, director, Negro Labor Committee; Anna Arnold Hedgeman, Negro Women, Inc.; Layle Lane, vice president, American Federation of Teachers; the Rev. William Lloyd Imes, pastor, St. James Presbyterian Church; Leon A. Ransom, acting dean, Howard University Law School; Pauli Murray, chairman, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Annual Student Conference, and Albert Hamilton, Workers' Defense League.

THE RACE ISSUE

In turning back and refusing to sign a contract with the federal government for materials made in Alabama until a clause in the contract relating to discrimination against workers because of race or color is deleted from the contract Gov. Frank Dixon seems to have opened a controversy that is raging up and down the state.

The clause in question reads as follows: "The seller, in performing the work required by this contract, shall not discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin."

This paper definitely does not propose to pick a fight with or criticize Gov. Dixon for what he thinks is the right policy in defense of the state of which he is the executive officer. We certainly won't agree with some editorial writers who have accused the governor of suffering from a sincere "obsession" regarding the Negro question. We believe the governor to be sincere and not "obsessed" with any idea of blood and thunder to come. On the other hand, we have found Gov. Dixon to be a man who is not afraid to stand on his "hind" legs and defend his belief on questions of state exactly as he sees them, no matter where the chips may fall.

Our only regret in the matter is that it has been forced out in the open now, when it most certainly should be relegated to the files to be attended to after the war is over. If our enemies are nothing else, they have proven themselves to be highly efficient in the use of propaganda, and they ask no better opportunity than a chance to set race against race while every race, color and creed in the United States must bend every energy toward winning the war if we expect to win.

True enough, a few Negro leaders have expressed views that if made active would bring cause for fear. But by and far we believe that the vast majority of the Negro people and their leaders see cooperation with all races as the means to winning this war, and have so set their sights, leaving their grievances, if [illegible] behind for the duration.—Pell City News.

WHITE SUPREMACY—

According to news releases, a prominent Birmingham attorney wants to organize a league to maintain white supremacy. But there is no such thing in existence as white supremacy. And if there were such a thing as white supremacy, it could not be perpetuated by a league, because supremacy must be based upon inherent superiority and no artificial means can supply that.

In America the white race is the dominant and most potent race, but not because of any divine right or inherent superiority. The white race is numerically larger, and has enjoyed more educational privileges than the black race. It, therefore, is more potent because of these and other similar advantages. It is freely admitted by Negroes that as long as they are numerically stronger and apply themselves to education and culture, they can maintain the advantage that they enjoy.

But obviously it is erroneous to assume that because the whites are in the dominant position they are necessarily inherently superior. Looked at from the standpoint of numbers, culture and the occupancy of the majority of judicial and governmental positions, the whites ought to hold the majority for as long as man can visualize this society going. Negroes are not concerned about these facts of accomplishment or advantage. Negroes are concerned because whites have been too prone to make use of these advantages to take from Negroes the opportunity to work, to acquire property, to get justice in the courts, and to live as free Americans.

This white attorney in Birmingham, who is disturbed about the abolishment of segregation, is not afraid that Negroes want to deprive whites of the right to enjoy their majority in numbers or their present opportunities for culture and living. He is disturbed over an attempt to prevent the whites in the South from prosecuting the laws of segregation to hamstring and suppress Negroes.

He makes the usual plea to race prejudice by pretending that the abolition of oppression would drag the white man down to the Negro's level. No one in his right senses can interpret the fight against the abuses of segregation as an attempt to roll back the [illegible] so that black men may, if they are able, climb to the level of white [illegible]. It is a poor supremacy which must depend upon force for its maintenance. From a democratic or Christian standpoint, the only real supremacy is in culture, Christianity and the other cardinal virtues. These superiorities are not white or black. If the whites are so weak they dare not let Negroes have equal chances with themselves, they are automatically convicted of inferiority rather than supremacy.

WHITE FOLK'S JITTERS—

Last week in Beaumont, a veteran mail-carrier was taken into custody by police, while he had government mail, because a bus driver reported that he stood in the aisle ahead of the screen on a crowded bus. A week before in Beaumont, a soldier was beaten brutally by police, because a bus driver reported that he stood in front of a sign on a crowded bus. A few weeks ago there was a lynching in Texarkana of a Negro suspected of having attempted to assault a white woman, and a number of Negroes were frightened out of the city. From both of these cities word has come that white people were afraid Negroes were about to rebel.

When people are afraid and nervous, they do foolish things. That is true of animals, too. Get a horse frightened and nervous, and he will kick the head off anyone who comes near his stall. Even dogs, the friends of man, sometimes bite their owners when they get afraid and jittery. The solution of the problems in Texarkana and Beaumont calls for an understanding of the underlying reasons.

Though it is hard for Negroes to believe, it is true that for months whites in many towns have been afraid that Negroes were being roused by propagandists and by their leaders to a pitch of revolt. Negro leaders as well as the masses of Negroes know that while Negroes are fighting for justice in the courts and before the public generally, there is not the slightest intent or desire to do harm to their white neighbors. But this does not prevent whites from believing that Negroes are being disturbed and worked on.

The sensible thing would be for leaders of white and Negro groups in cities throughout the South to have open conferences and clear up the question of the Negro's attitude during this trying period. It is another case of "not understanding, and drawing false impressions." It is easy for people who stand on opposite sides of the race question to suspect each other and to grow jittery and afraid. The whites in these cities are taking the foolish course of organizing against a "threatened uprising" and using brutality to defeat and discourage the imagined uprising of Negroes.

Since there is no uprising planned, the solution of the jitteriness of whites is to convince them that they are "seeing things." Some of the problem lies in the fact that demagogues and selfish people are deliberately raising the race question to feather their own nests. In some instances the problem comes from the fact that whites who want to keep on abusing Negroes attempt to side-track the thinking of the majority of people from the real issues, by raising the race question.

Put in a nutshell, the real issue is whether or not the dominant race in the South is willing to face the problems as they are, or intends to persist in trying to stick their heads under the sand and claim eminence of uprisings, which are not present. Negroes will continue to press for the right to vote, the right to work, the right to equal educational opportunities, and the rights of American citizens generally. Brutality will not discourage their fight for these American privileges, but brutality will arouse the enmity and make real the fears which they are laboring under.

"Social equality" is not involved in the fight for the right to work, the right to vote, the right to have school funds equally distributed, and the right to fair and equal trials in the courts. The time has passed when Negroes can be frightened from demanding these rights, by a show of mob violence and brutality. But the better class of Southern white people are not afraid to face these issues, if their leadership has the courage and the intelligence to separate them from the bugaboo of "social equality." Today, the white man in the South is suffering from the jitters, and our leaders might as well face this fact as the chief problem of race relations in this hour of worry and afflictions.

Claptrap for Voters

Senator Bankhead of Alabama must be up for reelection. He breaks into print demanding that Negroes be not sent into southern army camps. His reason is easy to see—it is the typical election bid of the southern politician.

We thought better of Bankhead. For the Talmadges and the Bilbos to seek office though Negro baiting is all that is to be expected of them. But Bankhead, like Underwood, has been credited with having some ability.

If our country was not at war, we would leave to time the correction of this unAmerican practice. Already its appeal shows signs of weakening. Alabama farmers who at first resented the Negro flyers who were being trained at the Tuskegee base, have become tolerant to the point of including them in the goodwill due all defenders of their homes. But we are at war when mistakes carry maximum penalty. We must not let race prejudice invite national disaster.

We regret acts like this of Sen. Bankhead also because they add to the dis favor in which Congress is held. It is not disfavor born of partisanism. We have had Democratic congresses before now, but never one so roundly condemned for sychophantic subservience, and lackadaisical incompetence. It happens that seniorities put control of committees in the hands of the southern members, elected to office not for their abilities but for their hillbilly-ties, like O'Daniel, and for their demogogy like Bankhead.

Men elected by undemocratic methods are a handicap in normal times. They are not to tolerated now. Yet such is the force of habit, that unless an aroused nation demands that southerners stop fighting the Civil war over again, opportunist politicians will keep our chief law-making body low in the public's esteem.

Alabama Leaders Deny Okaying Racial Theory Of Governor Frank Dixon

12, Accused of Signing Telegram, Under Fire in Southern Town; Say They Were Victims in a 'Trick'

GADSDEN, Ala. — (ANP — The local branch of the NAACP announced this week that its investigating committee had reported a telegram allegedly sent to Gov. Frank M. Dixon Saturday, July 25, endorsing his racial views expressed in a letter to the Defense Supplies corporation rejecting a war contract because it contained a non-discrimination clause was not signed nor sent by any one of the 12 Negro leaders accused.

The telegram read in part: "Our past and present relations with our white people are satisfactory and we do not want any strife to mar our pleasant relationships."

Those accused of having sent the telegram are Revs. Joel C. Carson, W. J. Colvin, both Methodists, and the Revs. R. B. Martin, W. M. Mallory, E. M. Wilson, and S. N. Reid, all Baptists. Other alleged signators were Drs. E. F. Barnes, J. B. Towns, L. M. Donal, and Mack Cummins, G. L. Kent and Thomas H. Rhines.

After making its investigation ithe NAACP committee found that the local chamber of commerce originated the telegram along with one of its own and sent both to the governor at the chamber's expense.

Rev. Wilson is charged with having telephoned the leaders involved from the chamber office, and when each one answered turned the telephone over to the chamber secretary to do the talking.

The secretary is said to have asked the leaders to endorse a statement to Gov. Dixon in an effort to avert a race riot he said was imminent. When some of the men expressed reluctance to approve the telegram the secretary, it is charged, threatened them with "plenty of trouble."

According to the committee, the telegram the 12 leaders endorsed was never sent Gov. Dixon, but another statement substiuted by the sceretary was sent in its stead. The wire was sent at chamber of commerce expense.

The Rev. Wilson, pastor of Friendship Baptist here, described as the oldest Negro church in the city, was reported to hold a state appointment from Gov. Dixon and is presently engaged in trying to secure an army commission as chaplain.

One of the ministers interviewed here said he was "tricked" into endorsing the wire. He denied knowledge of the governor's "race theory statement" at the time the telegram was sent.

Another person forced to give consent to the telegram said he did so only after coercion. "If I hadn't, Rev. Wilson would have gone back and said something that would have hurt my business."

Members of Rev. Wilson's church are reported to be disgusted with their pastor whom they regard as working against their interests. They claim the minister has been attempting to have their wages lowered, "and just after we have given him a raise."

Gasden citizens are planning a mass meeting to discuss action against the 12 leaders.

DIXON'S NEGRO 'OKAY' PROVES TO BE A MYTH

Probe Reveals That All Signers Were Tricked By One Minister

See Text of Dixon Letter, Page 6

GADSEN, Ala.—Gov. Frank M. Dixon's Negro support evaporated this week after the local branch N.A.A.C.P. investigating committee found that a telegram sent to Dixon July 25, allegedly by 12 colored leaders endorsing his racial views. was not signed by at least 11 of the so- called signers.

Only Negro believed to have known of the telegram's contents before its dispatch is Rev. E. M. Wilson, pastor of Friendship Baptist church.

The telegram read in part: "Our past and present relations with our white people are satisfactory and we do not want any strife to mar our pleasant relationships."

Those accused of having sent the telegram are the Revs. Joel C. Carson, W. T. Colvin, both Methodists, and the Revs. R. B. Martin, W. M. Mallory, E. M. Wilson, and S. N. Reid, all Batists.

Other alleged signators were Drs. E. F. Barnes, J. B. Towns, L. M. Donal, and Mack Cummins, G. L. Kent and Thomas H. Rhines, businessmen.

Governor Dixon said recently in a letter to Ralph R. Williams, New York agent for the Defense Supplies corporation that he would refuse to accept a war contract that contained a non-discriminatory clause on the ground that "federal agencies are attempting to force social equality upon the South." The telegram in question was designed to support that view.

After making its investigation the N.A.A.C.P. committee reported that the local chamber of commerce originated the telegram along with one of its own and sent both the the governor at the chamber's expense.

Reverend Wilson is charged with having telephoned the leaders involved from the chamber office, and when each one answered turned the telephone over to the chamber secretary to do the talking.

The secretary is said to have then asked the leaders to endorse a statement to Governor Dixon in an effort to avert a race riot he said was imminent. When some of the men expressed reluctance to approve the telegram the secretary, it is charged, threatened them with "plenty of trouble."

According to the N.A.A.C.P. investigators the telegram the 12 leaders endorsed was never sent the governor, but another sent in its stead. The chamber sent the following message to the state's chief executive:

"Every citizen who appreciates the high value of maintaining peaceful relations between all elements of our citizenship will applaud your fearless stand against the introduction here of conditions that would create friction, impede the war effort and serve no useful purpose.

"This is a time for war against foreign enemies, not for war against Southern civilization, and your clear understanding of this fact and your determination to prevent that which it is sought to accomplish, is in harmony with the best traditions of Southern statesmanship."

Reverend Wilson is rumored to hold a state position but is very mysterious about it. He, however, is very friendly with the whites of the town and claims to have unlimited authority. It is reported the minister is presently prevailing upon his white friends to arrange an army commission as chaplain for him.

Responsible citizens of the community have repudiated the "leadership" of Reverend Wilson whom they charge with constantly causing disturbances.

"The colored people of this city do not consider Reverend Wilson a leader but an 'Uncle Tom' of the most dangerous type. He is definitely not representative of the Negro group in Gadsen," said a spokesman for local progressive elements.

One of the ministers interviewed here said he was "tricked" into endorsing the wire. He denied knowledge of the governor's "race theory statement" at the time the telegram was sent.

Another person forced to give consent to the telegram said he did so only after coercion. "If I hadn't, Reverend Wilson would have gone back and said something that would have hurt me in my business."

Arnall Pledges Aid to Scotch 'Racial Issues'

Favors Appeal to Purge Campaign of 'Fake' Race Question.

AUGUSTA, Ga., Aug. 13.—(AP) Attorney General Ellis Arnall replied today to the Augusta Herald that the "fake" race issue in the gubernatorial campaign was promoted by his opponent, Governor Eugene Talmadge, and he would do his "best to eliminate" it.

The Herald, which telegraphed Arnall and Talmadge yesterday, asking them to purge the racial issue from the campaign, today telegraphed every daily newspaper in Georgia requesting they join with it in eliminating matter designed to appeal to race prejudice from political news reports.

Arnall wired Milwee Owens, editor of the Herald, that "at this time when our nation is fighting for its very existence, when our own flesh and blood are dying for the preservation of our democratic concept of life and government, it is little short of treason for any professional demagogue to undertake to destroy our national unity, our national loyalty and our national determination in an effort to save himself politically."

"Doctrine of Hypocrite."

At the beginning of his telegram, Arnall said "on July 4, 1940, in his opening address, my opponent said:

"'Any doctrine that preaches class hatred in Georgia is a sin of the deepest dye. Any doctrine that preaches prejudice is merely the doctrine of a hypocrite who is trying to hide under a shadow for the purpose of stealing. No religious or racial prejudice has any place in a Christian heart.'"

Arnall said "I subscribe to this attitude."

He declared "My opponent promoted the 'fake' race issue" in the present campaign.

"The constitution of Georgia written by our illustrious forefathers guarantees separate schools for the white and black races," he said.

Appeal Is Praised.

Arnall pledged "I will do my best to eliminate the false issue from the campaign for governor, the outcome of which is so vitally important to the future welfare of Georgia."

Editor Owens, of the Herald, received a telegram from Mayor Roland R. Jones, of Savannah Beach, saying the appeal to newspapers was "the most outstanding effort initiated in the state during the past decade."

Jones said "we have enough racial problems generated by present conditions without any undue agitation."

In his telegram to the papers, Owens said, "We are wondering if as a publisher devoted to Georgia's interest you will join with us in this declaration of policy.

"Situation has reached point where people who have no vote in and no determination in choice of next state and local officers are being made scapegoats in manner strongly reminiscent of prelude to Nazi rise to power in Germany."

Bishop Prexy Hits Dean Hancock's Views On Race

Says Philosophy Is Dangerous To American Scene

MARSHALL, Texas.—(ANP)— Dr. Joseph J. Rhoads, president of Bishop college, took issue this week with Dean Gordon B. Hancock of Virginia Union university on his views for "constructive cooperative planning in race relations" in a letter addressed to Dr. R. B. Eleazer, educational director of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation.

Dean Hancock's article, "Interracial Hypertension" circulated by the Associated Negro Press and reprinted by the commission, was offered to Dr. Rhoads for distribution among students and friends if he found it to have "timeliness and value."

The essay suggested a policy of appeasement by Negroes in their relationships with whites if they hoped to "destroy race prejudice root and branch" and maintain "many important gains in race relations that have been won through many years, through sweat and tears."

Admitting he considered Dean Hancock's article "scientifically sound and socially constructive in emphasizing the vital importance of balance unbiased judgments involving relations", Dr. Rhoads urged weighing of words and decisions against all available pertinent facts in our greatly confused social scene.

URGES WITHDRAWAL OF ARTICLE

Dr Rhoads urged withdrawal of the article from circulation unless the author consented to elimination of two objectionable paragraphs. He said he felt the philosophy they advocated did a serious injustice to the Negro. He characterized the climax of Dean Hancock's discussion which told of a hypothetical labor incident at Detroit "both superfluous and impertinent."

On general principle, the application is calculated to hamper the industrial and social processes of an allied victory and a just and lasting peace," said Dr. Rhoads.

The incident referred to concerned a Negro worker who had answered a "hurry call" to perform a highly expert job on an assembly line. Several whites also applied for the job and when told a Negro had been hired sat down in protest. Dean Hancock's account stated:

"When the Negro arrived and found the men sitting, he asked 'Why are these men sitting down instead of working on this hurry job?'

The foreman replied, 'They do not want to work with you and are sitting down in protest against you.'

NO TIME TO SIT DOWN

'Well,' said the Negro, 'I'll be going, for this is no time to be sitting down in the face of our national emergency. The completion of the job is more important than my personal feelings.'

"When the Negro had gone but a little way he heard someone calling to him to return. The foreman said, 'These men say your heart is right and they don't mind working with you', and so the Negro went on the job and everybody was satisfied.

The dean pointed out that while the action might not be popular it was powerful enough to advance the Negro's cause, as is evidenced by a growing willingness in the south to admit him to full citizenship.

"Strangely enough, the Negro's business and educational capitols are in the south, at Durham and Atlanta respectively", he added, "and what is more, the south is becoming more and more a haven for the educated Negro from the north, for here as nowhere else can he find a field for his moral and intellectual energies."

MIDWEST WAR CONFERENCE OUTLINES TERMS FOR FULLER PARTICIPATION OF THE NEGRO

A. Philip Randolph, speaking here Saturday at the Midwest conference on the "Negro and the War," sponsored by the Chicago Civil Liberties committee, against stressed determination to lead his followers in a "March on Washington" unless discrimination against the Negro ceases.

Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, spoke at the luncheon meeting of the all-day conference held in the Sherman hotel.

Can Not Accept Old Philosophy

Ald. Earl B. Dickerson, a member of the Committee on Fair Employment Practices, and one of the sponsors of the conference, said:

"We cannot accept the 'don't rock the boat' philosophy. In our battle against racial discrimination and token employment, we must be courageous and unrelenting. The Negro's record has earned him the right to democracy and equality and equal participation in the nation's activities."

The Rev. Archibald J. Carey, Jr., pastor of the Woodlawn Methodist Episcopal church, also a sponsor of the conference, summed up the present situation in which the Negro American finds himself in relation to the country as a whole by saying:

Must Have Equal Opportunity

"A house divided against itself cannot stand, and until the Negro is given equal opportunity the war effort will be impeded. There are 13,000,000 Negroes in the United States, with an annual income of $2,000.000 000, and this vast manpower and income is being withheld from the nation's war effort because Negroes are resentful of discrimination against them in the armed forces and in other areas, including those under direct control of the national government."

Turner Catledge, acting director of the Chicago Sun, spoke in Agar's stead. Statistics gathered by competent authorities concerning industrial discrimination against Negroes are overwhelming in their impact, Catledge declared.

"They cast before us a shameful picture of what is happening in company after company," he continued. "They demonstrate that millions of able, Negro Americans are being deprived of their share in saving their country."

Panel Discussion

Panel discussions occupied the conference before and following the luncheon. Leaders of several of these groups were Horace Cayton, authority on labor matters and Miss Olive M. Diggs, editor of The Chicago Bee, who stated:

"The American Negroes want to help in the war efforts. They want to fight in the war. They want to work in the factories and defense industries. They want to build ships, guns and planes. If they are hampered in their desire to so aid, whether by the government directly or indirectly or whether by employers who hold government contracts, obviously there comes from them a resentment that comes when one is refused by reason of race, that which is given others."

"But we must understand," she continued, "that in propagandizing our cause we are not to rely upon words alone. Words are potent and have their proper place, but also important and effective are deeds. The Negro can, by deeds, bolster his own defenses; and this sort of propaganda is often more effective than mere words."

Miss Diggs further stated: "Those agencies and individuals who are interested in propagandizing the Negro's cause see the imperative necessity to make democracy work here and now lest Axis nations do a better job of propagandizing totalitarian ideologies by pointing to our democracy as a vacuum which is filled with air; as a document of meaningless words and beautiful phrases; and as an empty promise from one who is full of sound and fury signifying nothing."

Other speakers on the panel discussions were Lucius Harper of the Chicago Defender; A. N. Fields, Pittsburgh Courier; Curtis MacDougal, Chicago Sun; Rabbi Jacob J. Weinstein, K.A.M. Temple; Miss Thyra Edwards, National Negro Congress; Dr. James M. Yard, National Conference of Christian and Jews; Howard Mayer, Public Relations Counsil;

Benjamin A. Grant, alderman of the 3rd ward; Atty. U. S. Keys; Oscar Brown, N.A.A.C.P.; Judge John J. Gutknecht; Dr. Spencer C. Dickerson; Rev. James Luther Adams, Meadville Theological Eeminary; Herbert March, vice-president of the Chicago C.I.O. Council; Edward L. Doty, American Consolidated Trades Council; Horace Cayton, Good Shepherd Community Center, and A. L. Foster, Chicago Urban League.

March advanced the idea that the Negro can best solve his problems through the labor movement. Cayton declared that the Negro needs an organization of his own to fight for fair and equal treatment.

Ira Latimer, executive secretary of the Civil Liberties committe, said the conference wished to present before the country four demands as a condition to whole-hearted participation in the war by the Negro: the right to equality in the armed forces in assignments and promotions; the right to get and hold a job in war industries; the right to participate in the government processes through the ballots; the right to participation in world democracy.

Enemies At Home

Revelation by the FBI of subversive elements at work among Negroes make it necessary to scotch the sly lies—some spoken openly, others whispered—now being used in Georgia to exploit the issue of "race," and to incite trouble between the white and Negro races.

Wittingly or unwittingly, Governor Eugene Talmadge is doing as much as any Georgian to stir up racial trouble. If Hitler knew about it, maybe he would give Talmadge an iron cross as Useful Propagandist No. 1.

Talmadge is telling the people of Georgia that unless he is reelected racial segregation will be a thing of the past. He is saying that Negroes will sit side-by-side with whites in State universities, and that "social equality"—whatever that is supposed to mean—will be literally achieved.

Talmadge knows that both these statements are lies.

SCK

Social equality for Negroes is not an issue in Georgia. And—except for cold-blooded agitators such as Eugene Talmadge—there is no threat of its becoming an issue.

Racial segregation isn't an issue. It is the rule of this section; it will continue to be the rule. Sane Negroes do not want a change. Sane whites would not tolerate a change.

It makes little difference whether the Georgia Constitution is clear on the point, because tested custom would in any event take precedence over the cold letter of the law. Southern whites and Southern Negroes will continue to live as they have always lived, which means peacefulness, and friendliness, and segregation.

There is nothing unnatural about segregation; it is, indeed, a basic rule of nature, which is why it has become the immemorial custom of mankind. It is the self-respecting way for whites to live, and the self-respecting way for Negroes to live. Only renegades ever violate the barrier of race, and only demagogues ever exploit that barrier.

If southern Negroes want to know what is their stake in the war, it is simply this:

In the South they can live free and useful lives, although segregated.

Under the Axis, they would be neither free nor useful to themselves or anyone else. They would swap the dignified "segregation" of the South for the unspeakable indignities of the ghetto and the concentration camp.

Their stake in the war, in short, is the white man's stake: The survival of freedom on earth. Future economic progress—and the Negro has made extraordinary economic progress in the South despite the lies of our enemies—will have to await the winning of the war, and it must come naturally or not at all.

We wish to make one further point predicated upon the assertion of Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama that the Federal Government is attempting to use stresses of the war to "break down the principle of segregation in the South."

Governor Dixon's complaint is directed at Mr. Roosevelt's executive order No. 8802, which fixed it as the policy of the Federal government that there was not to be—very especially on war contracts—"discrimination against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin."

Let's look, first, at the background of this order. It came on June 25, 1941, a few days before thousands of Negroes—most of them from the North and East—were scheduled to make a protest march on Washington because Negro manpower was not being called upon to play its full part in the war effort, both in a military sense and in an industrial sense.

Order No. 8802 had the effect of averting this march, which would certainly have been an inflammatory episode.

It is important, also, to bear in mind that Order No. 8802 carried no earthly implication of "social equality." Its sole purpose was to use Negro manpower in the war effort in spots where Negro manpower would be useful.

We do not agree with all of the ideas of Mr. Mark Ethridge, a member of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices, but we believe that Mr. Ethridge summed up No. 8802 perfectly in his recent speech in Birmingham:

"The President was not endeavoring to write a social document; he was writing, as the language of the order plainly shows, a document designed to secure the fullest use of the manpower available to us, regardless of race, creed, color or national origin . . . I believe it is perfectly apparent that Executive Order No. 8802 is a war order, and not a social document."

This—from a man charged with part of the responsibility for administering No. 8802—is a clear statement of purpose which the South may very well consider binding.

Gadsden NAACP Says Wire Had Not Been Signed

Coercion Charge Laid To Chamber Of Commerce Sec'y

AUG 2 1942

GADSDEN, Ala.—(ANP)— The local branch of the NAACP announced this week that its investigating committee had reported a telegram allegedly sent to Gov. Dixon Saturday, July 25, endorsing his racial views expressed in a letter to the Defense Supplies corporation rejecting a war contract because it contained a non-discrimination clause, was not signed nor sent by any one of the 12 Negro leaders accused.

The telegram read in part: "Our past and present relations with our whit e people are satisfactory and we do not want any strife to mar our pleasant relationships."

Those accused of having sent the telegram are Revs. Joe C. Carson. W. J. Colvin, both Methodists, and the Revs. R. B. Martin, W. M Mallory, E. M. Wilson, and S. N Reid, all Baptists. Other alleged signatures were Drs. E. F. Barnes, J. B. Towns, C. L. M. Donal, and Mack Cummins, G. L. Kent and Thomas H. Rhines.

CHAMBER SENT WIRE

After making its investigation the NAACP committee found that the local chamber of commerce originated the telegram along with one of its own and sent both to the governor at the chamber's expense.

Rev. Wilson is charged with having telephoned the leaders involved from the chamber office, and when each one answered turned the telephone over to the chamber secretary to do the talking.

The secretary is said to have then asked the leaders to endorse a statement to Gov. Dixon in an effort to avert a race riot he said was imminent. When some of the men expressed reluctance to approve the telegram the secretary, it is charged, threatened them with "plenty of trouble."

According to the committee, the telegram the 12 leaders endorsed was never sent Gov. Dixon, but another statement substituted by the secretary was sent in its stead. The wire was sent at chamber of commerce expense.

WORKS FOR STATE

The Reverend Wilson, pastor of Friendship Baptist Church here, described as the oldest Negro

their pastor whom they regard as working against their interests. They claim the minister has been attempting to have their wages lowered, "and just after we have given him a raise."

Gasden citizens are planning a mass meeting to discuss action against the 12 leaders.

ONE OF 13 MILLIONS

My dear Lieut. DeBow,

"Hello! I read your article, 'I Got Wings' in the AMERICAN. I'm one of the thirteen million you are flying for. I am writing to try to express my appreciation to you for what you and the officers and cadets at Tuskegee are doing for Uncle Sam and the betterment of the Negro race."

Sincerely yours,
MISS S. M. J.

Letters of praise and admiration were received from enlisted men, officers, skilled workmen and people from nearly every walk of life hoping that the Tuskegee Army Flying School will be able to do its share in helping to bring peace, freedom and ultimate victory to the allied democratic countries of the world.

UNIVERSITY STUDENTS ENDORSE POLICIES AND CANDIDACY OF ARNALL

ATHENS, Ga., July 20.—Another faction on the University of Georgia campus was added to the Ellis Arnall roles when Demosthenian Literary Society passed a resolution introduced by Robert Joiner, of Glenwood, "endorsing the policies and candidacy of Ellis Arnall for the governor of Georgia," Wednesday night.

"There is only one way in which we can hope to re-gain our accredited rating—that is to rid this state of Eugene Talmadge. To re-elect him to the governor's chair would create one of the greatest catastrophies in the history of this state," Joiner said as he introduced the resolution.

"Hell-Bent" Edwards, Jr., surprised the entire society with his effortless resistance but declared that "students will still be admitted to Harvard and Yale after the University has been dropped from the accredited list."

Edwards continued, "If the University students want to get the University back on the accredited list, they better go out into the counties in the state and elect representatives who will support Arnall." At this point Joiner asked "Then you yourself advocate an Arnall victory this September?" "Hell-Bent" was baff d and speechless.

Georgia Editors Say:

OLE GENE IS ON THE SKIDS

(From The Post-Searchlight.)

It is becoming more and more evident, as the gubernatorial campaign progresses, that old Gene Talmadge, the present dictatorial, red-gallused Governor of the sovereign state of Georgia, is on the skids. He is continually slipping, and by September 9, at which time he is going to make an effort to succeed himself at this post, he will be beyond helping.

Talmadge is running with only one plank in his platform, that being the racial question, which has backfired on him something terrible. This issue was to re-elect him this time, but thank goodness the people of this state know that the constitution of this state forbids the white and colored children to go to school together, and the only way that this can be accomplished is to amend the constitution to this effect, which will never happen in the state of Georgia.

Talmadge's machine is breaking up, as evidenced by the large number of his friends deserting him. They know that he has made Georgia the laughing stock of the nation by his dictatorial policies, and they are ready to see Georgia placed where she belongs with a clean-cut Democratic governor. This man is Ellis Arnall, popular young attorney general of the state.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

A POLITICAL SAMPLE. Since December 7, most persons have forgotten that the Selective Service act was adopted in times of peace and at a time when there still was some slight hope we might escape the war.

It came at a time when we were engaged merely in lend-lease.

It involved the taking away of young men from their jobs. Many of them had just got started and had had promotions.

It often was a severe dislocation.

The National Selective Service headquarters asked that all draft boards try to do something out of the ordinary for the first group to leave from each community. National headquarters asked that, since Hitler had tried, and was trying, without success, to make the Negro feel he was mistreated in this country, that the boards have, if possible, a supper for them. This was asked of all boards. Hundreds of them complied.

I give this background before coming to something sordid and mean which is going on in Georgia in connection with this political campaign.

In Athens, in Clarke county, the draft board had a ceremony in connection with the departure of their first groups.

A supper was given the Negro boys who had been drafted to go into the Army. The Negro friends and relatives of the new soldiers waited on the table and stood in the background for the speeches. Only the new soldiers sat down.

The members of the draft board, all white, attended together with two men from the state headquarters, both of whom were in uniform. They sat together at one side of the long table and were not mixed with the Negroes.

Bob McWhorter, the famous old Georgia football star whom thousands know and love, as dean of the law school and as mayor of Athens, was present. Another member of the board, also a member of the law department, was present. Dan Magill, clerk of the board, was present.

It was a patriotic meeting at which patriotic speeches were made.

NEXT CHAPTER. National headquarters had requested, and their letter requesting it is on file, that all boards make photographs of these patriotic ceremonies for the first men to go into the Army, and send them to national headquarters.

Now, what has happened is this—

Certain persons obtained the negative of this selective service board gathering, authorized by national headquarters as a patriotic support of the new law, and are using it in this campaign. They do not identify it as a selective service ceremony.

They are distributing copies of it saying it is typical of the mixing of the races in Georgia and that it is proof of their contemptible claim that such an effort is being made.

They claim, falsely, that one of the ousted faculty men was present but withdrew from the picture.

In some places they attempt to identify Dan Magill as the writer of this column. I suppose they do so because this column opposes them. The writer was not present. Dan Magill was present, properly so, in his capacity as clerk of the board. He is a splendid man and a Southerner. And much thinner and handsomer than I.

Bob McWhorter, the mayor, faculty man and old football star, was present as mayor and because he thought it a decent thing to do to give those colored boys a pat on the back and a send-off to the Army. So were present other members of the board.

The two officers from the State Selective Service headquarters in Atlanta were present in uniform. And properly so.

It seemed to me the use of this picture in such a fashion is a low and contemptible thing and deserves being exposed.

AS A SOUTHERNER. I know that German and Japanese agents are spending money trying to create a Negro problem.

I know that some few people, well-meaning but uninformed, or misinformed, by deliberate falsehoods, have been made afraid.

As one born, reared and educated in the South, and as one who loves the South, I would like to call attention to the editorial in the first column on this page.

It contains a statement by Bishop Ainsworth, the beloved Methodist bishop of Georgia, who a short time before his death warned of the fictitious and vicious effort to say there was an effort at racial co-education in the South.

Bishop Ainsworth further said, in denouncing the falsehood and in hoping no politician would raise the issue:

"There are multiplied thousands of fair-minded citizens who want the Negro to have improved provision for his educational needs, both for his own and the general good, but they do not think it best to mix the races in seeking those ends."

That is true. I not only do not believe in any mixing of the races but I do not know any person who does. Certainly no white man wants it. Certainly the southern Negro leaders do not want it. It is not an issue.

Bishop Ainsworth said: "If a political campaign is raised in Georgia over these issues, as fictitious and baseless as was the original alarm about the mixing of the races in our educational system, the passions of many people will become inflamed and racial relations disturbed and embittered. . . . No lover of Georgia wants to see any of these disasters come to our state."

I, for one, will go along with the thoughts of this man of God, who lived by prayer and faith, and not with Eugene Talmadge's falsehood.

Negroes In The South

It is indeed commendable that the State of Georgia can include herself in a section of this country that can generate a feeling of dignity and loyalty in its colored population to the extent that the males of the race enlist in the Army rather than wait to be inducted. But is this the whole truth?

The Southern colored man has eagerly joined the Army, first, because of his unquestionable loyalty to his country, and second, to escape from the continuous injustices heaped upon him in the South, not because he has been "made" loyal by the South and its practices of segregation and exploitation. In the Army, this man recognizes the fact that many opportunities will be available to him that were not offered him in the South, and that his efforts, great or small, will be valued and appreciated along with those of men of other races.

If the South could honestly commend itself on the manner in which it has generated loyalty among its colored men, then it might well stand as a shining example for the rest of the country. This, unfortunately, the South is unable to do, for it has in no way forcibly inspired colored soldiers to this country.

Let no one believe that the Southern colored soldier is fighting to preserve that way of life which holds him down, kicks him while he is down, and then sends him on to fight when a national emergency arises. Front seats in the streetcar are little enough in themselves, but restriction and segregation from security and equality of opportunity are to be fought against, no matter in what form they appear. The South would do well to put its whole might into this war, instead of attempting to fight our enemies with one hand while holding down the colored man with the other.

Dixon's Race Stand Wins Commendation

Gov. Frank Dixon's broadside of Thursday, in which he charged that Federal agencies were seeking to break down racial segregation in the South, evoked expressions of approval and applause from many sources Friday.

Gov. Dixon was away from his office, having gone to inspect the State Guard encampment on Dauphin Island. Secretary Roland Mushat said Friday afternoon that some 25 to 30 telegrams and long-distance phone calls endorsing the Governor's forthright declaration had been received, and also several personal calls of like nature.

Expressions were not confined to Alabama, one telegram voicing strong approval being received from a resident of Louisiana, another from South Carolina.

Talmadge Says He And Alabamian Termed Champions Of Whites

THOMASTON, GA., Aug. 8.—(U.P.)—Gov. Eugene Talmadge today cited the fall of France as a reason why he should be reelected, and scolded the Ladies Home Journal for "preaching racial equality to housewives all over the country."

"We're engaged in a terrible war," Talmadge said, "you all saw the great collapse of France—that was caused by amalgamation of the races."

Talmadge said four principles were dear to the American people—"white supremacy, state's rights, Jeffersonian democracy and old time religion."

Talmadge declared his action in ousting from the Georgia University System professors who allegedly advocated racial co-education, had "knocked back" the progress of racial equality doctrines.

"I've knocked them back 25 years. And if it raises its dragon head again then, some young boy of today will arise and thrust it down again," he said.

Talmadge praised the actions of a group of men who invaded a Columbus, Ga., drug store and led out a group of negro waitresses, who had been hired to replace whites, and warned the management to keep the white girls.

Talmadge said the blacklisting of the Georgia University System by the Southern Association of Secondary Schools and Colleges was "nothing but a bluff," and predicted the "credits will come a-running back when I'm reelected."

"The negro papers in the North are saying Gov. Talmadge, of Georgia, and Gov. Dixon, of Alabama, are the last champions of white supremacy," he said. "I accept the honor."

PATERNALISM IN RACE RELATIONS IS OUTMODED

By Virginius Dabney

An interracial situation is shaping up in the South which has many potentialities for evil. Those potentialities exist with respect to the period immediately ahead, but they probably will be even more acute in the postwar years. While the problem has many facets, the one with which we shall concern ourselves here is the matter of paternalism.

Paternalism is not only an outward attitude but an inner habit of mind. It conditions the interracial thinking of millions of white Southerners, and determines whether they are willing to regard the Negro as a member of society who is able to stand on his own feet and to work out his own destitny, with the aid of fairness and justice from the whites, or whether they will insist upon keeping him forever in a position of dependence.

It is unfortunately true that a large percentage of Southern whites are unable to think of the blacks as anything but ''niggers,'' nor can they conceive of any reason for adopting a more open-minded attitude. They seem to ignore completely the fact that the South can never be more than second-rate if nearly one-third of its population is forced to live in squalor, disease, illiteracy and crime. Actually, the Negro's position is constantly being improved, over the protest of these very whites, so that the diatribes of certain Northern zealots on the subject are unjustified. But there is, nevertheless, an excessively large body of white Southern opinion which insists upon maintaining the paternalistic point of view, and in charging anybody who tries to argue against it with desiring ''social equality.''

Actually ''social equality'' has no relationship to the matter under discussion. We are concerned here with the need for cultivating an attitude of mind toward the Negro which will enable him to realize his potentialities as a farmer, an industrial worker, a professional man or a business man—in short, as a citizen. We are seeking to counteract the paternalistic philosophy which holds that the Negro is always happier, always better off, always better cared for when his ''white folks'' are supervising him, guiding him and controlling him.

There is, for example, the attitude of many Southern planters that the natural state of the rural Negro is that of a sharecropper or tenant. He isn't really happy with the responsibility which goes with ownership—so the argument runs. This point of view has often been expressed by the white Southern landlords who dislike the Farm Security Administration, because of its prime concern with the small farmers, both white and black.

Paternalists Are Often Good Citizens

Those who hold this attitude toward the Negro [illegible] often honorable and respected citizens. They believe conscienciously that the Negro is a child, and that he should be treated as a child. The late William Alexander Percy expressed the viewpoint as well as it can be expressed in his LANTERNS ON THE LEVEE. Mr. Percy had a genuine affection for the Negroes on his plantation, and an authentic solicitude for what he conceived to be their well-being. But he was a paternalist of the paternalists.

However, many other paternalists are less high-minded than Mr. Percy. They feel that educating ''niggers'' is nonsense, that it simply puts highfalutin notions into their heads, and that the effort to create opportunties for them is wholly pernicious. Some of them even feel that a lynching or two, on occasion, is not a bad thing—in fact, is just what is needed to ''keep the niggers in their place.''

Head-on Clash Is Possible

This is a point of view which is dangerous during the period of tension through which we are passing. Given an excessively militant group of Northern Negroes and an excessively bellicose group of white Southern Negrophobes, the possibilities for a head-on clash are enough to make one shudder. Yet that is just the direction in which we are tending. On the one hand, we have the Southern paternalist—sometimes benevolent and kindly, sometimes viciously brutal—with his ingrained prejudice against granting the Negro the right to hold skilled jobs in war industries, to serve in the armed forces, or to rise independently in business or the professions. On the other, we have the Northern Negro extremist who demands an overnight revolution in race relations throughout the United States. Somehow, both groups must be made to see the vast degree of harm they are capable of doing in the tense atmosphere of wartime, as well as in the perhaps chaotic period which will follow the close of hostilities.

SOUTHERN CIO HITS AT DIXON 'RACE QUESTION

Says Racial Politics Plays With Lives Of American Boys

BESSEMER, Ala., Aug. 1—(AP)—Southern CIO leaders informed President Roosevelt by letter tonight that "we denounce the open defiance of your executive order 8802 by the governor of Alabama as dangerous to the national security in this highly critical time."

"We further condemn without qualification," the letter continued, "the bigoted appeal to race prejudice made by Horace Wilkinson in his address before the Bessemer Kiwanis in which he called for the organization of a southern movement for open resistance to the fair employment practice committee and to other measures which your administration has adopted for winning the war."

The letter to the president was released by the southern office of the CIO International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, an organization composed largely of iron ore miners, following a district conference.

Reid Robinson, international president of the UMMSW and national vice president of the CIO, told a mass meeting which closed the conference, that:

"Those who stir racial hatred are playing politics with the lives of American boys."

Also speaking at the session was Noel Beddow, Birmingham southern regional director for the CIO and southern director for the CIO United Steel Workers of America, who urged the mixed audience:

"Don't let anyone divide you. Tonight men are trying to drive a wedge between the white man and the black man in the south, and they are working for the forces of Adolf Hitler."

Gov. Frank M. Dixon of Alabama, recently accused the president's committee on fair labor practice and the U. S. employment service of taking steps to "break down the principle of segregation." He also criticized the president's executive order 8802, which requires holders of war contracts to refrain from discriminating against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin.

Wilkinson, long prominent in legal and political circles of Alabama, proposed nation-wide organization of a league to maintain white supremacy.

Is Talmadge Hatching Something In Georgia?

Gov. EUGENE TALMADGE of Georgia, who is running for renomination on a viciously irresponsible and false "race issue," has had one of his minions, commander of the State guard, issue a warning about the danger of "outbreaks of violence" as a result of alleged incitement of Negroes by "white agents and colored agents who seem to be active throughout the State." White women are advised "to take no chances whatsoever and to be especially careful when they are alone." The Negroes are declared to be terribly contentious.

Mr. TALMADGE's opponent, Attorney General ELLIS ARNALL, who should know conditions in Georgia as well as anybody, denounces all this as "pure politics." Is the Governor setting the stage for some "incident" that will bear out his loud alarms, buttress his disgraceful campaign, inflame his State? Could any man prize one political office so greedily as to choose a method so cruel, so reckless, so opposed to national unity in a life-and-death war, in order to keep that office?

There is nothing in the TALMADGE record that makes the answers to these questions necessarily "no."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL.

"BY HIS OWN WORDS" When he opened his last campaign, at Albany, Ga., Governor Eugene Talmadge raised his hand solemnly and said:

"Any doctrine that preaches class hatred in Georgia is a sin of the deepest dye. Any doctrine that preaches prejudice is merely the doctrine of a hypocrite who is trying to hide under a shadow for the purpose of stealing.

"No religious or racial prejudice has any place in a Christian heart."

He said that publicly and he published it in his newspaper. It was published on July 2, two days ahead of the speech on July 4, and copies were distributed at Albany. These paragraphs may be found on page three, being part of the speech continued from page one.

Once again I am gratified to find the Governor in complete agreement with me . . . and with the thousands in Georgia who have been saying that no racial or religious prejudice has any place in a Christian heart.

It is gratifying, too, that he himself believes that any doctrine that preaches prejudice is merely the doctrine of a hypocrite who is trying to "hide under a shadow for the purpose of stealing."

Those are the Governor's words.

They are the words of the man who now sets up a cry that there is, and has been, an effort at racial coeducation; that white supremacy is at stake; that the racial issue is the chief one in this race.

Let's see. What did he say about a man who would preach that sort of thing?

He said that "preaching class prejudice was a sin of the deepest dye—that it was the doctrine of a hypocrite who is trying to hide under a shadow for the purpose of stealing."

Well, that's exactly what I think. I am delighted the Governor agrees with me about himself.

He knows there isn't any. He knows such charges are unworthy.

He said a man who would make such charges was a hypocrite hiding under a shadow for the purpose of stealing.

Well, I don't use such strong language.

It's pleasant to have the Governor say it.

THE REAL TRAGEDY The Governor, as I often have said here, knows there is no such issue.

As I have said here before, he created the issue, never expecting it to be more than a whispering campaign. He was blocked by the character of the men on the Board of Regents.

He had intended it for possible use against Senator Richard B. Russell. For some months his purpose was to run for the senate.

The popularity of lend-lease and then the coming of the war with the attack on Pearl Harbor, made inadvisable any campaign against a popular senator with a splendid record of co-operation in the war effort.

So, he took the issue into the Governor's race.

It is a real tragedy.

The Governor said a year and a half ago that only a hypocrite would try to use a racial issue in Georgia.

He said at the same time any man who brought forth such an issue was committing a sin of the deepest dye.

He said only those few months ago that any man using the racial issue was hiding beneath a shadow for the purpose of stealing.

Now he comes forth with such an issue and his own words of "sin" and "hypocrite" condemn it.

The danger is, the greater tragedy is, that some of his men, in their zeal to do a job, have been urged on to try and create "incidents" of violence involving some Negro. That makes it the worse affront.

Georgia doesn't need all this prejudice. The south knows how to handle this question and will handle it without violence if the Governor and his more fanatical supporters will quit stirring it up.

THE REAL ISSUE There are the real issues of this campaign. They are plain to all.

They try to cover it up by trying to attach former Governor E. D. Rivers to it. They attack Atlanta newspapers and newspapermen, never mentioning that 74 weekly newspapers are supporting Ellis Arnall as against 10 for the Governor.

Newspapers and newspapermen are not the issue. The newspapers print the news and men and events make the news. Newspapers don't make or unmake elections. They merely present the news and issues for the people to read. They can, editorially, support a candidate and advocate his cause. All people, and newspapers, should have opinions, pro or con.

The issues are important.

Men are dying in the Solomon Islands in our present most important battle.

I do not think they are dying to maintain the sort of issues which Governor Talmadge advances. It is not even good patriotism, with the example of India before us, to try and stir up racial hatreds and violence just for votes.

Think it over calmly—and ask yourself if men are dying in the Solomon Islands, and in Alaska, to perpetuate the sort of government and issue which the Governor offers? What about your own boy and girl and their future in Georgia?

Ellis Arnall promises to take the schools out of politics and to let the teachers teach, under the state constitution and its guarantees. He promises dignified government, with no increase in taxes. He promises an abolition of the infamous pardon racket. Those are some of the issues.

Ask yourself the real questions.

Clouds Over The South

IN ANOTHER column on this page is an article entitled "Paternalism In The South Is Outmoded," which we commend to the attention of the Journal and Guide readers. It is deserving of the attention of everyone in the Nation, because it analyses basic reasons for the existence at the present time of an alarming degree of interracial disharmony in the South.

Because the Nation is at war, and because everyone is affected by the war, and the total sum of our resources and manpower is needed to win the war, interracial hisharmony is no longer merely a question for the South to deal with. It is a question which now concerns the safety of the Nation as a whole, and it is a question with which the Nation as a whole is concerned.

Because the article was written by the editor of one of the South's leading newspapers, it is the more significant. Mr. Dabney sees danger ahead in an impending clash between "an excessively militant group of Northern Negroes and an excessively bellicose group of white Southern Negrophobes." The latter he feels, wants to withhold from colored people certain things which they should have, and the former, in his opinion, "demands an overnight revolution in race relations throughout the United States."

Mr. Dabney concludes that "both groups must be made to see the vast degree of harm they are capable of doing in the tense atmosphere of wartime, as well as in the perhaps chaotic period which will follow the close of hostilities." But Mr. Dabney does not say how this can be done. We hope that Mr. Dabney will go further and suggest a remedy for the trouble. Certainly no man in the South is better informed on the subject. If he agrees that Negroes should hold skilled jobs in war industries; that they should serve in the armed forces, or should rise independently in business or the professions—to all of which we know he does agree—he is on the right track toward finding a way to compose the differences between the Northern extremists and the Southern extremists.

A Mutual Problem

Now, in this grave emergency in which the Nation finds itself, we do have some "all-or-nothing" Negro leaders, most vocal in the North, of course. But who created these "all-or-nothing" Negroes? It was the "nothing-at-all" white element. The element among the whites, North and South, who, when the war clouds began to hover and the Nation began to prepare for defense, said to the Negro: "No, you shall have nothing at all!" "There is no part in this program for you."

Then they set about smartly to interpret the Negro's efforts to participate normally in the defense program as an effort to obtain "social equality." They knew that would work like magic in the South. It is remarkable how that term can be tortured. It is true that it can be used effectively to stop the Negro from obtaining a job as a skilled worker in a war industry. It can be used to preclude Negroes from special training as a war worker. It can be used to exclude Negroes from the armed forces. It is used to keep Negroes from exercising the suffrage; from receiving equal pay for equal skills and equal performance on the job; from travelling on a public carrier in physical comfort after paying the same mileage fare as his white neighbor; from having decent living surroundings, and from receiving equal justice in the courts.

As a matter of fact "social equality" in its tortured definitions has no relation to what is causing the gathering clouds in the South. It is a bogey-man, a bogus issue, a red herring and a rattle-snake.

We are 100 per cent for the proposal of our distinguished correspondent from the "deep South." We believe that the clouds over the South can be dispelled if the thoughtful leadership in both races will get together for early and constructive action.

"Deep Southerner" Speaks

Came a letter to our desk from a distinguished white Southerner this week. Among other things, the writer said:

> For six months here in the heart of the deep South I have watched the growth, of racial fear which is the basis of racial hatred. . . .
> Added to an honest, [illegible] ignorant, fear of the uprising of Negroes is the equally honest but stupid conviction that we can't lose this war regardless of what we do. Warnings of the effect of racial troubles on our colored allies fall on deaf ears. . . .
> We do have our political demagogs who do appear to prefer to fight the Negro more than they want to win the war. But for every Talmadge and Dixon and Rankin I could point out Negro leaders who also prefer to whip the white South more than they want to win the war. The two groups incite and excite each other to more and more violent vituperation of the other.

This distinguished white person then offers a remedy for the trouble which has been diagnosed:

> If the worst does not happen, it will be because we of both races who see the dangers get together on a common program and with our united voices drown out the hysterical shriekings of both sides. And there are still enough of us to handle this if we get together and have the courage to "stand foursquare to every wind that blows."

Our distinguished correspondent seems to "have something" there. Concerning the ominous clouds that are so obviously gathered over the South, our leading white citizens have a distinct responsibility. They have stood by while the policies of the South were shaped. They were responsible for the Tillmans, Vardamans and Bleases, and they are responsible for the Talmadges, Dixons and Rankins.

We do not mean to say that they deliberately created these political trouble-makers. They rose to power because the more thoughtful and constructive whites were either complacent or lethargic. They rose to power usually upon bogus issues, which the busy, intelligent, constructive Southerner treated indifferently or regarded as being harmless.

Georgia Race Issue Ban Urged

"The Courier-Journal"

Serious Results Cited By Paper

Louisville, Ky.

5X

Augusta, Ga., Aug. 12 (AP)—An appeal to drop the racial issue that has brought national attention to Georgia's gubernatorial campaign was made to the opposing candidates today by the Augusta Herald.

Milwee Owens, editor of the Herald, in a telegram to Gov. Eugene Talmadge and Attorney General Ellis Arnall told the candidates that further campaign stress on the matter "may lead to serious disturbances . . . and cannot possibly serve any useful purpose at this time."

Neither candidate had any immediate comment on the telegram, which declared that the issue already is familiar to every voter and "the subject has no place in politics."

Talmadge Creates Issue.

In bringing about the ouster of several faculty members in the state university system last year, Talmadge charged that they sought to foster co-education of the races and his campaign has declared that he is the champion of white supremacy and forces from outside the state are seeking his defeat as a step toward obtaining social equality of the races.

Arnall, seeking to unseat Talmadge in the September 9 Democratic primary, consistently has ridiculed the racial issue as a false one raised by the Governor to avoid discussion of serious questions.

Biddle Not Concerned.

(Attorney General Biddle, questioned today in Washington, said the Justice Department was not concerning itself with the racial problem in the South. "We are not investigating any racial problems in the South," he said. "That is not our business and we don't do that."

(He explained, however, that in a great many instances investigations had been made of charges of specific violations of the Civil Rights laws.)

THREE TERMS ENOUGH

Editor, The Journal: Personally, I believe a voter should be far more concerned about an issue in an election than the candidate in a political campaign. Usually good men are candidates. When two or more good men offer for an office on an issue, I try to find out as much as possible about the thing each represents and vote for the one who more nearly measures up to my idea of good government.

I believe the pardoning power should be taken from the Governor. I believe an impartial pardoning board will be fairer to every unfortunate than any man who can, and I believe sometimes does, use this power to further his political ends. Everyone should, in a democracy, receive the same consideration, regardless of education, wealth or personal friendship. Mr. Arnall is pledged to help remove this power from the Governor and place it where it justly belongs.

I believe any boy or girl who pays his or her hard-earned money for an education should receive all the benefits the college he attends can furnish. I believe the State University has been seriously hurt by the present Governor. If I believed the present Governor had any excuse for his action toward our University System, I would have to conclude that all the professors and the student body are in favor of miscegenation. I don't believe this. I believe they, all of them, are as opposed to mixing the white and colored races in schools and colleges and homes as the Governor. Honestly, do you believe a single Southern boy would be caught in any school where race equality is taught? No you don't. And to say you do is an insult to every boy and girl who has ever attended or ever will attend the Georgia University.

I am just giving my reasons why I think maybe three terms are enough for any Governor.

MISUSE OF OFFICE TO STIFLE PRESS— "The Informer".

"I say discuss all and expose—I am for every topic openly:

I say there can be no salvation for these States without innovators—without free tongues, and ears willing to hear the tongues; And I announce as a glory of These States, that they respectfully listen to propositions, reforms, fresh views and doctrines, from successions of men and women, each age with its own growth."

Houston, Tex.

—Writings of Walt Whitman, Vol. III, p. 302 G. P. Putnams, 1902.

The above exhortation from the writings of Walt Whitman though pronounced many years ago needs continual repronouncement. The letter which Ralph Ingersoll (white) Editor of PM wrote to New York Draft Board 44 (reprinted in Congressional Record, July 9, 1942) gives evidence of much needed public testimony to the fact.

For weeks Congressman Rankin, and a few other Negro haters have been throwing out highly unsubtle suggestions that Ingersoll, Editor of Marshall Field-owned PM, be inducted into the U. S. Army obviously to stop the publication of the paper. It seems that the impetus that was given by glib-tongued anti-Negro Rankin and a few others was responsible for the record-breaking speed with which Ingersoll (41 years of age, served in World War I) was swished to, but not through the induction process. Because he suspected prejudice in the draft board set-up, Ingersoll asked for a rehearing from an unbiased board.

The implications of the Ingersoll letter which are pertinent to liberty loving people who want to believe in the democratic process are as follows: 1. The purpose of any draft board is to impartially select able bodied men, or skilled workers to fight the enemies of our country. 2. In a country where freedom of thought and press are among the guaranteed rights, one cannot squelch the outcries against hate and sedition. Willkie has well said: " .. .. .. .. sometimes hatred obscures the instinct for fair play . . . any man who denies justice to someone he hates prepares the way for a denial of justice to someone he loves." (New Republic Vol. 102, P. 372.) 3. Congressmen who use any means, however foul, to defend the interests that got them elected in their states must be studied carefully. If their interests ar in conflict with those of the country as a whole, voters must unseat them. If a Congressman is immune to the laws of libel, he may do more to nullify the efforts of public-spirited citizens who have no political axes to grind than a Nazi saboteur with a cache of dynamite.

FROM HON. SABATH TO HON. RANKIN—

In an address before the House of Representatives (Congressional Record June 29, 1942) Hon. Adolph Sabath of Illinois accused Hon. Rankin, of whom you have heard, of doing more damage by trying to spread intolerance and hatred than Rankin alleges others are spreading. Hon. Sabath, while encouraging Rankin away from lambasting Marshall Field, III, owner of PM, performed a much needed service of asking Mr. Rankin if he could substantiate his many prejudicing statements. He pointed to the fact that the dissemination of speeches made on the floor of the House by a few gentlemen can do much toward the creation of discord and disunity. Readers will remember that in our editorial column of last week we asked if there was no person in the House who would be willing to tell the gentleman (?) from Mississippi that he is getting out of line.

"The Informer" Houston, Tex.

The Congressional Record carries (June 26 and July 2, 1942) further rank rantings from the Congressman whose state is being criticized for the vastly unequal provision of educational opportunities. It is fervently hoped that this Congressman, who spends much of his time figuratively making faces and poking out his tongue at Negroes, and at those who try to promote understanding, will very soon find it necessary to do something that is more vital to the nation's welfare.

Highly Placed Persons Behind Equality Drive

W. M. Kiplinger, whose book, "Washington Is Like That", is attracting national attention, is certainly the most informative person in relation to this current movement for racial equality who has been heard from to date. Writing on the racial subject merely as an interesting phase of Washington life, Mr. Kiplinger says:

"Two situations make Washington the No. 1 Negro city of the United States and the world. First, it has a large Negro population, and this is mainly a matter of local interest. Second, it is the center of a new push for Negro equality, and this is of great national significance for whites and blacks alike."

He then goes on to explain that Washington now has a "brown brain trust" composed of influential Negroes who are pushing the equality moves along with great success. Among other accomplishments to which he refers is the creation of a condition under which civil service tests no longer carry photographs or disclose any information about race or color. But it is when he reaches the real power behind this social equality movement that the author becomes most informative. In this connection one reads:

"The three persons in Government most responsible for the rise in position of the Negroes are President Roosevelt, Mrs. Roosevelt and Secretary of Interior Ickes. Mr. Ickes has taken the lead, while the President has followed through with the necessary executive orders to give Negroes equal status in many Government agencies." The writer continues:

"Mrs. Roosevelt has mingled socially with Negro groups, kept in touch with their thinking, reported this to the President, and furnished numbers of examples, by her own conduct, of the acceptance of Negroes on the same level as whites. She has been influential in making Negro groups welcome to the White House."

Mr. Kiplinger then describes how a white man from Atlanta, formerly employed by the Julius Rosenwald Fund, became an advisor to Mr. Ickes in the matter of providing all sorts of jobs for Negroes in preference to white persons and how through the activities of this Atlanta man, of Rosenwald Fund training, all of Ickes' racial advisers became Negroes. Then, as Mr. Kiplinger puts it, "The Department of the Interior became a conduit through which Negroes spread into other Government agencies."

Returning then to the Roosevelt phase of the development, Mr. Kiplinger proceeds:

"With the Roosevelts' appearance in Washington, Negroes got a large scale entree at the White House for the first time in history. The President's calendar was opened to a number of Negro leaders, and Mrs. Roosevelt brought her sympathy for the Negroes out in full view. She entertained the National Council of Negro Women on several occasions. She championed Marion Anderson, the Negro singer, in the squabble with the DAR over whether the singer should be allowed to appear in the DAR hall in Washington. She often had her picture taken with Negro leaders."

The recent executive order of the President relative to the employment of more Negroes on Government jobs and in factories where Government work is being done, than is quoted in full and its effect is described as "electrical". A great increase in Negro office workers was noted. It is pointed out that some white Government officials now have Negro stenographers, but no reference is made to Negro officials having white secretaries or stenographers. Names are given of a long list of Negroes who hold important Government positions, the description of developments in connection with the social equality drive covering some sixteen pages of Kiplinger's book.

Thus one gets some idea of what Southern industrialists are up against as Washington, with the vast power obtained through the letting of valuable war contracts, puts up a sustained drive to make these industrialists place Negroes in office, where they will be associated with white employes and where, the "reformers" hope, contacts will be formed that will wipe out racial barriers and lead eventually to the development in the South of a mongrel race. That's how some of them hate the South!

Mississippi's Rankin Rants on Negro Blood

Mississippi's John E. Rankin on June 8 delivered himself of a goodly quantity of the race prejudice, unAmericanism, hogwash and afrophobia commonly found in that state with the nation's lowest IQ. Because Carl Sandburg, noted liberal writer, had written a newspaper article criticising the Red Cross and supporters of its policy of segregating white and Negro blood plasma, the representative of, by and for the people of Mississippi—using Sandburg and Pearl Buck as focal points—loosed a tirade against "communists, cranks, crackpots and parlor pinks."

Of "Sandburg and his cohorts," Rankin said "they hated the Red Cross, the greatest institution of its kind the world has ever seen. They hate it because they cannot browbeat it into carrying out their designs by taking the labels off the blood it is now banking to be used on our wounded soldiers, sailors and marines . . . to mongrelize America and drag it down to the level of Siam or Japan. They want to pump Negro blood into the veins of our wounded white boys, regardless of the direful effect it might have on them or their children."

Just how direful the gentleman from Mississippi views the injection of Negro blood into whites is illustrated by his next statement:

"One of these parlor pink fellow-travelers from Boston writes me as follows: 'If I were a doctor, I would administer Negro blood to a Mississippi white man, just as I would give sugar pills to a hypochondriac.' If he would mistreat a wounded white soldier from Mississippi in that way, of course," Rankin warned, "he would do the same to one from any other state."

"They have a few parlor pink, irresponsible women, such as Pearl Buck, running around preaching this nonsense to the disgust of the decent white people, as well as to the disgust of decent, law-abiding Negroes of the country.

"Members of the police force have told me repeatedly of the communist dances they have witnessed in certain sections of the city and of seeing these communist women dancing with Negro men, while the male communist danced with Negro women.

"These subversive elements are the worst enemies the Negro ever had, and their pernicious activities are simply piling up trouble for the Negroes as well as for the white people throughout the country, and especially here in the District of Columbia and in the southern states."

The Congressional Record reveals that the lower house of the national legislature that day heard Rankin further lament:

"The Negroes and whites in the South, where they understand each other, are getting along very well, and will continue to do so if these trouble-makers will let them alone," and that "while our boys are fighting hitler, mussolini, japan and other enemies from without, their people at home must take care of these enemies from within"(—) MT.

On Rankin, the White-Trash Bloc

Rep. John Rankin, the one-man white-trash bloc in the House of Representatives, does not, we are pained to report, appreciate our efforts to educate him. He persists in reaffirming his belief that the blood of colored people, injected into white bodies, will "mongrelize" the injectees. He dismisses as "quacks" members of the American Medical Assn., who have reported in their scientific journal that Rankin's opinion is founded on ignorance.

The fact is, of course, that the race isn't mongrelized quite this way. Some time we shall tell Rankin the beautiful story of the flowers and the bees and how they reproduce their kind or approximately their kind, but we don't think he's quite ready for that one as yet. One must be careful not to shock the sensitive jungle Nordic.

Reactions Violent

Rankin's resentment of our generous attempt to rid him of some of his superstitions has produced an interesting and sometimes violent reaction. Rankin rants almost daily in the House and in the cloakrooms about PM, its editors and its works.

Then yesterday, he demanded as a matter of privilege that the House remove from the Congressional Record Ralph Ingersoll's letter to Draft Board No. 44.

The letter had been inserted by Rep. Sol Bloom as a matter of fairness. Bloom felt that since Rankin was calling Ingersoll a draft dodger from behind the bushes of Congressional immunity almost daily, members should be given a right to read Ingersoll's side of the story.

Bad Sport

Rankin's move might be criticized as bad sportsmanship, but that would be futile. One doesn't expect to find the attribute of sportsmanship, which is an acquired characteristic of civilization, in a primitive.

Rankin's charge against Ingersoll might also be answered by recalling Rankin's World War record but that, too, would be a waste of type—not much of a waste, though, because Rankin's record could be told very briefly.

At this stage of his development, Rankin can master the tricks of parliamentary procedure, but cannot quite grasp the more fundamental concepts of the American system—constitutional guarantees of equal treatment for all before the law, an equality unaffected by race, color or religion, and the right of every citizen to his day in court, his day before a draft board or his day in the Congressional Record.

It will be a long process, the education of John Rankin, but we propose to keep at it.—KENNETH G. CRAWFORD.

THESE, TOO, ARE OUR ENEMIES

"San Antonio Register"

JUL 24 1942

San Antonio, Tex.

S-C

ONE of the agencies of the United States government and War department is, currently, presenting a weekly radio feature, "These are Our Enemies," in which the history, background, development, ideology, of our foreign foes are dramatically, vividly portrayed. The presentations leave poignant pictures of the people with whom we are at war, of their delusions, their fanaticism, their warped misconceptions. They are our enemies, enemies we must defeat, annihilate.

We have with us, in America, in our very midst, some who are known as Americans, who are just as dangerous. We refer not to the saboteurs, the spies, the Fifth Columnists, the paid enemy agents—they are, after all, run down, ferreted out, and dealt with.

We refer to the Texarkana and Rome, Georgia, Nazi, the Rankins' and their ilk. These, too, are our enemies.

Intelligent Americans everywhere stood aghast, as details of the lynching orgy at Texarkana, Texas, were unfolded to the world. A man—as yet not definitely identified as having committed any crime, convicted of nothing—was dragged, by his heels, from a hospital bed where he lay wounded probably unto death, then chained to an automobile, dragged through the streets of the city, and hanged.

Others of his Race have been terrorized, intimidated, literally run out of the city, for no reason other than they were Negroes, educated, intelligent, and carried the mantle of Race leaders in their particular community.

Hitler's late infamous Reinhard ("The Hangman") Heydrich could hardly have produced a more brutal, a more vicious, cold-blooded murder. The campaign of terror and intimidation now under way at Texarkana has its counterpart in the conquered lands of Europe. Indeed, the Texarkana lynchers—residents of a section of the country where the practices, customs, and ideology are and always have been, almost identical to that of the Nazis—might have taken a page from Heydrich's book, itself.

Yes, these, too, are our enemies—not just enemies of the Negro, but the enemies of democracy everwhere, the enemies of each and every one of the United Nations, enemies of America, who not only strike devastating blows at the morale of some 13,000,000 Americans, but who create doubt and misgivings in the minds of America's allies of darker skin, enemies who provide the Axis propaganda machine with rich material, enemies the likes of whom England can thank for the Burma debacle, the Singapore catastrophe, the Indian confusion—those whose implanted song of hate reaped a harvest of greater hate.

Enlightened folk the world over stand shocked at the Roland Hayes' beating, humiliation, and jailing, at the hands of Rome, Georgia, police officers, and officials. Again, there is, in this instance, striking similarity of the Georgia treatment of the great Negro artist, and the German treatment of Jewish artists, scientists, and men of letters. Hayes was dragged through the streets, knocked down, thrown head-first into a patrol wagon, beaten some more by three brutish "law" officers, and jailed for no reason other than he happened to be the husband of a woman who refused to be treated like a leper.

Here was a man, who has been described by many critics as one of the greatest tenors of all times, who has thrilled audiences all over the world, who has been received by royalty, and who has brought distinction and fame to not only his Race, but to his country and his state, and who had done no wrong, violated no law, created no disturbance, being dragged, mauled, and pushed around as would have been a drunken, confirmed criminal and jail bird. By any measure of comparison—education, culture, wordly possessions, achievements—those Georgia officers, including the chief of police, the store clerk, and all involved, are not worthy of lifting Roland Hayes' shoes from the floor.

Again, in Texas, residents of two hamlets recently complained to the War department when they learned that Negro soldiers were to be stationed at, or near, their particular villages. Those are the soldiers who are training and preparing to defend those same villages if need be, from any enemy foe, to give their life, and all, for the defense of these "fellow" Americans.

These, too, are our enemies—the enemies of all Americans, black and white—and as dangerous as any bomber, or submarine, or battleship, or tank, or secret weapon that the foreign enemy may have. They are the enemies who are destroying from within. They are the enemies who are trying so desperately—whether it is deliberate or not—to alienate the loyalty and devotion of 13,000,000 REAL Americans, without whom this war cannot be won.

We thought that Pearl Harbor had united our country, that it did away with North and South, party and politics, class, and color. We even thought that the South would temporarily postpone its continued fighting of the Civil War, might even learn that that war was over.

It didn't.

JUL 24 1942

We thought that setbacks and mistakes had made all Americans resolve that they must work, fight, and win together, or die together.

They haven't.

There are still those today, who would rather bow in submission to a foreign horde, than deal with justice and fairness, and in the so-called American way with their darker skinned fellow Americans.

These, too, are our enemies.

SILENT PARADE TO MOURN WALLER SET FOR JULY 25

JUL 23 1942

A silent parade "to mourn the death of sharecropper Odell Waller and to protest the poll tax which killed him" will be held in New York City Saturday Juy 25, it was announced by Dr. Lawrence Ervin, president of the March on Washington Movement, New York division.

JUL 23 1942

3-C

Paraders will include both Negro and white supporters of the fight to save Odell Waller's life. The speakers include William Agar, educational director of Freedom House, Anna Arnold Hedgeman, Director of Race Relations, New York Area Office, of Civilian Defense, Frank Crosswaith, Charman, Negro Labor Committee, Colden Brown, Chairman, speakers committee, March on Washington Movement, and Dr. Lawrence Ervin.

NEGRO WRITES F. R. PROTEST

New York—A group of Negro leaders declared Sunday in a letter to President Roosevelt that the recent execution of Odell Woller, Negro sharecropper, had intensized determination for a "showdown" on the question of total democracy for the Negro.

JUL 23 1942

Signers of the letter were headed by A. Philip Randolph, international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, who declared that the "showdown" could not be held back long.

The execution of Waller, convicted of killing his white landord, unleashed "barbarous forces," with the result that within two weeks two Negroes were lynched and the noted Negro tenor, Roland Hayes, and his wife were beaten and jailed at Rome, Ga., the letter said.

ROLAND HAYES RECOVERING

JUL 23 1942

Rome, Ga.—Roland Hayes, internationally famous tenor, was reported slowly recovering at his 600-acre estate at Curryville from a brutal beating administered July 21 by three giant-sized policemen at Calhoun.

Hayes was beaten and jailed after his wife and daughter had been "put out" of a Higgins shoe store when Mrs. Hayes refused to move from a seat near the store's front door to another toward the rear.

WATERLOO PLANS ANNUAL CELEBRATION

JUL 23 1942

Waterloo, Ia.—The annual Emancipation Celebration sponsored here under the auspices of the Waterloo branch of the NAACP will be held here August 3 at the Electric park.

The event will be filled with many features beginning during the early afternoon and climaxing at night with a dance. Games, picnics, and other features are planned.

Heading the Waterloo branch which is seventeen years old is Mrs. Lydia Page, president; Clark Childress, secretary and Atty. M. F. Fields, chairman of the annual celebration. The branch has 130 members.

CALL TEXAS LYNCHING AN AXIS VICTORY

JUL 23 1942

New York—"The third lynching of an American Negro within two weeks is as much a setback to the cause of victory over facism as a major naval or military loss," George Marshall, chairman of the National Federation for Constitutional Liberties declared last week, in telegrams to President Roosevelt, Gov. Coke R. Stevenson of Texas and the Department of Justice protesting the lynching of Willie Vinson in Texarkana, Texas, July 13.

Caste, Sabotage American-Made

Two incidents stemming from the same cause, like two twigs on a branch, show how greatly this country must change before it is ready to champion democracy. We refer to the beating of a Negro soldier by a white M. P. in the white waiting room of the Houston railroad station, and of Roland Hayes and his wife in a Georgia shoe store.

Americans think the English are wrong and foolish for refusing India freedom and thereby tossing her into the lap of Japan. Our sense of fairplay is outraged that the English stalked into China and set up areas into which the Chinese could not come except as servants. Yet Negro citizens are assaulted for crossing deadlines in this country, and dual public services are maintained to prevent contacts indoors which take place without comment on the sidewalk outside.

SCK

Caste is a means to an end for the British, it over-awes the natives. Here in America it is an expense, not a profit, and is kept up for the sadistic pleasure it gives the prejudiced.

Any sober consideration of these two assaults would make the average American see how he adds his weight to a Juggernaut which crushes people whom he does not hate. Because it is custom, he does not stop to consider. Not mellowed reasoned-out experience, but propaganda devised to rationalize human slavery and give conscience ease for the evils in the system, gave birth to this custom. For a whole hundred years some white men—thank God it is a minority—go on thinking they hate blacks, when as a matter of fact no one can hate a race. Even a rattler has to be approached before he takes to the offensive.

But the average American does go on thoughtlessly adding his weight to the Negro's burden. Worst of all, officials city, county, state and federal, carry into office their personal attitude on race prejudice. They violate their oath of office brazenly, knowing all the while that they make distinctions between citizens on account of race and color, which the Constitution positively forbids.

Of his own free will, the average white has not dropped custom and considered the duty he owes to his fellow citizen of color because they are neighbors and Americans. He sees clearly how race prejudice hinders Britain, but due to the blind spot in his mental eye, he does not see that the same practice has the same result here. He knows that intelligent effort is being expended on a grand scale to build up the morale of the white defender of democracy, but assumes that the Negro called to the same service will be of high morale without attention.

In the Revolutionary War and the War of 1812, blacks who fought were given their freedom! No wonder Crispus Attucks and Peter Salem were willing to die under the English guns in the streets of Boston. No wonder Andrew Jackson at New Orleans found the blacks stout companions in arms! The reasoning of early Americans was good, —any man who fights for freedom deserves freedom. It is the smug toadies to custom who today reason that because Negroes are drafted, they can do their best. They must be made to see that Negro morale like theirs is the happy outcome of a great cause and a willing mind coming together at an opportune time.

The shell holes of the first war sheltered all alike. The necessities of this war are wearing custom down to the quick in like manner. Right will prevail in time. But we cannot help wishing that improvement in race relations in this country would come by voluntary reform rather than at war's inexorible demand. The President's call on industry for the full employment of Negroes, is a pattern which officials can well follow and citizens should heed. Victory is not to be risked for whatever they get out of prejudice. England, more devoted to maintaining "white superiority" than to saving democracy, is already more handicap to our side than we can afford.

The Greenwood Incident

The Spartanburg Herald may claim some credit for having brought yesterday's most distinguished visitor to the city. Honorable Eugene S. Blease was the visitor and he came to address the people of the county by radio last night and at Lyman today. The Herald welcomes Judge Blease to the city and county.

This is written before the delivery of Judge Blease's radio address and we must anticipate his remarks. We assume that he will discuss his speeches delivered on the stump in which he expressed fear of racial friction that might be caused by the Negroes of the state.

Friday morning this newspaper quoted Attorney General Arnall, candidate for governor of Georgia against Eugene Talmadge, in which Mr. Arnall said that if any race trouble occurred in Georgia it would be the result of Governor Talmadge's "stirring it up and agitating it in every way."

The Herald commended General Arnall's statement to the attention of Judge Blease. When we wrote that we did not know of the disorders at Greenwood, a city not far from Judge Blease's home town, last Saturday night which were caused by white hoodlums who made numerous assaults in the business section of that city upon Negro men, women and girls.

Judge Blease must have heard of the incidents and we are herein expressing the hope that he will refer to it in his speech to be delivered by radio in just a half hour after this is written. Judge Blease explained in a recent address that he had not raised the racial issue in South Carolina, but that it had already been raised by outside influences.

What does he know of the attack on Negroes by white hoodlums in his neighboring city? That certainly could not have been caused by outside influences. Three white South Carolinians (can it be that they were supporters of Judge Blease?) were arrested and fined and the court expressed regret that it could not make the penalty greater.

Does Judge Blease know that the acts of hoodlums in Greenwood so aroused the good people of that city that two meetings were held to discuss the situation. Let us quote from the speech of Douglas Featherstone, president of the chamber of commerce and prominent attorney, at one of those meetings.

"I don't know what is behind all this but it looks as if it had the earmarks of a subversive element and it should be called to the attention of the FBI. Any man, white or black, red or green, or of whatever color, who stirs up trouble now is a traitor. I am convinced that the disorder here was caused by a group of less than forty persons. Now, if the 40,000 people of Greenwood county county and the 15,000 people of the city of Greenwood are not going to do anything about it we should move out and turn the city and county over to the hoodlums. The hoodlum who walks up and down the streets trying to stir up trouble between the races is as much a traitor as the six saboteurs who were electrocuted in Washington last week."

Much more was said at the meeting and after adjournment Mayor Marshall was reported as saying: "If we have to kill somebody—and God forbid—to maintain law and order in Greenwood we will just have to do it."

In the light of Judge Blease's charge that outside influences were at work to create racial friction in the state, and the cruel references he has made to the other race, it was this newspaper's hope that he would say what he thought of the Greenwood incident. It might be unkind to attribute this ugly thing to the campaign speeches of Mr. Blease, but since he dragged this racial discussion into the campaign and made it part of his appeal for votes, we urge him today to discuss something ugly that has happened in his state instead of something he professes to fear may happen.

The Herald has entered this political discussion since it sees the danger that threatens the state because of Judge Blease's introduction into this contest an issue that has no place in it. It was unwise, unjust and unwarranted. Already the good name of the state has been besmirched by the Eugene Talmadge campaign in Georgia.

We want South Carolina to be known throughout the union as a state of opportunity; a state where all people may live in unity and peace; a state in which bigotry and prejudice and hate will not be tolerated. It must be such a state and that is why this newspaper has resented any movement, any utterance, that might tend to make it otherwise.

BETWEEN THE LINES

Racial Inflation

Gordon Hancock

For many months the President of the United States, supported by some of the most brilliant minds of this generation, has waged a stubborn war against inflation. To date that war is only partly won, for the slightest relaxation will send this nation [illegible] a spiral of expanded credit and higher prices that will bring the inevitable runious crash that wil be catastrophic. Every inflation must have its delfation, and woe unto that nation that yields to the temptation of inflation ,for its day of disillusionment and reckoning must shortly dawn.

The principle of inflation like the principle of diminishing returns applies not alone to the realms of economics, but throughout the gamut of human life and activities. One of the most nauseating things imaginable is an inflated ego with its concomitant conceits and pretensions. Nations and races like individuals quite conceivably may become inflated; and there follow consequences quite as disastrous. It is bad enough for the prince to [illegible] inflated but it is tragic for the pauper, for in the deflationary process the former will have something left which may serve as a basis for future progress, while the latter is left utterly without security.

WANDERING IN WILDERNESS

It would be a bad thing for the Negro race at its present stage of advancement to allow racial inflation to interrupt our splendid beginnings in every field of useful endeavor. The Negro race has not yet "arrived" although we hope we will be "arriving" soon. Before we enter the Promised Land of full-fledged American citizenship, we are going to do a lot of wandering in the wilderness of sacrifice and suffering and thankless service. "Hard is the way and long that out of Hall leads up to light" averred the immortal Milton. It is even with a people that would travel the high road that leads from slavery into freedom. This is an ugly fact but it is to our advantage to face it squarely.

I am therefore always a little dubious about the extravagant encomiums which our white friends are wont to lavish upon us, when they say we have "made the most wonderful progress of any race in the history of mankind, etc." This sounds good and we take it with a great glee and applause. But the fact remains the Negro has not had a half chance, and to pretend that he can do so much with a half chance is to predispose the powers that be to give only the half chance to Negroes who can make so much of it, and save the whole chance for the white man.

My contention has been, is now, and will forever be, that [illegible] takes a whole chance for the white man it takes a whole chance for the Negro. It may inflate our racial ego to have it otherwise but we compromise our case thereby. These encomiums would not be dangerous if there were not a possibility that Negroes would take them seriously and thereby achieve complacency that coould have deleterious effects on our future.

OVER-CONFIDENCE LOSES

Some weeks ago we noted through the Negro press that "Freedom's Children," a radio feature, had been taken off the air and an attempt would be made to put on some other Negro feature in its place. We already have "Wings Over Jordan" which keeps the Negro before the nation. It is not going to be a profitable thing to overboost the Negro in the eyes of the nation and world. Within the last few years we have had several Negro "expositions" here and there about the nation and all were for the "Progress" of the Negro race. It would be exceedingly unfortunate to underestimate Negro progress, but it would be tragic to inflate it. We are boosting ourselves from pulpit and platform, through press and over the radio daily. By now the country shouuld have an inkling of Negro possibilities.

What we need most of all are ways and means of realizing some of these possibilities. Whether we admit it or not, the Negro is playing the under-dog role in the American racial drama and what we need most of all is to develop the under-dog spirit that so often overcomes overwhelming odds. It is not without good warrant that football coaches throughout the natoin try to instill into their various squads the under-dog spirit. It has come about that there is no greater danger in athletics than over-confidence. How many greater teams have lost to mediocre teams because of over-confidence! Racial inflation is proving a bad thing for the white race and it is not going to be less dangerous for Negroes. An inflated pride without the willingness to pay the price has tragic potentialities. Paying the price is the thing!

Talmadge Is Praised For Stand On Race Issue

ATLANTA, June 6 (AP)—Governor Eugene Talmadge was praised by the Georgia State Democratic Executive Committee today for opposing co-education of whites and Negroes, and administration leaders indicated he would make racial questions a principal issue in a campaign for reelection.

The committee, after setting July 4 as the qualifying deadline for Georgia's Sept. 9 Democratic primary, unanimously adopted a resolution commending "the masterly manner" in which Talmadge handled state finances.

Talmadge has accepted an invitation to address a rally at Moultrie, Ga., July 4—and presumably announce his candidacy.

Talmadge May Announce July 4; Issue Likely Be Racial Questions

ATLANTA, June 6—(AP)— Governor Eugene Talmadge was praised by the Georgia state Democratic executive committee today for opposing co-education of whites and Negroes, and administration leaders indicated he would make racial questions a principal issue in a campaign for re-election.

The committee, after setting July 4 as the qualifying deadline for Georgia's Sept. 9 democratic primary, unanimously adopted a resolution commending "the masterful manner" in which Talmadge handled state finances.

Talmadge, who has accepted an invitation to address a rally at Moultrie, Ga., July 4—and presumably announce his candidacy—spoke briefly to the committee but avoided commitment on his plans.

Bryan Castelow of Cuthbert, a former congressman, keynoted the committee's endorsement of Talmadge with praise of Talmadge's fiscal management and a declaration that Georgia today faces a challenge of its state rights, as it did in the War between the States.

Why Are They Not Wealthy?

Addressing an audience of negroes at Ridgecrest, North Carolina, Dr. Clarence Jordan, of Georgia, said: "Lincoln emanciuated the negro politically but not economically; he remains an economic slave, and he does not want to vote as much as he wants to eat."

If the labor of the Southern negroes has been and is "exploited", if they are not paid justly for what they produce, why in South Carolina are no millionaire planters, farmers, other employers of negro labor? Why is Southern agriculture not a rich man's industry?

Were the tales that come out of the North about economic oppression of negroes in the South one-tenth true, the South, especially its farmers, who are the principal employers of negroes, would be filled with lordly landowners, masters of broad plantations, living in the manner of feudal barons.

Where are the South's wealthy farmers?

Strength In Justice

Fifty-six leaders of the Congregational-Christian churches of the United States have written President Roosevelt pledging their "solid support" for his administration's "progressive political and economic enfranchisement of our Negro citizens." Their letter warns that "nations of the world upon whose good will and aid we must rely in the present struggle will rightly suspect and condemn us as long as the open sore of racial discrimination persists among us."

"Shameful inequities continue among us," the churchmen say, and who can deny the truth of their charge?

These inequities primarily are centered in basic economic and political matters. The great majority of the American people, we believe, are anxious to overcome these inequities as soundly and as rapidly as is feasible. But they are held back by ancient fears and prejudices.

One cannot say that these prejudices and fears have no reality. On the contrary, out of them could grow conditions dangerous to the welfare of our white and colored citizens alike and setting back immeasurably the very considerable progress that has been made in racial relations in recent years. But these fears and prejudices will be the more dangerous if efforts to correct fundamental injustices are neglected, or if we think that these problems can better be met by attempting to sidestep or suppress them, rather than by creative efforts to solve them.

It is true that to the degree we are backward in this country in achieving fundamental justice in this respect, to that degree will we be weakened in our efforts to strengthen our own freedom and to contribute to the spread of freedom throughout the world.

The Negro Is Trying to Earn His Right to Post-War Justice

By David H. Bradford

THE story of the progress of America toward its ideals is a story of conflict. This is not to say that Americans love conflict. Quite the contrary. We are a peaceable people. Once we get into a conflict, however, when the dust from the battle has settled, those who look closely enough can see that we have moved a little nearer what we consider the good life.

JUN 23 1942

This has been true whether the conflict was purely domestic or one in which some foreign power was involved. It has been true from the very beginning of our history. And there is every reason to expect that it will be true when the present struggle is over.

SCK

Engaged in a conflict to guarantee to all the people of the world who will accept them the principles for which it stands, America will never rest contentedly until those principles are operating at home. Having saved the world, it will certainly make itself secure. The typical American is never really happy unless he is saving something or somebody. He is incurably a messiah. Some day he will turn his whole mind and exert all his strength in an effort to extend to everyone within the bounds of the country all the opportunities that this bountiful land affords.

The Courier-Journal
Louisville, Kentucky

When he does, his greatest surprise will come from the ease with which his task will be accomplished. He will find the American Negro to be much more like other Americans than he has been led to believe. As one Negro educator has said, "The American Negro is instinctively and incurably American." This Americanism of the Negro is best shown in his almost child-like faith in the future. However dreadful his past has been, it has not succeeded in destroying his hope for a bright future. He, like all true Americans, believes that every person has a right to an equal chance. And he has faith enough to believe that some day, soon or later, he will be judged by facts rather than prejudices.

JUN 23 1942

In preparation for that time, the Negro is anxious now to do everything in his power to prove his worth to the nation. The more the Negro does now, the more evidence is stored up in his favor. His hope for the future lies in this evidence. From it will come the facts by which he will be judged in the future.

If this evidence succeeds in opening a larger place for him in American life, what are some of the things he will most desire

Experience has taught the Negro that nothing of importance can be accomplished by men trained in a system that makes of them compliant tools to be used for the benefit of others. One of the things, then, that the Negro will insist upon when larger opportunities are opened to him will be a more constructive educational program. Such a program can be put in operation only when educational leadership among Negroes awakes to its responsibility to give guidance and direction in new fields of education vitally and closely related to the life of the Negro people. Probably the quickest and most certain way to secure this is to give more weight to Negro opinion in the selection of Negro educational leadership. Certainly the Negro must insist more and more upon merit as a basis for leadership.

JUN 23 1942

Education alone, however, is not, contrary to what many thought, a solution to all the problems of the Negro. Negroes must have more jobs. They must get justice in the courts. Negro communities must be provided with all the facilities for recreation that other sections of our urban centers enjoy.

"The Courier Journal"
Louisville, Ky.

These are only a few of the things necessary to improve Negro life to the point where it will become a credit to the community. In granting these things, what needs most of all to be understood is that the Negro alone is not being benefitted. In strengthening the Negro, the nation strengthens itself for the many different tasks ahead of it. The stronger the Negro becomes, the more certain it becomes that out of the present struggle, as has been true in the past, America will emerge a little nearer those ideals upon which it has set its heart.

Letters to the Editor

Fine Gold Changed

Editor the Telegraph:

In the 4th chapter of Lamentations we find the expression, "How is the most fine gold changed?" It had reference to the gold that was found after the destruction of the temple in Jerusalem. It also had reference to the peace of the people of God. They had allowed friction and sin to get among them.

I am thinking about the condition of our fair city, having lived here for 22 years and I am proud to state that a fine spirit has existed between the two races. But here of late there seems to be a breach which some think is widening each day. Why has this change come about? The original Macon citizen of my race did not show any sign of having any desire to mix with the opposite race in any way except in business, civic and human uplift. He had no desire for the so much talked about social equality. All he wanted was a chance to live his life as a citizen, being given equal opportunities to educate his children and equal justice in the courts and an equal opportunity to earn a livelihood for himself and family.

SCK

That is all the original sensible Macon Negro citizen wants today. But we have had seven attempted rapes here recently. Such an unexpected outbreak should cause the best citizens of both races to begin to ask questions as to why such unusual outrages have been committed.

Mr. W. T. Anderson attributes this to the carpet baggers like those of the 60's. I will admit that there are always some thoughtless ones among both races who are trouble-makers. In times like these the best thinkers of both races should work together and put down any and everything that will disturb the peace of our fair city

Every American citizen delights to see every man contend for his rights under the law, it matters not whether he be white or black. But the thing that is disturbing the peace of Macon today is what every decent white man and every decent Negro abhors, and that is social mixing outside of the race to which he belongs.

The self-respecting Negro does not want to be disturbed by the lawless element who have come or may come to our city. Many of us have lived in and around Macon all of our lives. And we live here because we love the city and the South. We know the habits and the customs and have conformed to them and have contributed to every worthwhile movement in the city and have co-operated with city government in trying to make this a great city. We have been clearly shown that the city appreciates our interest in that the city and county officials and individuals have contributed to our institutions which only benefited our group. Why then should this spirit of co-operation and peace be disturbed by a few who drop in to spend a day and pass on, or by a few hot heads in other cities who have never lived South?

We would have the city to know that the leaders of my race and substantial citizens here deplore all crime just as much as any other men We speak out loud and strong against the things of which our people are being accused when we can get to them. But the sad part about it is that the lawless element do not come near our churches and civic institutions where we can even speak to them. I am afraid that we as a race are too often judged by the lowest type among us. It is surprising to know that there are thousands of our group here who believe in law and order.

We realize that it takes many years to make a strong race, that is why we teach honesty, decency and thrift. We believe that races like individuals will have to work our their destiny with patience. Once more let me state that the Macon self-respecting Negroes believe in law and order and are against all crime, it matters not who commits it. Something unusual is causing this crime and all of us should work together and find it, remove it and punish the guilty! THIS IS NO TIME FOR DIVISION

THE NEGRO PROBLEM.

To the Editor: When the United States declared war on Japan and Germany, she was supposedly fighting for the freedom of all her citizens. What irony! Fighting for the freedom of all her people, when she has kept twelve million of them enslaved! These twelve million are not human beings, like you and I, because their skin is black. They may look like human beings, talk like them, act like them, but they aren't—because their skin is black.

Yet they were taken into the armed forces of this nation, submitting to the same draft regulations as did your white men, when the security of this nation was threatened by a common foe. Why should the Germans and the Japanese be regarded as foes common to both white man and black man? The white man did not regard the black man as his equal before the war began. He still does not.

But here is the irony of the situation: although the Negro has fought for equal rights, and has constantly been shoved down, he has come up time and time again. Before the Civil War he was in actual slavery in the South; he was in virtual slavery in the North. After the Emancipation Proclamation, the most overrated piece of writing, as far as practical benefit is concerned, that I know of, the colored man was not held by real chains. He was held by invisible chains of iron—in the North and in the South. These bonds still hold him.

Neither could an actual army change the stupid prejudices which have saturated the minds of white men in America—they say they do not like the Negro, but they like him well enough when he has his bayonet in the belly of a soldier of the enemy. They liked him well enough before, when he lived apart from the white man on the farm and in the city; but human nature does funny things. The white man has condescended, in part, to stand shoulder to shoulder with the black man in the face of a so-called common enemy.

"WHITE SUPREMACY OR WHITE COWARDICE?"

THE above caption and the following Editorial is taken from the Editorial pages of the Courier-Journal, morning daily paper (white) of Louisville, Kentucky. It is a fine example of just what some of the cultured thinkers of the white race think of demagogism:

"War can inspire sublime human heroism and sacrifice, but war frightens people, too, and sometimes evokes the worst instead of the best in them. A sad example has been afforded recently in what we may be sure are ordinarily the pleasant and secure surroundings of the Kiwanis Club of Bessemer, Ala. There a speaker described by the Associated Press as 'long prominent in Alabama legal and political circles' gave tongue to his war-born emotions in a way that paraded not courage and magnanimity but the very opposite—the spirit, whether he realized it or not, of the complete bully.

'What he proposed with great ado, was a League to Maintain White Supremacy. White supremacy? Negroes compose less than a tenth of the population of the United States, just a third of the population of the South. In Alabama they are outnumbered three to one, in Mississippi they are about equal to the whites in population . . . . . and everywhere their general poverty is as conspicuous as their general good nature . . . . They hold far less than a tenth of the wealth of the nation, far, far less than a third of the wealth of the South. The spectacle of a white man with a cowering urge to take steps to enforce a further "white supremacy" in these political and economic circumstances is, as we have just said, the spectacle of a bully.

"The Alabamian has been disturbed by the current activities of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Other white men have been disturbed by those activities, too, and so have some Negroes. But the concern of those white men has not been for their own safety or for the continued safety of the white race. . . . . Their concern has been that a Negro leadership having little touch with the mass of Negroes might subject that innocent mass to such livid, unreasoning, hysterically, terrified retaliation as the Bessemer speaker has given us a hint of.

"He proposes that his League to Maintain White Supremacy proceed under the Constitution. But the Constitution says that its first purpose is to insure justice, tranquility, defense, welfare and liberty to all the people of the United States."

No, you can't make Ku Kluxism legal and, we profoundly hope, you can't make cowardice respectable.

'Hope of Negro In Opinions'

RICHMOND, Va.—Declaring that "we have history, science and common sense on our side," Dr. Gordon B. Hancock, in an open letter to the Afro-American last week summed up his formula for solving race prejudice with the statement that "the one and only hope for Negroes is in a growing enlightened public opinion."

Unin's "Gloomy Dean's" letter was a sharp reply to the Afro-American's editorial of the previous week styling him as "timid" on the race question.

Dr. Hancock challenged the Afro-American to solve the race problem in Baltimore where jim-crowism, segregation and race prejudice prevail.

While praising radical Negroes like Dr. A. Clayton Powell jr, Dr. Marshall Shepard, A. Philip Randolph, Walter White and Raymond Alexander, Dr. Hancock asserted that they hadn't advised "the Negroes to go on a sit-down strike until all their wrongs are righted—forcing the issue."

For many years, Dr. Hancock, who is widely known for his advocacy of the "double-duty dollar" formula for improving the Negro's economic position in America, has focused public attention on the critical economic status of the Negro. On some occasions his analysis of the total situation facing the Negro has seemed to doom him to a hopeless condition.

White educators and leaders as well as Negro leaders in many instances have taken issue with Dr. Hancock insisting that his outlook was pessimistic and unrealistic. The Afro-American was particularly irked by his advice recently that Negroes not force the issue during the war but accept a half loaf instead of refusing any rights because they fail to secure all of them.

'Advertising Age' Asks For Equal Chance For Negro

Big Publication Wants Prompt Abandonment Of Treating Any Group As Inferior Beings

CHICAGO, Aug. [illegible] (ANP)—Another name was added to the rapidly growing list of white puglications clamoring for justice for the Negro when the weekly national advertising newspaper, "Advertising Age," in its July 27 issue printed an editorial entitled "The Future of the Negro."

Said the editorial:

"Current discussion of the market represented by Negroes in the United States parallels increasing attention to the problem of our relations with the brown, black and yellow races which have been regarded by most Caucasians, at least in this country, as inferior. The objectives of this war, to spread the four freedoms to the far corners of the earth, will demand, our best thinkers agree, a change in our attitude not only toward the Chinese, the Filipinos and the East Indians, but also toward the dark-skinned citizens of our own America.

"The Negro has made remarkable progress in this country during the past generation. Better facilities for education and greater opportunities for economic advancement have given the colored population both the aspiration and the means to satisfy, in part at least, the benefits of our free and prosperous America. Yet it remains true that the condition of the Negro, from the standpoint of literacy, health, crime and income, is still not what it should be, if he is to realize the hopes and ambitions of the leaders of his race, and incidentally become the important market for advertised goods which these millions of potentially important consumers might well be.

"No one could read Westbrook Pegler's recent burning editorial on the subject of the Negro boy who risks his life for his country in the armed forces of the United States, but returns to find the doors of opportunity closed to him, without being forced to admit that we have neglected one of our greatest human and economic resources. This is true not merely of the south, but of the whole country. Race prejudice is not the exclusive possession of any one section or group.

"It is exceedingly difficult to wipe out old barriers, but if victory in this war establishes democratic ideals and institutions all over the world, as the result of the sacrifices of American boys, white and black, then it would be ironic indeed if we failed to realize them fully in our own country. This does not mean social equality in the carpetbagger sense, but rather the chance for every American regardless of color, to share in the unlimited opportunities for personal and economic advancement which the richest country in the world should offer to all of its citizens.

"The south has been accused of holding back the development of the Negro. Yet slum conditions prevail in the great cties of the industrial north occupied by Negro families, just as they do in the south. Southern leaders have encouraged their Negro neighbors to advance along educational and industrial lines because of enlightened self-interest which realizes that educated, prosperous Negroes make better neighbors, better tenants and better customers. The same reasoning should apply to every section.

"We have the problem. Its successful solution will interest every American, but particularly those who realize that the Negro's improved ability to produce, to earn and to consume will make sounder markets and a stronger nation."

Mead vs. Talmadge

Eugene Talmadge is no parlor ornament. He is a successful man of business. He is well-to-do. He made what money he has. He utters rough remarks. He blunders. He saves money for the taxpayers of Georgia—the state treasury now has a surplus of $10,000,000. He is in every way a citizen of violent contrast to E. D. Rivers, whom he succeeded, the Rivers that carried on what he called the "Little New Deal" and spent and spent in Georgia. He enrages the Northern "intellectuals". The unionized colleges dislike him. His notions of the "negro question" arouse their ire. Sometimes Talmadge goes too far.

The "Liberalites" in the Big Towns unanimously agree that Talmadge is a fool and a villain. They draw heavily on their vocabularies of hothouse blackguardism to say so. Still, they don't seem to have caught him in any lie.

New York has a senator, a smooth person and suave, named Mead. He wrote a purling love letter to his "dear colleague", "Bob" Wagner, consenting to run for governor. He went to the White House, came out, and from the White House steps, in the manner of Olin D. Johnston, when governor, announced his candidacy. (Johnston could not beat the Smith-Byrnes combination and Mr. Roosevelt dropped him.) Mead's candidacy had the president's "approval". "Approval" means orders. He got his orders.

Time and again this Mead had said, unqualifiedly, that he would not be a candidate for governor. He had said that he was better fitted for legislative duties, not for those of an executive. He had told "Jim" Farley so. Newspapers throughout New York state quoted him time and again that he would not be a candidate for governor in 1942. Farley has had his pledges that he would not be a candidate printed. But the poor thing got its orders.

In New York many people swear by the smooth fellow. The "Labor" party adores him. It had to be "appeased". Mr. Roosevelt does not want a Farley man governor. What if this disruption of the Democratic party in New York shall elect "Tom" Dewey, the Republican? It will "stop" Farley. It will give the Rooseveltians the New York Democratic delegation in 1944—that is the "game". And what does the pledged word of a Mead violated matter?

When Talmadge visits New York, they laugh at him, the "poor hick", the "Georgia cracker". They poke fun at his "grammar". They ridicule, they scorn him, and, while they don't know it, their contempt for Talmadge unconcealed is the deep-down-in-heart contempt they feel for country people, particularly the white country and village people of the Southern states.

They have never caught Talmadge taking orders. They have never accused him of breaking his word.

In Mead and Talmadge are embodied the question that divides Americans. The question is whether the Great Cities shall abolish the rural states, their state rights, and dictate government to them.

In the case of Mead vs. Talmadge, The News and Courier stands for the defendant, stands for Georgia, stands for South Carolina and the other STATES.

Too Long, Indeed

Standing upon its consistent record as a friend of the Negro, The Selma Times-Journal, unlike certain other Alabama newspapers which currently are edited by modern scalawags who worship at the feet of Mrs. Roosevelt, has given its unqualified endorsement and support to the position taken by Governor Dixon in refusing to sign a WPB contract containing the famous "discrimination" clause.

"It has been the sincere hope and devout prayer of this newspaper," said The Times-Journal in its endorsement of Governor Dixon's action, "that the racial agitation sponsored by New Deal radicals would die of its own weight in the face of the grave war emergency now facing the nation, despite the fact that it has been mothered by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, whose genius for meddling into affairs which do not concern her is almost unprecedented. To this end The Times Journal has followed a course of moderation in recording the frenzied gyrations of the irresponsibles who have bought with public funds positions of power in Washington, and it has ignored the hysterical yappings of the so-called 'liberals' in the South itself.

"But no longer can we close our eyes to a situation which menaces both white and black of the South. Unless the seeds of hate which are being sown among us are prevented from sprouting, the harvest will be a terrible one and the sane leadership of both races must work together in order that our native land shall not be a sacrifice upon the altar of ignorance.

"With scattered exceptions, our leadership in the Congress has failed us in this growing crisis and the time has come when we must look for strength and wisdom to replace weakness and compromise. In Governor Dixon, this State has the makings of a great champion of democracy as it works best in the South, but his term will end in January and he cannot be expected to serve to the fullest of his abilities in the role of private citizen. Adequately replaced as chief executive by Chauncey Sparks who can be depended upon to remain true to the principles of the party of which he is the nominee, Governor Dixon will be free to represent the people in any capacity they desire.

"As a newspaper which did not support him in his campaign for office and is motivated by no political considerations, The Times-Journal calls upon the people of Alabama to draft Frank Dixon for service in some place of high leadership, where his courageous independence and his clear vision of the needs of the South will be of greatest value. Too long have we left our affairs in the hands of weaklings and we must quickly turn to sources of strength or we shall be lost."

Evil days have fallen on Alabama. A majority of its Congressional delegation has been drugged by lavish grants of federal patronage. To curry favor with the White House its members have passively submitted to indignities such as never before have been thrust upon the South by the Democratic party. They have closed their eyes and plugged their ears to an executive order which threatens to put their white constituents to a torture rack conceived by Walter White, president of the Association for the Advancement of the Colored Race, and erected by the wife of the President. With their jowls sunk deep in the New Deal trough these men who are supposed to represent the party of white supremacy are gorging and belching while the second coming of the carpetbaggers endangers the tranquility of their native land.

It is, as The Times-Journal suggests, time to take the leadership of this State from the weaklings and turn it over to men of courage, men whose vision has not been impaired, men who are not beholden to that "liberal" group which despises the South and tries to use the race issue to destroy it. We, too, believe that Frank Dixon can give some of the new leadership that is needed.

Salisbury Entertains

Whites in Salisbury, N.C. (pop. 4,000 Negroes, 14,000 whites) had not wanted Eleanor Roosevelt to come there to address a convention of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church of America. But last week Eleanor came just the same—her face aglow, her thoughts confused, her intentions motherly.

Legion leaders, churchmen, other Salisbury bigwigs had tried to find some way to keep Eleanor Roosevelt away. The big July 4 parade was a still-troubling memory in the town. Negro Boy Scouts had wanted to march alongside white Boy Scouts, Negro Legionnaires alongside white Legionnaires. But the parade chairman had told them: "You must forget that you live below the Mason-Dixon line, and while you are about it you can just forget the parade, too."

AUG 24 1942

Impromptu. But at the last minute a few white ladies changed their minds about being aloof. Led by Y.W.C.A. Secretary Mrs. Lula Carr, they met the First Lady at the train, arranged a luncheon, took her to see the Cannon textile mills 18 miles away, had Towel-Maker Charles Cannon explain how he treats 16,000 workers. Impressed, Mrs. Roosevelt nodded "My Day" approval in a way that would wound many a union man and flabbergast Columnist Westbrook Pegler:

Man Without a Race Stops 'Passing' And Finally Returns to Own People

People's Voice
New York, N.Y.

By ALFRED A. DUCKETT

He is a man without a race. In order to protect him from repercussions, we shall allow him to remain also a man without a name, but his stranger-than-fiction story is probably, in more dramatic form, the life story of many a Negro who has crossed the color line by virtue of straight hair, light complexion. Born, reared in white neighborhood in Brooklyn, son of a furtive dark-skinned father and a mother, half American Negro, half Spanish, he never actually knew a color line until the United States army taught it to him. At 16 he attempted to enlist, was rejected on confession of race, tried again, learned "your branch of the service is not open." Bewildered, he started out of recruiting office, was called back and asked: Would you like to go to Panama?"

He jumped at the suggestion. Recruiting officer warned him:

"You'll have to say you're Spanish."

He didn't understand, didn't care to, only wanted to go to Panama and he went. That was his first denial of his race. It happened again pretty often during his life.

MAY 16 1942

Arrived there, company commander became curious at new Spanish recruit with typical American Negro name. Questioned him closely. For next seven or eight months lived life of normal white soldier. But CC's curiosity bore fruit. Next thing he knew order had been posted stating that "for the good of the service" he was to be transferred to cavalry detachment, United States Military Academy, West Point.

The latter he ascertained was Negro company, members of which at that time played "stooge" for high and mighty West Point cadets, breaking in "bad" horses. Balking at going, our "Spanish" hero appealed to lieutenant of medical corps in Panama, asked to be transferred to latter. Application was accepted, but up popped CC again, asking No. 2 if he knew he had accepted Negro for medical corps. Transfer was promptly cancelled, Man Without a Race sent to West Point as scheduled.

Covers Up "Passing"

Arrived at West Point, underwent curious questioning as to reason for transfer. Not wishing to alienate Negro soldiers, did not reveal he had tried to "pass" in Panama. Some of Negro soldiers were suspicious, but on whole, he got on pretty well.

Not satisfied to be a flunky for cadets, we see our hero going AWOL, heading for Baltimore. Found lodging with friends (Negro), set out dressed in overalls, in search of job. Wound up at Bethlehem Steel plant. Noticed two lines of applicants—one of whites, the other of colored job-seekers. Got on white line. Noticed many whites were taken, few Negroes. He was one of those employed.

Foreman told him only job he could give him at time was with a gang of "n——s." He shrugged, accepted. After three weeks was transferred to better job held only by whites.

Several months passed. One night the truant soldier, returned from work, was eating dinner when bluecoat walked in, took him to Baltimore city jail as Government prisoner. Escorted to Fort Hoyle, a white company at Maryland. At Hoyle officers knew he was Negro, men didn't. At trial he was found guilty not of desertion, but of absence without leave. sentenced to four months in guardhouse at Maryland. Lived as one of white soldiers, no privations.

Was treated fine until arrival of another deserting soldier from West Point, also captured. This man, obviously Negro, was not accorded privileges as white. They sent him to work under individual guard armed with fixed bayonet. He was given individual sleeping quarters. Not allowed recreation. New arrival suffered all this in silence until he found he must even eat by himself. Then he put up a squawk.

Crabs in a Barrel

"He's a Negro like me. Why is he treated like a white soldier?" the new arrival demanded.

The next day our nameless hero was assigned to work with his colored constituent. He shamefully recalls that his only thought now was to look out for himself, so he objected violently, demanded why he must work side by side with a "n——r" and stated he was Spanish. Sergeant of guard believing this, replaced him with whites. At end of sentence was assigned to C Battery with Maryland detachment. Still was accepted by men as one of them, became popular with them, participated in all their work, pleasure.

On parades through Baltimore with men, Negroes lining streets pointed him out with surprised cries of:

"Look at that colored boy with those white soldiers."

White soldiers thought it was a huge joke. In contrast to his treatment, there was one Negro soldier in the battery who couldn't be discharged because of World War Service. This Negro was given special duties, not allowed to drill with whites.

Finally was returned to West Point, having made up 369 days of absence without leave, was honorably discharged.

Became cab driver in 1925, driving brother's cab. In 1930 helped elderly white woman injured in accident. Weeks later, she summoned him to thank him. Since she had an injured leg she asked him to drive her to work and call for her daily. Found she was a secretary in large office in financial disrict. This meant an additional $2.50 daily for him, so he gladly accepted. Friendly relations grew between him and the woman, she becoming his benefactor to the extent of buying him new tires, finally a new cab, then setting him up in business, sending him on trips. Over a period of years, she spent $40,000 on him which he accepted as it came—without effort—and spent the same way

Nothing Off Record

Relationship with his benefactor, he insists, was purely platonic. His explanation is:

"Someone had to be hurt and she was the one."

In 1927 married a colored girl to discover she was in love with a married man with five children. Had marriage annulled. In '29 married Italian girl and annulled this marriage also, having discovered she was streetwalker.

Next alliance was with a Swedish-American actress of no mean reputation. With her and the money of his aged benefactor, he opened up dancing school in New York. Lived in best style in exclusive section of New York. During this period began to feel pangs of remorse for denying his race, passing as white. Respected in Flatbush, passing among the best of circles and hob-nobbing at dinners, parties with officials, business men, The Man Without A Race began to "feel for" the Negro and to appreciate the problems pressing him. Devoted much time subtly to placing Negroes in jobs, helping them when in dire stress.

In 1934 bankruptcy hit him and there was no longer need for a masquerade. The Man Without A Race became out and out a Negro.

Joined civic organization in Brooklyn. Worked out plan with milk company in Brooklyn to get Negro customers and provide employment for Negro milkmen on routes. Civic organization leaders refused to back him, not having thought of idea themselves first.

1939 returned to Baltimore and Bethlehem Steel. Got on colored line. Was refused job. Tried to sneak back on white line, was discovered, refused employment.

He had been a white man, a Spaniard, a Negro. He had suffered insults heaped on Negroes and squirmed out of them with a lie on his lips. He had denied his race as long ago a man denied his country. And as that man had paid the price he had paid the price in poverty, loneliness and empty memories of grandeur.

Now he runs a "joint" in Harlem. His aged benefactor, now impoverished, still remembers him with a weekly gift in cash.

He is to be drafted 24 hours after we have finished this story.

He is worried about the future of the Negro and, seeing in PV a beam of hope and enlightenment, he came to tell us his story.

He was brought in by a question the paper asked recently of prominent Negroes, "Should a light Negro pass."

He may never again see New York City or civilian life, but if a japanese bullet lodges in his heart, he'd like to think that someone somewhere had read the story of his strange life and gained some benefit from it.

Dr. Fosdick On Race Hatred

MAY 16 1942

People's Voice
New York, N.Y.

Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick, in a sermon to Riverside church audience, pointed out the blinding effect of hate and declared that "our own sins against the colored races are cast up at us with considerable effect in the Orient by japanese propaganda."

Dr. Fosdick said nazism is dreadful about prejudice and discrimination, but "in denouncing the nazis, 'What do we more than others?'" He agreed with Pearl Buck that the strength of japan is not simply in armed forces but her powerful propaganda backed by evidence too strong to be easily gainsaid, that colored races cannot trust the white race for fair treatment as equals, and to no country does japan more often point as proof of that fact than to the United States.

Must Treat All Races as Equal, Says Mrs. F. D.

MAY 23 1942

NEW YORK—"The day of the white man's burden is over. Henceforth we must treat all races with respect as equals. And we, as individuals, must set the example in this country today and not allow prejudices to run riot."

MAY 23 1942

Thus spoke Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt here Tuesday at the opening of a two-day forum on "The Future World Order" in a hall so crowded that seats were placed in the anteroom.

To Have New Order

"I hope we have learned the lesson that isolation no longer exists," the First Lady added. "We must think as citizens of the world, of an economic system that will provide a way of life that will be satisfactory to all people everywhere.

MAY 23 1942

"The present economic processes have been satisfactory to some of us; to many others, they have been very unsatisfactory. If they are not satisfactory to ohters in the future, we won't have a permanent peace.

"I do not know what the new order will be, but must accept the fact that, whatever the price, we will pay it."

Race, Religion and Prejudice

MAY 9 1942

MAY 11 1942

MADAME CHIANG KAI-SHEK's recent articles force us all to realize that one of the phases of this war which we have to face is the question of race discrimination.

We have had a definite policy toward the Chinese and Japanese who wished to enter our country for many years, and I doubt very much if after this war is over we can differentiate among the peoples of Europe, the Near East and the Far East.

Perhaps the simplest way of facing the problem in the future is to say that we are fighting for freedom, and that one of the freedoms we must establish is freedom from discrimination among the peoples of the world, either because of race, or of color, or of religion.

The people of the world have suddenly begun to stir and they seem to feel that in the future we should look upon each other as fellow human beings, judged by our acts, by our abilities, by our development, and not by any less fundamental differences.

Here in our own country we have any number of attitudes which have become habits and which constitute our approach to the Jewish people, the Japanese and Chinese people, the German people, the Italian people, and above all, to the Negro people in our midst.

Perhaps because the Negroes are our largest minority, our attitude towards them will have to be faced first of all. I keep on repeating that the way to face this situation is by being completely realistic. We cannot force people to accept friends for whom they have no liking, but living in a democracy it is entirely reasonable to demand that every citizen of that democracy enjoy the fundamental rights of a citizen.

Over and over again, I have stressed the rights of every citizen:

Equality before the law.
Equality of education.
Equality to hold a job according to his ability.
Equality of participation through the ballot in the government.

These are inherent rights in a democracy, and I do not see how we can fight this war and deny these rights to any citizen in our own land.

The other relationships will gradually settle themselves once these major things are part of our accepted philosophy.

MAY 11 1942

It seems trite to say to the Negro, you must have patience, when he has had patience so long; you must not expect miracles overnight, when he can look back to the years of slavery and say—how many nights! he has waited for justice. Nevertheless, that is what we must continue to say in the interests of our government as a whole and of the Negro people; but that does not mean that we must sit idle and do nothing. We must keep moving forward steadily, removing restrictions which have no sense, and fighting prejudice. If we are wise we shall do this where it is easiest to do at first, and watch it spread gradually to places where the old prejudices are slow to disappear.

There is now a great group of educated Negroes who can become leaders among their people, who can teach them the value of things of the mind and who qualify as the best in any field of endeavor. With these men and women it is impossible to think of any barriers of inferiority, but differences there are and always will be, and that is why on both sides there must be tact and patience and an effort at real understanding. Above everything else, no action must be taken which can cause so much bitterness that the whole liberalizing effort may be set back over a period of many years.

Citizens Shower Cash to Aid March on Washington Group

MAY 23 1942

With its Madison Square Garden mass meeting June 16 less than a month away, the March on Washington group continues to gain support, it was officially announced by the organization's national headquarters at the Hotel Theresa this week. Designed to bring pressure on the national government to stamp out discrimination in industry and national defense, and directed by A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, the movement has enlisted the financial and moral support of a voluntary army of groups and individuals. The Garden rally will be held simultaneously with rallies by units in most of the key cities of the country. The local unit has reported contributions of $5 or more from the following:

NOT THE TIME.

To the Editor: Much has been said about the "Negro problem," and it seems to me something should be said by the instigator of this subject as to just what the Negro wants. In other words, it seems to me the subject should be settled in an amicable way. I am constrained to believe that it is "dirty" propaganda spread by some foreign agent trying to abrogate the friendly relations existing between the two races in this country. It seems to me the Negro is enjoying every privilege enjoyed by his white brother, and if he is not willing to fight for his country the same as his white brother he is not a good citizen. I am sure every good Negro citizen feels this way about the matter, and I should like to hear the views of some good Negro citizens in this regard. Let's not try to tear down what has been done for the good of both races in this country. Certainly, now is not the time to try to break the ties.

Maybe Adolf, Benito and Tojo would like to see a break between the two races in this country. Certainly this cannot happen at this time.

Fair And Just Attitude

AN EDITORIAL FROM THE PEN OF Editor Guy Smith, of the Knoxville Journal, last Sunday morning, compares in eloquent phraseology, fairness, and a just sum up of a righteous attitude, to any writings produced North or South in recent years.

JUN 15 1942

Without question, petty, arrogant, selfish, prejudiced attitudes on the part of white people toward Negroes do not exist with the men and women in places of leadership and responsibility throughout our nation, South or North, but such exhibition of intolerance and selfishness lurks in terribly annoying proportions among the lower bracket and it is just such fearless and fair editorials as the Journal editor wrote that will create the proper sentiment to correct a condition that is largely responsible for the intra-nation turmoil which we are forced to endure.

........Under the caption, "War Changes Man's Problems! Now What About The Negro," the Journal editor writes:

The Foreign Policy Association made public this past week a report by one of its staff members advocating that Alaska, Puerto Rico and Hawaii be permitted to elect their own Governors, now appointed by the President, and also that statehood for these territories should be considered.

The conclusion advanced by the report was based on considerations of loyal support now being given by these territories to our country in the war in its relationship to the Atlantic Charter.

56K

The author of the Foreign Policy Association report sees, with all the rest of the world, that foreign domination of great world populations belong to an era that is closed. Discussion of such problems as are presented in the cases at the three territories named is timely because their status is typical of the world problem which will face United Nations statesmen when peace is made.

As a matter of fact, post-war problems raised by the declaration of war aims given to the world in the name of this county by the President will call for readjustment even closer home than our overseas territories if we are to live up to them.

One such problem that will inevitably come up for re-examination in the light of our declaration of objectives will be the status of the American Negro. His future, the enlargement of his opportunity, must inevitably be of as great concern to us as the destiny of the Chinese or the Indian.

There is a certain disinclination on the part of both our people and the press to recognize the fact that there is such a problem. We often take refuge in silence when it makes itself more evident than usual but it exists and calls for intelligent handling by post-war national leaders.

Certainly we cannot undertake the solution of problems in distant lands and shy away from those within our own.

Says State Paying For Its Failure To Educate The Negro

White Boys Go To Army, Negro Left At Home

Miss. Editor Cites Inequality Of School Provisions

56K

JUN 28 1942

JACKSON, Miss.—(A N P)—By neglecting to provide adequately for Negro education, the state is now paying through the army rejecting thousands of colored selectees because of illiteracy while white youths are being drafted, an editorial in the Jackson Daily News, edited by Col. Frederick Sullens, pointed out last week.

Under the title, "Unfair to Negroes," the editorial said:

"A recent address by Hon. H. V. Watkins, pioneer educational leader, and Jackson's most useful citizen contained some unpleasant revelations concerning the inadequacy of the Negro school system in Hinds county and rank injustices to the Negro race in the apportionment of school funds.

"It was unpleasant, but it should not have been interpreted as meaning that Hinds county is alone in this respect. The same or similar conditions prevail generally over the state, and in some counties are infinitely worse than in Hinds county.

"Take for illustration our neighboring county of Madison. Last census in that county showed a total white population of 7,560 and a total Negro population of 28,127. In spite of this large Negro population there is not a single four-year high school in the county, outside the city of Canton. The census report also reveals that there were 2,360 Negro boys and girls in Madison county of high school age. It is no wonder Negro draftees are being turned down by draft boards because they do not have as much as a fourth grade education. We thought we were smart in getting by with this neglect staring us in the face when we're having to send our own boys as cannon fodder for the Germans in order to fill up the gap left by Negro illiterates."

"We also find from public records that during the school year 1940-41 Madison county school authoriites spent $30,711.63 on a colored school population of 14,151 children, while they spent $141,221.35 on a white school population of only 2,784. If this is not chiseling and fudging, we should like to know what it is. We cannot put this question aside by saying that the Negroes do not pay taxes. Everybody pays taxes in Mississippi. We find from the records there are 649 individual white farmers, owning 118,261 acres of land in Madison county, and 518 individual colored farm owners, owning 4,976 acres of land in this same county.

"In all our counties similar conditions will be found. It is unjust and closely approaches down-right dishonesty, if not criminality."

Whites Refuse To Buy Bonds From Negro

New York Community Thumbs Down Woman's Efforts

JUL 4 1942

56K

NEW YORK—More interested in clinging to race hatred than in helping the war effort, white residents of Queens borough, Addesleigh section, refused to sign pledges to buy War Bonds and stamps for Mrs. Lora Lewis, Minute Woman in the War Savings campaign, only because she is a Negro.

The NAACP national office wired John T. Madden, chairman of the New York War Pledge June 24, notifying him that such insults have a harmful reaction on Negro citizens who volunteer their services to their country. "Negro Americans are resentful and bitter over their treatment by many thoughtless white persons in all phases of the war effort," the NAACP said, "but they are determined to support to the limit of their ability our common country in this most critical time so that the Hitlerism which this Queens incident exemplifies shall not become the American pattern of living."

On Thursday Wendell Willkie and Mayor LaGuardia signed pledges through Mrs. Lewis.

Racial Problems Under Discussion By Negro Leaders

Group Takes Bus Situation Under Advisement; Promises Fullest Co-operation

Mobile's bus transportation problem was discussed from a racial angle at a closed meeting of the Mobile branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, held yesterday afternoon at the Metropolitan A. M. E. Church on Davis Avenue, but no action was taken, according to a statement issued after the meeting by a committee from the N. A. A. C. P.

The statement, subscribed to by the seven members of the committee, follows:

Statement Issued

"The N. A. A. C. P., at a meeting Sunday afternoon, discussed the devising of means to alleviate, in a lawful way, the bus problems affecting the races in Mobile.

"A proposal that colored people begin walking to work, to church, to the stores, etc., was discussed, but action was held in abeyance pending a conference with officials of the National City Lines.

"It was proposed that an interracial meeting for white and colored people be arranged in the hope that the policy of the Golden Rule may be advanced. Those present promised that the negro race will adhere strictly to a policy of courtesy, politeness and fair play toward other people."

Leaders Sign Statement

Subscribing to the statement were M. J. Jackson, president of the Mobile branch of the N. A. A. C. P.; J. L. LeFlore, secretary of the branch; N. Rivers, contractor; Prof. C. E. Powell, principal of Dunbar High school; Cleveland Woolfe, president of Local 1410, International Longshoremen's Association; Frank P. Thomas, editor of the Mobile Weekly Review, and the Rev. H. E Carter, pastor of the Ann Street Presbyterian Church.

Is Dr. Sanford Mistaken? Read What Miss Moore Says About Negro Meeting

SEP 4 - 1942

Athens, Ga.
Sept. 1, 1942.

Chancellor S. V. Sanford,
Athens, Ga.

SEP 4 - 1942

Dear Sir:

I have read your article in reference to the University in Sunday's Banner-Herald, and in the Atlanta Journal and Constitution.

I do not desire to enter into any controversy with you, but I feel it my duty to correct certain errors which are contained in your article in reference to the meeting of negroes held in Peabody Hall, May 18th., and 19., 1938. I happened to have been employed as a reporter to take down what was said in that meeting, and I was present during the two days of this meeting. I do not know why you should have waited until this late day to deny what I stated in the daily papers last November.

In your article the first sentence reads as follows:

"I HAVE REMAINED SILENT LONG AS I CAN."

AFTER HAVING WAITED ALL THESE MONTHS, I DO NOT SEE WHY YOU COULD NOT HAVE WAITED TEN DAYS LONGER UNTIL AFTER THE ELECTION. Your statement is evidently a political statement meant to influence votes, but I cannot allow your statement to go unchallenged for whatever purpose it may have been made when you contradict the facts as I know them and as I have heretofore stated them.

You state in this article, evidently issued for political purposes, the following:

"Dr. Cocking conducted the meeting, and contrary to public statements I was present, and so were some other white people. I did not hear anything said at that meeting contrary to the traditions of the Southern people."

This statement is not in accordance with the truth and you know it. What are the facts? NOT A WHITE MAN WAS PRESENT AT THIS MEETING EXCEPT YOU AND COCKING. YOU SAY OTHER WHITE PEOPLE WERE PRESENT. I CHALLENGE YOU TO GIVE THE NAMES OF SUCH PERSONS. ONLY NEGROES WERE PRESENT, and I am attaching hereto a list of all persons present as was required by Cocking. There is not a white man in that list. YOU STATE THAT YOU WERE PRESENT, AND THAT IS ONLY A HALF-TRUTH. You did come into this meeting on the first day, just before they adjourned in the afternoon. You stepped in and took a seat by Cocking and were introduced by him as the "Beloved Chancellor." You then spoke for about 15 minutes. I started to take down in shorthand your speech, but after a few minutes Cocking said: "Do not take down Dr. Sanford's speech." Immediately after you had closed your address of welcome, the meeting adjourned, and I want to state most positively that you never at any time heard any of these discussions between Cocking and these negroes. Therefore, you could very easily say that you heard nothing contrary to the traditions of the Southern people. I have my notes and you began your speech as follows:

"I am going to make it very informal. I am delighted to see you present and taking such a vital interest in this program as to what we should do to make education better."

Then you continued your speech, and when you had finished, you walked out of the building, and you never came back.

I do not see how you can say that other white people were present. This statement was evidently made to deceive and to make people think that it was an open meeting and not a secret negro meeting.

SEP 4 - 1942

The next day Cocking closed his meeting with the following statement:

"I do not want anybody to go away mistaken as to why I called a meeting last week of white folks, and why I have called a meeting of negroes. I thought if I called a meeting together that the white folks would do all the talking, and you would do all the thinking and would not talk and would not accomplish anything."

You did not deny categorically what I have stated in the newspapers occurred at that meeting. You were not even there. No man can deny this report of that meeting. I took down what was said by Cocking and what was said by the negroes, and I have that record transcribed, and I have the original stenographic notes. I made three full copies of what was said at that meeting and delivered them to Cocking. What did he do with these three copies? Dr. Cocking and the Rosenwald trustees must have these copies. Why don't they produce them? I saw what purported to be a copy of the report of Cocking to the Regents. This was not a full and true copy of my report. The wife of Dr. Jacobs told me that her husband had received $75.00 to take my report and delete it, color and make it readable as a report to the Board of Regents for Cocking.

I am not concerned with the academic questions raised by you as to what was the intention of Cocking, or as to what investigation you made of Cocking, or who brought him into the University. All I am concerned with is my report of that meeting, and Chancellor Sanford I am insisting that you see me and let me show you the full report, and also my stenographic notes, and I invite you to bring with you a stenographer who writes the Graham-Pittman system. I know that you will not do this because you do not want the truth. You attempted to write an article in general terms that amouns to nothing. If my record is not correct, I want you to deny it after reading the full report. If it is false, it is strange that Cocking has never yet denied that report and all that was said by him and these negroes. Anybody reading this report of technical terms, the Tennessee case, and other references, would know that no stenographer could make up such a report. You read, I am informed, the excerpts from my report when first printed.

I have been a stenographer and court reporter here at Athens for many years, and no lawyer or court has questioned the accuracy of my records.

I had no interest in this matter whatsoever, and reported this meeting as I would have reported any other meeting. I received a check out of the treasury of the University of Georgia for $200.00. PEOPLE HERE AT ATHENS KNOW YOU, AND KNOW ME. LET THEM DECIDE BETWEEN US.

Because of the position you hold, and because of the political situation, the papers have printed what you had to say in 5 or 6 columns. I am going to present this article to the press, and I hope that they will be fair enough to print my reply to this charge which you have made against me and my record.

Very truly yours,
MADGE MOORE...

New Pearl Buck, Discovered in Richmond, Hits Discrimination and Injustices in South; Says We Need More Brotherhood

By OLGA L. ROSMANITH

I still think there is something important to say on the Waller case.

I was appalled at the attitude of the trial judge. He should have been trained in judicial thinking, in impartiality, the ability to weigh the entire chain of cause and effect leading up to the crime.

SGK

The primal cause, of course, is in the indifference of privileged and also commercially supported society to the unlucky people born into circumstances which force them to live on their wits and, through the world's most cruel paradox, the circumstances which give the least training for the wits. They are born to the most difficult life and therefore given the least preparation for it.

Born to doom.

There is a little poem of William Blake's in which occur the lines:

AUG 29 1942

"Some are born to sweet delight
"Some are born to endless night."

The world is now bleeding and crying because of this and even the most obtuse and indifferent people are stirring in their trance and admitting something must be done about it.

What?

There is too much work for organized societies to cope with. Everybody must work according to his power and ability. We all have some power, even a little. If we all used what little we had, we'd all be thriving and helping each other.

AUG 29 1942

I was born privileged in a family which believed in girls being given the same educational opportunities as boys. I got so much and of such a wide variety that I felt at the time I was being persecuted.

So I'm willing to state in public that I feel I am one of the persons responsible for conditions such as Waller endured and such as thousands of others are now enduring.

Ready to Do Something

But I'm going to do something about it. I see that just being humane and generous when I see the need for it isn't enough. I must go and look at things I would otherwise never see and do something about them.

I've had a wonderful life. I can afford to dedicate the rest of it to the cause of all human beings having a wonderful life while they're right here and not in the next world. The future is now. There's never any other.

From now on my pen, my education, my strength is dedicated to the cause of brotherhood.

My skin is white and I see nothing to crow about. It's an accident. If my heart is white that's my responsibility.

I grew up with a stepfather who was a famous engineer who built harbour works in Africa. He loved the Africans. His three best friends were a Hindu prince, a Chinese tea merchant and an African Congo chief who came to visit us in England.

No Racial Superiority

I learned when I was a little girl that skin color has nothing to do with racial superiority. That's the same exploded nonsense as royal blood being blue.

If any race wants to claim superiority for being civilized while the English were painted savages, let us kowtow to the Chinese. They were scholars and philosophers while our husbands were clubbing us in wolf skins.

The colored people are now Americans. Americans — not colored persons!

A little while ago some expert on such matters was moaning about the budget deficit in Richmond.

Why not? Nearly one third of the population is insufficiently educated, unable to share equally in commercial and professional opportunities and improperly housed.

This important group of people should be well educated, well dressed, well housed and contributing to the prestige and prosperity of the city. The land they live on should have a higher taxable value because of the value of the good houses and the incomes of the inhabitants.

It may be a long time before the colors will mix together freely with as little consciousness of color as a blonde woman has when out with a man with red hair, but a beginning could be made by giving colored people a chance to develop mentally so that their sections are not slums but residential sections like Ginter Park.

Whatever great power made the trees and flowers and birds, I'm sure there was no intention they should only be enjoyed by the palefaces.

I mix with colored people and Hindus and Chinese and I am not conscious of difference in color. I am often conscious of mental inferiority to some of them, but I hide this as much as possible and learn where I can.

Apologizes for Jim Crow

White people who have antimacassars and wax flowers in their coats of arms miss a great deal by not going out and warming their blood at the great fires of humanity. Many such wither in loneliness or end in asylums with nervous breakdowns on account of life's horrible monotony.

Nature exacts a price for these crimes against the cosmic heart, and will go on doing so till we see what is the matter with us.

AUG 29 1942

Being accustomed to the society of all races and people, I feel embarrassed to ride in a Richmond bus when "colored persons" ride in the back and very often some quite inferior white specimens ride in the front. I feel as if I ought to apologize, and disclaim personal responsibility.

I apologize here and disclaim personal responsibility.

Suggests Name for Race

If colored people must be named as a distinctive species and not as Americans, why not Afro-Americans like Latin-Americans? Chinese and Japs are colored too in the sense they are not white, but are not called "colored persons."

This is important because this generation of children is growing up to carry on outmoded ways of yesterday merely through imbibing names and habits. Our children should not use these labels nor grow up to see good Americans being sorted into sheep and goats in the bus.

And a last, but extremely important point is this. If we accept the old mode of the punishment fitting the crime, regardless of its causes, how would anyone reading this like to be under sentence of death, date fixed for execution and five times reprieved and date fixed again?

Waller has already suffered many thousand times more than the man he shot, who was not aware he was going to be shot. He has already paid for that crime in old-fashioned punishment.

This is worse than the cat with the mouse, because the cat has not had the benefit of a high school education, but the judges have had more.

Value of Friendship

The war, with its mounting destruction of material values, is bringing home to us that the greatest source of human happiness is not wealth but friendship—a friendship that will some day girdle the world so that we can all travel everywhere and feel at home on every place we stand.

We could learn that friendship here by starting brotherhood in the States. We will have to because this will someday be the guiding force of the world, and if we cannot be friends with each other at home, how can we influence such a thing abroad?

We've got to grow up, that's the thing. The judge in the Waller case is not adult, neither are the people who are blind to the implications of this war because they are still discussing the injustices of the Civil War.

I thought I had traveled quite a distance when my criterion of superiority ceased to be family and became mentality. Now I go the next step and claim that superiority consists in the universality of the heart.

There's nothing sentimental about this. It's social science—the mind at its best. I give you the brilliant examples of the type of mind which impels the universal heart:

Thomas Mann, Pearl Buck, Dr. Lin Yutang, Claude Bragdon, President Roosevelt, Mahatma Gandhi, Abraham Lincoln, Rabindranath Tagore, Professor Einstein, Madame Chiang Kai-shek, Hendrik Willem van Loon—the list is a long one and the world's most lustrous names are in it.

Let us keep pride in aristocracy, yes, but let it be the aristocracy of heart and action, the first ineffectual without the second, the second destructive without the first.

No Early Funeral

The Pittsburgh Courier, that widely circulated negro newspaper which is developing its energies to trying to have segregation laws in the South wiped out, said in a recent issue (using large type in a two-column display):

> "Well may War, the great gravedigger, leer down at the last resting place of white supremacy * * * because there will be no resurrection."

The reason there will be "no resurrection" is because there will be no death. An aroused people, deeply determined to save Southern civilization, will see to that in spite of the best efforts of wild-eyed zealots from outside the South who are exerting every effort to accomplish this hideous result.

"Uncle Tom's"? Funeral

JUN 27 1942

FRANK CROSSWAITH, keynoting the March-on-Washington Movement rally at the Garden last week, declared: "This is the first funeral I ever attended in Madison Square Garden. This is a funeral because, like every other black man, woman and and child here tonight, I am here to bury in the grave of forgetfulness the type of black man that America too long has known."

Mr. Crosswaith thus intimated that one of the main objectives in leadership strategy today is to rid the racial front of "Uncle Toms" and "Aunt Dinahs" so that the traditional unholy business of selling us out and for a price, will be eliminated. Excellent. There is nothing more despicable, yet tragic, than the Negro with the bouncy legs, especially around the knees, whose head bobs up and down and whose teeth are perennially skinned at the slightest glance of a white person. He stands (or has stood) upon the threshold and with the two-faced cunning of centuries of experience inbred in him, waved to the rest of us to "keep quiet"; telling us "the time ain't ripe;" "you just got to stand white fo'ks; dey ain't all bad," etc.

Some day somebody is going to write a book on the art of Uncle Tomming. It has been an art all these years since slavery and a very profitable art to quite a number of us whom we all know. There was an excuse for a bouncy-legged "Uncle Tom" in the days of slavery when the "uncles" and the "aunts" got better food from the big house for their children in the plantation cabins by bowing and scraping and showing their teeth. But today—we don't want it if it has to come through an almost complete renunciation of manhood. We are at the stage today when "Uncle Toms" and "Aunt Dinahs" should be hunted out, ostracized and made into examples. We don't need them any more. The 20,000 who attended the New York "funeral" should be duplicated in every town, village and hamlet where we live throughout the length and breadth of this land until all are eliminated. Then, we can march on.

Dothan, Ala. Eagle
August 4, 1942

Editor,
The Eagle:

Sometime one feels the necessity for intruding himself into an issue or some place where it would seem at first glance he was distinctly out of place and such may be the case with me at this particular time.

I have read so much and heard so much relative to the problem of segregation and social equality between the negro race and the Southern white man that it seems timely to have something to say about it.

In the first place the southern negro has not precipitated this asinine quarrel and certainly the southern white man should be big enough to consider the source of some of our troubles and to thoroughly ignore these sources.

If this matter continues to be fanned by public discussion and other media then we surely will have some trouble because of the issues involved, for there are always hot-headed men in every race who will not pause for reason.

I believe that I have as many friends among the negroes of this section as any other white man and I believe I have their respect as well, for I have tried to understand their problems and their hardships and have sought the friendship of the most humble among them.

I do not belive that a continuance of public airing of this difficulty is going to get us to any place but to some impasse which will cause real trouble and I therefore urge that this matter be dropped from discussion for the negroes are not asking for this unseemly publicity and we should avoid it.

Concerning the policies of segregation and racial distinction, in every respect, it is my opinion that there is not an intelligent negro in the South who would change our present status and if we white people will allow our negroes to handle these outside disturbing influences I sincerely believe they will amply solve it to their satisfaction as well as ours.

Our Southern negro knows that his race is not singled out for persecution, for oftentimes he has worked shoulder to shoulder with the poor tenant farmer and other members of the white race who too have lacked opportunity to establish themselves and he has had occasion to see that his lot is no worse, and indeed often better, than the average white man of the south.

We are engaged in a life or death struggle, both for the white man and for the negro, and it is needful that we lay aside all the petty quarrels which outsiders would force upon us and put everything we have into this struggle, for negro blood is going to color the earth in far flung places alongside the blood of the white man and all in the name and for the sake of freedom and we must not allow trouble mongers who do not know us or our lives to come among us and upset us.

This letter exceeds the prescribed length but I feel that you will find enough of merit in it somewhere to print it despite its length, for there are issues involved which we must face and which must be solved.

I hear that there are a large number of so-called "northern" negro soldiers at nearby camps who present some sort of problem.

May I suggest that L. Price, Monroe Page and other negro leaders whom men of that type may select, be appointed a committee to inform and guide these soldiers and other people of the negro race who might conceivably misunderstand to the end that perfect harmony and understanding may take place and continue to exist.

Dr. Jamison has been particularly energetic in working for the best interest of his race and, knowing Dr. Jamison personally, I can vouch for the fact that he represents, as do many other negro leaders in this section, the highest type negro and that these leaders will settle any difficulty which might arise through the misguided efforts of others.

The above is simply my own idea of settling this friction and removing it and I have perfect confidence in my negro friends to assure me that they will function in such way as we shall hear no more of this silly quarrel which is not of our doings but brought to us by people who would use such friction and the ensuing trouble to gain their own dirty ends with us and who would enslave the negro along with his white friend if they could get control of us by any expedient whatever.

Let us understand that people who would make trouble between friends are not to be trusted by either and should be properly told to get out and stay out and that edict enforced by all peoples.

Having lived in the north and having been closely associated with people above the "Smith and Wesson line" I know that the people who are trying to make trouble for us all are what our old negroes call "poor white trash," for the average northern man or woman is made of the same clay we are and is just as fine as any of us, no finer nor worse.

The so-called "northern" negro is simply one of our own who moved north unprepared, sometimes, for the change in his environment and so perhaps not quite so understanding as he might have been.

I call on all good men, white and black, to work together for peace and harmony and a mutural understanding based on reason and thoughtful course and if this does follow we shall have an end of all this shameful bickering between us.

Sincerely,

JOHN A. KEYTON.

Negro Aid Misdirected

To The News and Courier:

Although the work being done to improve the condition of the colored race is good in purpose, the plan by which it is being done is destitute of reason. As the efforts of the promoters are directed against the segregation and the negro's inability to vote it must be thought that they are the cause of existing inequalities.

One need study only American history to find that such is not the case. Both segregation and the inability to vote are a result of inequalities and not the cause. To remove the results without removing the causes, would ruin the plan of uplifting the negro. Unless the actual belief in segregation is destroyed, to put an end to its practice would introduce conditions similar to those which followed the emancipation proclamation. The right to vote will not help the negro. It can do harm.

As the emancipation proclamation failed to improve the condition of the negro, inequalities must date back to that act. The South, prior to the war which led to the act, was almost equal in wealth to the North. Had the wealth of the two sections increased equally the negro could have, as Northern workers did, forced employers to pay them better wages. But, as it is a known fact that economic inequalities now exist between the South and other sections, it cannot be understood by the writer how the promoters of the plan to improve the negro can expect to do so unless they first improve the section in which the negro resides.

H. R. Helper, in "The Impending Crisis of the South", gives a good illustration of a cause of the South's economic condition. The book was written in 1857 but accurately describes the South today. He said:

"In infancy we are swaddled in Northern muslin; in childhood we are humored with Northern gewgaws; in youth we are instructed out of Northern books; at the age of maturity we sow our "wild oats" on Northern soil; in middle life we exhaust our wealth, energies and talents in . . . entailing our dependence on our children . . .; in the decline of life we remedy our eyesight with Northern spectacles and support our infirmities with Northern canes; in old age we are drugged with Northern physic; and, finally when we die, our inanimate bodies, shrouded in Northern cambric, are stretched upon the bier, borne to the grave in a Northern carriage, entombed with a Northern spade, and memorized with a Northern slab".

The situation has grown worse now than when Mr. Helper lived. We would starve to death were the packing hou[illegible] of Chicago to burn or should there be a famine in California.

Is it actually thought by any person that the right to vote can help the negro prosper in the land described above? A person without water in a desert doesn't blame his lack of water on laws. They are the least of his worries.

The inequalities which exist in education may be removed by the negro by the same method Booker T. Washington removed them. His method was ambition, and the ability to study after he had worked from sunrise to sunset. The government of the United States still grants any person, white or colored, the right to improve himself mentally. Unless a person has enough ambition to improve himself mentally he cannot hope to remove other inequalities though he live in a wealthy location.

Some centuries ago Confucius said: "In archery we have something like the way of the superior man. When the archer misses the center of the target he turns round and seeks for the cause of his failure in himself".

Low Grade Politics

Our neighboring state of Georgia is in the throes of a political campaign, and an unfortunate issue—the racial situation—has been injected into the gubernatorial race between Governor Eugene Talmadge and his opponent, Ellis Arnall, present Attorney General.

In practically every speech, the red-gallused Talmadge blares forth with his promise "never to allow social equality between the Negro and white races in Georgia." Arnall retorts that the racial issue is "spurious and does not exist, except in the mind of Talmadge."

The latest event in this uncalled-for situation is the order of Col. Lindley L. Camp, a Talmadge aide and commander of the State Home Guard, placing the Guard forces "on the alert" to prevent any racial outbreaks.

While we confess that we are not "on the inside" of Georgia politics, and are merely onlookers from a distance, we cannot see where the injection of the racial issue into the campaign can do the state any good. Certainly, it does not add to the stature of either candidate for such a high office as chief executive of the Empire State of the South.

The editor of The Augusta (Ga.) Herald, Millwee Owens, has called on both candidates to purge the racial issue from their contest for the governorship, and all thinking citizens will agree with his views as expressed in the following telegram to Governor Talmadge and Mr. Arnall:

"In the interest of promoting the war effort and for the purpose of maintaining law and order in Georgia, the undersigned is making telegraphic appeal to each of you that the race issue be purged from present political campaign in Georgia.

"It is apparent to all that the matter has been discussed at such length that the issue is familiar to every voter and reiteration and re-emphasis of the question may lead to serious disturbances in our state and cannot possibly serve any useful purpose at this time.

"The subject has no place in politics and I am urging that each of you, as good Georgians, desist in making the race question an issue. The matter ought to be discussed calmly and dispassionately when the heat of the political campaign has cooled. If the question warrants general airing, then after war, or at least after election, is the time to open it up for debate.

"I hope that each of you will not only cease to discuss it, but that you will appeal to newspapers sponsoring your platform to take similar action."

As Mr. Owens states in his wire, it is best by far to "let sleeping dogs lie," and the constant repetition of racial charges can only add fuel to flames that should be subdued as quickly as possible. It has been our observation that when a person or group of persons asks for trouble, they generally find it, and that if racial outbreaks do occur in Georgia, they can be laid at the door of the present political campaign.

Strength Was Northern

"Honest discussion of the wartime menace to racial, religious and political minorities, by a forewarning of the consequences, develops a sober public judgment that will prevent any tendency toward a repetition of such national ignominies as the Ku Klux Klan and such calamities as the series of race riots in our cities which grew out of the emotionalism of the First World war."

Following the First World war were no "race riots" in the South. They were in such enlightened communities as Washington, D. C., Chicago, Illinois, and New York, New York. (In South Carolina has been no race riot since 1898.)

The latter day "Ku Klux Klan" was more powerful in Indiana than in any other state. It controlled Indiana, elected a governor and other officers. In Pennsylvania, Ohio, New Jersey it had tens of thousands of members. In Washington, D. C., it held a meeting and paraded. Thirty thousand or more persons were in the parade, and the delegations from Southern states were so small that they were hardly noticed.

At least one repentant "Kluxer" has been appointed to the United States supreme court by the New Deal administration, and it would not be a bad guess that dozens of them from Indiana have been appointed to office by it. The News and Courier has no more to say in defense of the "Klan" now than it had when it had some following in South Carolina, but it directs attention to the indisputable fact that in the North, not the South, this institution had most political influence.

Setback To Prejudice

The voters of South Carolina in a Democratic primary have expressed their opinion of a candidate who injects the racial issue into his campaign. They turned down the candidacy for the United States Senate of Eugene S. Blease, running against the incumbent, Senator Burnet R. Maybank.

Other factors undoubtedly entered into the result, but Blease in the closing weeks of the campaign made a strong issue of the racial question. In that regard he was imitating an earlier politician of his name in South Carolina, who achieved a degree of success through appeals to prejudice. Perhaps it can be hoped now that South Carolina has gotten away from the mentality that pushed to the limelight such men as Cole Blease and Ben Tillman.

One would like to hope, too, that the attitude of the South Carolina voters will spread across into Georgia, where on Sept. 9 the Democrats will choose between candidates for governor, one of whom is Gov. Eugene Talmadge, who has brought shame and disgrace to Georgia, especially to its educational system, by his attitude toward interracial questions.

AUG 30 1942

Most of the time the voters of this country can be counted upon to act sanely. Once in a while they slip up, led away by a smooth-tongued demagogue like Huey Long or Eugene Talmadge. But for the most part they dislike candidates who stir up trouble where none exists or who fan into flames that which is only embers.

AUG 30 1942

Perhaps the South Carolina result indicates that voters particularly deplore racial appeals at this time. With a war going on, and unity needed more than ever, it is not the time for widening old schisms. On the contrary, it is playing into the hands of the Nazis, with their "divide and conquer" propaganda technique. To do so merely in the hope of winning a few votes and thereby sliding into office lacks a lot of being statesmanship.

Penalties of Being Colored

OCT 17 1942

The American system has been for the Negro to be kept hungry if he is too militant; fat and sleek if he "Uncle Toms." This is factual. It bears no trimmings and embellishments: the Negro's conditions is aggravated or eased to the degree in which he lowers himself from the standards the world accepts for manhood. That is why there is such a vast difference in cost of foodstuffs and rents in the black belts, the Harlems of the United States. That is the real reason why the statement by the N.A.A.C.P., "Foods Costs More in Harlem," is terribly true. Figures by the N.A.A.C.P. show that the cost to the Negro on a national scale to be able to eat regularly, is in excess of 100 million dollars a year. This figure is based on an expenditure of $3 a week per person as contrasted with the Bureau of Labor statistics estimate averaging expenditures including those of the southern sharecropper as $5 per week per person.

OCT 17 194

Shop in Harlem for a cut of pork, a pound of beans, a can of tomatoes, or a head of lettuce. Then shop for the same items in Yorkville, in upper Washington Heights, or in some of the lilywhite areas of the Bronx. Compare the prices and the fact that it costs more to live in Harlem will stand out like a sore thumb. Go through the daily newspapers classified advertising sections and note the rentals for apartments on the outskirts of Harlem and compare them with what you are paying; note the extra services offered; the locations, and the type of buildings these apartments are in. Then weigh these findings against what you are paying and the

Wendell Willkie Calls Upon America To Wipe Out Unjust Racial Barriers

MAR 26 1942

5-6k

The following are the opening remarks of Wendell L. Willkie as Chairman of the Inaugural Dinner of Freedom House, which was held in the Grand Ballroom of the Commodore Hotel, Thursday evening, March 19th, 1942.

This meeting is the inaugural dinner of Freedom House, a house, as its name indicates, symbolizing freedom, its membership dedicated to the advancement of the cause of freedom throughout the world.

Obviously among the purpose of the founders of Freedom House is the encouragement of our armed forces who constitute the battle line on which we fight for freedom throughout the world. Another purpose is to stimulate the people of America to support the cause of freedom everywhere.

I wonder sometimes, however, whether we are not a little pharisaical or perhaps ever presumptuous in our high-minded statements about freedom. Are we always as alert to practice it here as home as we are to proclaim it abroad? Do we accord freedom to all of our citizens?

On December 20th in a belated press dispatch describing the personal heroism of men and officers during the Pearl Harbor attack, occurred this sentence: "A Negro mess attendant who never before had fired a gun, manned, a machine gun on the bridge until his ammunition was exhausted." A Negro mess attendant. Who was he? For weeks newspapermen and columnists asked that question of the Navy Department.

Letters began to come from all over the country. Commentators began to speak of the "unnamed Negro messman."

MAR 26 1942

Finally the office of the Secretary of the Navy was able to identify him, and on March 5th sent this story to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which had been seeking the information.

Doris Miller was born in Waco, Texas, the third son in a family of four brothers. In 1939 when he was 20, he entered the Navy as a mess boy, the only classification in which the Navy accepted Negroes. He had been two years a mess boy in the service at the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor.

In company with two officers and several enlisted men, Miller was on the signal bridge of a battleship when the commanding officer of the vessel received a fatal abdominal wound. While the others sought to construct a stretcher to lower the Captain to a safer location, a Naval Reserve Lieutenant and Miller manned a pair of machine-guns and fired upon the attacking planes until fires started by bombs rendered the machine guns useless.

Unable to lower their Captain on an improvised stretcher, four officers and men, including Miller carried him from the blazing bridge of the ship to the more sheltered deck under the portside anti-aircraft guns.

Dying, the Captain ordered the officers and men to abandon ship. Finding other means of escape blocked because of the flames, they made their way to shore, hand over hand, along lines strung deckward from a boat crane.

The dispatches give us no further news of that boy and we know none of the details of his life except that single fine act of judgment and self-sacrificing courage. But there's one fact we know positively and exactly; he cannot enlist in the United States Navy and only for the reason that he was born with black skin.

A few weeks ago, I sat in Madison Square Garden and I watched a perfect specimen of physical manhood risk his World's Championship order to raise almost $100,000 for the Naval Relief Society. A few nights ago, I listened to that same young man make a speech to twenty thousand people at another Naval Relief Society rally in Madison Square Garden—a simple speech, an ungrammatical speech, yet eloquent and moving. He was preparing to fight in an army uniform. he could not have been preparing to fight in a Navy uniform for his skin was black.

Now you lovers of freedom — I don't think this is right in a free country. Won't you, while you are proclaiming the necessity for freedom throughout the world, devote some time to bringing about a correction of this injustice at home, an injustice which makes a mockery of all our fine words. Don't you think that as American citizens, we should insist that our government and Navy Department eliminate the bar that prohibits any American citizen from serving his country?

What We Defend

It cannot be said often enough. There can be too much emphasis on the better world for which the United Nations are fighting. It carries the danger of suggesting that our present world is not worth defending against Hitler.

J. B. Priestley, writing from London in our Magazine last Sunday, came very close to suggesting this. He admitted that for the people of the Nazi-occupied countries the destruction of Hitler is a good enough objective. But for the uninvaded democracies, meaning Britain and the United States, the end of the Nazi menace is, after all, a "negative" war aim. The only thing that will really brace Americans and Britons to the supreme war effort is the hope of the better world that we shall build after the victory. A world in which the common people will not be exploited by any one, etc.

Credit and Debit

Over here, too, we hear more and more of this better America which we shall create after the defeat of fascism. Unavoidably the implication runs that our present America in itself would scarcely be worth while defending. To encourage such a belief is plainly not conducive to morale, for this better world to come is, after all, a world in the future. What guarantees are there that we shall succeed in bringing it to pass?

After the last war Lloyd George promised his people a Britain fit for heroes to live in. If you now suggest that the present Britain is far from redeeming that promise you are bound to raise doubts about the future. That is precisely what many isolationists were doing before Pearl Harbor. Another crusade, they said, to save the world? Another war to establish permanent peace?

For public morale in a war for survival a tolerably good world in the hand is worth more than a Better World in the bush. A war to defend the America that we have is a worth-while war. Anything that manages to forget our credits and to overstress our failures does not help to win the war.

Wrongs of the Negro

An instance in case would be a letter on this page yesterday signed by half a dozen well-known names and dealing with the wrongs of our Negro people. What the writers say about the slurs and indignities to which the Negro is subjected in the everyday manners and conventions of white Americans will hardly brook contradiction. They go on to enumerate the more serious problems of the colored people, like the ban on Negro voters in the South and the lower standards of Negro health and education. Here, too, the charges are, mostly, well taken. And yet the whole story suffers badly from mentioning only the failures and forgetting the gains. The letter concludes with the following challenge:

"Most Negroes are inclined to believe that they have everything to gain by a victory of the United Nations. But it is not enough to 'incline to believe.' They should be made to feel certain of it."

Negro College Students

But obviously the most effective way of convincing the Negro people that it will be a better America for them after the victory is to show that it has been getting to be a better America for the colored people in the past. There is, for instance, the case of higher education. There the writers say that Negro youth have only one-fifth the opportunity of white youth to go to college.

Actually the Negro proportion in the colleges is one-third instead of one-fifth. The Negro college students are nearly 50,000 out of 1,500,000 American college students, whereas the right proportion would be 150,000 Negro students. But that is a detail. The thing to do is to stop and think what it means that a population of 13,000,000 Negroes should have 50,000 college students. It is a ratio in higher education nowhere approached in the most advanced nations of white Europe before the last war.

Crowded High Schools

We will not compare a Negro college in America with a British, French or German university, except to mention that before the First World War these three countries with a joint population of 160,000,000 had only 120,000 university students. But it is permissible to compare our Negro colleges with European secondary schools. Then we can say that college education for our Negroes today is about as common as secondary education was a generation ago for the people of England, France or Germany.

Or if we match high school against high school then our 350,000 Negro high school students today should be compared with approximately twice as many British high school students—for a British population nearly four times as large. Our colored people have freer access to secondary education than the people of Great Britain.

Under the circumstances, why should the Negroes be "uncertain" about the future?

Saboteurs: Native Born

ONE YEAR AGO this week, the writer of this column sounded the alarm, calling attention to the ever-lurking danger America faces, not so much from alien agents, who can be so easily spotted, but from the native-born, 'made-in-America' little Hitlers, whose boring-from within tactics are three times more deadly than the work of a lone alien saboteur. With a two-front war on our hands the danger has been increased ten fold.

But thus far the Department of Justice apparently finds nothing disturbing in the undercover work of our native-born sympathizers with Hitler's much-heralded "New Order." Make no mistake about it. They are still here. Though momentarily silenced by an America angered over Pearl Harbor, they are now back at their old stands doing more business than usual.

MACKAY

They would not hesitate for a moment to sell America down the river. They are the brigands, who lurk in the dark, cunningly waiting for an opportunity to deliver the stab in the back to the principles of human liberty, of justice and of democracy.

It will be through them, not aliens who are here merely to coach these native Fifth Columnists, that Hitler will have dirty work here accomplished.

QUISLINGS DO DIRTY WORK

It is indeed strange that the Department of Justice cannot see this, and start immediate and drastic action. Certainly the pattern in Europe should point the way. In every country Hitler conquered the Fifth Column movement has not been composed of German nationals. Its personnel has been largely natives of the victimized country, drunk with the cruel ambition for power at any cost. It was always the Quislings who were depended upon to do the dirty work, not the outsiders.

England saw this early in the conflict. Long before any aliens were put behind bars, Scotland Yard went quietly and efficiently about the business of putting native fascists in places where an eye could be kept on them. Rank, title, wealth meant nothing.

We have been in the war almost five months and not a single one of these native disturbers of unity have been placed behind bars where they belong—for the safety of this country.

CREATE DISUNITY

MAR 29 1942

Theirs is a program of creating disunity. They stir up old hates, create new ones. They are harbingers of distrust, suspicion, doubt. They cause division, set brother against brother, group against group, race against race. America, in the midst of civil war, would be a push over, and they know it.

Their favorite theme is "white supremacy." and gullible Americans, not stopping to think that no ten million people in all history have ever conquered 120 millions, fall hook, line and sinker.

Father Coughlin, George W. Christians, William Kullgren, Rev. Gerald L. K. Smith, Charles W. Hudson, William Dudley Pelley, Herman D. Kissenger, these are but a few, whose fascist mouthings give aid and comfort to those who would destroy America and everything that it represents. They are not aliens, they are native-born.

They hide behind such pseudo fronts as the American Guard, Crusader White Shirts, Christian Fronters, National Cooperheads, National Americans, the Anglo-Saxon Federation, the Ku Klux Klan, and others, but their purpose is universally the same—to create confusion.

FILTHY FROPAGANDA

A leaflet spread throughout New York City recently, a copy of which was mailed this writer, gives a good example of the filth these treacherous internal enemies peddle.

Titled "The Negro Menace" and distributed by the American Guard, it reads: "Racial equality was imposed upon America by Lincoln—some day his name will be cursed by all whites. The Jewish New Deal continues on the path of racial destruction by catering to the colored people in a political and even social way."

Doesn't this have a familiar ring? Hitler, you know believes the "greatest mistake of all white civilization was the emancipation of the Negro slaves." He has repeatedly said so. And that's what a lot of these native American fascists, many of them whom you know personally, also believe.

Another paragraph from the leaflet: "The War Department has ordered the setting up of Negro units in all branches of the services, including aviation. This means that in case Roosevelt and his inter-national clique of Fifth Columnists succeed in bringing our country into the war, Negroes will be used to bomb and maim and kill our white brethern overseas. Or they might be used against our people in case the New Deal decides to crush by force the rising opposition to its anti-American policies."

CAN SEE DESIGN

Pretty dirty stuff, isn't it? You can clearly see the design to create suspicion, stir up distrust, and destroy confidence in our national leaders. This is but one example. Thousands of others could be cited.

Yet the Department of Justice blandly does absolutely nothing to remove these poisonous snakes from America's bosom. They are a real menace. What they are doing must be recognized for what it is, a part and parcel of Hitler's well known 'war of nerves.'

We had no patience or sympathy for the Benedict Arnolds of 1779. There should be even less for their 1942 counterparts.

Appeal Of Leaders On War Effort Ignored

MAR 21 1942

NEW YORK — Twenty-seven leaders who signeda n urgent appeal to President Roosevelt to stop fascist tactics from being applied to colored Americans in this country, have so far received only a brief acknowledgement of the receipt of their communication from Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, to whom it was referred.

The letter, which asked the President to call a conference to integrate Negroes into America's war effort, was sent February 5 . . . more than a month ago.

Among the signers are Claude A. Barnett, director of the Associated Negro Press; Mary McLeod Bethune, Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League; A. Philip Randolph, Channing H. Tobias of the National YMCA, and L. F. Ford of the National Alliance of Postal Employees, D. V. Jemison, D. D. president of the National Baptist Convention, U. S. A., Inc., Rt. Rev John A. Gregg, presiding bishop African Methodist Episcopal Church, Rayford Logan, president, Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity J. E. Walker, M. D., president National Negro Business League and J. Finley Wilson, grand exalted ruler of the IBPOE of W.

The appeal stated that the latest act of exclusion by the government was the administration's failue to appoint a Negro to the War Labor Board. "Almost without exception, in the war effort Negroes are being asked to give of their substance and to make every sacrifice, without at the same time being permitted to join in the making and execution of plans for a successful war and a just peace."

ADDS TO DISCRIMINATION

This adds, the letter said, to the exclusion and discrimination already practiced by the U. S. Army and Navy and the insult of the American Red Cross policy for segregating Negro blood. "What, Mr. President, is there for the Negro to hope and fight for?" the letter continues.

"We urge once again that you take the lead in arousing members of your Cabinet, the American government and the American people to the enlightened, selfish point of view that we are all in the same boat, and that this boat may go down with us all in it unless we can put aside racial bigotry. We ask you once again to call into conference men of vision and courage to devise an affirmative course of action which shall integrate all elements of our population into a program of offense and defense against aggression."

OTHER SIGNERS

Other signers include: Elsie Austin, president Delta Sigma Theta Sorority; Elmer A. Carter, Editor, Opportunity magazine; Frank R. Crosswaith, chairman, Negro Labor Committee; Marion Cuthbert, of the National Board YWCA; Carrington L. Davis, of the American Teachers Association; Earl B. Dickerson, alderman, member, President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice; George E. Haynes of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America; William Lloyd Imes, D. D., St. James Presbyterian Church.

Carl R. Johnson, grand polemarch, Kappa Alpha Psi Fraternity; Rt. Rev. R. E. Jones, bishop, Methodist Episcopal Church, L. A. Reid, D. D. S., president National Dental Association; Mabel Keaton Staupers, R. N., executive secretary, National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses; Rt. Rev. W. J. ## Helping The Negro

The House of Representatives has passed the poll tax repealer, as practically everyone knew that it would, and this legislation probably will follow the same procedure that various anti-lynching bills have followed in the past, introduction in the Congress, much debate, etc., but little else.

Paul Mallon, noted Washington columnist and a veteran of Capitol procedure, in a recent column discussed the Negro problem at length, and wound up with the same conclusions that The Star has expounded through these columns for years, namely, that the Negro problem is not a legal one, and is not one that any amount of political maneuvering can improve. By that, we mean the type of political maneuvering that for years has held back the advancement of the Negro instead of helping him.

The Negro already is legally free, the Constitution and the law guaranteeing him fair treatment. Legally and politically, the Negro is entitled to any job, to any position in life. He has not acquired that position to which he is legally and politically entitled because he has not satisfied the social and economic requirements.

The Star has long maintained, and Columnist Mallon backs us up, that you cannot make a man socially or economically equal by law, be he white, black or pink. That is a position which he can only reach himself by personal attainments. In regard to segregation, Mallon makes this point: you cannot make a white person sit with a Negro or vice versa, unless both want to, and both will not want to until they have reached the same social and economic level.

As we have long maintained, the Negro is only a few generations removed from the African jungles and he is living in a country which has a basis for civilization stretching back six thousand years or more into an entirely different world. The Negro has already proved his ability to advance, and in the natural course of events, if he is allowed the advantages of education to improve himself, there will soon be Negroes in all positions of prominence and power.

But you cannot legislate the Negro into those positions. He has pride of race just as much as the whites, and wants only the advancement that he himself earns. The Negro problem then is to raise the average Negro civilization of the country to the white average, not by artificial means, but by providing the Negro with the opportunities to advance himself. Any other method merely retards his progress.

Instead of repealing the poll tax, passing an anti-lynch bill, etc., Congress can better aid the Negro by giving him more schools and better teachers, thus enabling his children to advance themselves in the world, earn more money and pay their poll taxes, so that they can qualify to vote by any educational standards. That then is the solution to the Negro problem, and is the same method The Star has advocated for years.

Unsavory Politics

For a Northern writer, Paul Mallon displays an unusual grasp of the racial problem and his conclusion that poll tax proposals and anti-lynch bills are so much political fodder, is accurate to an unusual degree.

Mallon also is right in the assertion: "As all politicians should know, you cannot make a man socially or economically equal by law, be he white, black or pink."

All politicians do know this to be true but they know also that if they make a monkey out of themselves by pretending these things can be done by law, and go through certain futile mations in that direction, it will please a bunch of Negro politicians in the North, and that is all they are interested in.

They know that lynchings in the South have become practically nil, being much less frequent in this territory when lynchings are interpreted correctly than they are in the North, and that an anti-lynch bill is no more needed than is a bill appropriating to the destitute the green cheese of which the moon is said by some fictionists to be made. It is political in its worst sense to attempt the perpetration of such frauds upon the people.

The same elements know beyond peradventure that laws repealing state requirements relative to poll tax payments also are utterly illegal. Yet in order to please certain groups they will violate their own oath to uphold the Constitution and thereby stultify themselves in the hope of garnering votes among the colored people.

And what makes the whole thing more reprehensible than it would be normally is that the country is at war, fighting for its life, and certainly is time for cheap and frousy politics to be adjourned for the duration.

Mallon On The Negro Problem

Paul Mallon devoted his column in Mondays' News to a discussion of "the Negro problem." Undoubtedly it was read with a great deal of interest, here and everywhere else that this widely syndicated column is published. It is reasonable to assume, however, that it was read with special interest in the South, where the racial problem is still chiefly centered, even though in recent decades there has been an enormous migration of Negroes to other sections and an accompanying intensification of questions of race relationships in states outside of the South.

Mr. Mallon's article was undoubtedly read with interest by both white and colored persons; but it is a safe assumption that their reactions were not quite the same. We believe it can be said without question that the majority of white persons would be inclined to agree with Mr. Mallon, in the main. On the other hand, we believe it is quite probable that most Negro readers would disagree with much of Mr. Mallon's general thesis.

That fact alone would indicate that there is a certain one-sidedness to the Mallon argument. Much of what he says is undeniably true, and will be accepted as true by both white and colored people. But Mr. Mallon does not give the full truth in every particular which he mentions, and that fact leaves his article open to the criticism that it is superficial and specious.

The substance of the Mallon article is that the Negro problem is not a legal one, but an educational one; that no laws can do anything for the Negroes, but that the race can only lift itself; that political agitation by Negroes and by others in behalf of Negroes retards their progress instead of furthering it.

Where Mr. Mallon errs most seriously is in his apparent assumption that the two processes he discusses, the educational and the political, are alternatives, when as a matter of fact the educational and material progress of Negroes can be, and has been, helped by governmental action.

No one can quarrel with the statement that the Negro problem is largely an educational one. So, for that matter, is practically every human problem. To say that, and then to dismiss the question with that, as Mr. Mallon does, is to be guilty of platitudinizing and oversimplifying. It is just not enough to say, as he does: "Instead of repealing poll taxes, give the Negroes more schools and better teachers, so their children can advance themselves in the world, earn more money and pay their poll taxes, so they can qualify to vote by any educational restrictions."

For our part, while we favor repeal of the poll tax, we hold no more brief for congressional action to that end than Mr. Mallon does. We would rather see the eight states still having a poll tax get rid of the thing themselves—not, to be sure, because of Negroes, but because of everybody who can qualify to vote in a democracy and is now disfranchised by reason of the poll tax. Again, while we are as earnestly desirous as anyone to put down lynching, we are no more in favor of federal anti-lynching legislation than Mr. Mallon is—simply because we do not feel that congressional action on the subject will be helpful in dealing with a situation which has been steadily improving through the years without federal intervention.

Yet we cannot agree with Mr. Mallon that such "political agitation," to give it the label he gives it, has retarded the progress of the Negro race. On the contrary, it has been helpful, in the sense that it has contributed much to the education and thinking of the general public on these and related questions.

Nor can we agree with Mr. Mallon when he says that "the constitution and the law give him (the Negro) fair treatment." That may be true enough of the letter of the law, and even of its spirit; but that it is not true in the execution of the law, which is the practical reality of the thing, is obvious to any observant person.

What should also be obvious to everybody, and unfortunately is not, is that steady progress in this respect is being made, and can continue to be made, if both races will be frank, fair and realistic in facing the problem of their relationships.

HELPING THE NEGRO

The House of Representatives has passed the poll tax repealer, as practically everyone knew that it would, and this legislation probably will follow the same procedure that various anti-lynching bills have followed in the past, introduction in the Congress, much debate, etc., but little else.

Paul Mallon, noted Washington columnist and a veteran of Capitol procedure, in a recent column discussed the Negro problem at length, and wound up with the same conclusions that The Star has expounded through these columns for years, namely, that the Negro problem is not a legal one, and is not one that any amount of political maneuvering can improve. By that, we mean the type of political maneuvering that for years has held back the advancement of the Negro instead of helping him.

The Negro already is legally free, the Constitution and the law guaranteeing him fair treatment. Legally and politically, the Negro is entitled to any job, to any position in life. He has not acquired that position to which he is legally and politically entitled because he has not satisfied the social and economic requirements.

The Star has long maintained, and Columnist Mallon backs us up, that you cannot make a man socially or economically equal by law, be he white, black or pink. That is a position which he can only reach himself by personal attainments. In regard to segregation, Mallon makes this point: you cannot make a white person sit with a Negro or vice versa, unless both want to, and both will not want to until they have reached the same social and economic level.

As we have long maintained, the Negro is only a few generations removed from the African jungles and he is living in a country which has a basis for civilization stretching back six thousand years or more into an entirely different world. The Negro has already proved his ability to advance, and in the natural course of events, if he is allowed the advantages of education to improve himself, there will soon be Negroes in all positions of prominence and power.

But you cannot legislate the Negro into those positions. He has pride of race just as much as the whites, and wants only the advncement that he himself earns. The Negro problem then is to raise the average Negro civilization of the country to the white average, not by artificial means, but by providing the Negro with the opportunities to advance himself. Any other method merely retards his progress.

Instead of repealing the poll tax, passing an anti-lynch bill, etc., Congress can better aid the Negro by giving him more schools and better teachers, thus enabling his children to advance themselves in the world, earn more money and pay their poll taxes, so that they can qualify to vote by any educational standards. That then is the solution to the Negro problem, and is the same method The Star has advocated for years.—Anniston Star.

The Negro's Problem

After 20 years as a Washington correspondent, during which time he has occupied a ring-side seat as a Congressional observer, Paul Mallon has reached some interesting conclusions regarding the Negro problem. There is a Negro problem, says Mr. Mallon in a recent column, but it is not because the Negro has not been accorded every legal protection. It is a problem which arises out of the Negro's own failure to satisfy the social and economic requirements.

Making an admission which few Northern writers will make, Mr. Mallon points out that the annual agitation for a federal anti-lynching bill is nothing more than window-dressing for a prejudiced appeal to Negro voters. Northern legislators who present the bill know that it will be fillibustered out by Southern legislators and has no chance of passage. But Negro leaders persist in presenting it at each Congressional session in order to demonstrate that they have acted vigorously in behalf of the Negro race.

The anti-lynching bill is characteristic, he says, of the way political handling of the Negro problem has delayed his natural advancement for the past 40 years. Lynching has been practically stopped without an anti-lynching bill "by the natural course of increasing Negro intelligence and corresponding white fairness expressed in courts of justice." Yet the agitators continue to harp on the need for federal laws which are duplicates of existing State laws in this regard.

As for the poll tax repeal agitation which currently occupies Congress, Mr. Mallon believes it is nothing more than another political gesture designed to win Negro votes. "Instead of repealing poll taxes," he writes, "give the Negroes more schools and better teachers, so their children can advance themselves in the world, earn more money and pay their poll taxes, so they can qualify to vote by any educational restrictions."

A man cannnt be made socially or economically equal by law, be he white, black or pink, the columnists says. "That is a position which he can only reach himself by his personal attainments."

But he strikes his most resounding blow when he makes this observation: "The Negro problem is to raise the average Negro civilization of the country to the white average, not by fiat or other artificial means, but by providing the Negro with the opportunities to advance himself into it. . . No doubt he would be further along if the politicians had appreciated the lesson of the Reconstruction Days—namely, that any attempt to gain this goal by fiat or legal impositions merely delays his progress, casts him back to try to conquer again the bitterness of resistance."

NEGROES MUST EARN A PLACE IN SOCIETY

American Problem Is One That Can't Be Legislated

POLL TAX REPEALER CITED

No One Ever Expects Anti-Lynch Bill To Pass, Mallon Says — Education Pointed Out as Best Cure For Our Ills

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—The House passed the poll tax repealer and negro political leaders have told their following that they have done something for them.

For the past 20 years of my Washington experience, and no doubt longer, a Federal anti-lynching bill has been introduced every Congress in the Senate. It never passes. No one ever expects it to pass.

The Republicans used to propose it in the preNew Deal days, whereupon the Southern Democrats would filibuster against it. Now a Northern Democrat customarily presents it and the Southern Democrats filibuster against it. Afterward both sides return to their respective communities, gather in popular acclaim and votes for reelection.

Mr. Mallon

But the negro, in whose interest the biennial antilynching bill is supposed to be proposed, gets nothing. However, his negro leaders who always foster the legislation, demonstrate that they have acted vigorously in his behalf, so everyone seems satisfied.

This situation on the antilynching bill is characteristic of the way political handling of the negro problem has delayed his natural advancement for the past 40 years or more.

Today's Negro Problem Not a Legal One

There is a negro problem. It is not a legal problem, such as the antilynching bill assumes, or such as the current clamor for repeal of poll taxes assumes. The negro is legally free.

The Constitution and the law give him fair treatment. His is certainly not a political problem, because politicians of all hues are fawning over his problem continuously, while doing nothing much about it.

Legally and politically, a negro is entitled to any job, to any position in life. He has not attained the position to which he is legally and politically entitled, because he has not satisfied the social and economic requirements.

As all politicians should know, you cannot make a man socially or economically equal by law, be he white, black or pink. That is a position which he can only reach himself by his personal attainments.

You cannot make a white person sit with a negro or vice versa anywhere, unless both want to, and both will not want to until they have reached the same social and economic level.

The negro is only a few generations out of the African jungle and he is living in a country which has a basis of civilization stretching back 6000 years or more into an entirely different world.

In the natural course of events, if the negro is allowed the advantages of education to improve himself, there will soon be a negro on the Supreme Court of the United States and in all positions of prominence and power.

Can't Be Legislated Into Social Position

But, you cannot legislate him into that position. Politicians cannot fawn or pamper him into it. Free housing and WPA will not put him there. He can only earn it for himself.

The negro problem then is to raise the average negro civilization of the country to the white average, not by fiat or other artificial means, but by providing the negro with the opportunities to advance himself into it. Amazing strides have been made.

No doubt he would be further along if the politicians had appreciated the lesson on the reconstruction days, namely that any attempt to gain this goal by fiat or legal impositions merely delays his progress, casts him back to try to conquer again the bitterness of resistance.

Lynching, for instance, has declined greatly without any antilynching bill by the natural course of increasing negro intelligence and corresponding white fairness expressed in courts of justice. Jim Crowism will end when the negro section of the car is as clean and inviting as the white section.

Educate The Negro And Solve Problem

The negro problem can be said to have been solved completely, when a negro no longer feels he must demand equality because he has attained it for himself. If you were a white person in China or Africa, you would normally seek out your own kind.

If left to his own resources, the negro no doubt would do this now, but he is subject to constant political agitation, fostered in Communist or revolutionary aspirations, that he should seek a position which he can only get by mutual acceptance.

Instead of repealing poll taxes, give the negroes more schools and better teachers, so their children can advance themselves in the world, earn more money and pay their poll taxes, so they can qualify to vote by any educational restrictions.

Let them all just learn enough at school to know how much the politicians have kidded them and they will all be qualified to vote intelligently.

THIS MORNING

by JOHN TEMPLE GRAVES, II

DEC 2 6 1942

"To wave the bloody shirt and walk our ancient ways apart."

* * *

Southern editors seem to be nearly all agreed against the proposal for a separate Southern political party. "I am especially taken," writes Editor Alfred Mynders, of The Chattanooga Times, "with the truth of your statement, 'Once we are relieved of loyalty to the Democratic party because of the race issue there is not enough unanimity among us to bring us together anywhere else.' And it is necessary for the South to have unanimity for, as you say, states' rights is very much alive. The South has been denied its rights since the Civil War. It is about time we were getting them. The race issue is only a detour along the route."

DEC 2 6 1942

Neither does Editor Josephus Daniels, of The Raleigh News and Observer, approve the third party idea. "This is not the first time such secession has been proposed," writes the distinguished old North Carolinian. "It went up in talk before and that will be its fate now. The Southern Democrats and the Northern Democrats do not see eye to eye on all matters. They never did. But both are animated by Jefferson's hostility to monopoly and special favors. . . . We of the South will abide by the ship. There is salvation nowhere else in these days of stormy seas . . ."

We wonder if Editors Daniels and Mynders will agree, too, that there is need of a two-party system in the South, and at last a possibility of one, even though we don't want any bitter separationist organization. Unless the South manages somehow to have itself bid for politically its regional needs, opportunities and special circumstances are going to be ignored by both parties in years to come. And there are plenty of Southerners who are Republican in their philosophy and interest, enough to make a second party of importance here if the stigma against voting Republican can somehow be lifted. To lift it now should not be difficult with all the Southern disaffection with the Democratic party on certain matters. It may not even be considered as much a stigma as some observers think. It was not enough of one in 1928 to prevent nearly half the Southern states voting Republican.

56k

DEC 2 6 1942

This proposal that for bargaining purposes, a stronger Republican party in the South be encouraged is not a cynical one, even though some letters we have received denounce it as such. It is not a proposal that some of us, in violation of our principles, turn Republican just in order to put the South in a position to bargain with the rest of the country. It is merely a proposal that Southerners who are Republican in their principles and feelings be encouraged to vote that way and persuaded that it will not make them political or social outcasts. The cynical situation is the one that exists, not this proposed one. It is the situation which makes so many people in the South vote Democratic when their sympathies and positions on public questions are really Republican.

To understand how harmful and hateful a thing a separate Southern political party would be, all you have to do is imagine it in existence. The rest of the country would hate it. The 10,000,000 Negroes in the South would hate it. The white South would become an island completely surrounded by hateful opposition. And in great addition, since the party could stand for but one thing alone, all participation for the white South in the other great issues of the day would be denied. No, the solution is not a Southern party but a Republican party as strong in the South as its actual sympathizers here entitle it to be.

DEC 2 6 1942

In the Carolina Piedmont region where all the hills are little ones, you see much more pedestrianism than is possible in the mountain regions. For miles around the towns sidewalks and paths are dotted with people walking home from work between 5 and 6 o'clock in the afternoons. Add the healthfulness of this to the saving in automobile accidents and the relief of nervous strains that go ordinarily with driving everywhere in mad hurry—and you have a possible total of lifesaving in the present automobile situation which does indeed compare with the total losses of life in the war.

Our idea of a day not ordinarily worth fooling with at all is a Saturday immediately following Christmas and preceding Sunday. But even such a day as that cannot be wasted in war time.

We nominate that great and good cartoonist, H. H. Harper, of these papers, to make known as only his lines of genius can make known the gigantic V for Victory formed by the battle lines and the Black Sea in Russia, the "fearful symmetry" etched by the shore line and the smoke of battle there. After watching it gather for the last three months we yearn for a sight of it on a map now that it has developed into something so sharp and clear—and now that the Russians, closing down on its upper arm all the way from Rzhev to the Caucasus, are bidding for history's most enormous victory and capturing.

Racial Harmony Basis Proposed

Weekly Review, Bham Ala

COMMITTEE URGES PLAN TO SOLVE INCREASING RACE TENSIONS

DEC 1 9 1942

ATLANTA, Dec. 14—Representative Southern Negroes Monday proposed a broad basis for inter-racial cooperation in the South to meet the war-sharpened issue of Negro-white relations.

The war a committee said, "has resulted in increased racial tensions, fears and aggressions and an opening up of the basic questions of racial segregation and discrimination, Negro minority rights and democratic freedom as they apply practically in Negro-whte relations in the South.

"These issues are acute and threaten to become more serious as they increasingly block, thru deeper fears aroused, common sense consideration for even elemental improvements in the Negro status, and the welfare of the country as a whole.

Conference is Held

The committee's statement grew out of a conference of Negro leaders of 10 Southern states, convened in Durham, N. C., last Fall. It was released here by Committee Chairman P. B. Young, president of The Norfolk Va., Journal and Guide.

The Negro leaders said "we are fundamentally opposed to the principle and practice of compulsory segregation in our American society, whether in races or classes or creeds. However, we regard it as both sensible and timely to address ourselves now to the current problems of racial discrimination and neglect, and to ways in which we may cooperate in the advancement of programs aimed at the sound imprvement of race relations within the democratic framework."

DEC 1 9 1942

The committee speaking for the new-founded Southern Race Relations Conference, recommended abolition of the poll tax and of white primary elections. It also urged that the states discourage a "fantastic expression" by effective enforcement of present or of new anti-lynch laws and the employment of Negro policemen. The group said it believed the employment of Negro police would enlist the full support of Negro citizens in control of lawless elements of their own group.

Another effect of the war has been to hold up the Negro as the symbol, the protagonist, of every other minority in the world, the report continued. It deplored the fact that "simple efforts to correct social and economic injustices," are interpreted by many as "the predatory ambition of irresponsible Negroes to invade the privacy of family life."

Unions are Recommended

Recommending organization of Negro service workers into unions with recognized affiliations, the committee observed that in the present hysteria of many housewives who are losing poorly-paid servants to better paying war industries, it seems desirable to emphasize that this proposal bears no relation to the fantastic and probably Axis-inspired rumors of so-called "Eleanor Clubs."

DEC 1 9 1942

(An overwhelming majority of the domestic help in the South is Negro. In reference to rumors alleging the organizing of dc domestic Negro help, the September clip-sheet of the Commission on Inter-Racial Cooperation, Inc., of Atlanta, had to say:

"The rumor directed to white housewives is two-edged. It creates resentment in white women and increased antagonism against the administration, while subtly subjecting Mrs. Franklin D. Roossvelt to ridicule. The rumor is built around the "Eleanor Clubs," an organization of domestics allegedly set up to disrupt all domestic service. The implications may be read into this rumor.

DEC 1 9 1942

("On Sept 1, at her press conference, Mrs. Roosevelt disclaimed any knowledge of connection with the "Eleanor Clubs" other than that she knew:

"Government investigation into rumors had proven that no such organizations of Negro domestic exists except in the imagination of rumor mongers. Mrs. Roosevelt declared she imagined the rumors started as a result of so many Negro women obtaining higher wages in war factories, (thus leaving their employers without servants.")

Committeemen Report

Reporting committeemen besides Young are Dr. Charles S. Johnson, Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. Benjamin Mays, president of Morehouse College, Atlanta; Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Horace Mann Bond, president Fort Valley, Ga., State College; James E. Jackson, secretary Southern Congress, Birmingham, Ala; Dr. F. D. Patterson, president, Tuskegee Institute, William M. Cooper, Hampton Instiute, Va. and Ernest Delpit, New Orleans, La., Negro labor leader.

Other highlights of the conference proposals:

DEC 1 9 1942

Political and Civil Rights—Adherence to the Negro's constitutional right to serve on juries; travel acccomodations equal in kind and quality in states where law or custom require segregation Military Service—Advancement in responsibility and rank according to ability, and solution of racial problems in transportation, recreation and leave areas said to be acute in the South.

Education — Equal salaries for Negro and white teachers on the basis of equal preparation and experience, equal facilities to meet a growing demand for the graduate and professional training among Southern Negroes; and representation of Negro problems by allowing "qualified" Negroes on school boards.

Social Welfare And Health — Inclusion of Negro Doctors on public hospital staffs, to treat Negro patients, according to their special qualifications; and manadatory provisions that a proportion of public hospitals be available to Negroes.

DEC 1 9 1942

Sympathy For South

While expressing sympathy with the fact that the South "is eco- many of its disabilities are deep- nomically handicapped and that yrooted in agricultural maladjustments," the report urged written contracts and longer lease terms for Negro farmers. It also appealed for higher farm wages, and balanced farm programs, including food and feed crops for present tenants and day laborers.

DEC 1 9 1942

A boost for the war effort was seen if adequate federal assistance is provided for Negro farmers "on an equitable basis." Appointment of Negroes to governmental planning and policy-making bodies concerned with the common farmer was recommended.

Continuing opposition to the employment of the Negro n industry, the committee asserted, appeared to proceed from:

1. The outdated notions of an economy of scarcity, inherited from an industrial age when participation in the productive enterprises was a highly competitive privilege.

2. The e[illegible] of [illegible]ority propaganda designed to immobilize a large number of potentially productive workers in the American war effort.

DEC 1 9 1942

3. The age-old prejudices from a nera whe nthe economic system required a labor surplus which competed bittely within its own ranks for the privilege.

4. The established custom of reserving technical processes to certain racial groups.

5. Craft monopolies which have restricted many technical skills to a few workers.

Federal Management Of Negro Situation, Social Reforms Offend

'Secession' Threat Warning Sounded By Louisiana Governor

BY FRED TAYLOR
News-Age-Herald Staff Writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Each week brings more evidences of a burgeoning movement in Alabama to stage a revolt against the New Deal Democratic party.

Social reforms in general and federal handling of the Negro situation in the South in particular are furnishing the ammunition the would-be revolters in this state are getting ready to pass in a party "secession" attempt.

Blocking any effort to win a fourth term for President Roosevelt, war or no war, is the principal objective of the plan, which calls for Southwide party "secession," if the movement is really to achieve any degree of success.

Indications that certain political leaders in other states, stirred by the way the administration and Democratic national headquarters have attempted to handle the Negro situation, will join in the movement came last week from Louisiana's Gov. Sam Jones, who minced no words in warning of a party "secession," threat. Gov. Jones declared the Deep South had received better social, economic and political treatment from the Republican party than from the present Democratic administration.

There are many Southerners, of course, (certainly a majority) who would take issue with the Louisiana chief executive on this declaration.

Spearheading the movement in Alabama are Birmingham's portly lawyer-politico, Horace Wilkinson, and Gov. Dixon. They started the ball rolling some months ago when Wilkinson delivered a scorching speech at Bessemer on "racial relations," with Dixon, long a bitter political enemy of Wilkinson, passing out printed copies of the speech from the governor's office.

Some observers sized up Gov. Dixon's action in seizing on to this red-hot political issue as motivated by the fear his old foe, Wilkinson, might run off with it and use it with devastating effect in the next gubernatorial campaign.

They contend the governor well knew what an inflammable issue racial relations could be made in Alabama, particularly if fanned to white heat, and that the retiring chief executive wanted to be sure he got in on the ground floor, since it long has been known he has eyes on the governorship four years hence,

Others are wondering, however, if Gov. Dixon, bidding for a second term in 1946, and Wilkinson have really become reconciled and will be in the same political bed in the next governor's race.

NEXT MOVE—Word leaked out some days ago that the next move in the "secession" plan would come in January, when the State Democratic Executive Committee meets in the Capital City for reorganization.

A resolution is to be offered calling on the state party governing body to release party voters from the pledge in choosing presidential electors in the next presidential election in 1944.

In other words, release Democratic voters, who cast their ballots for party candidates in the May and June primaries, from the usual pledge to support party nominees insofar as choosing presidential electors are concerned in the general election.

Anti-New Deal strategists considered introducing a joint resolution calling for this at the recent special session of the Legislature, but it was decided to wait until the May session, when it would follow whatever action is taken by the state committee along this line.

If such a resolution were adopted by the state party governing group action in January, the committee would be expected to reaffirm its action when it meets in January, 1944, to fix primary dates and make other preparations for elections the year of the presidential campaign.

AROUSED — State Committee Chairman Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile lawyer, stirred Alabama Democrats recently with his letter to Democratic National Chairman Edward J. Flynn. His letter asserted the manner in which the administration and Democratic headquarters had sought to handle the Negro situation had made it "utterly impossible" to raise any substantial party funds from Alabama Democrats.

Incidentally, Chairman McCorvey, who will be reelected state committee head in January and who very probably will run for delegate-at-large from this state to the 1944 Democratic convention, whaled away at the national government and party leaders for their efforts to nullify the poll tax laws of Alabama and other Southern states.

Following on the heels of this, the Legislature unanimously adopted a joint resolution by Jefferson Representative Tram Sessions commending Senators Lister Hill and John H. Bankhead, as well as members of the state's House delegation, for their part in helping fight (and subsequently kill) anti-poll tax legislation. All opposed it except Jefferson's lame duck Representative Luther Patrick.

WOMEN—Answers came promptly from members of Alabama's congressional delegation commending Birmingham's Mrs. Charles J. Sharp, Black Belt reared and former Democratic national committeewoman, for her letter (copies of which were sent to delegation members) asking Senate Majority Leader Alben Barkley to keep the poll tax record straight by inserting her epistle in The Congressional Record.

The letter written by Mrs. Sharp, vice chairman of Jefferson County's Democratic Executive Committee, was dispatched to Barkley to "make clear to you the attitude of Southern women towards the recent anti-poll tax bill," after he had read into the record letters from two Alabama women lauding the move to nullify poll tax laws.

Mrs. Sharp's letter stated, in part:

"As former national committeewoman, as chairman of the committee on constitution that successfully prevented the packing of the Supreme Court; as chairman of the Alabama Council of Democratic Clubs (the organization which denounced the so-called Southern Conference for Human Welfare), and now as vice-chairman of the Jefferson County Democratic Executive Committee, I want you and your colleagues to know that the patriotic women of my state are now, have always been, and will continue to be, squarely behind our representatives in the Congress of the United States who have fought and who will fight again, against this encroachment of the states' rights guaranteed to us by the Constitution of the United States. They have always made this fight, secure in the knowledge that their women are one on this issue.

"I am not speaking for foreign elements, Northern Republicans or New Dealers. I am speaking solely for the women of Alabama who held this state in the Democratic column in 1928."

Congressmen Frank Boykin, Sam Hobbs and Joe Starnes were among those sending prompt replies to Mrs. Sharp. Boykin said: "It (letter) strengthened and encouraged our leaders to know that the women back home are solidly behind them."

Starnes wrote: "Let me congratulate you for your letter to Senator Barkley, which let him know how the Democratic women of the South feel on this issue."

Hobbs stated: "I sincerely hope Senator Barkley will comply with your request and insert your letter in the Congressional Record," adding it was "a very fine letter."

SPARKS — Gov.-Elect Chauncey Sparks spent Thursday and Friday huddling at his Capitol (provided temporarily) offices with Speaker George Miller and other legislative leaders and, when he went back to Eufaula for the week-end, the incoming chief executive had pretty well determined what senators and representatives would be placed on standing and recess committees.

Personnel of both standing and interim committees will be announced when the Legislature meets Jan. 12 for a 10-day organization session. Since the Legislature can be organized easily in one day, Sparks and his leaders are at loss to know what to do with the other nine days.

As stated here some weeks ago, the Eufaulan will seek to limit the organization session to less than one-half the time provided in the biennial sessions amendment, which was drafted by one of Gov. Dixon's pre-inauguration "brain trusters." By cutting this session in half and by having held the special session to five days, Judge Sparks expects to save enough money to pay expenses of eight 11-member recess committees.

The two most important recess committees will be the finance and taxation group and the committee on war emergency legislation. A catch-all committee will be the judiciary group.

INAUGURATION — As revealed here before, the Sparks inauguration will have fewer frills than any governor's induction into office in many quadrenniums. There will be no luncheon, no dinner, no ball and no doo-dads.

There will be a military parade formed by units from the various encampments over Alabama, and there will be an inaugural address, with Judge Sparks to be introduced by T. B. Hill, Montgomery attorney. As is customary, the Supreme Court chief justice—Judge Lucien D. Gardner—will administer the oath of office. And there will be "open house" in the governor's office after the ceremonies.

HOWARD THAMES, capitol superintendent, completed plans weeks ago for construction of an inauguration platform on the Capitol steps overlooking Dexter Avenue. Places will be reserved for department heads, campaign managers, members of the Legislature and others, but no large committees have been named.

Carl Bear, Sparks' private secretary, and Thames are handling the details.

QUESTION MARKS — Platform reservations are usually designated by name, but Bear and Thames are having to use question marks instead on some reservations. They are awaiting Judge Sparks' announcement on "cabinet" appointments.

Some thought he would make some announcements last week, but it may be early January before he reaches a decision on one or two places.

HUDDLE—A good indication of the way political winds are blowing was given the other day when Auburn's Dr. L. N. Duncan, president of A. P. I., and a power among Alabama farmers, had Senator Lister Hill as his guest at Auburn for homecoming.

Two days later Dr. Duncan and Alabama's junior senator were seen lunching together in Montgomery.

SHAKEUP—While Judge Sparks' advent as governor will not bring the usual wholesale changes in state personnel, it is expected to signal a considerable shakeup and reshuffling of employes in some departments.

Even though the incoming governor announced (he had it in his platform) civil service will be retained, this does not necessarily mean employes under the merit system, particularly some department subheads, will retain present ratings under the new regime.

And, of course, this does not mean they will be fired. It does mean, however, that several very probably will be demoted to jobs in lower brackets of the classified service. It also means that others already working for the state will be given long deserved promotions.

Changes in present ratings can, and very likely will, be recommended, not by the incoming governor but by some of those he will appoint to "cabinet" jobs. Those close to Sparks say he will leave such recommendations strictly up to department heads, with the final say-so coming from the personnel director and State Merit Board.

Thus, it would appear that simply because an employe or sub-head is covered by the merit system, it does not mean he or she is secure in a particular job with a particular rating. Federal, as well as state, county and municipal civil service systems, provide employes can be demoted for cause.

Good reasons must be shown for demoting an employe in the classified service, with inability to fill a certain post being a good reason, if the personnel director and the Merit Board can be convinced of the person's inability to perform certain duties. Civil service advocates point out this is a necessary provision included in all merit systems to keep employes on their toes and maintain efficiency, as well as to serve as a constant reminder that a civil service rating, alone, will not protect an employe in his or her particular job.

The state civil service law contains such a provision in Section 313, as follows:

"An appointing authority (department head), may, upon giving written notice, stating reasons, to and with the approval of the director, demote a classified employe under his jurisdiction from a position in one class to a position in a lower class."

NEWSOME — John Newsome, Ninth District congressman-elect was much impressed with the work being done by the Patman small business committee to save small manufacturers and little business men from extinction during the war, after sitting in on the congressional group's hearing in Birmingham Friday.

Newsome, a small business man himself (radio and electrical appliances dealer), who emphasized the need for greater representation in Congress for little business men in his recent campaign, was honored by Texas' Representative Wright Patman and other members when they invited him to sit with them as one of the committee.

"I think this committee is doing one of the finest things possible for the small business man and the small manufacturer," declared Newsome, "in helping keep down monopoly and finding a way to keep the little men, who really are the backbone of this country, in business."

GOV. DIXON PRAISED BY SENSIBLE NEGROES

To the Editor, the Decatur Daily:

Sane-minded Negro leaders in the South aren't so easily fooled up by our outside meddlers and Wartime advantages as those sinister groups might think. This fact was made all the more obvious by the responsive and sane message which a very representative twelve-member group of Gadsden Negroes sent Governor Dixon of Alabama, commending him for his stand against signing a contract with the Defense Supplies Corporation for more than a million yards of certain convict-made goods.

Let it be remembered that Governor Dixon flatly refused to sign the contract because the Roosevelt administration and its agencies hard carefully inserted a non-discrimination clause in the otherwise-perfectly-nice contract. Alabama's governor, the Southern gentleman that he is, reasons that such government policies would destroy segregation "under which the white and Negro races have lived in peace together in the South since reconstruction."

This Governor in the South is RIGHT.

Management in Southern industry should exemplify his judgment in this case.

All other governors in the South should speak out as he has spoken out. And all straight-thinking Negroes in the South will reap untold benefit if they will reason within and speak out as those wise Gadsden Negroes have. And I, for one, have sufficient confidence in the better class (all races are classed "better and worse") of Southern Negroes to believe they WILL do just that.

Bad policies affect, as a whole, any nation, state, county or town in which they are applied. (We're menaced by far too many such policies, today.)

Therefore, policies which are bad for the white race in the South are equally bad for the colored race in the South.

It is a sad—but true—commentary that New Deal left-wingers, social reformers, communists and radical labor leaders, for the sinister purpose of bringing out their political -social-communistic-labor-economic REFORM SCHEME, including their stain-blurred color-scheme, are attempting to make an intermixture of white and black as far to the bottom of the U. S. map as the deep South. Because of their seemingly insatiable crave to CHANGE the whole American picture—politically, socially, economically and racially—from a well-backgrounded American masterpiece to a foreign-tainted take it-name it-like it-or loathe it silhouette, by a few quick, successive strokes of the brush, these speed-and-greed artists seek to mix and stir together the white and black races—even down here in Dixie's land.

The white people in the South KONW IT WON'T WORK—in the South.

The colored people in the South KNOW IT WON'T WORK—in the South.

The President himself OUGHT TO KNOW IT WON'T WORK—in the South.

Also the gifted First Lady of the land OUGHT TO KNOW IT WON'T WORK—in the South.

Dixon Charges Agency With Disrupting South's White-Negro Segregation

Two Races Have Lived In Peace Since Reconstruction, Governor Says

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 23 (AP)—Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama charged today that federal agencies had apopted policies "to break down the principle of segregation under which the white and negro races had lived in peace together in the south since reconstruction." He criticized "those who seek to foster their own pet social reforms in a time of national crisis."

The executive asserted that the fair employment practice committee had intimated the U. S. government would force abandonment of race segregation. He refused to sign a contract with the Defense Supplies Corporation for 1,750,000 yards of convict-made Ornsburg cloth so long as it contained a non-discrimination clause to which he objected.

The clause as set out in Dixon's letter to Ralph D. Williams, New York agent for the corporation, reads:

"'The seller, in performing the work required by this contract, shall not discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin..'"

Effect Cited

Dixon told newsmen his primary objection to the clause was "the effect it would have under announced federal policy," and said in his letter to Williams:

"Should we sign the contract with this clause included, we can expect the fair employment practice committee immediately to descend upon the state with the demand that negroes be put in positions of responsibility in that (corrections and institutions) department in approximately the same proportion that the negro race bears to the white race in Alabama. I will not permit the state of Alabama to be subject to the whims of any federal agency, and I will not permit the employes of the state to be placed in a position where they must abandon the principle of segregation or lose their jobs."

Release of Dixon's letter followed by one day a statement by Horace Wilkinson, a Birmingham attorney long at political odds with the governor, that "a Herculean effort is being made to break down and destroy segregation."

Wilkinson Statement

Wilkinson, speaking at Bessemer, said: "If there is room in this country for a national association for the advancement of colored people, there is need of a league to maintain white supremacy."

Declaring he told a Defense Supplies Corporation agent he would sign no contract for the state's prison cotton mills which contined the "discrimination by seller" clause, Dixon addressed this explanation to Williams, "in order that our position may not be misunderstood or subject to misinterpretation:"

"Under executive order 8802 of the President of the United States, which is built around the same principle enunciated in this clause, the United States employment service division of the social security board has adopted policies, the effect of which are to break down the principle of segregation under which the white and the negro races have lived in peace together in the south for all the years since reconstruction.

"Under cover of this particular clause contained in war contracts, the fair employment practice committee has been operated to break down this same principle of segregation of the races, to force negroes and white people to work together, intermingle with each other, and even to bring about the situation where white employes will have to work under negroes. A careful study of the record of the fair employment practice committee hearing recently held in Birmingham disclosed that, however sincere the protestations of the committee members to the contrary, actually there was placed on trial the entire system of race segregation of the south, and that with the single exception of Mr. Mark Ethridge, of Louisville, Kentucky, there was no realization in the minds of any of the committee members of the basic necessity for any such system."

A Champion Arises

(Selma Times-Journal)

With the assertion that "the present war emergency should not be used as a pretext to abolish the color line in the South," Gov. Frank Dixon has refused to sign a contract with the War Production Board for state prison manufacture of cloth for the Army, because of inclusion of the now ill-famed "discrimination by seller" clause which provides that "the seller, in performing the work required by the contract, shall not discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin."

Governor Dixon said that acceptance of the contract would mean "a demand that Negroes be placed in positions of responsibility in the state's prison mills," a move which he foresaw as part of an "effort to foster pet social reforms in a time of national crisis."

Scoring such efforts to "break down the principle of segregation, under which the white and Negro race have lived in peace for all the years since reconstruction," Governor Dixon declared that "I will not permit the state of Alabama to be subject to the whims of any federal committee, and I will not permit the employes of the state to be placed in a position where they must abandon the principles of segregation or lose their jobs."

Standing upon its consistent record as a friend of the Negro race, The Times-Journal gives its unqualified support to the position taken Governor Dixon. It has bee the sincere hope and devout prayer of this newspaper that the racial agitation sponsored by New Deal radicals would die of its own weight in the face of the grave war emergency now facing the nation, despite the fact that it has been mothered by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, whose genius for meddling into affairs which do not concern her is unprecedented. To this end, The Times-Journal has followed a course of moderation in recording the frenzied gyrations of the irresponsibles who have bought with public funds positions of power at Washington, and it has ignored the hysterical yappings of the so-called "liberals" in the South itself.

But no longer can we close our eyes to a situation which menaces both white and black of the South. Unless the seeds of hate which are being sown among us are preveneted from sprouting, the harvest will be a terrible one and the sane leadership of both races must work together in order that our native land shall not be a sacrifice upon the altar of ignorance.

With scattered exceptions, our leadership in the Congress has failed us in this growing crisis and the time has come when we must look for strength and wisdom to replace weakness and compromise. In Governor Dixon, this state has the makings of a great champion of democracy as it works best in the South, but his term will end in January and he cannot be expected to serve to the fullest of his abilities in the role of private citizen. Adequately replaced as chief executive by Chauncey Sparks who can be depended upon to remain true to the principles of the party of which he is the nominee, Governor Dixon will be free to represent the people in any capacity they desire.

As a newspaper which did not support him in his campaign for office and is motivated by no political considerations, The Times-Journal calls upon the people of Alabama to draft Frank Dixon for service in some place of high leadership, where his courageous independence and his clear vision of the needs of the South will be of greatest value. Too long have we left our affairs in the hands of weaklings and we must quickly turn to sources of strength or we shall be lost.

In Respect And Regret

It is both with great respect and deep concern that The News-Age-Herald strives to assess the contribution which Gov. Dixon now has made to the discussion of wartime relations between the white and colored people.

These newspapers well know the governor's sincerity. Our regard for his judgment and ability have been attested steadfastly in the broad support we have given his administration. We realize that the governor would not address himself to this matter unless he were profoundly convinced that his duty compels him to do so.

We are confident that the fundamental concern of the governor in this matter is the same as ours. We believe he is most earnestly anxious to avoid the racial strains and troubles that would certainly result from the pressing of proposals and demands that cannot possibly be realized.

We recognize, as does the governor, that no compulsion, no coercion, no pressure, can change deep feelings; indeed, that such methods can only intensify difficulties.

At the same time, we believe that the governor, with us, with the peoples of the South and the North alike, desires the greatest attainable measure of human, political and economic justice for the Negro people. It must be evident to all how important this objective always is, and particularly now in time of world crisis.

It is apparent how important is the maintenance of friendly and cooperative relations between the races.

When there is so much that we know that we hold in common with the governor, we find ourselves surprised and filled with regret that we differ with him so widely in interpretation of what the federal government is attempting to do in this connection.

Moreover, while we certainly join with the governor in deploring any destructive raising of this issue, we have the misgiving that he himself has unnecessarily carried the discussion to more dangerous lengths.

We do not agree with the governor that federal agencies are operating to break down the principle of segregation in the sweeping sense he implies in his use of the term. There is, in our opinion, no sufficient evidence in the record of the hearing of the Fair Employment Practice Committee in Birmingham to substantiate this view.

On the contrary, there is strong, authoritative declaration by committee members that it was not seeking to end segregation, but was concerned only with the ending of economic discrimination and the attainment of the fullest possible utilization of the nation's manpower in the prosecution of the war.

Nor are we aware of any statement by any committee member that set forth the end of segregation as its purpose.

Of course, in discussing segregation and segregation practices and views, there can be many different meanings and shades of meaning.

As we understand Gov. Dixon, he believes the federal government is attempting to end social customs and habits that have prevailed always in the South and which certainly cannot, by any means, be changed.

We do not believe the government has any such aim.

There is some basis for that fear in the inflammatory utterances and demands of a few radical Negro leaders. But these expressions are by no means representative of the great majority of the Negr[illegible]ople, who are as anxious as the white peop[illegible]ur belief, to deal with these problems in t[illegible] spirit of moderation and mutual consideration which offers the only hope of real progress.

Gov. Dixon, we think, gives far too much weight to reports of what some officials and some Negroes have said and too little weight to what is the intent of the government and to the real feeling of the overwhelming majority of the Negro people.

His interpretation of the present state of affairs respecting this issue is likely, we fear, to increase rather than solve difficulties.

These newspapers, like the governor and like other American citizens and officials generally, unreservedly condemn any effort to impose by law, by pressure or by agitation, such changes in social practice as Alabama's chief executive seems to fear.

Many kinds of segregation are practiced.

White persons certainly apply segregation toward each other, in many instances. No white man is forced to have another white man in his home, if he does not desire to do so.

Social segregation of this kind rests on profound and complex feelings and attitudes and can only be dealt with constructively through an understanding, generous spirit and voluntary and mutually cooperative methods.

On the other hand, Americans generally are opposed to discrimination that would deny fundamental economic justice and opportunity to the Negro, that would deny him adequate and fair chances to serve his country, that would tend to give aid to the propaganda of our enemies.

The vast majority of Americans, white and colored, North and South, favor, in our opinion, what is really being sought by responsible authorities striving to end discrimination against minorities.

But, unfortunately, many people are coming to fear that this effort threatens to result in quite different things which they regard with dread.

The greatest duty of us all, at this critical hour, is to do everything possible to increase understanding, to keep down misunderstanding, to promote cooperation and good feeling, to discourage incitement of internal animosities of any kind.

The governor fears that in raising the issue of discrimination the federal government is in fact seeking very different social ends and consequently in this way is endangering our unity and strength.

In the radical utterances of some Negroes, we repeat, there is some cause for that fear, but it is not sufficient cause for believing and proclaiming that deep racial conflict has been precipitated.

The government, in our conviction, is earnestly trying to advance unity by combating fundamental injustice.

If there can only be understanding and faith among us as to the basic realities of this whole situation, we can hope for the best.

If there are incitements, distortions, misunderstandings, on any side, we may face the worst.

In the name of our country, in the name of all suffering mankind and a tragically stricken world, let us, every man, strive for light, for tolerance, for faith, for unity and for our mutual salvation.

South Rallies Behind Dixon

Hundreds of telegrams and letters from all over Alabama and from throughout the South and other parts of the nation are pouring in to the office of Gov. Dixon approving his stand against federal attempts to "break down the principle of segregation, under which the white and negro races have lived in peace for all the years since Reconstruction."

U. S. senators, congressmen, governors, judges, legislators, doctors, attorneys, editors, working men, business men—scores upon scores of public leaders and just plain citizens—wrote or telegraphed their congratulations to the governor.

The messages came from as far away as Los Angeles and New York. One Floridian wired: "Glad someone has the intestinal fortitude to tell Yankee social reformers where to go."

The vigilant press of Alabama at once took up the challenge hurled in their teeth by agitators attempting to use the war emergency as a smoke screen for an attack upon the South.

Among the first editorial comments received in Montgomery were:

Dothan Eagle (under the heading 'Alabama Unintimidated"):—"The President's committee of Fair Employment Practices has run afoul of one executive who refuses to be bulldozed and intimidated—Frank Dixon. The President's executive order . . . was issued under threat of a negro march on Washington. Such a social revolution while the nation is fighting for its life must be pleasing indeed to Hitler."

Decatur Daily (under the heading "Dixon Courage"): "Soon the War Eagle leaves the mansion house in Montgomery to enter private life in Birmingham. He leaves millions in the treasury and debts have been reduced by millions; the state government is running efficiently. His strong-handed successor, Chauncey Sparks, can be counted on to deliver the goods for his people in the Dixon tradition . . .

"In the South, the white man has his place. In the South the negro has his place. They both know it . . . Frank Dixon has spoken with courage; there should be no misunderstanding, no misinterpretation. He has spoken like an American and an Alabamian. This newspaper is proud of him for it."

Selma Times-Journal (under " heading "A Champion Arises"): "Standing upon its consistent record as a friend of the negro race, the Times—Journal gives its unqualified support to the position taken by Governor Dixon.

"It has been the sincere hope and devout prayer of this newspaper that the racial agitation sponsored by the New Deal radicals would die of its own weight in the face of the grave war emergency now facing the nation, despite the fact that it has been mothered by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, whose genius for meddling into affairs which do not concern her is almost unprecedented . . . Unless the seeds of hate which are being sown among us are prevented from sprouting, the harvest will be a terrible one, and the sane leadership of both races must work together in order that our native land shall not be a sacrifice on the altar of ignorance . . .

" "As a newspaper which did not support him in his campaign for office and is motivated by no political considerations, the Times-Journal calls upon the people of Alabama to draft Frank Dixon for service in some place of high leadership where his courageous independence and his clear vision of the needs of the South will be of greatest value. Too long have we left our affairs in the hands of weaklings and we must quickly turn to sources of strength or we shall be lost."

Charleston, S. C., News and Courier (the South's oldest daily newspaper): "Frank Dixon meets the issue squarely. The last eight years the campaign has been in progress to 'Reconstruct' the South. It is a national 'Democratic' party campaign now, as well as Republican . . . . Southern senators and representatives, dazzled and blinded by the sights of gifts, subsidies, offices, have forgotten to defend the South and state rights . . .

"Truly, Governor Dixon says that the two races have been getting on well together until now . . . . Governor Dixon meets the issue squarely. The South is without a national party to defend it.

"The Southern states can in 1944 elect presidential electors not bound to vote for candidates of either 'national' party. In the Electoral college they can have the balance of power and bring parties to their knees.

"In that way they can fight and defeat the New Reconstruction. They have been deserted by the national 'Democratic' party on the Home Question. They will have leaders.

"Frank Dixon is a leader."

SUSPICION GROWS

There is a growing suspicion that the apparent! well organized effort to promote disunity in this country by agitation for social equality for Negroes and abolition of Southern segregation laws, is actuated by more sinister motives than at first thought.

There are many who wonder now if the handiwork of Nazi agents is not discernible in the movement.

Certainly, the fact is that whether Nazi inspired or not, the movement is sowing seeds of discord the Nazis would like to have sown.

As Paul Mallon, a very conservative commentator, said in his column Thursday:

"No doubt all Nazi cunning will be devoted to promoting subtle disunity and dissatisfaction with our existing form of government. On that home front will be an active battle line.

"For this reason, every mistake of this government which creates dissatisfaction or a sense of injustice among our people is an encouragement to Hitler's intentions.

"Any supposedly patriotic efforts to promote group antagonism among the Negroes and others is a paving stone on the road of Hitler's purposes. (The Communists always thought this was the way to revolution)."

To keep the record straight, it should not be forgotten for a moment that the racial agitation was NOT started by the Southern people, white or black.

The agitation orginated outside the South but it will wreak more havoc in this section than in any other. Here, where the races were working quite well together and the Negro was making substantial progress, is the area in which the most damage can be done. That is what prompts Southern people generally, both white and Negro, to be so alarmed over the developments promoted by the parlor pinks and the political opportunists of both races.

The Negro in the South knows as well as the next man that the raising of racial prejudices will have their greatest repercussions in the area where the Negro population is in greatest ratio to white population. That, of course, is in the South.

In raising this issue, those who are seeking to force social changes on us are doing the Negroes a great disservice and they are doing their country a greater disservice.

Thinking Negroes of the South, fortunately, are not blind to the consequences of such promotion; neither are desirous of the agitation. Witness of this is the letter of commendation sent to Governor Dixon the other day by a dozen Negroes of Gadsden. They upheld his stand against breaking down our segregation laws and regretted the agitation which brought about his letter.

Editor, Gadsden Times:

Dear Sir—At the present there is much being said about race relationship in the South. I am of the opinion that the Southern black man's position on this much agitated question should be clearly known. I desire that it should be distinctly understood that the black man, having been born and reared under Southern skies, realizes that we have in Gadsden, Etowah county and in the South some of the best white people to be found anywhere in these United States whether they come from the North, the East or the West.

Let it further be known that the sensible black man does not desire to eat and sleep with white people. Being strong believers in democracy, as we are, the thing our racial group is sincerely pleading for is a fair trial in the courts, better school advantages and a chance to work at wages which are just and fair to all concerned.

There is no reason why both white and colored should not live peacibly together in this our fair land. Let us accept the advice of Abram to Lot: "Let there be no strife, I pray thee, between me and thee."

Yours for better relationship between the races.

GOV. DIXON'S STATEMENT

Following the publication in this paper last week of an editorial, entitled, "The Post-War South", we read with interest and deep concern the next day a statement of southwide interest from Governor Frank Dixon, in connection with his refusal to enter into a government contract with the Defense Supplies Corporation unless the "discrimination by seller" clause were removed from the contract.

Because so many of our subscribers have expressed a desire to read Governor Dixon's statement, and because we are in such hearty accord with the Governor of Alabama in his stand, we are reprinting the news story that was carried in The Montgomery Advertiser:

"In order that our position may not be misunderstood or subject to misinterpretation, I think it wise to give the following explanation:

"Under executive order 8802 of the President of the United States, which is built around the same principle enunciated in this clause, the United States Employment Service Division of the Social Security Board has adopted policies, the effect of which is to break down the principle of segregation under which white and negro races have lived in peace together in the South for all the years since reconstruction.

"Under cover of this particular clause contained in war contracts, the fair employment practice committee has been operating to break down this same principle of segregation of the races, to force negroes and white people to work together, intermingle with each other, and even to bring about the situation where white employes will have to work under negroes. A careful study of the record of the fair employment practice committee hearing recently held in Birmingham disclosed that, however sincere the protestations of the committee members to the contrary, actually there was placed on trial the entire system of race segregation of the South, and that with the single exception of Mr. Mark Ethridge, of Louisville, Ky., there was no realization in the minds of any of the committee members of the basic necessity for any such system.

Issue Clearly Drawn

"The clear intimation was that unless the Southern people changed their way of living and abandoned the principle of segregation, they would be forced so to do by the Federal government. Unfortunately the issue seems to be clearly drawn.

"The thinking white people of the South want the negro educated and trained. They realize that by this process the per capita wealth and income of the region can be increased, the services of the local government to their people made greater, the economic difficulties brought about largely by freight rate differentials be made less serious. They want the negro race to be used as it is willing to be used, to supply part of the necessary man-power for war and industry. They realize, however, from their familiarity with a problem which has been theirs for years, that these things must be done within the framework of the existing social structure. The present emergency should not be used as a pretext to bring about the abolition of color lines in the South.

"I regard it as extremely unfortunate that this issue should be forced upon the Southern people in a time when the very life of the nation is at stake. By every act and expression of theirs they have now as always proven their intense patriotism. In proportions that largely exceed those in every other section of the country they have voluntarily entered the armed services. If you will examine the casualty lists to date, you will find that a large proportion of them are Southern men. There should be no attack on the long established institutions of any section of the country at a time when our sons are engaged in a life and death struggle with the enemies of the Democratic way of life.

Contract Rejected

"Under the circumstances such as outlined above, as anyone I hope can clearly see, it is impossible for the State of Alabama to sign any contract containing the clause set out above. The employes of the Department of Corrections and Institutions in Alabama are white employes. Based on past experience, should we sign the contract with this clause included, we can expect the fair employment practice committee immediately to descend upon the State with the demand that negroes be put in positions of responsibility in that department in approximately the same proportion that the negro race bears to the white race in Alabama. I will not permit the State of Alabama to be subject to the whims of any Federal committee, and I will not permit the employes of the State to be placed in a position where they must abandon the principle of segregation or lose their jobs.

"The cotton mills owned by the State and operated by the Department of Corrections and Institutions are not operated primarily for the purpose of making money, but for the purpose of supplying useful work for the convicts. The sovereignty of the State over the operations of this department cannot be waived nor can it be shared with the Federal government or with any committee of the Federal government. We are perfectly willing to enter into a contract for the production of goods, but the method used, the control of our employes and convicts, the housing and sleeping arrangements and all other matters in connection with the production of those goods must remain in the hands of the State.

"Please understand that the State wants to do everything that it can in the war effort. We will sign any reasonable contract with this clause eliminated and will do everything else on earth that we can to aid in this war. But we will not place ourselves in a position to be attacked by those who seek to foster their own pet social reforms in a time of national crisis."

"Disastrous Attempt"

"Those of us who have long been friends of the negro race regard the present attempt to abolish the segregation of the races as disastrous. The negro has progressed only by the help of his white friends in the South. He can progress only by their help. The Federal government, in the past engaged once in the experiment of forcing negro domination on the Southern people.

"It succeeded only in making the lot of the negro far harder than it would otherwise have been, and to many of us it seems that the net result of the present attempt will be the same. When the lines are drawn, as inevitably they must be, unless this projected social reform is abandoned serious injury will be done to the whole cause of advancement of the negro race, in which so many of the best men of the South have had such an intense interest for so many years.

"The Democratic party in Alabama has as its motto 'White Supremacy.' I know of nothing which will wreck the Democratic party quicker in this State than any effort the result of which is to abolish segregation. As a Democratic governor, proud of the long traditions of the Democratic party, I am greatly concerned.

"The problem presents very different aspects in the South than from any other section of the country. In the North there are comparatively very few negroes. But for us in the South the picture is greatly complicated by the large proportion of negroes.

"In still another way the injection of the racial issue at this time is unfortunate. Maximum production is the desire of all of us. It can be obtained only by permitting those experienced in production to run their plants in the way they have found best. Attempts to interfere by bringing in social issues and attempted reforms at this time can only have the effect of causing bitterness and confusion, slowing down the production of the country, taking from the hands of the very men on whom we must rely to run the plants their ability to run them efficiently.

The Race Issue

(Pell City News)

In turning back and refusing to sign a contract with the federal government for materials made in Alabama until a clause in the contract relating to discrimination against workers because of race or color is deleted from the contract, Gov. Frank Dixon seems to have opened a controversy that is raging up and down the state.

The clause in question reads as follows: "The seller, in performing the work required by this contract, shall not discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin."

This paper definitely does not propose to pick a fight with or criticize Gov. Dixon for what he thinks is the right policy in defense of the state of which he is the executive officer. We certainly won't agree with some editorial writers who have accused the governor of suffering from a sincere "obsession" regarding the Negro question. We believe the governor to be sincere and not "obsessed" with any idea of blood and thunder to come. On the other hand, we have found Gov. Dixon to be a man who is not afraid to stand on his "hind" legs and defend his belief on questions of state exactly as he sees them, no matter where the chips may fall.

Our only regret in the matter is that it has been forced out in the open now, when it most certainly should be relegated to the files to be attended to after the war is over. If our enemies are nothing else, they have proven themselves to be highly efficient in the use of propaganda, and they ask no better opportunity than a chance to set race against race while every race, color and creed in the United States must bend every energy toward winning the war if we expect to win.

True enough, a few Negro leaders have expressed views that if made active would bring cause for fear. But by and far we believe that the vast majority of the Negro people and their leaders see cooperation with all races as the means to winning this war, and have so set their sights, leaving their grievances, if any, behind for the duration.

People Rally Behind Gov. Dixon In The Fight For South's Principles

Hundreds of telegrams and letters from all over Alabama and from throughout the South and other parts of the nation are pouring into the office of Governor Frank M. Dixon, approving his stand against federal attempts to "break down the principle of segregation, under which the white and negro races have lived in peace for all the years since Reconstruction."

U. S. senators, congressmen, governors, judges, legislators, doctors, attorneys, editors, working men, business men—scores upon scores of public leaders and just plain citizens—wrote or telegraphed their congratulations to the governor.

The massages came from as far away as Los Angeles and New York. One Floridian wired: "Glad someone has the intestinal fortitude to tell Yankee social reformers where to go."

The vigilant press of Alabama at once took up the challenge hurled in their teeth by agitators attempting to use the war emergency as a smoke screen for an attack upon the South.

Among the first editorial comments received in Montgomery were:

Dothan Eagle (under the heading "Alabama Unintimidated"): "The President's Committee of Fair Employment Practices has run afoul of one executive who refuses to be bulldozed and intimidated... Frank Dixon. The President's executive order . . . was issued under threat of a negro march on Washington. Such a social revolution while the nation is fighting for its life must be pleasing indeed to Hitler."

Decatur Daily (under the heading "Dixon Courage"): "Soon the War Eagle leaves the mansion house in Montgomery to enter private life in Birmingham. He leaves millions in the treasury and debts have been reduced by millions; the state government is running efficiently. His strong-handed successor, Chauncey Sparks, can be counted on to deliver the goods for his people in the Dixon tradition . . .

"In the South, the white man has his place. In the South the negro has his place. They both know it . . . Frank Dixon has spoken with courage; there should be no misunderstanding, no misinterpretation. He has spoken like an American and an Alabamian. This newspaper is proud of him for it."

Sema Times-Journal (under the heading "A Champion Arises"): "Standing upon its consistent record as a friend of the negro race, The Times-Journal gives its unqualified support to the position taken by Governor Dixon.

"It has been the sincere hope and devout prayer of this newspaper that the racial agitation sponsored by New Deal radicals would die of its own weight in the face of the grave war emergency now facing the nation, despite the fact that it has been mothered by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt whose genius for meddling into affairs which do not concern her is almost unprecedented. . . Unless the seeds of hate which are being sown among us are prevented from sprouting, the harvest will be a terrible one, and the sane leadership of both races must work together in order that our native land shall not be a sacrifice on the altar of ignorance. . .

"As a newspaper which did not support him in his campaign for office, and is motivated by no political considerations, The Times-Journal calls upon the people of Alabama to draft Frank Dixon for service in some place of high leadership where his courageous independence and his clear vision of the needs of the South will be of greatest value. Too long have we left our affairs in the hands of weaklings and we must quickly turn to sources of strength or we shall be lost."

Charleston (S. C.) News and Courier (the South's oldest daily newspaper): "Frank Dixon meets the issue squarely. The last eight years the campaign has been in progress to 'Reconstruct' the South. It is a national 'Democratic' party campaign now, as well as Republican . . . . Southern senators and representatives, dazzled and blinded by the sights of gifts, subsidies, offices, have forgotten to defend the South and state rights . . .

"Truly, Governor Dixon says that the two races have been getting on well together until now . . . Governor Dixon meets the issue squarely. The South is without a national party to defend it.

"The Southern states can in 1944 elect presidential electors not bound to vote for candidates of either 'national' party. In the Electoral College they can have the balance of power and bring parties to their knees.

"In that way they can fight and defeat the New Reconstruction. They have been deserted by the national 'Democratic' party on the Home Question. They will have leaders.

"Frank Dixon is a leader."

The Laurel Seekers

Careful to protest that they would not for the world utter one word or commit one act which might lend encouragement to the break-down of Alabama segregation laws, or give comfort to those who try to impose social equality upon the South, certain of this State's newspapers have made inexcusable and ill-considered attacks on Governor Dixon for refusing to sign a WPB contract containing the obnoxious "non-discrimination" clause.

The most vicious of these attacks came from The Montgomery Advertiser, a newspaper published in what Montgomerians like to refer to as the "Cradle of the Confederacy," and from Anniston's weekly Times. With more restraint The Birmingham News, too, took its stand against Alabama and the South and for the left-wing radicals of the North.

Expert craftsmen and gifted writers, the editors of these newspapers sought to paint Governor Dixon as a demagogue and rank him alongside such bigots as Gene Talmadge as a political opportunist. All because he had possessed the courage to oppose the social revolutionists who are using the war emergency to tear down social barriers and interfere with State sovereignty.

To many it appears that their thoughts were not on Alabama, not on the South, not on racial harmony, but on a Pulitzer award, the attainment of which has so far been beyond their intellectual grasp. They apparently suffered the delusion that journalistic laurels and literary fame can best be won with a dagger thrust deep into the backs of their own people.

It is to be the discredit and shame of Alabama journalism that such palpable self-hypnosis should result in the denunciation of a courageous Governor making an intelligent and just approach to a problem which, if left unnoticed, would do irreparable injury to the entire State.

* * * *

These editors pretend—and we use that word advisedly—that the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices is not interested in the social aspirations of the more vociferous members of the Negro race. They pretend that the committee is only interested in bettering the Negro's admittedly unfortunate and shameful economic position by removing prejudices which prevent his full utilization in the nation's war effort. They pretend that the committee's appointment was not engineered by Mrs. Roosevelt and Walter White, president of the National Association For the Advancement of Colored People, under threat of an embarrassing Negro march on Washington. Such a march, had it not been stopped, would have been widely publicized among Asiatic peoples through the kind offices of the Axis. They pretend that the 'non-discrimination" clause, compliance with which the committee has been investigating, will not result in compulsory employment of Negroes in executive and office positions in Southern war industries. They pretend that they have never heard of such a thing as a Presidential directive ordering certain federal agencies to place Negros in Washington offices in the ratio of 1 Negro to 5 whites. They pretend that they do not see an administration effort to forcibly remove Southern Jim Crow laws which, since Reconstruction Days, have been accepted as essential to racial harmony and cooperation by all intelligent whites and Negroes. They pretend that they themselves do not want social equality or the removal of segregation laws, yet they walk hand-in-hand with those who do not try to conceal that such is their objective.

Their pretenses are so obviously false that, instead of producing the amity between races which they profess to seek they have succeeded in stirring up prejudices which have long been dormant and have armed the bigots with the very ammunition they need.

* * * *

It is fortunate indeed that these editors who write up to Northern critics and down to their Southern readers are not representative of the people of Alabama. These men stand in a class alone, oblivious to what goes on about them. In the main they are fanatical in their devotion to the New Deal and the pinkos who have brought into being many of its distinctly advantageous social achievements. Any person with the temerity to challenge the rights or the wisdom of this little band of tin gods is anathema to them. They would unhesitatingly relenquish every liberty and every right of the white man to choose his own companions rather than question the motives of those at whose feet they worship.

They have forgotten that the Southern whites need protection from the interference of New Deal fanatics as much as do Negroes from Southern abuses and injustices. This is no time for men and women who stand close to the seat of power in Washington to mount a platform and tell an audience of Southern Negroes that "now is the time to demand your rights—now is the time to demand social equality." And this is no time for Alabama newspaper editors to be giving impetus to such a program by damning those who are brave enough to challenge those speakers.

Governor Dixon's statement in refusing to accept the "non-discrimination" clause in a WPB contract has met with the overwhelming endorsement of all thinking persons in Alabama, regardless of race or creed. And those newspaper editors who take him to task brand themselves not only as historical ignoramuses but as being unsympathetic to those who rank Alabama's welfare next to that of the nation's.

The writings of these men would find better acceptance in the Daily Worker or some other organ appealing to the Eleanor Roosevelt—Harry Hopkins-Felix Frankfurter—Harold Ickes audience. What a pity it is that they must use the voice of Alabama newspapers to make malicious attacks on the chief executive of a great State who is sincerely devoted to the best interests of his people and doesn't care one damn about a Pulitzer prize.

MUCH ADO ABOUT SEGREGATION

Alabama editors last week, led by Gov. Frank M. Dixon, leaped upon the breastworks prepared to defend the South once more against the wiles of the dauntless Yankee.

By now the roar of the opening skirmish has settled, and apparently nothing more would come of it, but nevertheless the sturdy Alabamians were ready and were standing by.

Reason for the hullabaloo was a clause in a federal convict contract which declared that all goods should be produced without any discrimination among producing workers because of race, creed, etc. The governor considered the clause just another attempt by Yankees to do away with the segregation of the blacks and the whites refused to sign the contract until satisfactory changes were made. His letter of refusal written to federal authorities was published throughout the country, even put into The Congressional Record by Congressman Carter Manasco and administration editors whooped with the same fervor of the deads in gray at Bull Run.

First thought of all Southerners was, of course, that the governor was right, that the Northerners have very little more understanding of the South's racial question than they had in 1860, that they would be happy to see whites and blacks co-mingling in the South.

But a further investigation of the situation, however, after Southern blood had cooled, would have shown that now is hardly a time to reopen North-South hostilities, and the less fuss raised now the better. After all, the old racial question is one which can lead to almost anything. Let's hold our ground quietly and lick Hitler and Hirohito first.—Cullman Banner.

Segregation In The South

The Anniston Star has long maintained that there would be no racial trouble between the whites and blacks in the South if outside agitation and influences were kept out of the picture. Along those lines we are heartily in favor of Governor Dixon's refusal to sign a contract with the federal government for convict-made cloth due to the fact that a non-discrimination clause was contained in the contract.

In his refusal, Governor Dixon declared that the federal government was seeking to abolish race segregation in the South, a principle under which white and Negro races have lived in peace together for all the years since Reconstruction Days.

Governor Dixon charges that under cover of this particular clause in the contract which he rejected, the Fair Employment Practice Committee of the government has been operating to break down this same principle of segregation of races, to force Negroes and white people to work together, intermingle with each other, and even bring about the situation where white people will have to work under Negroes.

Continuing, the Governor's statement said: "A careful study of the committee hearings recently held in Birmingham disclosed that, however sincere the protestations of the committee members to the contrary, actually there was placed on trial the entire system of race segregation of the South, and that with the single exception of Mark Etheridge of Louisville, Ky., there was no realization in the minds of any of the committee members of the basic necessity for any such system. The clear intimation was that unless the Southern people changed their way of living and abandoned the principle of segregation, they would be forced to do so by the federal government."

Abolishment of the segregation policy is a step that would be distasteful to the Negroes as well as the whites. Both want the system retained, for they realize that abandonment of this principle would lead to disastrous conditions.

Under the principle of segregation, the two races live in near-perfect harmony. Both realize the other's problems and limitations. While there are instances of misconception on the parts of both, these are isolated incidents, and can be blamed upon human failings rather than that of the system.

In this connection, the action of 12 of Gadsden's leading Negroes Saturday in wiring Governor Dixon their approval of his remarks provides a striking example of the success of the system. The wire, in part, stated: "Our past and present relations with our white people are satisfactory and we do not want any strife to mar our pleasant relationship."

Thinking people of the South, both white and black, want the Negro educated and trained. They realize, however, that these things must be done, can be done, and are being done within the framework of the existing social structure. The present war emergency must not be used as a pretext to bring about abolition of color lines in the South.

Responsible Negro leaders, such as the Gadsden group, know that the Southern white man is the best friend their race possesses. They know that the whites in the South are perfectly willing to accord the Negro any place that he earns through his own efforts. The Negro race has made tremendous strides forward in the comparatively few short years since the days of slavery, and these responsible Negro leaders are perfectly willing to be allowed to work out their own salvation. They know that whenever they need help of the whites, that help will be forthcoming.

Contrary to the common belief in other sections of the nation, and especially high circles in Washington, the Negro in the South does not consider himself mistreated. He does not ask nor want the sympathy of anyone. He wants only to earn his own way, and he knows that his progress will not be hampered by the Southern white race. Left alone, he and his white friends pull together in unison, but the foreign agitators are not satisfied with that. They seek to make trouble where none existed, bring strife into the picture instead of harmony.

But while we resent the effort on the part of the federal government to enforce fair employment by bureaucratic fiat, we can envisage a certain harm that the Governor's statement might have: it might give comfort to Georgia's firebrand Governor Eugene Talmadge, who is making his campaign for a third term on the issue of racial antagonism.

There is all the difference in the world between Dixon and Talmadge, however, the one being a statesman and the other a demagogue; and while Northern newspapers may take advantage of the opportunity to classify them together, we believe that every person in the South who knows the Alabama Governor will recognize that he is a true friend of the Negro race and of education and that his protest was inspired purely out of a resentment of what appears to be another Force Bill in disguise.

Moreover, while we believe the attitude assumed by Governor Dixon will have a salutary effect, we do not subscribe to the suggestion of Horace Wilkinson of Birmingham that there be organized a nation-wide campaign to protect white supremacy. That, in effect, is an invitation to a resurgence of the Ku Klux Klan, and if a greater calamity could befall the South or the nation than that, we do not know what it could be in this crucial period of our history when we need harmony among all races and creeds in order to save ourselves from slavery.

Special Committee On Racial Relations Reported In Making

Wilkinson Is Expected To Take Lead In Forming Statewide Organization

BY FRED TAYLOR

Instead of another Ku Klux Klan or like organization some believe is in the making, a statewide committee, probably headed by Gov. Frank M. Dixon, because of his position as the state's chief executive, is expected to be formed soon to study much-discussed racial relations in Alabama.

Call for a meeting to form such a committee will go out soon, with various Southern governors and other dignitaries to be invited to the session, which very likely will be held in Birmingham.

Horace C. Wilkinson, Birmingham attorney, who recently cut loose with a speech in Bessemer on "Racial Relations," is expected to have a leading role in organization of the committee, which informants said would be made up of "substantial citizens from over Alabama."

Meantime, both Gov. Dixon and Wilkinson, the latter a political foe of the governor, were receiving both praise and condemnation for their recent actions pertaining to the white and Negro races and their future relations, as observers speculated on the political significance of developments regarding racial relations.

Some believed that this issue might be taken and fanned to white heat in future local and statewide political campaigns.

Wilkinson started the ball rolling for setting up an organization in his Bessemer speech, copies of which were printed and circulated over the state. He called for statewide, Southwide and nationwide organization to "maintain white supremacy" and declared "Alabama must lead the way."

Gov. Dixon took a firm stand against what he termed federal attempts to "break down the principle of segregation under which the white nad Negro races have lived in peace all the years since the Reconstruction."

United States senators, congressmen, governors, judges, legislators, doctors, lawyers, editors and business men, among others, wrote or telegraphed the governor their commendation for his stand. Messages came from many states and from as far away as Los Angeles and New York.

Wilkinson likewise said he was deluged with letters and telegrams commending him for his speech and call for action. He said that next to Alabama, North Carolina gave the greatest response to his speech and plan, while he said communications also had come from New York, Minnesota, Missouri and from all Southern states.

Answers To Bold Challenge

In his bold and forthright stand against the unconscionable effort to cram racial equality down the throats of Southern people, Governor Dixon, of Alabama has been joined by Governor Talmadge, of Georgia, Governor Jefferies, of South Carolina and Governor Johnson, of Mississippi, while commendatory telegrams have been received from Congressmen Joe Starnes and Carter Manasco, of Alabama, the latter taking the necessary steps to place Governor Dixon's ringing denunciation of the racial equality move in the Congressional Record.

This obviously is merely a starter. The challenge is such that it must be answered by every public official who appreciates the meaning of white supremacy and by every citizen who would perpetuate Southern civilization.

Cheers For Governor Dixon, For Congressman Manasco

Governor Frank Dixon's refusal to allow race social equality to be promoted by federal interference has been warmly commended in the South, denounced by some sections of the press in the North. To appease some radical groups, and no doubt to obligate the large Negro vote, the administration thru the War Production Board is attempting to force the co-mingling of whites and Negroes.

Governor Dixon clearly and concisely set out the position of the white residents of the South, in his refusal of a war contract tendered by the W.P.B. Racial segregation will continue in the South despite Federal pressure to force abandonment of this principle, the governor told the Board, in denouncing it's action in using the war emergency as a pretex to bring about the abolition of the color line in the South.

His letter to the Board, widely read throughout the nation was a courageous stand against a movement whose ultimate goal or attainment would be a mongrel race of whites and blacks, populating our nation.

Cheers of all southerners also should go to Congressman Carter Manasco, who had Governor Dixon's historic communication published in full in the Congressional Record.

One Unintimidated

The President's Committee on Fair Employment Practices has run afoul of another executive who refuses to be bulldozed and intimidated by the advocates of social equality between races. He is Alabama's Governor Frank Dixon.

Governor Dixon has refused to sign a WPB contract under which the State Department of Corrections and Institutions would manufacture 1,750,000 yards of osnaburg cloth in prison mills for the use of armed forces. His refusal came from the fact that the contract carried a clause placed in all war contracts by executive order of the President, which provides that "the seller, in performing the work required by this contract shall not discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin."

In his letter of refusal Governor Dixon pointed out that federal agencies had adopted policies, "the effect of which is to break down the principle of segregation under which the white and negro races have lived in peace together in the South for all the years since Reconstruction." He further pointed out that the Federal Government once before "engaged in the experiment of forcing negro domination on the Southern people" with unhappy consequences, and scored those who today "seek to foster their own pet social reforms in a time of national crisis."

The President's executive order to insert the "discrimination clause" in all war contracts was not, as its supporters contend, issued for the sole purpose of correcting inequalities which are known by all fair-minded persons to exist. It was issued at the demand of the Society for the Advancement of the Colored Race under threat of a Negro march on Washington. And the society, like Mrs. Roosevelt, is not interested in discriminations in industry; it is interested in using the war emergency to destroy segregation laws and force social equality upon the white race.

Governor Dixon has set a splendid example for other Southern Governors. If these executives will band together they can bring about a change in the Washington attitude and convince officials of the stupidity of the course they now seem determined to follow.—Dothan Eagle.

CONGRESS AND THE POLL TAX

As was to have been expected because of the political pressure, Congress has agreed upon the law which will give soldiers the right to vote in the state of their residence without paying poll tax. The only states affected by such a law are in the South where legislatures and Constitution makers have seen the wisdom of this restriction as a requirement for suffrage.

SEP 1 2 1942

It is significant that Representative Hobbs, of Alabama, one of the more scholarly members of the Alabama delegation in Congress, made a speech against the poll tax provision emphasizing its unconstitutionality. It is hard to see how it can be regarded as other than unconstitutional for the Congress to attempt to fix the voting qualifications for the men and women who choose the members of the state legislature. .

As a matter of fact, however, the constitutionality, vel non, is not the point at this stage of the game. With a political campaign in progress and the ides of November approaching there are congressmen who feel that this poll tax pronouncement will help them to get re-elected. Some of the Northern Democratic members even appealed to Southern members to permit the law to be passed because of the danger in which its defeat would place them.

There are so many objections to the law that it would take a long while to enumerate them. Even if it should be declared constitutional for the Congress to say that no man has to pay a poll tax to take part in a general election, it seems completely outside the bounds to put a provision in the law as was done by the House of Representatives that the same thing shall apply to state primary elections. Primary elections are strictly party affairs, and the Supreme Court has been consistent in upholding the rights of party organizations to determine the qualifications of participants.

The practical objections to putting this law into operation are almost insuperable. Even Republican Secretary of War Stimson asked Congress not to pass it because of the difficulty of compiling the votes of men from all the states, the danger of revealing to the enemy the location of various men and military units, and the intolerable burden that would be placed upon the mails and transport facilities to get ballots to the men at the front and return those ballots to the counting officials.

Of course it is a political law, passed for political purposes and for the political advantage of those who voted aye on its enactment. Few soldiers will ever try to take advantage of it. Soldiers and sailors and air men at the front have their minds on something else besides voting just at this time. They are depending on others to look after things at home. They have confidence in the way their fathers and mothers and friends are going to keep the home fires burning. About the last thing they want to fool with is making cross marks on a long ballot while they are up to their knees in slush in some Pacific island jungle, or dropping bombs over Europe or drilling in Northern Ireland for an invasion of the continent. As a political maneuver it may have influence in some doubtful Northern districts, but actually it doesn't mean anything.

Such a social revolution while the nation is fighting for its life must be pleasing indeed to Hitler and Hirohito.

It would not, in fact, be surprising to learn that it is being encouraged by them as a postive means of bringing about internal friction and dissension which will nullify America's war effort at a critical time.

Those who believe that the South will willingly submit to the elimination of social barriers know little of its history or traditions. They would do well to borrow a few history books which deal with the days of reconstruction.

Governor Dixon has set a splendid example for other Southern Governors. If these executives will band together they can bring about a change in the Washington attitude and convince officials of the stupidity of the course they now seem determined to follow.

Surely Southern Congressional representatives can exert as much pressure on the President as can the Society for the Advancement of the Colored Race and these men should be immediately called upon to perform in the interests of their people. Perhaps they then can show the chief executive the futility of Federal attacks on the South's tried and proven method of promoting harmony between the races.

A MENACE TO WHITE SUPREMACY

"We do not need the federal government to tell us who shall vote in our primaries," said Chairman Herbert Holmes of the Mississippi Democratic state executive committee, at the meeting of that body Monday in Jackson to prepare the ballots for the primary election to be held August 25th. Referring to the proposal that the Democratic Negroes in Arkansas be allowed to vote in the primaries in that state, he said, "Our sister state is going to have a serious time tomorrow."

Chairman Holmes declared that the federal government is using as an "opening wedge" the abolishing of the poll tax, and federal funds for the public school systems to wipe out our "political and social rights."

As war measures we have surrendered many of our rights to the government, to aid in the war effort, but we must prepare to stand for those rights after the war is over. We have made many sacrifices. But there are some things we of the South must not surrender if we are to preserve those political and social rights guaranteed us as a sovereign state.

Going further, Representative Wolfolk of Tunica County, said, "It would be unfortunate for us to surrender to the federal government the control of our elections, and abolition of the poll tax is an entering wedge." He also said, "We should never surrender to the federal government the control or supervision of our public school systems, and the entering wedge on this is through the appropriation of federal funds, which would carry with it the right of supervision, directing how and on whom it should be used. It needs no argument for you to see the danger's here."

Judge Holmes and Mr. Wolfolk are right. We have been complacently holding out our hands for federal donations for this and that purpose, including the building and maintenance of public schools, forgetting that we may have to pay in a painful and destructive way for the same, after the war is over.

While Chairman Holmes' prediction that trouble would occur in last week's Arkansas primaries was prevented for the time being, there was evidence enough at the polls to show that it was not fully passed over, and intimations were expressed that it is still in the making. And from plenty of evidence, Arkansas is not the only place race trouble is brewing, and there is also evidence a plenty that one of the main sources or causes, is emanating straight from Washington, and from a very prominent woman. The same race rot is going on by a bunch of women in Atlanta also. The eastern magazines are overflowing with propaganda that has evidently been brought about from the work in Washington. Perhaps Hitlerism is being conducted around our Capitol. At any rate, it is time something was being done about it, if internal strife is to be prevented. It is time our Southern Congressmen were waking up.

GOVERNOR PRAISED

MONTGOMERY, Ala., [AP]—A petition from 128 adult residents of West Blocton, Ala., Wednesday commended Governor Dixon for his refusal to sign for the state a government contract containing a non-discrimination clause. The petition said its signers felt that segregation was best for the Negro race and that the non-discrimination clause "means nothing less than social equality between the white and black races."

Birmingham, Ala. News
August 10, 1942

MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING

The Montgomery Advertiser in an editorial, "The Race Issue Must Not Be Alabama's Shame," has calmly and dispassionately covered Gov. Dixon's racial issue, the issue raised in his long discourse of why a contract proffered the state by the War Department was turned down—turned down because of a clause that was written into all government contracts, merely as a matter of detailed routine, 18 months ago.

This clause reads: "The seller, in performing the work required by this contract, shall not discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin."

Every defense project in the country today is being built by those who would fulfill that clause, and these defense projects are turning out material that is assuring us of ultimate victory. The defense efforts are being shared in by Jew, Gentile, Protestant, Catholic and all colors alike, but Gov. Dixon's translation is that in the particular instance of Alabama the federal government is attempting to "break down the color line."

Either our governor is in a daze of bewilderment, is overworked from the strain of office, or he has become the innocent victim of a small crowd of malcontents who would sacrifice a prominent and honest official upon the altar of discontent that their own selfish lust for gore might be satisfied.

The thinking people of this state are not fearful of the nightmarish ogre that haunts our governor, nor are they alarmed over possibilities so remote they are outlined only in fantastic design. They realize that the South can and will at all times cope with its racial question, and in so realizing they see neither rhyme nor reason for its being ballyhooed as ominously nearby.

The governor has made much ado about nothing. It is inconceivable that a different government contract must be written for each particular section of the country, or each section of that section. One uniform contract should suffice in a united nation, and it behooves the party of the second part to properly interpret and expedite to fulfillment.

Gov. Dixon has done much for the state during his administration. His record is enviable, but his friends and critics alike, as well as all sane-thinking and patriotic citizens of Alabama, hope and pray that his farewell act will not be to put a stamp of shame on our state. —Sylacauga News.

Wise Negro Leaders

Many influential Negro ministers, physicians, educators and business men are congratulating Governor Frank M. Dixon, for his forthright opposition to those misguided persons in Washington who would use the war as an occasion for stirring up strife between the white and colored races in the South.

This action springs from the knowledge that the white and colored peoples of the South can best settle their own issues among themselves without the interference of persons from the North who know nothing of the situation and care less.

Negro leaders in the South know as a rule that this agitation springs largely from sources that actually are antagonistic to the Southern Negro. Most of what is being done is at the instance of the "brown brain trust" in Washington which is composed of and dominated by snooty elements that hold the decent, law-abiding, industrious and honest Negroes of the South in contempt and who do not give a hoot what happens to the Negroes here so long as they themselves are made secure in their jobs at the public trough.

Many informed Negroes also know that these snooty elements in Washington, with their contempt for the run-of-mine Negroes, are working right in harmony with Hitler, whose agents are trying to stir up strife between whites and blacks in the South.

Under the circumstances it is proper that the voices of these Negroes should be raised in approval of the steps taken by Governor Dixon to check racial movements in the South which make for division and which, in their general effect, serve the purposes of Hitler and Hirohito.

Gadsden Negro leaders who have taken the initiative in backing up Governor Dixon deserve commendation. They are rendering a service to their race as well as to the state and nation.

IN DISCUSSION OF THE RACE ISSUE

In turning back and refusing to sign a contract with the federal government for materials made in Alabama until a clause in the contract relating to discrimination against workers because of race or color is deleted from the contract Governor Frank Dixon seems to have opened a controversy that is raging up and down the state.

The clause in question reads as follows: "The seller, in performing the work required by this contract, shall not discriminate against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin."

This paper definitely does not propose to pick a fight with or criticize Governor Dixon for what he thinks is the right policy in defense of the state of which he is the executive officer. We certainly won't agree with some editorial writers who have accused the Governor of suffering from a sincere "obsession" regarding the negro question. We believe the Governor [illegible] be sincere and not "obsessed" with any idea of blood and thunder to come. On the other hand we have found Governor Dixon to be a man who is not afraid to stand on his "hind" legs and defend his belief on questions of state exactly as he sees it, no matter where the chips may fall.

Our only regret in the matter is that it has been forced out in the open now when it most certainly should be relegated to the files to be attended to after the war is over. If our enemies are nothing else they have proven themselves to be highly efficient in the use of propaganda and they ask no better opportunity than a chance to set race against race while every race, color and creed in the United States must bend every energy toward winning the war if we expect to win.

Tru enough a few Negro leaders have expressed views that if made active would bring cause for fear. But by and far we believe that the vast majority of the Negro people and their leaders see cooperation with all races as the means to winning this war and have so set their sights—leaving their grievances, if any, behind for the duration.

DIXON SUPPORTED

Twelve Gadsden Negroes added an interesting chapter to the current discussion of racial relations Saturday when they sent a communication to Governor Dixon, lauding the Governor for his protest against the efforts of a group of Washington politicians and parlor pinks to stir up racial hatreds.

Governor Dixon, it will be recalled, earlier in the week had declined to sign a contract for manufacture in Alabama prisons of certain articles for the federal government. He explained the terms of the contract were such that under it he felt certain all segregation of races would be abolished.

Rather than add this further confusion to our already existing national confusion, the Governor simply turned down the business.

The group of Gadsden Negroes believes the Governor acted wisely and told him so. The Negroes did not want any Washington busybodies coming into Alabama to stir up antagnosims among the races.

It is interesting to note that among the twelve who sent the communication to Governor Dixon there were six ministers of the gospel, two physicians, one mortician and a restaurant operator 89 years of age. Thus the declarations of the parlor pinks that the Negro is denied economic opportunities in the South are refuted.

The Negro is developing in the South. The race is making real and sustained progress. It will continue to do so if the parlor pinks will stop their meddling.

The Negro leader in the South does not want a mongrel race, which appears to be the goal of certain elements in and out of our national government.

The Gadsden group has sufficient perception to see what is going on and lost no time in making their own protest.

That the time for frank speech is here there is no doubt.

The magazine Alabama this week declared "Southerners felt sure now that a well planned national movement, centering on Washington, was using the war emergency to promulgate social equality between white and Negro. They had these items to mull over:

"A group of New York Negro leaders directed a letter to President Roosevelt demanding a 'showdown' on the question of 'total democracy' for the Negro. Signers of the letter were led by the international president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, A. Philip Randolph (another Negro official of this union came to Birmingham recently as a member of the FEP committee).

"In Washington the Federal Employees Union of the CIO leased a private ballroom of the Willard hotel for a dance on June 26. The hotel manager that night was astounded to find that of the 500 persons attending, 70 were Negroes who danced freely with white partners. His only recourse was to close the hall an hour earlier than previously planned.

"In Bessemer a leading Birmingham attorney (Horace C. Wilkinson) told the Kiwanis Club that a passenger train was recently held up at Anniston because a Negro insisted on riding with whites and the conductor did not know how far to go in enforcing the Jim Crow law; that Negroes threw kisses at Montevallo college girls waiting at a railroad station; that Negroes recently 'took over' a state liquor store in Dothan when they became irked at waiting in line for whiskey; that Wendell Willkie's speech before the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People two weeks ago "advocated a program that would result in the amalgamation of the races'; that 'an organization should be formed, so strong, so powerful and so efficient that this menace to our national security and our local way of life will rapidly disappear.'

The Gadsden Times spoke out vigorously against a suggestion in Washington (criticized by Mississippi's Congressman Rankin) to take labels off blood bank containers so that it could not be determined by a recipient whether the blood came from a member of the white race or of another race.

Dixon's Charge Gets Wide Comment

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 27.—Comments on Gov. Dixon's charge that a non-discrimination clause in a federal war industry contract attempted to break down the racial segregation in the South were heaped on his desk Monday.

Among letters and telegrams commending his stand were messages from Gov. Paul B. Johnson, of Mississippi; Gov. R. M. Jefferies, of South Carolina, and Representative Starnes (D., Ala.).

Representative Carter Manasco (D., Ala.) asked permission in a telegram to have it inserted in The Congressional Record and his request was granted by the governor.

Several letters disapproving his stand also were received. A telegram of disapproval came from the Brooklyn branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Clippings of editorials criticizing his charge from The Philadelphia Inquirer and PM, a New York newspaper were also sent in.

Dixon charged Thursday that the non-discrimination clause in a contract offered Alabama by the War Production Board for manufacture of osnaburg cloth with the Department of Corrections and Institutions facilities tended to break down segregation.

The governor refused to sign the contract for the state since, he said, the non-discrimination clause would force Negroes and whites to work together in "positions of responsibility" and in some cases might cause whites to work under Negroes.

Governor Of Alabama Asks Party Break

Intimates South Needs A New Political Party

NEW YORK — Charging that the operations of the Fair Employment Practice Committee, the United States Civil Service and the recent attempt to abolish the poll tax through Congressional action constituted an attempt to "change the social structure of the south," Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama, strongly suggested the birth of a new Democratic party in the south, completely divorced from the liberal attitude toward the Negro of the reigning Democratic party.

The Alabama governor was speaking before the Southern Society of New York Friday night and he said:

"Suggestions are rife as to the formation of a Southern Democratic party, the election of unpledged representatives to the electorial college. Ways and means are being discussed daily to break our chains. We will find some way, and find it regardless of the effect of national elections, if this senseless attack keeps up."

AGAINST FEPC

He was then referring to the announced policy of the FEPC to seek fair employment practices for the Negro, to the sentiment of the majority of Democrats to abolish the poll tax and to the inclination of the United States Employment Service to bring about integration of the Negro into government employment on a wider scale.

Referring to an executive order against discrimination by reason of race in any defense work, he said:

DEC 19 1942

"The announced policy of the Employment Service and the actions of the . . . . committee indicate that, however feverently the claim may be made that the purpose was not to interfere with the social structure of the South, in practical effect the abolition of segregation was exactly the result sought to be achieved by the majority of the committee.

DEC 19 1942

"The position of the Southern people has always been a difficult one," he said. "Today their position is anomalous in the extreme. It is their party which is dynamiting their social structure, which is arousing bitterness and recrimination, which is attempting to force crackpot reforms on them in a time of national crisis. "How can we bring the essential balance?. . . By turning back as far as present day society will permit us, to crossroads democracy."

DIXON WARNS FOE[illegible] OF SOUTH THAT THEIR AGITATI[illegible] WILL BEAT DEMOS AT POLLS AGAIN

xx

Dec 17 1942

New York—Agitation of pressure groups such as those trying to change the social structure of the South "are likely to cause the defeat of the next Democratic candidate for president," Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama warned Friday night, December 11, in an address before the Southern Society of New York.

"Suggestions are rife as to the formation of a Southern Democratic party, the election of unpledged representaitves to the Electoral College," said the governor, alluding to proposals by Gov. Houston Jones of Louisiana, and others, that the South use the ballot box to defend states' rights and horse-trade for a national administration that will respect Southern rights. "Ways and means are being discussed daily to break our chains. We will find some way, and find it regardless of the effect on national elections, if this senseless attack keeps up.

"The federal government, in Democratic hands, is now tampering with the one thing we cannot permit, will not permit, whatever the price to ourselves. The motto of the Democratic party in Alabama (white supremacy) stands on every ballot. Our fathers put it there and we mean to keep it."

Pleading for national unity and concentration on the winning of the war, Governor Dixon paid tribute to "the needed social reforms of the New Deal," but called for a truce in criticism of the South until the war is won.

Referring to the "stupid tampering" of pressure groups, the governor said: "It was the national impatience with this type of confusion which, in my opinion, caused the overwhelming defeat of the Democratic candidates in the last election. The people want this type of thing stopped until the life of the nation is made secure."

Citing the recent unsuccessful attempt to abolish poll taxes by act of Congress, Dixon said: "As an effort to change the social structure of the South it was foredoomed to failure. Following the scandals, the frauds and the brutality of Reconstruction, the Southern white man worked out his solution. In the main the negro race has, in a few generations, made more progress than any race on earth in a comparable period . . . It might surprise some of our Northern friends of realize that, as the responsible members of the race have qualified themselves as responsible citizens, to them in good measure the franchise has been extended. There are thousands of negroes who vote in Alabama today."

The governor said the Southern people found themselves in the peculiar position of having their poll tax and racial segregation laws attacked by "their own party administration, which sought to knife them with federal control of elections, with the Fair Employment Practice Committee, with the policy of the Employment Service (to force the mingling of white and negro workers and appointment of negro foremen)."

"It is the desire of the responsible leadership of both races that the people of the South be left alone to work out their destiny," said Dixon. "We know that, as Mark Etheridge, the one man on the Fair Employment Practice Committee who understands the problems of the South, said at the hearing in Birmingham: 'The Southern negro cannot afford to drive from his side, in his march to a greater fulfillment of his rights, the Southern white men of good will who have been his chief asset and his chief aid. He must recognize that there is no power on earth—not even in all the mechanized armies of the earth, Allied and Axis—which could force the Southern white people to the abandonment of the principle of social segregation.'

"We know that outside interference is creating a very undesirable situation for both white and black alike in the Southern states. We know that the activities of this committee are helping to cause discontent and danger . . .

"We ca[illegible] abandon the great and essen[illegible] reforms of the New Deal, return to unbridled competitive license, release the controls on accumulated and accumulating wealth, abandon the weak and the helpless, achieve the great measure of personal freedom which, after all, brought with it the inevitable evils and the inevitable measures of control.

"How can we bring the essential balance? . . . By turning back, [illegible] far as present day society will [illegible]mit us, to crossroads democracy[illegible]

The governor advocated a retu[illegible] to the system where all grants of federal money would be spent through state agencies," not by the agents of the federal government."

"Give us a few more years of the political pap-sucking which has bought us and paid for us in the past," Dixon warned, "a few more years of the mess-of-pottage form of government, and we will be fair spoil for the two-penny American Hitler whom the future will surely bring, the planner who plans our democratic privileges into oblivion. .

"Why bring up these things in time of war? Why not let sleeping dogs lie? God knows there is nothing I would desire more . . . Remember that I am not responsible for the attack on our election laws, for the Fair Employment Practice Committee, for the Employment Service policy. I am not starting anything . . . I am praying that those who are starting them will leave the Southern people alone . . . We have the unquestioned right to demand that there be no trickery, no chicanery, no changes in our form of government beyond those essential to the winning of the war."

The governor mentioned his refusal to sign a contract which would have enabled the committee "to put us on trial as to why more of our state employes were not negroes," and added: "It meant subjecting myself to villification and abuse, which instantly followed. I am glad to be able to tell you, however, that the intelligent people of my state were and are overwhelmingly behind me in the stand I took, and plainly told me so. Our mills are at work on war work without this provision (the so-called 'discrimination clause'), without selling the birthright of our people."

In a speech at the fifty-seventh annual dinner of the New York Southern Society at the Waldorf-Astoria last week Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama blasted the national administration for "meddling with the racial policies of the South".

361

He characterized the regulations of the United States Employment Service against racial discrimination in defense work and the FEPC which enforces them as "stupid". There can be no orderly society below the Mason-Dixon line, unless the basic principle of segregation is adhered Alabama's Governor stated further.

DEC 19 1942

Dixon blamed the "crackpot reformers" in Washington for the administrations' heavy loss in the last election and called attention to the support that the south has always given the Democratic party even though it was a Democratic administration which originated the policies "which most Southerners find repulsive."

DEC 19 1942

The speaker accused the Democratic party of committing suicide by attempting to force "crackpot reforms" on the south at a time when national unity is necessary and stated that if this "senseless attack" continues the south will find a way to defeat it regardless of the effect on national elections.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 6.—The Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co. was linked with the campaign of racial incitement launched in Birmingham's vital war industry area and throughout the south against President Roosevelt's Executive Order 8802 barring Negro discrimination.

It was revealed that E. D. Lemay, high official in the Tennessee company, attempted to pull wires behind the scenes to get a meeting of the Alabama Publishers Association to adopt a resolution endorsing Gov. Frank Dixon's recent anti-Negro statement.

The publishers, who were meeting in Montgomery, the state capital, on July 24-26, declined to adopt the Lemay resolution.

It was pointed out here that the U. S. Steel Corp. of which the Tennessee Coal, Iron & Railroad Co., is a subsidiary was not necessarily aware of Lemay's activities.

However it is the opinion of labor leaders here that, unless U. S. Steel repudiates Lemay's shenanigians it must bear some responsibility for the campaign of racial incitement which is disrupting the war effort in this vital production center.

DEFIED GOV'T

The resolution which Lemay sought at the publishers conference would have supported Gov. Dixon's open defiance of the national government on the issue of enforcement of the President's executive order barring discrimination in war industries. The Governor laid down the gauntlet to the administration in a letter to the Defense Supplies Corporation which included his refusal to sign a contract for 2,000,000 yards of cloth for Army tents. The work was to have been done in the textile mills connected with the State prisons. The Governor said he would bar this work so long as the contract contained a non-discrimination clause.

It is significant that Gov. Dixon's blast followed a speech by Horace G. Wilkinson, former Ku Klux Klan leader, which called for the organization of a "League for White Supermacy." Several days after Dixon's letter was made public Senator Bankhead of Alabama wrote to General George C. Marshall, U. S. Chief of Staff, protesting sending Negro troops to the southern states for training. The letter spoke about "growing anxiety that race conflicts may break out and lead to bloodshed."

Labor men here point out that it is the inflammatory agitation of demagogues like Wilkinson and Gov. Dixon that are whipping up sentiments in Klan-inspired circles for "race conflicts that may break out and lead to bloodshed," referred to by Bankhead.

PHONY TELEGRAM

Meanwhile, the Gadsen, Ala., branch of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, categorically denied that any of 12 of its leaders named had sent a telegram to Gov. Dixon endorsing his attack on the President's Executive Order, as reported in the Southern press. After making its investigation the N. A. A. C. P. committee found that the Gadsden Chamber of Commerce concocted the telegram along with one of its own and sent both to the Governor at the Chamber's expense.

Rev. E. M. Wilson, one of the Gadsden NAACP leaders charged with having signed the telegram to the Governor, is said to have telephoned the Negro leaders involved from the office of the Chamber of Commerce, and when each one answered turned the telephone over to the Secretary of the Chamber to do the talking.

The Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce is said to have then asked the Negro leaders to endorse Gov. Dixon's anti-Negro statement in an effort "to avert a race riot" which he said was "imminent." When some of the NAACP leaders expressed reluctance to approve the telegram, the secretary, it is charged, threatened them with "plenty of trouble."

According to the NAACP committee the original telegram which the Chamber of Commerce demanded that the Negro leaders sign was not sent but another substituted in its stead.

INTIMIDATION CAMPAIGN

Meanwhile, the false report that the NAACP had endorsed the Governor's anti-Negro stand was widely utilized to intimidate Negroes throughout the state and to stir up agitation against the President's anti-discrimination order and the Committee on Fair Employment Practices which he set up.

The campaign, raised to a high pitch by the speech of Wilkinson and the letter by Gov. Dixon declining a vital war contract, has reached into the mills and mines of this strategic industrial center and is disrupting war production.

Southern Paper Raps Gov. Dixon Jim Crow

5-6K

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., July 29.—The influential Birmingham News-Age-Herald in a recent lead editorial took issue with Gov. Frank M. Dixon's attack on President Roosevelt's drive against anti-Negro discrimination in war industries. Gov. Dixon, in rejecting a government war contract for almost two million yards of cloth to be manufactured by convict labor in the state prison, blamed the war departments inclusion in the contract of the standard clause against discrimination against any worker because of race, creed, color or national origin. In a lengthy statement which he made public, Dixon charged federal interference with state's rights which he said, threatens "to break down the principle of segregation" and menaces "white supremacy."

The News, which has been one of the strongest supporters of the Dixon administration, said:

"When there is so much that we know what we hold in common with the governor, we find ourselves surprised and filled with regret that we differ with him so widely in interpretation of what the federal government is attempting to do in this connection.

"Moreover while we certainly join with the governor in deploring any destructive raising of this issue, we have the misgiving that he himself has unnecessarily carried the discussion to more dangerous lengths."

"The vast majority of Americans, white and colored, North and South, favor, in our opinion, what is really being sought by responsible authorities striving to end discrimination against minorities. . . .

"In the name of our country, in the name of all suffering mankind and a tragically stricken world, let us, every man, strive for light, for tolerance, for faith, for unity and for our mutual salvation."

ONE MORE WORD

The Advertiser has not attacked race segregation by either word or implication.

The Advertiser has advocated no "social reform" in race relations.

The Advertiser has not defended any individual or group of individuals who have agitated the question of race segregation, whether they be in Washington or Alabama.

JUL 31 1942

The Advertiser has only condemnation for any class, race, economic group, political group or other interest which uses the pressure of war to gain any advantage whatsoever.

The Advertiser believes the American people are locked in a struggle which will decide whether fascism is to rule the world for centuries to come. Any act which weakens the chance for a survival of democracy should be condemned by every person worthy of the name of citizen.

---

This restatement of The Advertiser's position should not be necessary to clarify any sentence that has appeared on this page, either this week or during any week since Hitlerism first cast its shadow over the human race.

JUL 31 1942

5-6K

This restatement is made for the benefit of those who have some regard for the truth, or who have been misled by those who do not.

Dixon

On Saturday last The Advertiser deplored the fact that Governor Dixon had, by virtue of the weight of his office, touched off a feverish discussion of the race issue. It believed that it was improper for him to lead the people of Alabama to fear that "white supremacy is threatened" when the obvious fact is that no power, military or legal, can force such an issue.

The Advertiser believed then, and believes now, that what is needed is not more fear, not more predictions of dire and terrible events, but less fear and less hysteria.

The measure of any act today must be whether the people of Alabama are led to work with better spirit to harvest crops, dig coal, tend blast furnaces, drill, fly planes at our military fields, and do the thousand jobs which are our part of the battle.

JUL 31 1942

The Advertiser having stated its position —for which it has neither apology nor regret—believes it can serve no useful purpose by arguing the matter further until such time as reason rather than passion dominates public discussion.

A newspaper's editorial columns are devoted to its interpretations and opinions. The course of this matter will not be decided here, but by what news events are recorded on other pages. The news columns of this paper have reported fully every significant action taken by Governor Dixon, and will continue to do so.

Because it is a matter which affects the successful prosecution of the nation's war, and further affects the welfare of Alabama's people for a long time to come, The Advertiser expresses this earnest hope:

May each Alabamian conduct himself with restraint, common sense and patriotism —for without these there can be no unity of purpose and action in winning this war!

A THREAT OF SECESSION

Speaking at the annual dinner of the Southern Society in New York last Friday night, Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama, shouted a threat of secession against the American Government unless it continued to regard the Federal Constitution as a scrap of paper where Negroes are concerned.

Scoring the Roosevelt Administration for its "trend toward centralization" since its first year, and denouncing the WPA, the FEPC and the anti-poll tax bill, he urged his fellow Southerners to "do a little planning too."

The belligerent Alabama executive did not say for what the South should plan or how, but everyone present and those who read his speech could have had no doubt about his meaning.

Bewailing the plight of the Southern white people beset by a liberal Democratic administration, he cried out "How long will they put up with it I do not know. . . . Ways and means are being discussed daily to break our chains. We will find some way and find it regardless of the effect on national elections if this senseless attack keeps up.

Dec. 19 1942

"For the Federal Government, in Democratic hands, is now tampering with the one thing WE CANNOT PERMIT, WILL NOT PERMIT, WHATEVER THE PRICE TO OURSELVES."

What Governor Dixon is saying in effect is that "we intend to pursue 'our way of life' with the Negro regardless of the Federal Constitution or the wishes of the Federal Administration, and if you don't like it, you can lump it."

Dec. 19 1942

This is a clear threat of treason and insurrection, and possibly of secession, for it is difficult to see how Alabama and her sister states can continue to flout the wishes of the rest of the Union engaged in a war for survival without resorting to physical resistence and ultimate withdrawal at the cost of oceans of blood.

Either Alabama and her neighbors will have to yield to the Union or the Union will have to contniue to yield to Alabama and her neighbors as it has done since 1875.

Goxernor Dixon and other prominent Southerners are figuring on the Federal Government backing down, and there is little in the record to lead them to believe otherwise.

Says Negroes Are Partly To Blame For Their Plight

DEC 12 1942

By WILL V. NEELY

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., (ANP)—Are Negro passengers Jim Crowed on bus lines in Southern cities? The answer is of course yes, however, what are the true conditions leading up to this segregation?

To get a full look into the facts we must first realize that the Negro problem in the south will never be settled in a day or week. We must commend the Negro press for its untiring efforts toward lifting the veil of segregation.

DEC 12 1942

The press has gone a long way and has a long way to go, but it needs the cooperation of all Negroes in accomplishing their gigantic task.

WAY IS LAW CHANGE

The problem of Negro "back seat" riders in southern buses is a problem that can only be overcome by changes in state law. The laxity of Negro passengers is doing a lot to add fuel to an already hot fire.

It is a common practice for a Negro to flag a bus on some country lane and after forcing the driver to stop and unload most of the passengers—proceed to ride perhaps a mile or two and then get off. This makes it necessary for the operator to again stop the bus, and unload the passengers and in this way perhaps several minutes of bus schedule are lost in the confusion.

It is a practice also for Negro workmen to board busses in grease smeared clothes or overalls and blandly crowd the already crowded busses, ignoring the fact that fellow passengers resent being greased by a person too lazy to clean himself up.

I have seen several examples of bus drivers moving the white passengers toward the front and giving seats to Negroes who insisted on bringing along a lunch basket or excessive luggage. One Negro woman occupied the entire rear seat of a Greyhound bus in eating a huge lunch of cheese and corn bread. She was riding from Sylacauga, Ala., to Anniston, a distance of about 40 miles.

REFUSED PASSAGE

Also there is the example of the Negro farmer near Birmingham who became insulted because the driver of a bus refused to allow him to board the vehicle with two large shovels and a garden rake!

DEC 12 1942

Yes, there is prejudice in the south and it isn't going to be helped by Negroes who insist on making it worse by making themselves a nuisance to everybody and tieing up traffic simply because of a little less foresight than is usually given them.

White, Negro Professors Dine, Fined

DEC 12 1942

BIRMINGHAM, Ala.—(ANP)—Donald Rasmussen, white professor at Talladega college, his wife, and Louis Burnham, local Negro educator, were fined $25 each and court costs for eating together at a Negro cafe.

DEC 12 1942

The Negro restaurant owner, Mrs. Nancy Williams, was fined $50 and costs.

Their conviction, before Police Judge Henry J. Martin, was for violatng the city segregation code prohibiting members of the two races eating in the same cafe.

INVITED BURNHAM

Mr. Rasmussen, instructor in sociology and economics at Talladega since September, told the court he was in Birmingham on a hurried trip and in order to save time invited Mr. Burnham, with whom he wanted to discuss certain work, to have dinner with him and his wife.

DEC 12 1942

The professor said he was aware of the racial attitudes of the south but did not know it was against the law for white people to eat in Negro restaurants.

SOUTH TO BREAK ITS PARTY CHAINS, SAYS GOV. DIXON

DEC 12 1942

Democrats Are Accused of 'Dynamiting' Dixie.

New York, Dec. 11 (AP).—Gov. Frank M. Dixon of Alabama charged the Democratic party tonight with "dynamiting" the social structure of the south and declared that confusion caused by pressure groups in Washington "is likely to cause the defeat of the next Democratic candidate for President."

In an address before the Southern Society of New York, Dixon asserted:

"Suggestions are rife as to the formation of a southern Democratic party, the election of unpledged representatives to the electoral college. Ways and means are being discussed daily to break our chains. We will find some way, and find it regardless of the effect of national elections, if this senseless attack keeps up."

Impatience Shown at Polls.

Declaring that efforts at reform by various bureaus and groups since Pearl Harbor had created "illimitable confusion and the diversion of the energies of many of us to efforts to retain our American Democracy at a time of dire national peril," Dixon said:

DEC 12 1942

"It was the national impatience with this type of confusion which, in my opinion, caused the overwhelming defeat of the Democratic candidates in the last election."

Dixon charged that the unsuccessful attempt to abolish the poll tax and the operation of the United States employment service and the fair employment practice committee were efforts to change the social structure of the south.

Race Issue Hit.

Referring to an executive order against discrimination by reason of race in any defense work, he said:

"The announced policy of the employment service and actions of the committee indicate that, however fervently the claim may be made that the purpose was not to interfere with the social structure of the south, in practical effect the abolition of segregation was exactly the result sought to be achieved by the majority of the committee."

Dixon said the social structure of the south was built and could endure only on the principle of segregation meaning "separation of the races, not mistreatment of anyone."

DEC 12 1942

"Dynamiting Themselves.

"The position of the southern people has always been a dijcult one," he said. "Today their position is anomalous in the extreme. It is their party which is dynamiting their social structure, which is arousing bitterness and recrimination, which is attempting to force crackpot reforms on them in a time of national crisis.

"We cannot abandon the great and essential reforms of the New Deal, return to unbridled competitive license, release the controls on accumulated and accumulating wealth, abandon the weak and the helpless, achieve the great measure of personal fredom which, after all, brought with it the inevitable evils and the inevitable measures of control.

"How can we bring the essential abalence? By turning back, as far as present day society will permit us, to crossroads democracy."

FLAYS NEW DEAL REFORMS IN SOUTH

DEC 19 1942

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 17—The national administration is undermining American democracy by advocating its application to the Negroes in the South.

This, in effect, was the charge leveled by Governor Frank M. Dixon of Alabama, who addressed the fifty-seventh annaul dinner of The New York Southern Society at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel Friday night.

DEC 19 1942

STUPID TAMPERING

Characterizing the New Deal's interest in the Negro below the Mason-Dixon line "stupid tampering" with the racial problems of the South, the Alabama Governor particularly blasted regulations of the United States Employment Service against defense work discrimination and the actions of the FEPC to enforce these regulations.

"Both of these agencies are a challenge to the basic principle of segregation, without which there can be no orderly society below the Mason-Dixon line." Dixon told his audience.

DEC 19 1942

SOUTH MAY NOT SUPPORT PARTY

The "confusion created by crackpot reformers" in Washington is one of the most important reasons for the defeat of Democratic candidates in the last election, the speaker stated, adding:

"It is this type of confusion which, if not dealt with as it should have been dealt with, is likely to cause the defeat of the next Democratic candidate for President of the United States."

The Governor of Alabama bitterly observed that while the solid South is the political balliwick of the Democratic Party, still it is a Democratic administration which has espoused the policies to which many Southerners object.

"It is their own party," Dixon said, "which is dynamiting their social structure, which is arousing bitterness and recrimination, which is attempting to force crackpot reforms on them in a time of national crisis.

"How long will you put up with this?" the speaker asked of his audience.

MAY FORM NEW ALLIANCE

The Governor intimated that leading Southerners are pledged to the formation of a Southern Democratic Party and the formation of unpledged representatives to the Electoral College.

"Ways and means are being discussed daily to break our chains", Dixon said. "We will find some way and will find it, regardless of the effect on national elections, if this senseless attack keeps up.

Dixon suggested a return to "crossroads democracy" in America, as an alternative to "Federal bureauocracy and regimentation."

DIXON LAUNCHES BLAST AT DEMOCRATIC PARTY

DEC 12 1942

NEW YORK, Dec. 11—(AP)—Gov. Frank M. Dixon of Alabama charged the Democratic party Friday night with "dynamiting" the social structure of the South and declared that "confusion" caused by pressure groups in Washington "is likely to cause the defeat of the next Democratic candidate for president."

Addressing the Southern Society of New York, Dixon, who is chairman of the Southern Governors Conference, advocated a return to "crossroads democracy." He attacked attempts to abolish the poll tax as a prerequisite for voting, and "tragically mistaken efforts" to change race relationships.

He said that since Pearl Harbor various bureaus and groups had increased their efforts at reforms, "and the net effect of all those misguided efforts has been the creation of illimitable confusion and the diversion of the energies of many of us o efforts to retain our American democracy, at a time of dire national peril."

"It was the national impatience with this type of confusion which, in my opinion, caused the overwhelming defeat of the Democratic candidates in the last election," the Alabama governor asserted.

"It is this type of confusion which, if not dealt with, as long ago it should have been dealt with, is likely to cause the defeat of the next Democratic candidate for President of the United States."

Referring to the recent unsuccessful attempt, "under the pretense that it was assential to the war effort," to abolish poll taxes, he said that "such childish cauistry, such patent insincerity, in the face of a national emergency, was extremely unfortunate . . . As an effort to change the social structure of the South it was foredoomed to failure."

DEC 12 1942

Discrimination Not Intended

He continued:

"Another iluustration of tragically mistaken efforts is in the attempt now going on, under the pretense of winning the war, to force, by yet another federal action an organic change in the relationship between the two races in the South . . .

"The social structure of the South has been built, and can endure, only on the principle of segregation. Please understand that the application of this system does not mean unfairness. Segregation implies separation of the races, not mistreatment of anyone . . . No discrimination should exist, and those practicing it deserve the condemnation of white and black alike . . ."

Dixon said "An illustration of stupid tampering with the delicate question is in the operation of the United States Employment Service and the Fair Employment Practice Committee," and, referring to an executive order against discrimination by reason of race in any defense work, added:

"The announced policy of the employment service and the actions of the . . . committee indicate that, however fervently the claim may be made that the purpose was not to interfere with the social structure of the South, in practical effect the abolition of segregation was exactly the result sought to be achieved by the majority of the committee.

"We know," the governor went on, "that outside interference is creating a very undesirable situation for both white and black alike in the Southern states. We know that the activities of this committee are helping to cause discontent and danger.

Position Is Difficult

"The position of the Southern people has always been a difficult one . . . Today their position is anomalous in the extreme. It is their party which is dynamiting their social structure, which is arousing bitterness and recrimination, which is attempting to force crackpot reforms on them in a time of national crisis . . .

"Suggestions are rife as to the formation of a Southern Democratic party, the election of unpledged representatives to the electoral college. Ways and means are being discussed daily to break our chains. We will find some way, and find it regardless of the effect on national elections, if this senseless attack keeps up . . .

"We cannot abandon the great and essential reforms of the New Deal, return to unbridled competitive license, release the controls on accumulated and accumulating wealth, abandon the weak and the helpless, achieve the great measure of personal freedom which, after all, brought with it the inevitable evils and the inevitable measures of control.

"How can we bring the essential balance? . . . By turning back, as far as present-day society will permit us, to crossroads democracy."

The governor advocated a return to the system where all grants of federal money would be spent through state agencies, "not by the agents of the federal government."

"Give us a few more years of the political pap-sucking which has bought us and paid for us in the past," Dixon said, "a few more years of the mess-of-pottage form of government, and we will be fair spoil for the 2-penny American Hitler whom the future will surely bring, the planner who plans our democratic privileges into oblivion."

Only Total Democracy Will Win War Against Axis, Declares Head of Rosenwald Fund

CHICAGO — "This war will be only a prelude to still more bitter and consuming wars until the great masses of now powerful colored peoples of the world are accepted into partnership."

This statement was made by Edwin R. Embree, president of the Julius Rosenwald Fund, in his comments on "Color and Democracy" in the Review of the Julius Rosenwald Fund just issued. The complete text of his statement follows:

"In the present war to defend democracy we find ourselves allied with people very different from ourselves, some of whom we never thought of before as within the scope of democracy.

"Allies—or potential allies if we do not force them into the enemies' camp—are:

DEC 12 1942

"The 450 million Chinese; 350 million people of India; 100 million brown peoples of the Philippines, South Asia, and the East India Islands; 120 million Latin Americans, many of whom are proud of their Indian blood as well as of their European ancestry;

"The 160 million Russians passionately devoted to equality of all classes and all cultures; and such millions from the Near East and Africa as can free themselves for the struggle.

One Way to Win War

"To those allies—if we are to win either the war or the peace—we must prove that we want democracy for all men, not merely for white men.

"We have already lost battles because we failed to make allies of millions of brown people who would have joined the fight if they had thought that victory for England or Holland or the United States meant freedom for them.

"We have lost the zeal of one tenth of the American people because they can not see any advance in their rights and opportunities even if the United Nations win. This war against totalitarian enemies can be won only by total democracy.

DEC 12 1942

Freedom for All

"America has given up one isolationist position. Even the stupidest among us now know that in the modern close and interdependent world the arms and economics of Europe and Asia are of direct concern to us.

"Now we have to learn that there cannot be isolation even in prejudices. We have to learn that freedom for India and the East Indies must be fought for as ardently as freedom for England or Holland, that democracy in China is all of a piece with democracy in Norway—and in Alabama.

Whites Can't Dominate

"The world is too small for the out-numbered white races to live by themselves; it is too large for the white minority to dominate.

"We must prove that we are willing to live in fellowship with other races or we must live in chaos. This war will be only a prelude to still more bitter and consuming wars until the great masses of now powerful colored peoples of the world are accepted into partnership."

1940-42 Rosenwald Fund Report

CHICAGO — The Julius Rosenwald Fund expended $1,350,000 on its programs of education, health, and race relations from 1940-42, President Edwin R. Embree reports in the current issue of the fund review.

Chief expenditures were $500,000 for the preparation of white and colored teachers for southern rural schools; $200,000 for fellowships for seventy-five colored persons and forty-five white Southerners; $250,000 for colored universities, Fisk, Atlanta and Dillard and $175,000 for health under the direction of Dr. M. O. Bousfield who is now lieutenant colonel in charge of the base hospital at Fort Huachuca, Ariz.

For the years ahead, Mr. Embree reports, the fund expects to put special emphasis on race relations and has appointed to head this new program Dr. Will W. Alexander of Atlanta and Washington, formerly head of the Farm Security Administration, and Dr. Charles S. Johnson of Fisk University.

VETOES FUNDS TO OPEN SCHOOL FOR DELINQUENT GIRLS

5K

AUG 9 1941

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 7—Nazified Gene Talmadge bared his fangs again last week when to prove his 100 per cent opposition to the rights of Negroes, the Georgia Governor vetoed a bill passed by the State Legislature appropriating money, to put into operation a training school for colored girls, that has been closed since it was completed in 1937 with a WPA grant and funds raised by Negro women of Georgia.

The state has a training school for white girl delinquents but colored girls are sent to jail or the penitentiary. Seeking to rehabilitate the girls and rescue them from crime-breeding jails a group of Negro women raised several thousand dollars and obtained 130 acres of land near Macon, and the WPA grant completed the job of building the Georgia Training School for Negro Girls in 1937.

GIRLS DOOMED

The Legislature accepted the school but refused to appropriate the money to operate it. After a great deal of agitation the State Legislature this year unanimously voted to appropriate the money necessary to operate the school.

The act of Gene Talmadge in vetoing the appropriation condemns the colored delinquent girls of Georgia to a term in the crime-breeding hells of Georgia's outmoded prisons and a lifetime beyond social rehabilitation.

Sniping at a Good Soldier

FEB 5 - 1942

5K

Some of the enemies of Governor Talmadge are exhibiting a narrow and reprehensible spirit in their persistent yapping at his zealous and whole-hearted offers to co-operate, with all the resources of the state, in winning this war.

The sneering and smearing go on in connection with his recent visit to the White House as a patriotic gesture of solidarity in face of the enemy, but writers like The Atlanta Journal's Gregory are taking a childish delight in predicting that his opposition to certain crackpot features of the New Deal will not be forgotten in Washington and that the administration will throw all its influence against him by way of petty reprisal in the hour of this life and death struggle for the country's very existence.

The snipers and sneerers might be asked the plain question, Is this a New Deal war or a war to protect the democratic institutions of the United States?

It is a notorious fact that certain New Deal groups in Washington do conceive that it is up to them to shape the pattern of the war and the ensuing peace. They have kept alive a paralyzing prejudice against the dollar-a-year men, representatives of industry who have given up their own business to speed up war production.

They seek to put their key men in important positions such as giving an $8,000 job as "business specialist" in the Price Control Administration to a man who has spent the best years of his life advocating "technocracy," which assumes that the system of free enterprise and the profit motive will not work.

But there is pretty general agreement that this is the war of all the people and that it is to save, not destroy, our democratic and traditionally American institutions.

C. E. Gregory, in The Atlanta Journal, drags in the Cocking affair to say the slogan of thousands of students in the University System will be "Remember Pearl Harbor and Gene Talmadge, too."

Since Mr. Gregory insists on reviving this issue, we may quote from a recent issue of Friends of the Public Schools of America, edited by Maj. Gen. Amos A. Fries and published at Washington, which says of one of these monied "foundations," namely, the General Education Board, that it has given 4 million dollars to the Progressive Education Association, whose aim is "to transfer the democratic traditions from individualistic to COLLECTIVE economic foundations."

It gave $961 to the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools with which to send "four Negro teachers to attend the Progressive Education Association's summer school at Sarah Lawrence College."

The Washington bulletin adds, "Sarah Lawrence college is a white women's college."

Governor Talmadge's stand in opposing the "foundations" should be the proudest act of his life, while the cheap ridicule of his manly offer to rise above all other considerations and help win this war is a blow at that patriotism of which his critics are incapable.

Gene Says State Will Refuse To Recognize 'Alien' Degrees

FEB 14 1942

56K

ATLANTA, [AP] — Governor Eugene Talmadge said Friday that the Georgia legislature would enact measures denying recognition to college graduates of states that do not recognize the credits of graduates of Georgia's colleges.

In a letter to Dean G. Lombard Kelly of the University of Georgia School of Medicine at Augusta, Talmadge recalled that a 1933 Georgia statute denies comity to doctors from any states that "refuse to recognize a regularly licensed physician from Georgia."

Then he asserted, "we are going to have bills passed similar to this affecting all of our college courses."

ELECTION IN FALL

The next session of Georgia's general assembly is not scheduled until January, 1943. Prior to that a regular general election for governor, legislators and other officials will be held.

After the organization of the house and senate the new governor will be inaugurated. Talmadge generally is expected to stand for re-election, but he has made no formal announcement.

The governor wrote to Dr. Kelly in response to a letter in which the dean said he considered it "highly probable" that the medical school would be placed on probation at the meeting of the council of medical education and hospitals in Chicago on Feb. 16 and 17.

FEB 14 1942

PROBATION EXPECTED

Dr. Kelly said he thought the medical school would be placed on probation "purely on the basis of the action of the southern Association of Colleges and Secondary schools" in dropping ten units of the Georgia University System from its approved list, effective Sept. 1.

FEB 14 1942

In suspending the Georgia colleges, the association charged that the dismissal of certain state educators by a revamped board of regents constituted political interference by the governor.

Citing the 1933 act, the governor said "it doesn't matter what these accrediting associations do so far as a medical school in Georgia is concerned." He added that the legislation was passed because "in 1933 the medical association was wanting Augusta discontinued as a medical school and denying any recognition to them."

SOUTHERN SAY-SO

LEADERS NEED SPIRIT OF DARING TO COPE WITH PROBLEMS OF POST WAR

BY M. S. STUART

56K

Pittsburgh Courier

NEGRO leaders have not yet been charged with the responsibility for the present war, nor for the sad reverses which have befallen the United Nations. But this should not be taken to mean that the favorite racial pastime of blaming those apparently out in front for every racial misfortune has been abandoned. It is more probably due to the fact that the chronic critics are finding more interesting exercise in "under-the-breath" denunciation of military blunders.

MAR 28 1942

Mr. Stuart

This effort, therefore, regrets that what is now here about to be observed might be construed as criticism with obstructive intent.

This space has contended, and yet contends, that much of the berating of those suspected of leadership ambitions has not been well founded. However, because of the hope that some good may result from it, the thought is here ventured that programs for racial improvement have been, and still are, lacking in imagination and daring. It seems that they have clung too tenaciously to the beaten path of least resistance. Or, have they been too faithfully drawn to a pattern to meet authoritative approval? This, if so, would be understandable and would not be a very severe indictment in view of the restrictive barriers with which leaders in every section have been faced. But now there seems to be a different picture unfolding.

Pittsburgh Pa.

KNOCK AT THE DOOR ANYWAY

At this time deep and vast changes in the methods of life of nearly all of the human race seem to impend. It is not unreasonable to believe that the majority of people surviving this war will live under conditions radically different from those previously obtaining. In the fact of this, is there appearing anywhere in this country any movement of national scope having for its purpose the preparation of the American Negro to live in what will probably be a very changed world?

MAR 28 1942

IF, as is so much desired, a regime of real democracy should ensue as a condition of post war peace, would the race be ready in sufficient talent to take advantage of the opportunities thus created? Would it be able to hold its own in the competition that must obtain as an essential part of any democracy?

This column contends that it is not too early to get our house in order to make opportunity welcome and content if it should knock at our doors.

RIGID ECONOMY AND MECHANICS

After this war, much more so than ever before, the world will necessarily be mechanical. Men will become more than ever both the masters and the slaves of machines. Only machinery of various types can produce the enormous quantities of almost everything that will be surely and sorely needed to supply a hungry world demand. Men, and maybe women also, who can both make and man the tools of production will be required in great numbers. Regardless of how fair may be the type of ideology that will ensue, those most skilled in the arts of production will inevitably become the preferred class. The Negro race should make preparation to have workers properly skilled for these fields.

MAR 28 1942

FOR a long time during the next period of peace, the world will have to be geared much more closely to an economy of stern necessities. The huge debts that will be pyramided to unimaginable heights will impose indefinite and well nigh intolerable tax burdens. The world wide waste and destruction will have to be repaired and paid for. The peoples of the 'have-not' nations who hitherto have been forced to live on painfully low incomes will have to be let in to share on an improved basis in any scheme of world economy that may be established, no matter whether they shall be identified with the triumphant or the defeated. This will be recognized as necessary to insure an enduring peace. All this means that there is not going to be much latitude for frills, foolishness and luxuries.

SOMETHING LEADERS CAN DO

It is in the situation created by the anticipation of such post war conditions that Negro leaders now have a chance to do something, if the daring and vigor which should be characteristic of leadership are to be found among their qualifications.

THE time seems to be ripe for the projection now of a more definite race economy. A movement to deter Negroes from straining up to maintain the high economical level set by white people could not prove otherwise than valuable. Is it not time for a vigorously prosecuted program to discourage colored people from so freely buying any and everything white people devise and manufacture to sell? Negro women annually spend millions of dollars for hats almost none of which were designed to match the definite type of beauty peculiar to racial charms. Actually the hats now being worn serve neither the purposes of beauty, comfort, nor protection. They could be left alone without any loss whatsoever.

AN OVERALL MOVEMENT

MAR 28 1942

If C. C. Spaulding, Dr. Patterson, Dr. Walker, ~~Walter White~~, Phillip ~~Randolph and other~~ leaders of ~~prominence~~ should show up at their offices some bright Monday morning, or at their churches some bright Sunday morning clad in clean overalls, it would cause amusement at first. But when it became generally known that it was symbolic of a determination to lead a rigid program of racial economy, not only in clothes, but in everything else that can be dispensed with, it would not be funny at all to white merchants in centers of large Negro populations. It was in a similar way that Ghandi emphasized his leadership. Such a movement would not be hampered by the many racial restrictions which leaders so often encounter. Is such a spirit of daring anywhere to be stirred up in the race?

NATIVE AMERICANS.

APR 10 1942

The Know-Nothing party of 1850 was bitterly anti-foreign at a time when but 10 per cent of the total population of 23 million were foreign born. The Know-Nothings were the spiritual ancestors of the Ku Klux Klan and the nativist organizations of our own day. The same bigoted feelings were common to them all, and each felt that it had a monopoly on patriotism and that the country was being ruined by foreigners.

It is a curious fact that the dreams of the nativists are being realized thru no agency of their own. The number of foreign born is rapidly declining. In the 10 years between 1930 and 1940, the census bureau reports, the foreign born white population of the United States declined by almost 2½ million, or 18.3 per cent. The total shown in the 1940 census was 11,419,138. There were decreases in the number of foreign born persons from all countries except Austria, Hungary, and Turkey. The largest foreign born group was the Italians, numbering 1,623,580. Germans were next, with 1,237,772; then Russians, 1,040,884, and Canadians, 1,044,119. It is noteworthy that the three largest groups were from countries which were driven to the desperate expedient of totalitarianism, a system for which most of these immigrants, representing an older generation, have little sympathy, while the fourth largest group was from our friendly neighbor.

56K

The depression and the quota laws restricted immigration during the decade and thereby prevented the replacement by new immigrants of the foreign born persons who died or emigrated. The high average age of the foreign born population resulted in proportionately greater losses thru death in this group than in the population as a whole. The census bureau seems justified in its statement that "if present conditions continue, the foreign born whites will cease to be a numerically important element of the population within two or three decades."

APR 10 1942

There are many other evidences that we are becoming a more completely integrated people. The number of potential voters 21 years of age or older in the nation is now near 80 million—a record—tho it is not clear that all of these meet the many other voting requirements in addition to age. The number of new Americans entering the world is also on the increase. Last year's 57,000 births in Chicago were almost 11,000 more than in 1933, and 10 per cent more infants were born in the city during the first three months this year than during the same period in 1941. The March crop of 5,582 was the greatest in the history of the city.

If anybody starts agitating for a Native American party, he can shortly include all of us.

Governor Feels Victorious On Race Issue Angle

SEP 1 5 1942

"I have decided not to file any contest of the election," Governor Eugene Talmadge announced Monday afternoon.

The Governor gave press representatives a written statement at 3:37 p. m., the statement revealing that the time for filing a contest expired at noon Monday.

It was hinted Monday morning that the Governor by his control of the party machine, had been advised by a small group about him to ignore the will of the people as expressed in the recent Democratic white primary election. It was thought that he would attempt to take the clearcut nomination away from Attorney General Ellis Arnall.

Most of the Governor's resposible supporters were reported against the suggested move.

ARNALL GOT MAJORITY VOTE

SEP 1 5 1942

In the election last week, Mr. Arnall received a majority of 112 unit votes, 261 to 149. The popular vote in the election was 174,198 for Arnall to 127,488 for Mr. Talmadge.

Governor Talmadge's statement Monday afternoon followed statements earlier in the day from some of his backers who said:

"Arnall was nominated in the Democratic primary. As Democrats we must support him as the party's nominee. Any attempt to steal the nomination would plunge Georgia into chaos, bitterness and hatreds such as led to the conditions in Louisiana, culminating in the killing of Huey Long.

"We are urging the Governor not to take this step and have hopes he will listen to us and not to the same group which advised him on the university affair."

The Governor's statement said in part:

SEP 1 5 1942

"I took a very definite stand in opposition to any policy that advocated the coeducation of the whites and blacks in our colleges.

CLAIMS RACE ISSUE VICTORY

"Although the result of the election was not favorable to me, I feel that on this issue we did win a victory.

"I am of the opinion that after it was called to the attention of the people, it will be a great many years before any of our college professors will attempt to carry our white girls around visiting Negro colleges."

SEP 1 5 1942

Governor Talmadge pointed out that he was surprised at the outcome of the election; that he had been able to raise teachers' salaries 25 per cent and place on the pension rolls many more thousands than were ever there before.

Unfavora Result 'Surprise,' Governor Admits in Statement

SEP 1 5 1942

SEP 1 5 1942

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Governor Talmadge announced yesterday that he would not contest the outcome of Wednesday's Democratic primary in which, on the basis of unofficial returns, he lost by a substantial margin in his effort to win a fourth term.

"The time is up today (Monday) at 12 o'clock for filing a contest," the red-suspendered chief executive said in a statement issued at 3:37 p. m. by his executive secretary. "I have decided not to file any contest of the election."

Widespread rumors had circulated that the Governor would contest the victory of his 35-year-old opponent, Attorney General Ellis Arnall. Throughout the day an air of excited expectancy hung over his capitol office, where a large crowd milled about.

No Mention of Arnall.

In his statement, Talmadge made no mention of Arnall. He asserted that he believed all the policies on which he had based his campaign "were for the best interests of the state."

SEP 1 5 1942

Of his stand against co-education of the races, the Governor said that "although the result of the election was not favorable to me, I feel that on this issue we did win a victory.

"I am of the opinion that after it was called to the attention of the people, it will be a great many years before any of our college professors will attempt to carry our white girls around visiting Negro colleges."

Advised of the Governor's statement, Arnall's only comment was: "I appreciate the congratulations extended to me by Governor Talmadge."

SEP 1 5 1942

Unofficial returns showed that Arnall carried 89 counties with 261 unit votes, while Talmadge carried 69 counties with 149 unit votes. Arnall won 174,198 popular votes to 127,488 for Talmadge.

Talmadge Statement.

The text of Governor Talmadge's statement:

"The election was held last Wednesday, September 9. Numerous complaints were filed with me by my friends with reference to irregularities and illegalities in holding the election.

"The time is up today at 12 o'clock for filing a contest. I have decided not to file any contest of the election.

SEP 1 5 1942

"I went into office on January 14, 1941. The state was over $29,000,000 in debt. The insistent issue all over the state was for debts to be paid and taxes not to be raised.

"I am of the opinion that we will be able to pay all of the major portion of this debt by the time I retire from office. This has been done without any increase in taxes.

SEP 1 5 1942

"We have also been able to raise the teachers' salaries 25 per cent and place on the pension rolls many more thousands than were ever there before.

Pension Justice.

"It is my desire that all eligibles receive the pension. It is an injustice when anyone who is eligible does not receive it while others are receiving it.

"I have also held the payments up to the counties when the revenue from the gasoline tax was falling off. I did this under authority of house bill number one and did so to protect the counties and the people from the necessity from higher county taxes.

"I took a very definite stand in opposition to any policy that advocated the co-education of the whites and blacks in our colleges.

"Although the result of the election was not favorable to me, I feel that on this issue we did win a victory.

"I am of the opinion that after it was called to the attention of the people, it will be a great many years before any of our college professors will attempt to carry our white girls around visiting Negro colleges.

"On the above policies I would not change any stand that I have taken. I feel that every one of them were for the best interests of the state.

"I was surprised at the outcome of the election. I think that my surprise was due to the fact that I forgot the first lecture I ever heard as a boy.

"The speaker was Tom Dixon. He spoke at Barnesville under the Alkahest Lyceum program. I will never forget the way he began that lecture.

"His first words were:

"'The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world.' He spoke of this for three or four paragraphs.

SEP 1 5 1942

"He then said that this was true up to 1800. This date was the beginning of the printing press in America.

"After this date, Dixon said 'the arm that controls the press rocks the world.' It is true.

"The press rocks the sentiment of the people from one extreme to another for this reason: The laws regulating any statements by newspapers should be strict, confining them to the truth.

Main Issues.

"I stated during my campaign that all state issues pale into insignificance compared with the national crisis and emergency of the war. I reiterate that statement now.

SEP 1 5 1942

"I may be able to serve my state and nation better in these perilous times as a private citizen.

"The people of the state of Georgia have been exceptionally good to me. They have honored me with three terms as commissioner and three times Governor.

"I have served as your Governor longer than any man since our present constitution.

"I want every person in Georgia, whether they supported me or not, to know that I appreciate this, and that I have nothing but love for every man, woman and child in the state.

"'Honor and shame alike from no condition rise:
"'Act well thy part! There all the honor lies.'"

Georgia Prepares For Civil War

AUG 15 1942

Governor Eugene Talmadge, Georgia's gift to race hatred and bigotry, has given the alert for a declaration of war against Negroes in the state of Georgia.

Through his head of Georgia's part-time state guard, Colonel Lindley W. Camp, the state militia has been warned to be prepared for racial disturbances, which the alert order said are being instigated by "white and colored Northern agents."

Camp referred in his order to "an unusual number of attempts to assault white ladies," and declared it his duty to inform the state guard of "impending danger."

This is a serious order that Talmadge, through his henchman, has issued. More serious, because he states that the U.S. Army, under which the Georgia state guard operates, "is fully aware."

AUG 15 1942

While the War Department may be aware of this order, it is hard for us to believe that it approved it. By placing the Georgia Guard on the alert, Talmadge, unwittingly, has placed Negroes within his state on the alert also. He has placed the Federal Government on the alert, and the Federal Government, if we are to believe that it is really fighting for democracy, must see that democracy is maintained in Georgia, if it means placing Talmadge in a concentration camp for the duration.

If there is any blood shed in Georgia, Talmadge must suffer the consequences, and the War Department, if it does its duty, will take steps to see that its hands are not stained with blood.

Georgia's cracker element must not be permitted to begin a civil war within America, when all hands are being drafted into a War which are told is for the purpose of wiping out just such men as Talmadge, for all time.

This tobacco-chewing, snuff-dipping, gutter-sniping bigot has got to be put in his place. He must be taught that this is America, and that his Htiler-like tactics, and utter disregard for his fellow Americans, is the type of activity that gives aid and comfort to the enemy. Anyone who aids or comforts the enemy is a traitor, and as such should be cast into oblivion.

If Georgia does not wish to be a part of America, and does not want to share in American democracy, let her secede. If she doesn't want to secede, then the people of Georgia should put Talmadge out of office and shut or put him up. For as long as Georgia remains a part of this democracy, she must conform to the democratic principles.

The War Department has been accused of having knowledge of the Talmadge order. If it remains silent, it must have likewise given assent. Let's hear from the War Department, and we'll come back to Talmadge later.

A BRIGHTER SIDE

We would congratulate the people of Georgia for the good judgment and common sense which they used at the polls to retire Eugene Talmadge as governor of that state. The passing of Talmadge from public office should be accepted by the public generally as an expression of the advancement of civilization in the southern states.

Mr. Talmadge, like many others of his ilk, including the governor of Alabama, is living in the past. He does not realize that we are living in a fast changing world and the fellow who is depending upon the customs of yesterday to carry him over will find himself unable to stem the changing tide of the new day in which we are living. Men like Talmadge never dreamed a few years ago that their conduct in public office might mean the discrediting of their highest institution of learning in their states. But it happened in Georgia. Men of Talmadge's ilk have been, and are, strong on their protests against what they call "outside interference." But public opinion from Maine to California helped to scourge Eugene Talmadge from office because he dared to try to run Georgia's educational institutions through political manipulations.

It is interesting to note that when Eugene Talmadge saw that public opinion was lashing him on every hand he played what he thought to be his trump card—"Negro baiting." He brought forth the race issue. He whipped up racial prejudice to a white heat. But the answer of the people of Georgia is found in the final quotation from one of Abraham Lincoln's speeches: "You can fool all of the people some of the time and you can fool some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time."

Thus with this, "finis" has been written for the political life of Eugene Talmadge of Georgia.

Pittsburgh Courier
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia campaigned on the issue of white supremacy, and lost. The old tried-and-true "issue" flopped as the state's "moral forces" snowed Gene under with votes for Arnall. Will wonders never cease? Old Tom Watson must have turned over on his griddle at the news.

BUT TALMADGE has "embarrassed" Arnall by dipping into his $12,000,000 reserve fund to raise all school teachers' pay 25 per cent to the total of $3,000,000 and adds 9,000 old age pensioners to the state's list at a cost of $464,000. Arnall will not dare rescind the order. Talamdge thus makes himself "solid" with the voters and aids his chances when he runs against Walter George for the latter's Senate seat.

So, the "white supremacy" election in which Negroes did not, of course, participate, ends with black folks gaining substantial increases in income. It's an ill wind that blows no good. When thieves fall out, wise men (or black men) get their due.

REGARDLESS of elections, the terror continues. A prominent Memphis Negro is beaten, slapped and kicked by police for refusing to take off his hat in a U.S. Employment office. He was fined $10. Meanwhile Rev. J. C. Jackson of Hartford, Conn., was being beaten by white passengers on a Memphis-bound train because he passed through the white coach en route to the diner; and Prof. Gloster of Morehouse was being pitched off a train, imprisoned and fined in Tupelo, Miss., for asking for seats for colored passengers.

In Georgia the state highway patrol has instructions to "stop and search every Negro on the highway after 9 o'clock at night, use your blackjacks on them. . . Run them off the highways." This is reminiscent of the "way of life" in South Africa. There are so many other reported cases of terror that it would be tiresome to mention them. We can only say that there is going to be widespread trouble down South unless Attorney-General Biddle acts with sternness and dispatch. A word from the President would help, too.

NEGRO TROOPS are now in the Middle East awaiting their chance to hit the Axis. They are in a dozen other places, too, risking their lives that this nation and what it stands for, shall live. In New Guinea the Japanese forces are only 40 miles away from Port Moresby where black youths man the air field. On the high seas black sailors in naval and transport service are aiding the struggle for victory. Is it too much to ask that the Government at home protect their families and friends?

Secretary of War Stimson says all college students face call to active duty at the age of 20, while President Roosevelt opines that 18- and 19-year-olds will be drafted before January 1. This will doubtless include more Negro youths than are already in the services. Before this time next year there will be a million or more Negroes under arms. Surely the Government which can and does control industry, prices, traffic, commerce, and so forth, should make sure that these black youngsters do not fight in vain for democracy.

HUNDREDS OF THOUSANDS of Negro women will be among the 4,400,000 female workers whom War Manpower Commissioner McNutt says will be in industry by Christmas. They and millions of black workmen will help produce the goods and pay the taxes without which the war cannot be won.

Talmadge Says Federal School Aid Would Lead Racial Co-Education

Atlanta, April 9.—(AP)—Governor Talmadge says he is opposed to federal aid to state schools on the grounds it would lead to efforts for racial co-education. A senate bill pending would provide for $300,000,000 for state systems, Georgia's share would be $15,000,000.

Racial Issue In Georgia Raised Again

Gov. Talmadge Fears Federal Aid Might Mix White, Negro Students

ATLANTA, April 9 (AP)—Raising the same racial issue that was injected into the university system row last year, Gov. Eugene Talmadge said today that Federal aid for schools would be a prelude to mixing white and Negro students, but he was quickly disputed by a Georgia Education Association official.

R. L. Ramsey, secretary of the association, said he could see "no danger" of racial co-education developing from enactment of a pending Senate bill that would appropriate $300,000,000 annually to the states for equalization of educational opportunities. Georgia's share of the fund would be about $15,000,000.

The governor was asked his opinion of the legislation in view of the action of the State Board of Education yesterday in refusing to grant the demands of Georgia school teachers for a 25 per cent increase in pay on the grounds that state finances would not justify the raise.

"An indirect appropriation is a dangerous thing," said Talmadge, "and I think they would make an effort for co-education of the races." He said members of the Georgia congressional delegation had told him they felt the same way, adding that white and Negroes in the same schools is "something Georgia don't stand for."

Ramsey said the first paragraph of the bill "absolutely prohibits any Federal control" over funds allotted to the states, although grants would be conditioned on Negro schools receiving funds in the same ratio that the Negro population bears to the state's total population.

Letters to the

TALMADGE

Negro in Politics

Editor, The Telegraph:

I notice with much regret an item on the front page of The Telegraph of June 7, under the caption: Talmadge Leaders Indicate Racial Question Is Likely To Be Chief Campaign Issue, which gives us much pain.

We sincerely hope that this will not be true.

The racial question cannot be an issue, because both sides will claim to be on the side of white supremacy, while charging the other side with advocating social quality. And neither side will gain anything, and will only add to the flames of enmity that already exist between the two races. Everybody knows that during any war we have enemy propaganda organizations who work among the Negro population for the purpose of stirring up trouble. And at a time like this, when we are engaged in war, our whole population should be united closer than ever. But history will show that we always have more trouble with the Negro during a war, and this is true now. We have had several incidents in Macon lately that could easily have ended in a race riot. And there have already been riots in some other places.

About 95 per cent of our Negro population are good citizens who never cause trouble. They are working to produce goods for our war effort both on the farms and in our factories. They don't want co-education, they want their own schools and churches. And it is grossly unfair to persecute them by making a political football out of them by injecting racial issues in the campaign for governor of Georgia. Dean Cocking was kicked out of the university system and that was probably the best thing that ever happened. His plans would have caused more trouble than it would have done good.

If I were running for governor, I had rather lose the race than to resort to such low-life tactics as the racial issue. I would not persecute an ignorant and downtrodden people who are helpless to defend themselves, and who had much rather be left alone and left out of politics. Mr. Talmadge can easily be elected without the racial issue being used. He has a good record and some real issues that can be used.

We are fighting a Jew-baiter in Germany and I don't see how we can be consistent if we support a Negro-baiter in Georgia. Personally, I would not vote for my own brother for any office if he had to use the race question as an issue. We are spending thousands of dollars to entertain soldiers who come from all parts of the country to our state. We are selling them on the South trying to break down the barriers of sectional feeling that has existed since the Civil war, and it would be a shame to nullify the good will that we are trying to build by harping on some crackpot mythical issue that does not exist.

We hope that our friend will announce in the papers that he is above resorting to such tactics.

JOHN H. ANDERSON.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This matter was discussed by Editor of Telegraph with Governor Talmadge several months ago. At that time he stated he had no antagonism in the world to the Negro: that same platform with Talmadge and everything appeared to be most congenial.

Talmadge states he still believes in the old Southern doctrine of aiding the Negro in every way and helping him advance in his own group, and not to have him mixed up with the white people.

There are a number of Northern states which have about 300,000 Negro voters each and the Republican and Democratic parties now contending for power are making a play against the South to capture these mass Negro votes in Northern states. They do this instead of looking after race riots in their own territory.

The chairmen of the Democratic campaign committee in Pennsylvania and Missouri have made speeches in which they stated that the Negro should hold public office without discrimination in accordance with his population ratio to that of the whites. The chairman of the Missouri Democratic committee said he believed the Negro should have equality from all standpoints, including social. So it may be seen where this agitation comes from.

He said that he wanted to do everything possible for the advancement of the Negro and that he counted among his friends a great many of the prominent Negroes who are leaders in this state. I have recently heard these leaders make speeches on the

GREGORY

Talmadge Is Charged With Aping Hitler in Stirring Race Issue

By C. E. GREGORY

THE UNITED PRESS, an international news gathering agency, sent out the following cablegram on August 20, 1936:

BERLIN, Aug. 20—(U.P.)—"Governor Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, obviously is a very intelligent man," Die Bejejung, Nazi student league publication, said today.

The student organ reprinted an interview with Governor Talmadge from a Los Angeles newspaper in which he was quoted as saying that he read few books, because he didn't have time, but he had read Adolf Hitler's "My Fight" seven times.

56k

This item was printed on the first page of the Atlanta Constitution August 21, 1936, under the heading "Gene Selects Hitler as Favorite Author." It was published in other newspaper all over the state and the nation that were subscribers to the United Press service.

Governor Talmadge made no comment on the dispatch at that time, but a few month ago, or six years later, he denied that he had said what he was quoted as saying, just as he denied referring to Civilian Conservation Corps boys as "bums and loafers" several years afterwards.

There have been charges that the Governor has followed the principles, or lack of principles, outlined in "Mein Kampf" in some respects, such as turning the State Highway Patrol into a sort of Gestapo, saturating the State Capitol with political spies and ruthlessly ousting college educators on trumped-up charges.

Now comes the new charge that the Governor is using the Negro race as a straw man to run through with his lance, as Hitler used the Jewish race to persecute and then claim credit for being the savior of his own people.

The Georgia Better Government League, whose sponsors are not known to the writer, ran a paid political advertisement in a number of south Georgia newspapers last week from which the following quotations are taken:

"Georgians who have been wondering what all this talk of racial equality in Georgia could mean, are now beginning to see the light of day and to understand that the Talmadge method of dictatorship and control is patterned closely along the lines of the Hitlerian dictatorship in Germany and much as was outlined in Hitler's book, 'Mein Kampf,' or 'My Battle.'

"To gain adherents for his cause and to establish himself as their leader, Hitler began persecution of the Jews in Germany, painting them as the arch conspirators, the ones who sought to destroy Germany and to gain control of the nation. He pictured the Jews as the ones who sought despotic power, and himself as the patriot who would save Germany from being despoiled by the sons of Abraham.

"The tricks that were employed by Hitler and his gang have now been revealed for what they were —false bogeys, treachery and the rankest kind of criminal activity, all for the purpose of achieving their own selfish ends.

"Similar methods are now being employed in Georgia, deep in the heart of Dixie, one of the original thirteen colonies, where patriots of the Revolution and signers of the Declaration of Independence once lived.

"Realizing that the seeds of racial prejudice will always find fertile soil in the minds of certain elements, particularly among those who wish to use them to further their own selfish ends, the cry of 'Racial Equality' has been raised loud and often by Governor Talmadge.

"It was the banner of racial equality he waved over the heads of several leading Georgia educators who were to be crucified on the altar of racial prejudices at the behest of the Governor.

"To achieve his own ends Hitler has ever been willing to slaughter and sacrifice the innocent. Governor Talmadge, in his quest for power, following the pattern of Hitlerism, has shown an aptitude for sacrificing the innocent and the unsuspecting on the altar of questionable charges and racial prejudices.

"Power mad, he marches on. He has the perfect pattern of Adolf Hitler as a guide for his own actions, and, proclaiming himself the savior of his people, he hopes to drive onward, riding on a highway paved with racial prejudice, to the goal of selfish ambition."

Georgia Editors Denounce Fake Race Issue

THE TIME SEEMS to be approaching when Eugene Talmadge will begin his crusade to save the state from social equality. It will be the most colossal hunk of salvation since the days when another political opportunist rescued us from the menace of Catholic domination.—Monroe Advertiser (Forsyth).

Resolutions adopted by the executive committee which was controlled, of course by Talmadge, indicate that racial equality will be the chief plank on which Talmadge will seek renomination. This at a time when all Americans, regardless of race or creed, should be united in an effort to win this war, instead of being torn apart by the bugaboo which Talmadge has resurrected from its grave, purely as a matter of political expediency to cover up one of the greatest mistakes Talmadge has made in his political career. There is no issue of racial equality in Georgia. Racial coeducation is prohibited under the constitution of Georgia, and there has been no movement to change that constitutional provision, not even among the negroes themselves. It is a matter of genuine regret that the Governor seems disposed to build his coming campaign on such a flimsy, boggy foundation.—Tifton Gazette.

5-G-T

It was left for a middle Georgia statesman to shout the battle cry at the meeting of the state executive commitee. "Down with the Negro. Down with the Yankees. Down with the furriners." This and other like speeches on the floor of the committee was no doubt embarrassing to the Governor. We don't believe he's going to emphasize the race issue in his campaign. Many loyal and fair-minded Georgians see no need for any such campaign. There was no truth or sense in the educators' purge last summer because of coracial education. We need better politics in Georgia.—The Madisonian.

There is no such issue as that of racial equality in Georgia. The constitution prohibits racial coeducation in the schools and there has been no effort to bring about a change in this provision. Governor Talmadge and some of his more radical supporters are apparently raising this issue as a smoke screen to hide the grievous wrong that was done to the University System a few months ago. It would be far better if the Governor would admit that a mistake was made and set about correcting it than to attempt to cover up with this issue of racial equality.—Valdosta Times.

Wonder if those unthinking persons who are about to loose the ugly red snake of race prejudice on the people of Georgia this summer realize what a terrible thing they are about to do. Digging among the dead bones in the War Between the States graves to resurrect the red, bloody shirt of race hatred at a time when unity and an era of good feeling are our greatest need. A terrible consequence of this policy of evil minds may be an outbreak of race riots in Georgia. Human beings may be beaten and murdered as a result of this selfish project of shortsighted politicians. Such incidents may be instigated by henchmen of office seekers in order to aid their selfish cause. This hellish idea that anything is fair in politics may destroy this America. One can only say, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do."—J. P. Mahaffey in Hoschton News.

We have a notion that Georgia citizens—farmers, industrial workers, business and professional men—are not going to welcome the stirring of the racial issue this summer. The whole thing seems so demagogic, so untimely, so unnecessary, so unwarranted, as to constitute an act little short of criminality.

No one seems to know anything about it except Governor Talmadge, who used it as an excuse to rid the University System of teachers politically objectionable to him. He would not have used it then except that his Board of Regents rebelled against him and he had to pick a new board and find an excuse for his unwarranted acts. Had not his whole political scheme backfired the race issue would not have been dug up. Georgia will make a sorry spectacle of herself before the rest of the nation if she allows Talmadge demagogery to sway our state from its true mission of the hour—defending the free peoples of the world from dictatorship and slavery.—Augusta Herald.

The state will be submerged in all the venom of race prejudice in the campaign for Governor. This will be done to becloud and obscure the real issues involved. Passion will be appealed to instead of reason and voters urged and influenced to cast the ballot by prejudice. We view with alarm the result of such a campaign when war is bearing so heavily upon us. This is the time above all others when we should be guided by what is best for Georgia, and that man voted for who will best serve and conserve the interests of the state. The reign of the demagogue is always attended by ruin and destruction. This is the time for sober judgment and real patriotism to prevail. The time for sober thought and action.—Meriwether Vindicator (Greenville).

Gene Talmadge's committee has followed his lead in an effort to confuse the issue on which Georgians must elect a Governor. That false lead is manifest in their attempt to hoist the racial question as an issue among white Georgia voters, when there is no such issue.

One of Talmadge's newspaper spokesmen, himself submitting as a tool far beyond the conception of his friends who have walked with him in former days, utters these forceful words:

"His (Talmadge's) friends would be pleased to see him 'carry the war to Africa' in a very real sense."

It was not "Africa" upon which Talmadge made his false accusations against the head of Georgia Teachers College. Talmadge charged 'undue activities in politics" against Dr. Pittman; he was shown it was a false accusation and he dropped it; he picked up another false issue, alleging irregularities in the management of the farming interests of the college, and that fell down; then Talmadge picked up the African banner, and fell down on that—but he couldn't drop it, even though it is burning his hands. It's going to get hotter every day from now on till election day.—Bulloch Herald (Statesboro).

Talmadge Gets Harlem 'Burial'

Rejoicing over primary election results which snowed under anti-Negro Gov. Eugene Talmadge of Georgia, 3,500 in Harlem yesterday conducted a mock funeral marking his political burial.

SEP 21 1942

Prominent Negro clergymen served as honorary pall bearers in a march which carried a large coffin through a jubilant Harlem before it came to Golden Gate Ballroom, 142nd St., and Lenox Ave. where a capacity audience waited for speakers to draw the solemn lesson of political death for all advocates of racial inequality.

Clergymen pall bearers included Councilman Adam C. Powell, pastor of Abyssinian Baptist Church, the Rev. Lloyd Imes, the Rev. George H. Sims and the Rev. William S Harten. The ceremonies were arranged under the sponsorship of the Peoples Committee of the Abyssinian Church.

SEP 21 1942

Marchers in the funeral procession bore anti - fascist placards which attacked Hitler Hirohito and Mussolini as well as fascist-minded advocates of "white supremacy" whose unity-disrupting propaganda aids only the Axis.

A bouquet of flowers attached to the Talmadge "casket" bore a card with greetings of from "Count and Countess Reltih Skunk." The queer first name is Hitler spelled in reverse.

SEP 21 1942

A Communist Party car in the procession bore a great banner which read: "Let's bury Hitler and Jim Crow with a second front now."

In the car rode Benjamin Davis, Jr., Communist candidate for Congressman-at-large; Howard Johnson, president of the Harlem Young Communist League; Helen Samuels and Mamie Battice, Harlem women Communist leaders, and Lloyd Wright, one of the Scottsboro boys.

Speakers at the funeral rites included Congressman Vito Marcantonio, Saul Mills, secretary-treasurer of the Greater New York Industrial Council, CIO, and other prominent labor and political figures.

Many native sons of Georgia and others from the South who had lived under regimes comparable to Talmadge's came to the ceremonies dressed in black and occupied front rows as jovial mourners.

Talmadge Licked in Georgia; Administration Is Delighted

P.M. — N.Y. N.Y.

By KENNETH G. CRAWFORD
PM's Bureau

SEP 1 1 1942

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11.—Administration leaders no longer regard the primary elections as a complete bust—Eugene Talmadge has been rolled up in his own red suspenders and tossed out of the Georgia Governorship after serving three terms.

The outcome was all the more gratifying because Talmadge appealed directly to race prejudice and know-nothingness in his bid for another term. His own outrages against public decency, more than anything the opposition did, were what licked him.

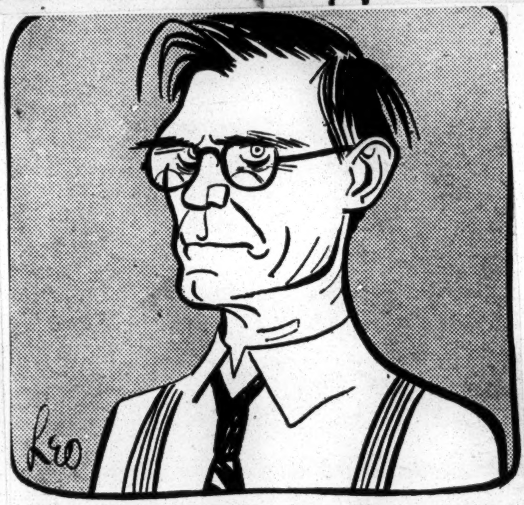
Ellis Arnall, Talmadge's victorious opponent, is a 35-year old small town lawyer who got his start in politics as an assistant attorney general and later became attorney general of Georgia. He is a political ally of the New Deal, a liberal as liberals go in the deep South, and the personal choice of President Roosevelt to eliminate Talmadge.



Gene Talmadge, bigot, couldn't win a fourth term as Georgia Governor despite the "racial supremacy" issue.

FDR Wanted Arnall

SEP 1 1 1942

Arnall's candidacy was agreed upon at a White House meeting between the President and several prominent Georgians, including Sen. Walter George. Clark Howell, publisher of the Atlanta Constitution, managed the Arnall campaign at the request of the White House. He was instrumental in persuading about 80 per cent of the Georgia press to oppose Talmadge's re-election.

Incomplete returns indicate that Arnall would receive a plurality of more than 50,000 votes, and 100 county unit votes out of the 410 cast. It is the county unit vote that counts in Georgia. Each of the 159 counties in the state has from two to six unit votes, depending upon population. The entire county vote is cast for the candidate polling a majority of the popular vote within the county.

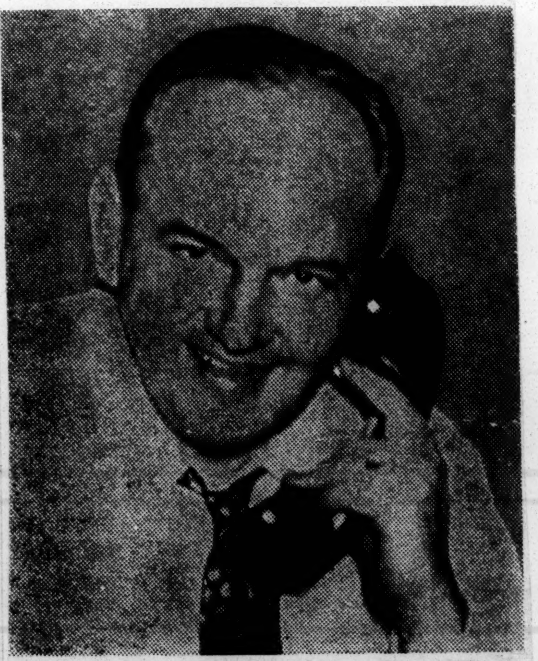
Always before, this system has played into Talmadge's hands. He was elected originally in a three-cornered race by carrying a majority of the counties. His popular vote, however, was less than a majority. This time Arnall's victory will be more impressive when reckoned in county unit votes than in popular vote.



Ellis Arnall, who licked Gene Talmadge for Governor of Georgia, hears the returns come in.

'White Supremacy' Issue

In his campaign speeches, Arnall defended New Deal policies, both foreign and domestic. Talmadge stuck to local issues for the most part and stressed "white supremacy." He professed to believe that carpet baggers and intellectuals, led by members of the University of Georgia faculty, were trying to introduce "inter-racial co-education" in the state. Only in his last speech did he mention Roosevelt by name. Then he attacked him.

Talmadge dismissed several members from the University faculty during his last term in office o nthe ground that they were too liberal on racial questions. The Southern Educational Association then refused to credit the University of Georgia, and remaining members of the faculty led in the anti-Talmadge fight.

This is expected to be the end of Talmadge politically. Had he won this time, he almost certainly would have tried to unseat Sen. George two years hence. He may try, anyway, but he probably has slight chance without the support of the State House machine.

Democracy Speaks At Georgia's Polls

What beat GENE TALMADGE in Georgia?

It wasn't young ELLIS ARNALL. The victorious candidate for Governor is a respectable figure; he served his State well as legislator and attorney general. But Georgia looks on him with hope rather than devotion. He is a beginner. He did not rid the South of Public Pest No. 1.

Courier Journal

It wasn't GENE's sabotage of Georgia's higher education. He played Mr. Big with the University System and lost the accredited rating of ten schools. And even simple citizens who had grinned at TALMADGE antics shook their heads and said, "It ain't right to interfere with the public schools." But if the school issue had been the only one, GENE probably would have skinned out of the hole.

It wasn't his cynical and inhuman persecution of the helpless Negro population of Georgia. He used photos (branded as fakes) of educators sitting at table with Negroes in an appeal to the lowest of all prejudices, and he seemed to be striving very hard for the brutality of a race riot so he could be the savior of the white race. This sure-fire Georgia political lure didn't work for him on Wednesday; but neither did it beat him.

What did beat GENE TALMADGE?

It wasn't his reading Mein Kampf seven times, if he did read it seven times. ARNALL accused him of it, and said TALMADGE admitted it; but there are those who think Ole GENE would be bragging if he claimed to have read all the way through a Mother Goose rhyme.

It wasn't TALMADGE's adding of 741 men and women to the State payroll in a brisk economy drive. Georgians are accustomed to supporting the poor political relations of their governors.

It wasn't his pardoning or paroling of 4,500 felons, many of whom went forth and killed and pillaged anew. It wasn't the conversion of the State Highway Patrol under TALMADGE into a stupid gestapo. It wasn't the tear gas attack on university boys who heckled him at a rally.

No one of these things beat GENE TALMADGE, and even the sum of them is not a final answer. He has browbeat the Board of Regents throughout his terms of office. He has kicked the Negroes and pandered to prejudice. He has been elected to office after committing each and every one of the crimes ELLIS ARNALL charged this time.

What beat GENE TALMADGE was the awakening of the decent instincts of a people. The voter in Georgia is no longer amused by a travesty of democracy. The common man has begun to realize that his son is doing a foolish and futile thing to die in battle if democracy is to be treated as a bad vaudeville joke at home.

What beat TALMADGE was the long-delayed impact of a world revolution on the minds and hearts of simple folk. The people of Georgia have at last found their own battleground, which is the ballot box, and they have begun to recognize their worst enemy, which is the cheap, selfish, loud-mouthed political demagogue.

If people throughout the democracies will acknowledge the significance of Georgia's lesson, this war is won. We can survive a hundred military defeats but we cannot survive the GENE TALMADGES of America.

Talmadge Is Right

There is no use denying Governor Talmadge's charge that Negroes will rejoice at the news of his defeat for reelection in the September 9 Primary. That is a fact which stands out, not alone over Georgia, but throughout the length and breadth of this nation. For Talmadge is looked upon as an irresponsible leader and a dangerous man. Negroes distrust him, therefore, not only for his racial antipathies, but also because he has never been the true representative of the forces of decency and fair play for all peoples of this state.

In his attack upon the Negro people here Friday night, the Governor charged that 4,000 Atlanta Negroes had been reported registered and prepared to force a vote in the September 9 Primary for Ellis Arnall. We deny that there is any such movement in progress. We will grant, however, that this is precisely the opportunity Mr. Talmadge and his forces are hoping to seize upon to advance their causes. But we are determined that he shall not profit one inch from anything which Negroes might say or do.

Further, we deny the organization and existence of "an Eleanor" club, whose purpose is "a wholesale evacuation of Atlanta's kitchens of Negro maids and cooks", as charged by the Governor.

The Governor's assertion that "the Negro's place is at the back door," could prove a source of much embarrassment to our war effort if we were silly enough to insist upon taking "the back door" attitude in facing and fighting the enemy on the various war fronts of the world. But fortunately for the nation and for the great mass of white citizens of Georgia, Talmadge simply does not represent the best elements of thought and decency among them. His private acts and public utterances brand him not only unfriendly to our advancement and progress but to our safety and security.

It is of paramount importance to Negroes, therefore, that Talmadge be defeated in this campaign for relection. And in this stand we have no misgivings concerning Ellis Arnall. We are not simple or silly enough to anticipate any radical departure from the present racial pattern for us. Nor do we envisage equality of economic opportunity in sudden and revolutionary forms. But, fundamentally, we oppose Mr. Talmadge because we fear him. He has built his campaign upon the bent heads and bowed backs of a helpless and hapless minority who has no voice in nor determination of state and local elections. He has deliberately and cruelly bulldozed and plagued Negroes for no reason other than it was his surest escape from reality.

It was his followers who sent out alarming warnings to units of the State Guards to be prepared to resist "race riots with force," when in fact, the great mass of white peace officers of the state knew nothing of racial troubles or disturbances. Such a man we must oppose!

Therefore while we shall never relinquish our sacred privilege to participate in the election of officials who shall govern us if our failure to participate in this approaching election may be of any benefit to Ellis Arnall we shall be content to help him in this manner.

Arnall Hears Northwest Georgia 'Sick of Talmadge'

AUG 25 1942

By LAMAR Q. BALL.
Constitution Staff Writer.

RINGGOLD, Ga., Aug. 24.—High in the mountains of northwest Georgia today Ellis Arnall found a calm, level-minded populace with their minds fixed determinedly on a swing back to the old-time religion and an honest Democratic Governor. The men and women descendants of families who have toiled in the soils on these mountain slopes and who labor in mills working 24 hours a day on the war effort, openly voiced their disgust with the shams of selfish politicians who, as it was voiced today, are ready to sell out their state and their nation to satisfy their lust for power.

In the crowded Walker county courthouse at LaFayette today, Ellis Arnall was told he has the support of these people who expect only two things from him.

Loyalty to Trust.

1. Loyalty to the trust the people will impose on him as their Governor.

2. Loyalty to their commander and chief; the head of the armed forces of the armed forces of a nation at war.

"The Lindberghs, the Wheelers, the Nyes, and all other isolationists," said E. P. Hall, editor and publisher of the Walker County Messenger, "sought to tie the hands of our commander and chief. Without these men and without the Talmadges who gave them a comfort in their attacks on our commander and chief millions of lives would have been saved in this world. There might not have been a war.

"Sick of Race Issue."

"But Talmadge was right in there with them and we have the holocaust. We see hundreds upon hundreds of our sons leaving this area every week and every month to fight in a war that the Wheelers and the Nyes and the Lindberghs and the Talmadges might have helped to avert. We are sick of this man going up and down the state today trying to create a race issue within our own ranks while we are at war.

"That man, Talmadge, would sell out his state and nation in his selfish ambition to be elected to an office in which the people don't want him."

Grey-haired Editor Hall, with a son in the armed forces, was introducing Ellis Arnall to the men and women who live up toward the corner of the state where Alabama, Tennessee and Georgia are neighbors.

"New Champion Today."

In presenting Arnall, Editor Hall said, "We have a new champion today. We have a man with a background developed in a Christian home. We have a man with a clean record in public office. We have a man whose ability has been proved in public office.

"We have a man who has the courage to look an ambitious little dictator in the face and fight him to get democracy restored. We have a man who is 100 per cent behind our commander and chief."

Editor Hall paused for a moment while the crowd packed into the courthouse applauded for several moments.

Hall then looked quietly at his audience and said grimly, "My God, if there was ever a time we needed a man, a strong man whom the lust of power has not tainted it is today."

Pledge Arnall Trust.

He turned to Arnall and said solemnly, "Sir, we pledge our trust in you. We're going to send you into office and don't you destroy our faith in you, we believe in you."

Arnall stepping up the rostrum, pledged to the applauding citizens: "I'll stand fair by my native state. I shall not break faith with you." Arnall, in starting his address said: "We are not going to let our opponents buy this election with these jobs they are offering to everyone in the state. We are not going to let them buy this election with the money that they are collecting from a liquor trust, and the crooks and racketeers who are interested in seeing that old crowd return to office.

'Talmadge Kept His Promises' Is Shortened

AUG 25 1942

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

RINGGOLD, Ga., Aug. 24.—The Talmadge regard for a promise meets with little regard in northwest Georgia.

In introducing Ellis Arnall today, E. P. Hall, editor of the Walker County Messenger, said:

"Do you remember that Talmadge slogan in a former campaign? It went something like this, didn't it: Talmadge kept his promises. It has been shortened a little in this campaign to read: Let's keep Talmadge. A great many people in the state know what has happened to his promises."

We are not going to let our opponents sneak their way into office with all this talk with a fake race issue."

"Race Issues Fake."

"I'll pledge you my word, as a white man a Negro never will be a white man's boss in a cotton mill. They are trying to threaten you with that. I am a white man and I am ready to defend with my blood the Constitution of Georgia which provides for a separation of races. We don't need a governor to protect us from those fake issues. They really don't exist. Today," said Arnall, "the state capitol is almost deserted. Most of the employees have been sent out to work for the election, of the man who cried nothing but race issues and fails to mention a real constructive plank in the platform.

"You can get a job by promising that crowd to vote but the job won't last after the election is over.

"The boys in my opponent's headquarters are spending their nights calling up all the members of the present Governor's staff, begging them not to leave him. But they're leaving him in droves."

Whitley Accusation.

Thin Concrete John Whitley, financial supporter of Talmadge, the LaGrange contractor who gets the road building jobs out of Talmadge's Highway Department, came in for his share of accusation.

When the previous administration (Ed Rivers) left office, said Arnall, "the roads were lined with highway machinery, which Talmadge declared he would give to the counties to do their road work. Thin Concrete John," said Arnall, "rushed to Talmadge and said, 'Don't give away that machinery. We can have an auction and I can make some money out of it. We'll take out a nut here and a bolt here and we'll lower the engines to the ground and we'll make them all look as though they are worthless. Then we'll have that auction and I'll buy all those machines. I'll know how to fix them and we can sell them for a profit.'

Platform Cheered.

"The counties," said Arnall, "didn't get a single road repairing machine." The crowd in the Walker courthouse cheered the planks in the Arnall platform and cheered him heaviest when he promised that as Governor he would continue to live an honest, Godfearing life, doing his work at the state capitol during the daylight and living at home with his family at night.

They cheered loudest when he promised: "I'll not be sitting up at night at hotel roms, trading away the rights of the people."

The Arnall pledge to restore the schools and colleges of Georgia to their proper rating won him a determined roar of applause.

Bernard Sheehan and Eugene Jordan, two students from the University of Georgia, home in Walker for a brief vacation, begged their neighbors to help them and the University System by electing Arnall.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL. AUG 21 1942

"NOT A DRUM WAS HEARD—" I read the story about the funeral of a little girl.

It was held in Bath, England. The Romans had a town there centuries ago. It is old and crowded.

The Germans bombed it.

The little child was wounded. It was not possible to identify her parents among the many mutilated bodies.

A few days later the small girl died.

No one attended her funeral. No one knew who she was.

There were many to be buried. She was just one of the casualties.

A minister found time to suggest, after his prayer, that the statues honoring the dead of this war should be placed above the graves of unknown children, or in their memory.

The Unknown Child . . .

You read of children starving in Greece and Poland. You see pictures of them arriving on refugee ships. You read of the children of Spain, starved and living like animals as they did in Russia in the first year or so after the revolution. You read of them playing between bombings.

AUG 21 1942

You are beginning to see pictures of nursery schools for children whose mothers work in defense plants.

If you have thought about it at all you must know that, as the war goes on, there will be less and less opportunity for home direction for many, many children. Nurseries, nurses, relatives, industrial plant day nurseries—all these will have to do the job for thousands of children.

56K

THE SCHOOLS Perhaps the biggest job will have to be done by the schools.

They will have, for a full day, the children who are beginning to think and learn, whose minds are beginning to develop.

That brings me to another point.

Hundreds of teachers are leaving their profession and going into other jobs.

They go, in most cases, with regret.

They go, not merely because they get more money, but because they are weary, especially in most southern states, of their profession being underpaid and made a political football.

Very few teachers make, in Georgia, as much as $100 per month. That is $900 per year for teachers. Many make less.

We are going to have left some good teachers and a great many who can't get any other job.

AUG 21 1942

It is tragic that in time of war, when thousands of our children must depend more than ever on schools, that in Georgia the school system should be victimized and wrecked for political advancement.

There is no need to deceive ourselves or heed the pleasant fiction that everything is going to be all right. It isn't.

There is no need to listen to the soothing promises that accrediting agencies do not mean anything and that Georgia will do her own accrediting.

It is something to think about.

It is serious business at any time. , Now, at least, we ought to see that we cannot ignore what we know to be right. Let's not deceive ourselves.

AND ANOTHER THING I read a poem a night ago. It was written during the first World War by a poet named Y. B. Yeats. He wrote about the Kaiser, and his philosophy of brute force.

Yeats thought of that sort of thinking as representing a beast, the anti-Christ, seeking to usurp the teachings and the place of the Master. He wrote:

AUG 21 1942

> "And what rough beast, its hour come round at last,
> Slouches toward Bethlehem to be born?"

AUG 21 1942

There is an effort going on now to make beasts of us; to make us hate and fear another people in our midst. It is cowardly, shameful and false. Don't let them do it to you.

The Governor said, a few weeks ago, that any man who stirred up racial passions in the state was a hypocrite hiding under a shadow for the purpose of stealing.

In the silent reaches of the night those words must plague him now that he is preaching it.

The persons about him, at least four with unsavory records, are saying they will create some "nigger" trouble if they have to frame it or buy it.

Don't let them make a beast out of your mind.

This is 1942. We can sove any problem we have with common sense and work.

AUG 21 1942

Don't let them fool you with their tricks.

This is a time when you've got to decide about your state's future, about its schools, about decency and dignity in government.

Hold fast to that idea.

They are tired. Their traveling applause is tired. Their speaker is tired. They are tired horses pulling a load of falsehood and that always is heavy.

Carmichael Pledges

James V. Carmichael, Cobb county attorney, yesterday introduced Ellis Arnall to a crowded courtroom at Marietta, Ga.

Mr. Carmichael spoke, not as an unsuccessful candidate for office bearing a grudge.

He spoke as a private citizen and a patriotic citizen interested in the University and in the future of the state.

He spoke as a man well-known to the politics of the state. It was he who headed the economy committee of the house which investigated state expenditures during the Rivers administration. No young man has a finer reputation than James Carmichael.

Jul 28

He said, of that investigation, that Ellis Arnall, as attorney general, gave this investigating committee his whole-hearted co-operation.

56K

"Anyone who says Ellis Arnall is a puppet of anyone doesn't know whereof he speaks," said Carmichael. "And about this nigger-nigger talk that Gene Talmadge is putting out, there is no racial trouble in Georgia now—but there will be if Talmadge keeps talking about it.

"I thought the Ed Rivers administration was extravagant," said Carmichael, "but now it is revealed that Eugene Talmadge last year spent $7,000,000 more than Rivers or any other Governor ever had."

Ellis Arnall, in the beginning of a week's campaign, said that if it was necessary for him to be a demagogue and clown to be Governor; if it was necessary to consort with the petty crooks and racketeers in Atlanta to be Governor, he did not want the job.

He repeated his promise that the constitution of the state prevents racial co-education and that no Negro will attend a white school in the state.

He repeated his promise to appoint to office, not former politicians, but men of business ability in whom the state has confidence.

He promised a decent, clean government, with clean, decent men at the head of the state departments.

Ellis Arnall's campaign, free from any alliance with any of the influences of the past, is at once an inspiration and a challenge to Georgia.

Shall Georgia retain the same old system which has brought Georgia into disrepute with her university discredited and removed from the accredited list of American universities?

Or shall we take a clean, able young man, whose people have served Georgia honorably and well; who is not a part of the old system, and who is pledged to stand on his own feet, motivated by a sincere and honest desire to do something for Georgia and its people?

It is a challenge.

All the mud, all the fake issues, all the smoke screens thrown up by the same old Talmadge forces, will not obscure the fact there are issues.

Talmadge will not discuss them.

Arnall is taking them to the people.

—BE PATIENT—VICTORY IS COMING—

At the behest of the White House, the hunt continues for a short, snappy name for the war that is fit to print.

Atlanta, Ga. Journal

How the Press Stands

IN THE EFFORT to divert attention from the real issues of this campaign—which are decency in government and the restoration of constitutional democracy — ~~Governor Talmadge~~ is attacking violently and with little regard for the truth the two daily newspapers of Atlanta.

56K

It is rather interesting that the worst the Governor can find to say about The Journal happens to be just what his predecessor in office called us. The harangues are identical, not only the words but also the music. And it isn't likely that the Talmadge rendition of the Hymn of Hate will have any more effect on the very sensible Georgia public than did Governor Rivers'. Abuse and name-calling are not competent answer to fact and truth.

But, in attributing his now desperately waning fortunes to the two Atlanta newspapers, Governor Talmadge is paying poor tribute to the free and uncontrollable press of Georgia in other cities, towns and hamlets. Atlanta is not a tail which wags Georgia; the Atlanta newspapers have no more influence over the Georgia press than can arise from the honesty and the force of their editorial opinions.

And how do we find the press of Georgia aligning itself in this campaign? The facts are amazing. Not in 40 years has there been such a predominant union of newspapers from the Free State of Dade to the St. Marys River in behalf of one candidate and against another.

We have made a cursory examination of the exchanges reaching The Journal office last week-end and here is a tabulation of those which have expressed themselves editorially on the Governorship:

Daily Newspapers for Arnall

Athens Banner-Herald, Augusta Herald, Brunswick News, Columbus Enquirer, Columbus Ledger, Griffin News and Sun, Macon News, Moultrie Observer, Thomasville Times-Enterprise, Tifton Gazette, Valdosta Times.

Daily Newspapers for Talmadge

Macon Telegraph, Rome News-Tribune, Savannah Morning News, Savannah Evening Press, Waycross Journal-Herald.

Noncommittal Thus Far

Albany Herald, Augusta Chronicle.

(The latter vehemently denounced Talmadge's University lynching.)

Weeklies for Arnall

Alma Times, Bainbridge Post-Searchlight, Bartow Herald (Cartersville), Brantley Enterprise, Bulloch Times, Cairo Messenger, Calhoun County News, Calhoun Times, Cedartown Standard, Claxton Enterprise, Cobb County Times, Coffee County Progress, Cuthbert Leader, Dade County Times, Dallas New Era, Dooly County Citizen, Early County News, Eastman Times-Journal, Eatonton Messenger, Elberton Star, Franklin News and Banner, Gainesville Eagle, Gainesville News, Hawkinsville Dispatch and News, Jackson Progress-Argus, Lanier County News, Lowndes County News, Lyons Progress, McDonough Advertiser, Meriwether Vindicator, Milledgeville Union-Recorder, Monroe Advertiser (Forsyth), Newnan Herald, Newnan Times, Ocilla Star, Pearson Tribune, Quitman Free Press, Soperton News, Sylvester Local, Thomaston Times, Thomasville Press, Tri-County News (Americus), Vienna News, Walker County Messenger, Walton News (Monroe), Walton Tribune (Monroe), Waynesboro True Citizen.

Weeklies for Talmadge

Abbeville Chronicle, Banks County Journal, Calhoun County Courier, Dodge County Advertiser, Gordon County News, Greensboro Herald-Journal.

The list is not complete. Not all of the weeklies come to this office. A goodly many of those which we receive have not as yet declared their position. But on the basis of the unequivocal editorial declarations and granting that all the others will sooner or later declare for the Talmadge candidacy—which, of course, will not happen—it may be stated as a fact that never before in a Georgia campaign has a candidate for Governor received such powerful support from the weekly press as Ellis Arnall is receiving.

What has the Governor to say about that? Will he call them "furriners" too?

Talmadge 'Funeral' Very 'Sad' Occasion

SEP 26 1942

By LLEWELLYN RANSOM

Special

A grey, somber sky overhung Harlem and a chilly, autumn wind blew thru its streets Sunday afternoon, September 20. A quiet pervaded the community, befitting the day as the people worshipped in thanksgiving for a new deliverance and new signs of democracy on the horizon. They came, solemnly, seven to eight thousand strong, from churches, homes, movies, jobs and even bars and grills to witness an unusual funeral at the Golden Gate—a public endorsement of the political demise of America's most rabid fascist, Gene Talmadge of Georgia.

SEP 26 1942

As they came, young and old with the enthusiasm of a Negro reborn and eager to prove his growing political maturity thru the streets, led by high-stepping drum majorettes, blaring trumpets and unmuffled drums, there passed an odd cortege. It really wasn't much to see. The anticipated ten hearses were not in line because of a police ruling involving the burlesquing of funerals.

The people paid little attention to it—as was befitting a Talmadge burial.

SEP 26 1942

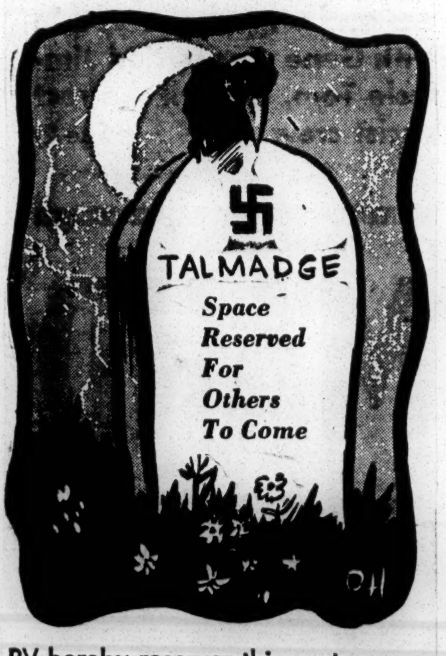
But returning to the Golden Gate auditorium, the procession marching down the aisle, with the drum and bugle corps of the Col. Charles Young American Legion Post mounting the rostrum to sound robust, martial music. There were the people, thousands of them.

There too, was the platform crowded with outstanding figures of the religious, political and civic world, gathered in celebration of the occasion.

The throng rose enthusiastically as a bugler blew "taps." They rumbled with amusement as Rev. A. Clayton Powell jr intoned over the mahogany coffin adorned with a wreath of thistles from "Count and Countess Reltih (hitler, backwards) the words: "I consign the political remains of Gene Talmadge to the bottomless pits of hell from whence they came."

They roared unanimous approval of the five resolutions proposed before the meeting ended. They were:

- to send a telegram to President Roosevelt, urging him to order the Secretary of War to see that all members of the armed forces received ballots for the coming elections, as provided for in the recent congressional measure,
- to provide by law for arrest and immediate trial of all civilians who beat or kill soldiers,
- to request investigation by the FBI of Congressmen Dies and Rankin of Texas and Mississippi respectively, and of Governor Dixon of Alabama.
- to request setting up of a volunteer mixed brigade in the USArmy.



PV hereby reserves this spot permanently, anticipates filling it in soon.

SEP 26 1942

On the platform were Revs. Thomas S. Harten, Holy Trinity Baptist, Brooklyn; B. C. Robeson, Mother AMEZion; Fairfax, Swedenborgian Church; William Lloyd Imes, St. James Presbyterian; A. C. Powell jr, Abyssinian Baptist; George H. Simms, Union Baptist and Bishop R. C. Lawson, Refuge Church of Christ.

With them were Elks' Grand Exalted Ruler J. Finley Wilson, Judge William Hueston, Roy Wright, one of the original Scottsboro boys; Benjamin Davis jr, Daily Worker; Assemblyman Hulan E. Jack, Congressman Vito Marcantonio, Tammany Leader James Pemberton; Winifred Norman, Negro Youth Council; Saul Mills, NY-CIO Council; Charles Collins, Negro Labor Philips, Consolidated Tenants Victory Committee; Donellan Philips, Consolidated Tenants League; Managing Editor St. Clair Bourne, PV; Executive Secretary Joseph Ford, People's Committee; Dr. Hudson J. Oliver.

Ernest Johnson, Associated Negro Press representative and magazine writer, read an original obituary for Talmadge. Seated by the coffin in complete mourning were two volunteers, representing evils of Talmadgism. A number of other such evils, such as lynching, bigotry, white supremacy, poll tax, etc., in the form of signs, surrounded the bier.

There wasn't a sad face in the place.

SEP 26 1942

Quotes from the Speakers

SAUL MILLS: I am glad to participate in these funeral rites. The CIO has suffered at the hands of reaction and it knows what it is all about.

... REV. IMES: I speak for all the clergy of my denomination. We are glad to lament this unmentionable creature who had wormed his way into the hearts of southerners. Time and tide are with us—evolution and the grace of God.

REV. ROBESON: If we are good enough to defend Pearl Harbor we are good enough to be defended right here on 135 street.

BISHOP LAWSON: I object to such a nice coffin for such a scoundrel.

BEN DAVIS, JR.: Being from Georgia, you know how I feel. When Talmadge refused to shake hands with me it was an honor to know he considered me his enemy.

VITO MARCANTONIO: I suggest we don't bury this carcass but disinfect it and keep the coffin until we bury hitler over there and domestic fascism over here.

REV. HARTEN: This is the most important, far-reaching and history-making meeting that has ever taken place.

REV. POWELL: This is the first time a man committed suicide and was assassinated at the same time. Negroes killed Talmadge politically and from now on we are going to bury more crackers.

Governor Talmadge Still A Power

SEP 27 1942

Last week a distinguished array of citizens joined Harlem New York Negroes in consigning Georgia's Governor Eugene Talmadge to his political grave. The occasion was a mass meteing, held at New York's Golden Gate Ballroom, at which time Congressman Marcantino, Bishop Lawson, Rev. George Sims, Sr., Rev. William Lloyd Imes, Dr. Thomas S. Harten, Judge William Hueston, and Grand Exalted Ruler J. Finley Wilson, together with a number of other high ranking personalities spoke.

At the meeting a number of resolutions were read and approved, calling upon our government for concrete actions in removing certain well organized evils and injustices against Negro Americans, at home and on the war front. One final resolution, though rather strong in language, demanded that it be made a federal crime for anyone to do business with the government and refuse to hire Negroes.

No condemnation is here intended of the meeting by the Harlem Negroes. For they, along with all other upstanding and fair minded people, rightfully deplore the unfortunate and untimely position Governor Talmadge and others of his school have taken on the matter of fair play towards America's oppressed minority—the Negro. But we cannot refrain from suggesting to our New York friends that Mr. Talmadge is not dead.

To an extent little appreciated, Governor Talmadge polled a surprisingly large popular vote, despite the enormous wrongs he committed against the people of his state and inspite of the fact that fully 90 per cent of the powerful press of the state opposed his election for a fourth term. And were it not for the singlefact that he had ruthlessly wrecked and ruined the state's proud University System, we don't doubt that he would have carried the election.

Yes, a great number of fair minded white citizens of Georgia deplored the injection of the racial issue into the campaign and some even had the courage to ask for fair play toward us. But for the great majority of the rank and file whites, the governor's "White Supremacy" cry and race-hating appeals, counted in no substantial manner, against him. And whether we will like to admit it or not, Governor Talmadge is still a great political threat in Georgia.

The only effective weapon against such a threat is for greater numbers of Negroes to bestir themselves, register and insist upon the sacred privilege and duty of voting in state, county and city elections throughout the South. It is the answer to the demagogue, and the stabilizer for democracy.

ELLIS ARNALL, THE MAN WHO HAS JUST relieved Eugene Talmadge of his governor's toga, promoted his campaign as "a crusade to restore decency and democracy in Georgia." He did in fact have the backing of the President, and there is little doubt that every liberal in the state chose him in preference to the red-gallused primitive from Sugar Creek. Confronted with Talmadge's inflammatory appeal to "white supremacy," his rampant phobia against "foreigners" from beyond the borders of Georgia, and his assumption of dictatorial powers on the ground that "you can't have a democracy unless you can have a head to appeal to" the way the Romans appealed to Caesar, distraught Georgians flocked to Arnall. The youthful attorney general backed the policies of President Roosevelt and pledged himself to free the university system from political degradation. The choice was clear, and the downfall of Talmadge is heartening, but to judge from Arnall's own standards, Georgia still has quite a way to go. The champion of "decency and democracy" rightly resented Talmadge's demagogic raising of the racial issue, but not because he himself is even relatively free of prejudice. "If a nigger ever tried to get into a white school in my part of the state," he told a rural campaign audience, "the sun would never set on his head. And we wouldn't be running to the governor or the State Guard to get things done, either." Arnall is to be preferred to Talmadge, but this is surely a new low in compliments.

ELLIS ARNALL, THE MAN WHO HAS JUST relieved Eugene Talmadge of his governor's toga, promoted his campaign as "a crusade to restore decency and democracy in Georgia." He did in fact have the backing of the President, and there is little doubt that every liberal in the state chose him in preference to the red-gallused primitive from Sugar Creek. Confronted with Talmadge's inflammatory appeal to "white supremacy," his rampant phobia against "foreigners" from beyond the borders of Georgia, and his assumption of dictatorial powers on the ground that "you can't have a democracy unless you can have a head to appeal to" the way the Romans appealed to Caesar, distraught Georgians flocked to Arnall. The youthful attorney general backed the policies of President Roosevelt and pledged himself to free the university system from political degradation. The choice was clear, and the downfall of Talmadge is heartening, but to judge from Arnall's own standards, Georgia still has quite a way to go. The champion of "decency and democracy" rightly resented Talmadge's demagogic raising of the racial issue, but not because he himself is even relatively free of prejudice. "If a nigger ever tried to get into a white school in my part of the state," he told a rural campaign audience, "the sun would never set on his head. And we wouldn't be running to the governor or the State Guard to get things done, either." Arnall is to be preferred to Talmadge, but this is surely a new low in compliments.

Talmadge's Fouls

Another flock of Governor Gene Talmadge's fouls came home to roost last week. Ten Georgia colleges, including Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia, were struck from the accredited list of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools. Reason: Talmadge's "unprecedented and unjustifiable political interference" in ousting top educators in last year's flimsy trials before a stooge board of regents. Gene Talmadge charged that the educators fostered racial coeducation.

SEP 14 1942

The Southern Association's action virtually wipes out Georgia's scholastic standing. Since February Georgia's colleges have been consigned to the Talmadge dog house by the American Medical Association, the Association of American Law Schools, the Association of American Universities, the American Association of Teachers Colleges, the American Association of Collegiate Schools of Business.

SEP 14 1942

One immediate consequence was a sharp drop in freshman enrollment. Another was set forth by Marion Luther Brittain, president of Georgia Tech. "In all the history of Georgia Tech," he declared, "we have never had such difficulty keeping our teachers."

Talmadge Politics

To New Masses: I am fifty years old and have lived in Atlanta all my life. That means that I have lived thr[illegible] more "black menace" scares than I can count. [illegible]e Talmadge is not the first to go howling over the red clay land of Scarlett O'Hara's pappy pursued by his former slaves. But maybe I don't need to tell you what some southern politicians can do with "white supremacy" to bring out the vote. "Gene," however, is easily the most grotesque and certainly the most monstrous I have seen yet in the whole night-shirt band. The literature which his political headquarters is passing around is obscene in its implications. And the stories that have been secretly circulated are simply pornographic. It all goes to show what a hard job he has this time to whip up any sort of genuine terror about his "menaces." The latest whisper, not pornographic but certainly vile, is that we have to elect this caricature of Tom Heflin in order to get protection from the Negroes in the armed forces, who will come back to Georgia after the war so arrogant because of their uniforms that they will endanger our lives! This, I submit, is the lowest piece of Goebbels racism.

I want you to know, though, that Talmadge and his supporters are provoking nothing but utter disgust from decent people and they are very many, representing every section of the state's population. If Talmadge wins, it will be through the trickery of a political machine, the support of native fascists, the "white supremacy," and the unfair working of the county-unit voting system which permits no more than about twenty percent representation of the electorate. And even then, we may beat him.

'Racial Issue Is Not Dead,' Talmadge Says

SEP 8 1942

Governor Continues Attack on Newspapers, 'Rivers-Arnall Crowd."

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

ALBANY, Ga., Sept. 7.—Charging that the racial issue is not dead "in Georgia or any other state," Governor Talmadge this afternoon read from what he said was a Kansas City newspaper an item that "50,000 persons will march on Washington for a repeal of the Jim Crow laws."

Around 500 Dougherty county citizens gathered to hear the Governor denounce Atlanta newspapermen and attack the wastefulness of the previous administration in his last appearance in southwest Georgia. Talmadge estimated the crowd in his radio address at 5,000.

Towards the end of the speech a youth identified as G. C. Denmark Jr., of Albany, who said he was a graduate of the South Georgia Teachers' College, rose to his feet and said he had "seen" Negroes at the Statesboro school, "even eating dinner on the campus."

Attacks Newspapermen.

Talmadge singled out Ralph McGill, executive editor of The Constitution; John Martin, Constitution sportswriter, and C. E. Gregory, reporter for the Atlanta Journal, for his usual attack upon the Atlanta newspapers.

He charged that Martin "set up his own wildlife organization to get money from the citizens of Georgia," and added that Gregory's "whole family — father, daughter and son" drew $500 per month from the state under the Rivers' administration.

Talmadge said the Athens Banner-Herald and the Brunswick News received $250 per month each from the state under ex-Governor Rivers.

"I took the advice of Sergeant Alvin York in his news column and paroled state convicts so they could enlist in the Army," Talmadge declared.

SEP 8 1942

Rivers-Arnall Crowd.

The Governor exhibited a handful of checks which, he said, was used by the "Rivers-Arnall crowd" to pay off Atlanta newspapermen. He was introduced by Judge Clayton Jones, of the Albany city court.

Earlier today at Americus, Talmadge appeared worn and tired. He apologized for his short talk, saying that "I was sick last night and do not feel like speaking today."

He mentioned the resignation of eight members of the Georgia state patrol, saying "I guess the boys wanted a vacation or else they wanted to resign from the state in order to enlist in the Army or Navy."

SEP 8 1942

George Wiggins, Sumter county farmer, introduced Talmadge as "the man who has freed our schools of debt" and added that the Sumter schools now had on hand nearly $7,000 to meet any expenses. He also said old-age pensions "had almost doubled here" under Governor Talmadge.

TAPS FOR TALMADGE IN GEORGIA

By a closer vote than was expected Georgia has turned on Talmadge and the most conspicuous and most vocal demagogue for whom the South has to blush is retired to private life.

SEP 11 1942

Eugene Talmadge has had his measure taken by the youthful Ellis Arnall, attorney general of the state, in a typically sensational Georgia campaign. It is a result in which not only Georgians but the whole South and the nation can take satisfaction.

Talmadge has played on all the stops of demagoguery. He has posed as a hayseed farmer snapping his red galluses, while secretly getting the support of most of the privileged groups of his state because he "takes care of them." He has sought to raise a race issue in politics and frighten brave men about bogies. He has ruled with a club by dictatorial methods toward both legislature and state departments. He has grievously injured the educational system of the whole state of Georgia by political interference, political manipulation of educational boards, and by discharge of conscientious and sincere educators causing Georgia institutions to suffer a virtual boycott among all other educational institutions of the nation. He has pulled off his coat, rolled up his sleeves and shaken his fists at the White House, and thereby gotten the plaudits and campaign contributions of the Roosevelt haters of his state and even beyond the state borders. He has so conducted himself that in the recent campaign he was opposed by the newspapers of Georgia, daily and weekly, from one end of the state to the other. The Talmadge newspaper supporters outside his own personal newspaper organ could almost be counted on the fingers of one hand.

That a man of this kind, and representing the things Talmadge represents, should have been so formidable politically is one of the discouraging things to friends of democratic government. The man who can line up big business and ignorant and illiterate backwoodsmen on the same side is formidable, and it is a favorite combination used by demagogues nowadays outside Georgia as well as within it.

Talmadge also profited by the archaic convention unit system of Georgia whereby the cities are penalized politically and the small rural counties are exalted to a prominence out of all proportion to their population. Under this system three small rural counties of 25,000 population have the same representation in a convention as Fulton County containing the city of Atlanta. It is a system which makes it nearly impossible for democracy to express itself. Talmadge formerly boasted that he didn't want to carry a county that had a street car in it. He could do without such counties.

The defeat of Talmadge is a major achievement because of the strength of his lineup. But this time he aroused the indignation of the youth of the state. Never before have college and university students taken such an interest in politics. Talmadge's treatment of the schools was taken by the boys and girls as a personal affront. They resolved to defeat him. They put all the energy of which they were capable into the effort. They ran the errands, they carried the banners, they played the horns and beat the drums. They did the hard leg work. They labored early and late. It was a big day's accomplishment for Georgia when the state's people got rid of Talmadge and that for which he stands. Georgia is back in democracy's fold.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL

SEP 2 - 1942

AS TO HARVARD It was the German Fuehrer who said, "Tell a lie and repeat it often enough and there will be those who will believe it.

One is reminded of that by the Governor's campaign.

Let us examine just a few such items.

The Governor says, almost every day:

"Harvard isn't a member of any accrediting body. Neither is Yale nor Princeton. They get along all right."

What are the facts?

SEP 2 - 1942

Harvard, Yale and Princeton are very active members of the most powerful accrediting group in the world—the Association of American Universities. This group was the first standardizing association to drop the University of Georgia from its approved list.

Harvard, Yale and Princeton are active members of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, a strong national accrediting association. It has dropped Georgia's schools from membership.

Harvard and Yale are active members of the New England Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools; Princeton is active in the Middle States Association.

Both of these associations are exactly like the Southern Association in the south, which dropped the schools of Georgia.

Harvard, Yale and Princeton are the leaders in these accrediting groups of which they are members and are perhaps the keenest institutions in the nation in promoting and maintaining educational standards.

SEP 2 - 1942

Those are the facts.

The Governor knows them to be facts.

Yet he daily repeats the entirely false statement that Harvard, Yale and Princeton are not members of any accrediting organization.

Why?

I can think of no other reason except that he wishes to deceive the people and try to make them think the university and its colleges will be on the same footing as Harvard, Yale and Princeton. He knows his statement is utterly and completely false.

Harvard, Yale and Princeton belong to the most exacting accrediting associations in the nation.

THINK IT OUT Let us examine another statement. You must do these things calmly. Politicians of a certain type deliberately seek to confuse.

The Governor continues saying:

"We do not need these accrediting agencies coming down here telling us how to run our schools."

What are the facts?

No accrediting association ever, at any time, goes to any state nor does one ever ask for membership; nor does it tell it how "to run things."

The reverse is true.

SEP 2 - 1942

Schools request membership. They do not always get it. Sometimes they are, because of sincerity and effort, given probationary membership.

Wesleyan, for instance, in its gallant and splendid fight, is to meet the full standards and be taken off the probationary list. Wesleyan will meet it soon and will be proud of its membership. Would any thinking person wish this school, or any Georgia school, to fail to meet the standards which the other 47 states accept as necessary? Let us be sensible, not angry.

Let us come down to a few other facts.

It was not many years ago that makers of patent medicine put all sorts of noisome drugs on the market. It was not so many years ago that certain food manufacturers put out foods which had false labels on them.

It was necessary for the government to set up standards which an agency saw were, and are, maintained.

It was not so many years ago that there were national scandals about doctors who had been turned out by schools which had poor teachers, poor equipment, and which were after money, not good doctors.

It became necessary to set up the most definite standards for medical schools. No sick person wants a doctor who has not had good training and education.

There must be standards. Yet the Governor wishes to be like the patent medicine men of old—put anything he chooses into the schools of the state and call it good because he put it there.

SEP 2 - 1942

STILL ANOTHER ONE Still another effort to deceive the people is contained in the statement by the Governor, and repeated by his faithful parrots, that only the white schools were dropped by the Southern Association.

Nothing could be more false.

The Negro schools were not members; have never been members.

The Governor knows this.

The Southern Association is for the white schools. The Negro schools have their own group.

I leave it to your own mind to decide why he and his men repeat the charge that none of the Negro schools were dropped from the Southern Association—of which they were not and are not members.

THE WOMEN OF GEORGIA I have an idea that the good women of Georgia will play an effective part in this campaign.

They are not as easily swayed by politicians as are men.

They have a sort of intuitive sense of what is wrong and what is right.

I do not refer to the few women who have tried to make political careers for themselves.

I am thinking about the mothers with boys in the schools; with boys in the Army going away to fight for what is right and decent; going away to offer their lives to remove men from power who have shown what happens when one man is given too much power.

SEP 2 - 1942

I am thinking about the women in clubs who have devoted themselves to building a Georgia which will be honored and respected.

I am thinking about the women who cook and sew and wash and iron to help save money to get their children an education in the schools of Georgia.

I think they want their children to go to a school as good and with the same standards which the others in other states demand for their children.

And not the standards which one man will set up if given a chance to do so.

Exit Talmadge

SEP 1 2 1942

His Excellency Eugene Talmadge was so thoroughly beaten in Thursday's Georgia primary that it is doubtful whether he will ever again be a really important political figure, even in his own State. Although as Governor he was powerful enough to do Georgia incalculable harm, wrecking, among other things, her educational system, it has long been plain that Talmadge lacks all the qualities of a first-class demagogue. Those who for a time in 1936 hoped that he might be able to take over the role of the late Huey Long were quickly disillusioned. Indeed, the only persons that he deceived for very long, besides himself, were some of the rural Georgia voters and some of the "leftist liberal" brethren, who have been for years seeing fascists and protofascists under every bed and in every dark corner.

SEP 1 2 1942

Talmadge was not clever enough to invent new catchwords and not quick enough to avoid being caught himself by some of the worn-out catchwords in which he traded. Doubtless, he believed as earnestly as anybody in "white supremacy." Doubtless, he believed in a vague and muddled sort of way that the New Deal was some kind of conspiracy against Christianity, that any kind of social amelioration was a threat to Christian morals, as he conceived them, and that any man who came from another State to teach in a Georgia school or college was ipso facto no better than one of Sherman's bummers or an 1876 style carpetbagger. To that extent Talmadge had "sincerity," a fatal quality in an ambitious demagogue. Thus he could never master the essential trick of being at once more revolutionary than the Left and more reactionary than the Right. Nor had he the imagination to draw glittering pictures of the brave new world in which every man (that is to say, every white ~~native-born~~ Georgian) would be a king. All that he really promised was a revival of ignorance, bigotry, vigilantism and ruthless economic exploitation and this promise he did his best to fulfill.

SEP 1 2 1942

That such a man could ever come to even temporary and local power is, of course, evidence of the serious tensions in our socio-political fabric. In his relatively brief day of power Talmadge, as we said, was able to do much damage. For the fact that his destructive influence never extended beyond Georgia itself we have to thank, not the wisdom of the American masses, but rather the wisdom of God in having made Gene Talmadge the dull and bungling fellow that he is.

Eugene Blease And Eugene Talmadge

Courier Journal
Louisville, Ky.

In 1917 the late COLE BLEASE of South Carolina opposed the war so virulently that President WILSON himself intervened in the Democratic primary and asked the voters of the State to reject BLEASE's candidacy for the United States Senate. The President's intervention was successful, though in post-war years BLEASE did get into the Senate where he is remembered for a one-man filibuster in 1926 which prevented a vote on a resolution of adherence to the World Court.

AUG 28 1942

In 1942 COLE BLEASE's half-brother, EUGENE S. BLEASE, has been, no matter what his professions may be, opposing the war just as injuriously as COLE could possibly have done twenty-five years ago. For EUGENE has been going about South Carolina trying to get himself elected to the Senate on the issue of "white supremacy." To raise such an issue at a time when emotional strain can easily bring vicious impulses to the surface among both whites and blacks is to promote national disunity, to invite local barbarity and to accept the spiritual leadership of ADOLF HITLER. He is the high priest of "white supremacy" and he himself has demonstrated the usual cynicism of its practitioners by his eager joining hands with the Japs.

Happily, the latest returns from this week's voting in South Carolina indicate that EUGENE has been defeated, that his fakery will not unseat Senator BURNET R. MAYBANK. It is true that the result was too close to justify elation. Mr. MAYBANK seems to have been saved only by winning a large majority in Charleston County, his home county. Nevertheless, each failure these days of the old battle-cry of "white supremacy" from the mouth of a designing politician sets a discouraging example for that whole tribe and is bound to be a healthful sedative.

Across the Savannah River is another EUGENE. He is in the midst of an experiment exactly like that just concluded in South Carolina—a brutally cynical attempt to win office by setting white against black, black against white. The name EUGENE is from the French and means "of noble race." BLEASE's and TALMADGE's conception of a noble race is one that proposes to bully and degrade another. It seems possible the voters of Georgia may differ, as the voters of South Carolina have done.

Joy in Georgia

Daily Worker
N.Y., N.Y.

—By Milton Howard

ONCE again the Negro people become the touchstone of progress at a moment of crisis in the nation's history.

The defeat of Talmadge in Georgia, running as he did on the platform of "white supremacy," spells the beginning of the downfall of this slogan as a weapon of political reaction. In contrast to the triumph of Farley in the New York Democratic state convention, this is one electoral result which the Berlin and Tokio propagandists will not rejoice over.

We do not have to romanticize or exaggerate the precise quality of the opposition which drove Talmadge out of power. At this moment, that is irrelevant, and cannot tarnish the historic significance of this repulsive man's defeat.

SEP. 15 1942

TALMADGE was continuing the political line created by the KKK in the decades following the Civil War. Reactionary historians have traditionally apologized for, or justified this line, which was based on a nullification, as far as possible, of the social results of the Civil War.

But the line of "white supremacy" begins to appear today for what it really was, and for what progressive Americans have always known it to be—hindrance to the development and national security of the United States.

If "white supremacy" was not clearly seen by the majority of Americans between 1865-1940 as a source of great national peril, General Marshall, chief of the United States Army, was compelled two weeks ago to declare bluntly that the breakdown of military jim-crow in the South is a matter of "military necessity." Senator Bankhead of Alabama had recently demanded of General Marshall that Negro soldiers should be billeted only in Northern states. Our military chief told him that such a course is not consistent with national security.

The Emancipation Proclamation issued by Lincoln, like General Marshall's letter, was also dictated by military necessity. This does not diminish or alter the epochal significance of either.

The peoples character of this war is nowhere better seen than in the tide of national aspiration which it has unloosed among the Negro people.

The instinct on which the present unprecedented demand for equality is based is sound. The Negro masses feel instinctively — and Marxist-Leninist science confirms them—that the war against fascism has profoundly altered the class and social relationship in their favor. This is true despite all the remnants and relics of jim-crow which still sully the country and hamper its war effort.

The downfall of Talmadge, therefore, is a portent of profound changes in the social and political life of the South. These changes may come slowly. But they are surely on their way, simply because the unity of the country against its enemies demands that they do come.

THERE has always existed in the South, hidden by falsified preconceptions and the predominance of reactionary history-writers, an anti-reactionary opposition to the ruling Bourbons. Let us not forget that President Andrew Jackson was a Southerner; yet never did the Calhoun traitors face a more relentless enemy than "Old Hickory." The social basis of Jacksonism—that is, progressive Southern life based on the small freeholder and backwoods trades folk — may not exist today in the same form as in the first half of the nineteenth century. Yet it is unquestionable that there is rising a powerful anti-Bourbon current in Southern life. It is beginning to be seen that the Bourbons are the deadliest enemies the South has ever had; that they retarded its economic development for generations; that they cover their oppression of the Southern people by the hypnotizing incitements of "white supremacy."

"White supremacy" under the Bourbons has meant a completer degradation of the whites in the South than anywhere else in the country.

That the South is changing is of tremendous importance to the rest of the nation. It spells the advance of democracy throughout the country. For it has been the poll-tax bloc in Congress and the cotton state Senators, who have monopolized key Congressional committees for generations.

The progressive war which America wages for its independence makes the further existence of this Bourbon political monopoly too dangerous to be tolerated. In the downfall of Talmadge, its future can already been read.

The Negro people gave America its soul in the nineteenth century; our greatest literature is Abolitionist literature.

It falls to the Negro people once again in a new crisis, to reveal to the nation the path that it must take for its own sake.

Great News From Georgia!

This is positively great news from Georgia—this word of the defeat of Gene Talmadge.

SEP 11 1942

Getting rid of Talmadge as governor in itself is a very fine thing, a blessing for the people of our neighbor state which will be shared, in some measure, by all of the people of the South. As a public official, he is a reflection on all Southerners. But his defeat carries a significance and a reassurance that go far beyond Talmadge himself. For it is a repudiation of many dangerous and destructive policies, methods and tendencies in government.

Talmadge represents narrow, arbitrary personal government. He is a spokesman of prejudice. He is a demagogue. He is unenlightened. In his outrageous introduction of his political connivance into the university system of Georgia, he showed what a menace he is to the progress of education. He capitalizes on a crudeness, which is far from the sagacity and simplicity it pretends to be. He is ruthless.

The repudiation of Gene Talmadge is a repudiation of all these qualities and methods in government.

Possibly more important than anything else just now is the electorate's implicit affirmation that there really is no acute racial issue in Georgia; that the great majority of both white and colored peoples are dealing with their common problems in an intelligent and constructive spirit and are making progress in overcoming them, even under the stresses of these times.

Ellis Arnall, Talmadge's victorious opponent, charged that the governor had attempted to make political capital by raising racial questions, when as a matter of fact there was no such issue. We believe that Arnall is right, that the federal government is not attempting to do the extreme things which have been charged and that despite some extremists in their own ranks, the vast majority of the Negro people are themselves only seeking—and naturally—to advance in the realization of fundamental human rights.

The result at the polls of Georgia, a state of the Deep South, is, we take it, another evidence that this appraisal of the racial situation is sound.

It should be reassuring to those sincere people who have been deeply concerned about the matter.

It should be a warning to any who would seek to make political capital along these lines.

It is another instance in which the people have shown that they are well ahead of some of the political wiseacres and maneuvers.

Sometimes the people can make some mighty poor choices in their election of public servants. The majority, of course, sometimes can be wrong on specific questions. But American people will not indefinitely keep on electing inferior and backward men. If they sometimes make mistakes, they in time find them out and move to correct them. So this election in Georgia is, in our opinion, another deeply heartening demonstration of democracy's soundness.

SEP 11 1942

That is a broad reassurance going beyond the very considerable satisfaction and promise involved in getting rid of Talmadge himself.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH McGILL

POLITICAL SCIENCE A teacher of political science might take the Talmadge campaign and use it as illustrating how to conduct a negative campaign, one which avoids the issues.

AUG 19 1942

One of the methods employed is the charge that Ellis Arnall plans to name former Governor E. D. Rivers as chairman of the highway board.

This is repeated over and over.

Now, the Talmadge people themselves don't believe it. They know it isn't so. They also know that in some quarters of the state former Governor Rivers is unpopular, just as Mr. Talmadge was booed all over the state in 1936.

They hope to take advantage of this fact, but what they hope for most is to divert attention away from the fact the Governor pardoned more than 4,500 prisoners in four years when they were not needed for work and that there was a scandal in the fact that at least 4,000 of the pardons had to be worked through one man, to make people forget what he did to the university; to divert their attention from the fact that he is in sole, and unregulated, charge of the state's near. $60,000,000.

Ellis Arnall has disappointed them.

He has consistently said that he will not appoint the present Governor, any former Governor, or any man who will use the highway board in an effort to become Governor. That's plain enough.

AUG 19 1942

He has denied it emphatically without being drawn into a controversy.

He has kept hammering away at the issues.

As for E. D. Rivers himself, he wouldn't have that job, or any other job in the administration, even if there were no objection to it and it were offered him. Especially would he refuse the highway place. That is the political graveyard and, rightly or wrongly, E. D. Rivers looks ahead to trying his own comeback four years from now.

That is one of the methods.

THAT "SPECIAL TRAIN" Governor Talmadge would have the people forget a few more things.

AUG 19 1942

He would have them forget his expressed hatred of the President and his opposition to all the administration stands for. He would have them forget he fought the Triple A, which literally has saved agriculture in Georgia and the nation.

He would have them forget he vetoed the free schoolbook law, after the legislature had passed it in 1935.

He would have them forget that he vetoed old-age pensions.

He would have them forget he vetoed the seven-month school law which would have given better educational opportunities to the rural children.

There are other things he would like the people to forget.

But most of all he would like for them to forget that he ever said he would fire so many people off the state pay roll they would need a special train to haul them away.

The facts are he has hired more people than did E. D. Rivers.

If he sent away a train he brought back two trains filled with employes.

He would have them forget how much he has spent. He took in in taxes about $15,000,000 more than any other Governor.

Not only has he hired more men than any other Governor in the state's history, but most of his pay rolls are up.

The state patrol pay roll, for instance, has more than doubled. The number of lives lost last year on the highways was almost 150 more than the previous year.

These are some of the things he would prefer the people did not discuss. So, he attacks newspapers and newspapermen.

AUG 19 1942

FARM LABOR SCARED OUT He professes to be a friend of the farmer. Yet he is scaring Negroes out of the state. Farm labor is being scared out of the state into the cities and out for other jobs because the Governor is using a "nigger-nigger" campaign.

This also has as its purpose the avoidance of the real issues.

The Governor knows there is no such issue.

He has never mentioned his own words.

You know, he wrote about the race issue in the Statesman of July 2, 1940. And he repeated his words at Albany, on July 4.

He said, and wrote:

"Any doctrine that preaches class hatred in Georgia is a sin of the deepest dye. Any doctrine that preaches prejudice is merely the doctrine of a hypocrite who is trying to hide under a shadow for the purpose of stealing.

"No religious or racial prejudice has any place in a Christian heart."

Well, that's what he said when he had no serious opposition. Now he is faking. He doesn't care, apparently, how much farm labor he scares out of the state. He'll try to say they are hunting defense jobs when he knows a country Negro will stay on the job if he isn't scared.

One of the most humorous features was his recent complaint about the libel law. That was funny. One of his chief supporters, publisher of a daily, introduced the bill. Another supporter wrote the bill. It's a good one. Nothing wrong with it.

What's funny is that the Governor, who slanders and smears and libels anyone who opposes him, in the Statesman and in his speeches, would feel aggrieved if someone replied in kind.

Boys, he must be a-hurtin'!

Governor-Elect Arnall Speaks

SEP 20 1942

Speaking as the guest of March of Time from Washington last Thursday night, Governor-Euect Ellis Arnall committed his state to the high purpose of cooperation and sanity among the sisterhood of states and pledged anew, "democracy and justice for all" of Georgia's citizens.

In Georgia, the South's empire state, "democracy has arrived," stated our 35-year-old Governor-Elect.

Mr. Arnall's first intention will be the "restoration of the accredited standings" of the various units of the University System, a solemn pledge he had made to the boys and girls, to the students and parents of Georgia, said Mr Arnall.

SEP 20 1942

56k

To forestall the recurrence of "one man rule and dictatorship.", he has promised to urge enactment by the General Assembly of Georgia constitutional amendments, which will prevent such leadership as obtains today in the state.

Mr. Arnall has repudiated racial bigotry.

In this, the governor-elect speaks in language that is both forceful and convincing. No governor of the state has ever ascended to this exalted position with more genuine goodwill from its citizens, nor with greater respect from the citizens of the nation, than Mr. Arnall. In the very flower of his youth and in an era of profound economic and social change, Mr. Arnall, if he is liberal enough to accord to Negroes a place in the march of human progress, can write high his name among the great men of American history. He should encounter no difficulty in winning nomination to the United States Senate. His keen, analytical mind, his forthright decisions as Attorney General for the state, are widely discussed and highly respected.

But, if Mr. Arnall would be great as far as we are concerned, it is going to be necessary for him to include in his horizon the Negro, an integral part of Georgians and the nation.

AUG 29 1942

Incidents in Scattered Sections of America Detracting from National Unity; Will White America Heed Before It Is Too Late?

AUG 29 1942

AN EDITORIAL

From scattered sections of the globe, reports trickle in which emphasize all too clearly the ugly truth that colored Americans are faced with the task of fighting a war on two fronts.

AUG 29 1942

In Georgia, red-gallused Gene Talmadge, seeking re-election to the Governor's chair, ordered the State Guard to be alerted against racial disturbances in the State. Political opponents of Talmadge further charge that the Governor has sent out State employees in State automobiles with orders to "start some riots."

Speaking before the convention on Christian education of the AMEZ Church at Salisbury, N.C., last week, Governor J. Melville Broughton took occasion to spike reports that the State Guard there had been alerted as a precaution to possible racial disturbances.

"No reports of racial feeling in North Carolina have reached my office," the Governor said, "and nothing exists in our State but a harmonious and friendly relationship between the races. We are all working together here and not listening to agitators."

Incidents Causing Disunity

In the Norfolk-Portsmouth (Virginia) area, newspapers found it necessary to combat reports that racial outbreaks were imminent. One rumor, which spread like wildfire, said that colored persons had purchased all of the available ice picks in that area and were planning a mass assault upon white citizens during a blackout last Tuesday night.

AUG 29 1942

Another was to the effect that colored women were being organized under the name of "Daughters of Eleanor," to hurl defiance at white housewives, to demand certain extraordinary privileges and to disrupt in general the existing relationships between the races.

Because of Mrs. Roosevelt's demonstrated interest in the problems of minority groups, the First Lady is quite generally hated in some quarters by whites and the use of her name in the aforementioned rumor was a deliberate effort to play upon this hatred for all it was worth.

Needless to say, these rumors and others like them, were found to be fantastic, deliberate lies. Similar reports have come out of South Carolina where, two weeks ago, orders were given to election officials to refuse colored persons who presented themselves at the polls.

Last week the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers of America (CIO) moved their eighth annual convention from Indianapolis to Cleveland, Ohio, because Indianapolis hotels refused to withdraw their regulations discriminating against colored persons.

Treatment of Soldiers in the South

In Spartanburg, S.C., a Philadelphia army recruit was sentenced to thirty days on the chain gang or to pay a $50 fine because he entered a white store to buy an ice cream cone. Three soldiers in Louisiana have been sentenced to be executed in October for an alleged attack on a white woman. They charged that they were tortured into signing a "confession."

Soldiers at Fort Benning, Ga., wrote the AFRO last week that "the average colored soldier would gladly trade his bunk in Georgia for one in hell." From Gulfport, Miss., comes a report that working conditions for colored persons in war industries there are "worse than slavery."

Transfer of the President's Committee on Fair Employment Practice to the supervision of the War Manpower Commission, despite assurances from the President himself that the move was made to strengthen the committee, is nevertheless being viewed with apprehension by many members of both races interested in outlawing discrimination in war industries on the basis of race, creed, color or national origin.

Concern Over Anti-Poll Tax Bill

The failure, so far, to force a vote on anti-poll tax legislation in Congress has been the cause for considerable concern on the part of proponents of this measure which would lift the political fetters from thousands of America's black and white citizens in the South.

Reports from England that the army is faced with "problems" arising from the objection of white Southerners to the association of colored soldiers with white women and plans to send colored units of the Women's Army Auxiliary Corps to England to provide "companionship" for colored soldiers have so far not been denied.

Such reports as have been catalogued here do not make a very pretty picture and certainly do nothing to aid the building of morale and national unity imperative to licking the Axis nations.

Brighter Side of the Picture

It is true that one may point to the case of the Knoxville (Tenn.) courthouse janitor who last week was elected a justice of the peace, or to the case of the North Carolina man who was elected to a post in the State Federation of Labor. In Baltimore last week, the Western Union Telegraph Company hired the first colored messengers in the company's history and at Tuskegee it was reported that the War Department may use paints made at the laboratories of Dr. George W. Carver for camouflage purposes.

Yet, on the other hand, certain plants handling war contracts continue their refusal to employ qualified colored labor, and not all of these violators are in the South.

So while pleas for national unity are heard on every hand and dark and forboding pictures of the consequences of disunity are being painted daily, it becomes increasingly difficult for the conscientious colored American to understand the paradoxes and incongruities which beset him with such alarming regularity and persistence.

Pretty speeches and vague promises may have their place, but the translation of the idealism of the Constitution into a living, breathing thing is the problem facing white America.

It has been pretty generally agreed that the present world conflict is going to be a long and bloody one. Superior weapons and superior manpower are vital to victory. Toward this end, colored America is making, as in all previous wars, an all-out effort.

One Way to Victory

Bombs and bullets know no color line and the bugbear of racial superiority, which some of the enemies within our gates are trying to set up, has no place in the strategy with which we hope to win the war.

If a portion of our energies is to be dissipated in knocking down obstacles and a portion of the energies of white America diverted to setting them up, it is obvious that fifty per cent of our total energies are in effect being used to the advantage of the enemies whom we would defeat.

The simplicity of the situation is so apparent that it is difficult to understand how there can be so many who seek to circumvent it.

Another Funeral Held For Talmadge

The Informer
Houston, Tex.

LOS ANGELES.—(ANP)—Under the auspices of the American Anti-Prejudice society, with the Rev. C. Townsend Tucker presiding, one of the most unusual but epochal ceremonies ever devised was held last Sunday. This was a figurative funeral at Faithful Central Baptist church for Eugene Talmadge, notorious Negro-hating governor of Georgia who was defeated for reelection two weeks ago.

OCT 10 1942

The whole tenor of the mass meeting which was well attended was one of happiness that this arch Negro-hater was politically dead, but with a stern note of determination to oppose all such enemies to the race wherever possible.

OCT 10 1942

Eyes Opened

Rev. Tucker told how the eyes of the world have been opened to the dangers of race hatred and how gradually the race is beginning to feel the benefits. He consigned Gov. Talmadge to his political death.

Impressive remarks were made by author Crispus Jones and copies of his book on democracy were sold at the suggestion of Rev. Capers, who closed with a dynamic and eloquent short address during which he urged the race to also clean its own house.

Brooklynites Stage 'Funeral' For Talmadge

OCT 10 1942

Another "funeral" for Governor Eugene Talmadge of Georgia who died a political death at the polls last month is set for Sunday, October 11, at 3 pm in Holy Trinity Baptist church, Dekalb ave near Franklin ave, Brooklyn.

A parade will be included. It will form at Brooklyn Elks, Fulton st and Classon ave, at 2 pm and will march down Classon to Dekalb and over to the church.

J. Finley Wilson, IBPOEW grand exalted ruler, will deliver the principal eulogy. A casket, mourners and pall bearers will be featured on the program.

OCT 10 1942

Rev. Thomas S. Harten, Holy Trinity pastor, and chairman of the Afro Protective League which is sponsoring the "funeral," said:

"Every liberal-minded citizen, regardless of race or color, should take part in the funeral of one of the most prejudiced white men who ever lived.—Negro-hating, Jew-baiting, labor-hating Talmadge who has been an inspiration to all lynchers and every form of discrimination."

OCT 10 1942

According to the APL chairman, Negro and white citizens and religious, social, fraternal, political, labor organizations and national youth groups of Brooklyn and NYC will participate in the Talmadge "funeral."

A BRANCH of the Georgia Vigilantes Inc., the Talmadge boys, must be operating in the Harlem vicinity these days. Small stickers like the one shown above were passed out in the Madison and 11 st district Monday and Tuesday of this week. Looks like a case of "Heil hitler" right under our noses. The Daily News might do well to note that their "Harlem Crime Wave" idea fits in perfectly with the kind of tactics Talmadge and company encourage.

Textbook Committee Tosses Issue Back Into Talmadge's Lap

56K

Constitution
Atlanta

Talmadge

DEC 23 1942

The State Board of Education's textbook selection committee yesterday tossed aside the scenario Governor Talmadge had written for his exit from the Georgia school scene.

In a 30-minute session, in which they were supposed to select a book on defense and a book on health for 800,000 children at a cost of approximately $1,500,000 to the shuddering taxpayer, the members of the committee decided to do nothing—and adjourned.

Protests from citizens throughout the state were declared to have stymied the Talmadge plan to saddle the Georgia common school system with 1,600,000 books no one wanted.

Constitution

The Governor, who has spent the last two years ripping the Georgia school system to shreds and, as a result, was voted out of office, had ordered the committee to select a book on defense and a book on health "for every school child in Georgia." He had given the committee 48 hours in which to act.

Atlanta, Ga.

DEC 23 1942

Refusal To Act.

The committee's refusal to act yesterday tosses the whole issue back into the lap of Talmadge—and his next move is awaited with interest by educational circles and the book salesmen who had hoped to prosper. It was conceded yesterday there would be no further move. Talmadge cannot force the purchase of the books without the aid of the board.

When the committee, comprising Mrs. William T. Healey, of Atlanta; Carey G. Arnett, of Halyondale, and J. H. Woodall, of Woodland, met in obedience to the Governor's order, it summoned Dr. M. D. Collins, state superintendent of education, and Dr. O. C. Aderhold, director of the State High School Victory Corps.

"The schools of Georgia have all the books on defense they need right now and we are preparing to consider others that might be more appropriate at a more appropriate date," Dr. Aderhold told the committee.

"The schools of Georgia have all the health books they need—all the defense books they need," said Dr. Collins.

DEC 23 1942

Book Salesmen.

The hordes of book salesmen were on the edges of their chairs in the corridors outside while the committee sat in executive session. Those book salesmen, present in the hope of some slight profit every time the board meets, were certain there was the scent of tax money in the air.

Inside the committee room Dr. Collins was telling the committee:

"This plan will cost $1,500,000.

"The state has plenty of books, but is short on money. . . .

"I haven't had a single demand from teachers, principals or superintendents for these books.

Only Request.

"The only request I have had for the purchase of these books has come from book salesmen."

The committee was advised that State Auditor E. B. Thrasher Jr. had announced that morning that under the present approved budget for the Department of Education only about $109,000 was left in the textbook fund for the balance of the year. The annual allotment is $800,000.

Constitution

Dr. Collins told the committee:

"Should the state now buy too many books the money probably will have to come from some other source and that might mean that the salary increase Governor Talmadge has ordered for the school teachers cannot be maintained."

Talmadge had ordered the 25 per cent increase in teachers' pay shortly after he lost in the September primary.

56K

Atlanta, Ga.

Thirty minutes after the session started the door to the room opened and the committee members issued forth.

DEC 2

Collins Announces.

Dr. Collins announced to the crowd in the hallway:

"The committee has adjourned without reaching any conclusion. Therefore, no books will be bought."

The committee, he added, had set no date for reconvening.

Collins told the book salesmen they might as well go home and not come back "for a long time"—at least until after Christmas.

One book salesman plucked at the furred sleeve of Mrs. Healey.

"Is that true—there's no need to hang around?" he asked, in alarm.

"It certainly is," said Mrs. Healey, "no need at all."

Mrs. Healey and Woodall went over to the Talmadge executive offices to report no deal.

What Talmadge said has not been learned.

But he must have a board with him to act, particularly in his last battle with public opinion.

5,000 in Hall Hear Attack By Talmadge

By HERMAN HANCOCK,
Constitution Staff Writer.

GAINESVILLE, Ga., July 18.—Election of Ellis Arnall as governor of Georgia means the "vanishing of a $9,500,000 treasury surplus, the closing of schools, starvation for teachers and waste in the state government," red-gallused Governor Talmadge told about 5,000 shirt-sleeved men and women in City park here today.

The Governor said he was not running against Arnall, but a combine composed of Arnall, former Governor E. D. Rivers, Brack Blalock, machinery dealer, and Wiley L. Moore, oil company executive. He branded them as "the same old crowd trying to get back in," and added "Rivers will be chairman of the State Highway Board if Arnall is elected."

The address here today in swelteringly hot weather without even ice water for the hundreds who crowded the park, contrasted with his opening bid for his fourth term as governor at Moultrie on July 4 when rains sent scurrying scores to shelter.

He is seeking a full four-year term, and hinted that if he is elected, there will be a move to reduce the term. He also inferred he will not be a candidate for the senate two years from now, if elected governor.

"I want to serve the whole four years, and not have it cut after my election," Talmadge told the crowd. "I want you to let me serve the four years."

He also attacked newspapermen, whom he said had been on the pay rolls of various state departments, centering his fire largely on reporters of The Atlanta Constitution and the Atlanta Journal.

The bugaboo of racial equality was waved in portions of his address when he declared "as long as I am governor, Negroes and whites will never go to the same school." He warned other sections of the country "Georgia will not be dictated to by any outside influence," and said Georgia will not interfere with other states, adding that in "Georgia two races get along better than anywhere else in the world because we understand one another."

Asserting that the state debt is now only $7,648,545 and that the state has $9,500,000 in the treasury and in the banks, he said every dime could be paid but that the money was being held as a buffer for war emergency and to insure continued operation of schools and other functions of the state.

He said when he entered office that the "Rivers-Arnall bunch had left a debt of $29,759,642," but that he had reduced it to $7,648,545 without increasing taxes one dime.

Attacks Gas Raise.

Attacking the 2.5 cents a gallon increase in gasoline prices, he said it was for the purpose of raising a slush fund for the gubernatorial campaign, charging specifically that Moore is treasurer of the Arnall drive. He advised his hearers not to pay any increase.

At one point he attacked Allen Darden, resigned director of the income, intangible and inheritance tax divisions, implying that Darden resigned because Talmadge would not grant him a raise.

"If any employe of the state is dissatisfied with his salary and is not giving his best service to the state, I will welcome his resignation," the Governor said.

Asserting he looks for the day when newspapermen are not looking for public money, he cited several alleged instances in which some were on the pay rolls.

Those accused were Ralph McGill, John Martin, C. J. Holleran, all of The Constitution; C. E. Gregory, Paul Stevenson, of the Journal, and Howard Leavy, of Brunswick. He also charged that the Athens Banner-Herald "sold out" for $300, adding that Gregory's family has drawn $22,000 from the state at various times.

Attacks Writer.

He gloated over the fact that "Piney Woods Pete," column of the Journal, was off the front page yesterday in an edition he said he saw, and said Stevenson is its author.

He praised his friends in Grady county for raising funds for a broadcast he will make at 10:30 o'clock next Friday night over radio station WSB, and thanked those who have made contributions for previous addresses.

Talmadge praised the crowd for "walking in from the mountains and valleys of this section of the state."

"We need a Governor who will protect the rich or poor, the high or low," he added. "I want to serve every day of the four-year term."

Before Talmadge arrived, a motorcade formed several miles south of Gainesville and drovce to the park.

Frank Watson, superintendent of Gillsville school, was entertaining the crowd which already had gathered with an impromptu address, interspersed by music provided by Peck's band, of Gainesville, and Fiddlin' John Carson. The Talmadge victory song was frequently played.

Margaret Talmadge, daughter of the Governor, and Mrs. Herman Talmadge, wife of the Governor's son, were invited to the speakers' platform.

Watson pulled a Talmadge automobile tag out and held it up for the crowd to see. He said it had been criticized as containing vital materials needed in the war effort.

"It has nothing in it that a good Talmadge knife will not cut," he yelled, pulling out a knife and cutting a slice off one of them. He then took it in his hands and broke it, explaining it contains wood fiber and is pressed wood.

Railroad Man.

Jim Flynn, Atlanta railroad man, spoke, asserting the railroad men "are thankful for the favors received from Talmadge's administration."

"We are thankful for Talmadge," he added.

Two students, whose names were never given in full, from the University of Georgia called for Talmadge's election. Two large buses bearing signs as being from the University of Georgia were in the park. One of the students—identified as "Walker"—said 65 or 70 students were present.

VIGILANTES, INC.

New Secret Society Flares Under Auspices of Goodwin

OCT 14 1942

By LAMAR Q. BALL.

A new secret society flashed across the Georgia skies yesterday under the auspices of Major John E. Goodwin, Georgia's commissioner of public safety, chief of the palace guard and the personal bodyguard of Governor Talmadge during the last two years.

The name of the new order is Vigilantes, Inc., and its charter has been filed with Secretary of State John Wilson.

Attorneys for the Vigilantes are Hewlett & Dennis, law partners of Atlanta, the senior member of the firm being Justice Samuel C. Hewlett, who ascended to the bench of the supreme court of Georgia the day the charter was filed.

56

From his private office in the state capitol yesterday, Justice Hewlett said:

"I was in on the original drawing up of those papers, but I retired from all law practice when I accepted this post.

"I know none of the details and I shall handle no further law practice until my term in the court has been completed."

The papers filed with Secretary of State Wilson described the purpose of the new organization as "patriotic, secret, social and benevolent."

No capital stock is involved or profit expected, according to the papers.

The headquarters of the organization will be in Fulton county, Georgia, "but the petitioners desire the privilege of establishing offices and transacting business in any other place, or places, within or without the state of Georgia."

In the trinity described as leaders of the organization today are Goodwin, John J. Cummings, of Seminole county, and Fred Derrick, of Rabun county. The area in the vicinity of Tybee Light is unrepresented.

Cummings, a member of the State Board of Regents under Governor Talmadge, won fame for his sale of Samson, the $5,000 accredited bull, to the state of Georgia.

The state's purchase of Samson, according to Governo Talmadge's comments at the time of the sale, was to improve the parentage of the beef stock of the state.

Derrick was one of Governor Talmadge's companions on his famous visit to Havana, Cuba, a year ago, an incident that drew frequent comment in the recent gubernatorial campaign. Derrick is a member of Governor Talmadge's staff.

No one will be allowed inside the assembly room of Vigilantes, Inc., other than "white males, of sound health, good morals and high character."

No one could be found yesterday to explain in more complete detail the purpose or the reasons for the new secret organiaztion.

See Talmadge Hand In New Organization

OCT 15 1942

OCT 15 1942

Close observers Wednesday were inclined to believe that Governor Eugene Talmadge had a hand in the organization of the Vigilantes, Inc., a secret society formed by Public Safety Commissioner John F. Goodwin and two other close friends of Georgia's chief executive.

Observers reached this conclusion after recalling an editorial in the latest issue of the governor's newspaper, The Statesman, in which it was pointed out that there is room for an organization to "maintain white supremacy" if there is "room in America for a National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

A petition for a charter of incorporation for the Vigilantes, Inc has been filed with Secretary of State John B. Wilson. In the petition, it is set forth that membership is to be restricted to "white males of sound health, good morals and high character," and the objects are set out as purely eleemosynary, patriotic, social, and benevolent.

Attached to the application is an affidavit from W. H. Kimbrough, managing editor of The Statesman that the money to advertise the charter for application for four weeks in The Statesman has been deposited with him. Kimbrough is a son-in-law of Governor Talmadge.

The organization was chartered in Fulton Superior Court October 10, according to the copy of a charter filed with the secretary of state.

The Vigilantes charter in the Fulton Superior Court was obtained by Samuel D. Hewlett and John Dennis, Atlanta law firm. Governor Talmadge appointed Attorney Hewlett to the State Supreme Court Monday.

In the petition it is set forth that the organization shall have the power to confer an initiative or degree ritualism, fraternal and secret obligations, words, grips, signs and ceremonies.

In addition to Goodwin the incorporators were listed as John L Cummings of Donalsonville, a Talmadge appointee on the Board of Regents and Fred Derrick of

Aides of Georgia Governor Organize New Secret Society

~~OCT 15 1942~~

ATLANTA, Oct. 14 (AP)—The Public Safety Commissioner and two other close friends of Governor Talmadge have organized Vigilantes, Inc., a new secret society limited to white males.

56K

The charter of incorporation, filed yesterday with the Secretary of State, John B. Wilson, provides that the organization "shall have the power to confer an initiative or degree ritualism, fraternal and secret obligations, words, grips, signs and ceremonies."

Membership is to be restricted to "white males of sound health, good morals and high character," while the purposes are set out as "purely eleemosynary, patriotic, social and benevolent."

Besides Mr. Goodwin, the incorporators were listed as John J. Cummings of Donalsonville, a Talmadge appointee on the Board of Regents, and Fred Derrick of Rabun County, a member of the Governor's staff.

OCT 15 1942

No capital stock is involved, the papers declaring that no profit or pecuniary gain is expected. The corporation would control the sale of its paraphernalia, regalia, stationery, jewelry and other materials.

OCT 24 1942

ATLANTA, Ga., Oct. 22—A substitue organization for the Ku Klux Klan was seen by those who view with alarm the filing of a charter with the Georgia Secretary of State for the incorporation of a secret society to be known as Vigilantes, Inc. The organizers are listed as Major John E. Goodwin, commissioner of public safety and Talmadge henchman; John J. Cummings, member of the Talmadge-packed State Board of Regents, and Fred Derrick, member of Talmadge's personal staff.

Georgia colored residents have expressed the view that Vigilantes, Inc., is to be used to carry out Talmadge's program of coercing and intimidating colored citizens for the preservation of "white supremacy."

LIMITED TO "WHITE MALES"

According to the charter, membership will be limited to "white males of sound health, good morals and high character." Goodwin has stated the organization will be secret and have the right to confer "degrees of ritualism, sell paraphernalia, regalia, stationery, jewelry and other materials."

According to the incorporators no move has been made as yet toward designing robes, hoods or masks for the members. Goodwin said, "We'll have our first meeting in Atlanta in three or four days and we'll wear everyday clothes, I guess."

FBI WATCHES

The organization is expected to draw its following from among Georgia's "poor whites," among whom Talmadge campaigned for re-election on the race equality issue and was defeated.

FBI agents are watching the progress of the organization, but would make no comment at press time.

ATLANTA, Oct. 16.—Organization of a streamlined version of the Ku Klux Klan was revealed today following the filing of a charter with the Georgia Secretary of State for a new secret society calling itself Vigilantes, Inc.

The organizers are listed in the charter as Maj. John E. Goodwin, Georgia Commissioner of Public Safety and personal bodyguard of Gov. Talmadge; John J. Cummings, and Fred Derrick.

Vigilantes, Inc., is evidently Georgia's version of the recently spawned League for White Supremacy in Alabama. According to the charter no one will be allowed to attend its meetings except "white males of sound health, good morals and high character." The organization is called "patriotic, secret, social and benevolent."

OCT 16 1942

The incorporation papers said the society "shall have the power to confer an initiative or degree ritualism, fraternal and secret obligations, words, grips, signs and ceremonies under which there shall be united only a membership of white male persons."

Observers here see the organization as an effort to hold together the Talmadge machine which went down to defeat in the recent primary, and press the campaign for "white supremacy."

OCT 16 1942

A federal investigation had been asked of the activities of Commissioner Goodwin during the gubernatorial primary campaign. In a letter to the Justice Dept., Frank McCallister, secretary of the Southern Workers Defense League, charged that Goodwin had issued an order to state patrolmen to search all cars bearing Negroes on the highways after 9 o'clock at night and "use your blackjacks on them whenever you can." McCallister submitted this charge in affidavit form from Sgt. J. F. Hartsfield, district commander, who resigned in protest. Federal authorities have not yet indicated what they plan to do.

Assistant Solicitor Hits Secret Society

OCT 22 1942

Addressing the State Prison and Parole Board in opposition to a parole for Raymond (Slim) Bryan, convicted white flogger, Assistant Solicitor General Dan Duke, of Fulton Superior Court, criticized severely Wednesday the new secret society of "Vigilantes" incorporated here last week by a group of associates of Governor Eugene Talmadge.

The young attorney assailed the new organization in connection with a denunciation of the alleged activities of the East Point chapter of the Ku Klux Klan in a series of floggings two years ago.

Mr. Duke said:

"There is a fundamental principle involved in this case. As long as this man is serving time, he is acting as a symbol of good government. He is proving that vigilanteism has been properly dealt with.

"The people who are here today in behalf of Slim Bryan are the same people who appeared in his behalf at the trial. The 23 deputy sheriffs who have signed a petition for him are probably the same ones who challenged anybody's authority to invade the secret precincts of these vigilantes.

WARNED OF ORGANIZATION

"A few days ago the Atlanta newspapers warned us of the formation of Vigilantes, Incorporated, which has been granted a charter in the Fulton Superior Court. One high in that organization asked me what I would think if a lot of cartridges and rifles were found in some Negro church. I told him I would say that they had been planted there to further the aims of some Vigilantes society that wanted to stir up racial strife.

"It is time for the citizens of the South to rise up and fight these Vigilantes, whether they masquarade under a sheet, as a mastersalesman for some asphalt company or are just a group of disgruntled and defunct politicians who are trying to filch money out of ignorant but loyal supporters of some individual or clique."

The secret society referred to by Mr. Duke was formed by John Goodwin, director of the State Department of Public Safety; John Cummings, of Donalsonville, Talmadge appointee to the State Board of Regents, and Fred Derrick, of Clayton, member of the Governor's staff.

CHARGES ATTORNEYS FORMER KLANSMEN

In his address, Mr. Duke charged that Harold Sheats, attorney for Bryan, and Vester M. Ownby, another attorney who made a statement for Bryan, urging clemency for him, were both former exalted cyclops of the East Point Klan.

"You can't prove that" interrupted Mr. Ownby.

"Maybe it was the Riverside klan you headed," corected Mr. Duke.

Mr. Ownby insisted upon proof and Mr. Duke reiterated his charge, then the matter was dropped.

Mr. Duke closed his argument with a charge that the planting of arms and ammunition to stir up race trouble for propaganda purposes was along the lines of the Nazi system in Germany.

SAYS BOYKIN WAS KLAN MEMBER

Mr| Sheats replied vigorously to the charges of Mr. Duke. He admitted that he was exalted cyclops of the East Point Klan in 1934 and 1933, and added that Mr. Duke's superior, Solicitor General John A. Boykin, also was a Klan member.

"At that time the only men in East Point who were not members of the Klan were those who couldn't get in," Mr. Sheats said "Almost every white man in Georgia was a member of the Ku Klux Klan. Some of the associates of Mr. Duke in Mr. Boykin's office were members. Mr Boykin himself has been a member. Justice Black of the United States Supreme Court was an official of the Klan in Alabama. He admitted it.

"I have never denied that I was a former official of the East Point Klan. The Atlanta Journal and the Atlanta Constitution reminded the public of that fact every day during the flogging trials. The Atlanta Journal has a photographer here today, at the invitation of Mr. Duke, to take a picture of him denouncing the Klan. They didn't take my picture."

DENOUNCES PAPERS

In denouncing the Atlanta newspapers for their crusade against the floggers, Mr. Sheats said:

"Why do you think Jim Cox came down here and established a newspaper?" He wanted to run the Klan out of Georgia and establish the Yankee crowd down here. He was red hot from Ohio when this case was being tried.'

"God knows what would have happened in Georgia if it hadn't been for the newspapers, which tried to enlighten the people as to true conditions in this state," Mr. Duke replied.

Mr. heats told the commission that Bryan was "just an overgrown country boy who had been dragged into this trouble by others." He said Bryan had served 12 months of a 24-month term, and had three offers of jobs in war industries, as an expert mechanic. He also said that Bryan's son was going into the Navy and would leave the family without means of support.

Numerous witnesses were offered to testify as to the previous good reputation of Bryan and his activities as a member of the East Point Christian Church.

The commission took the plea under advisement.

New Secret Order Of Talmadge Gang

OCT 31 1942

ATLANTA.—The white supremacy gang of defeated Gov. Eugene Talmadge has blossomed forth in a new secret organization called Vigilantes, Inc. The organization has just been granted a state charter.

The charter gives the organization "power to confer an initiative or decree ritualism, fraternal and secret obligations, words, grips, signs and ceremonies under which there shall be united only a membership of white male persons."

Its purposes as filed with the secretary of state are "patriotic, secret social and benevolent." One of the three organizers listed is State Highway Patrol Commissioner John Goodwin, Talmadge's personal bodyguard.

During the recent gubernatorial election, Goodwin ordered his state patrolmen to search all cars containing Negroes after 9 pm and to "use your blackjacks of them whenever you can." The other two organizers are John J. Cummings and Fred Derrick.

HYDE PARK, Sunday.—The other night I read a play by Seldon Rodman called The Revolutionists. It deals with the always fascinating story of Toussaint l'Ouverture and Henri Christophe. The President has always spoken of this episode in history and the extraordinary citadel Toussaint l'Ouverture built in Haiti, the ruins of which still exist. This play is good reading and I shall be interested to see it acted. These two men were great and more people should know their story.

Yesterday a young Syrian, Mr. Salmon Rizk, who has been speaking under the auspices of a magazine to various groups of young people in schools and colleges throughout th' country, came to see me. I can well understand that his life story would make his lectures interesting.

He was born in the mountains of Syria and, as a young man, came to a Midwestern city in the United States. He was an American citizen, but had to learn the meaning of America and suffered much before he became a citizen of the United States.

West Indians Not Behind the War Effort, Journalist Says

SEP 1 2 1942

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Ellis A. Williams, noted journalist, has just returned from a tour of the West Indies and is thus able to present a picture not previously seen of conditions there.)

By ELLIS A. WILLIAMS

NEW YORK—(ANP)—People of the West Indies believe that the war is one of the classes, not of the masses, and are, therefore, not supporting the war effort as the British Government would have the outside world believe.

West Indians, as a whole, feel that conditions under any other system certainly couldn't be worse and failure by them to see the overall picture—that fascism would nullify their slight gains under imperialism—can be laid right on the doorstep of the British Empire.

What Is a Traitor?

Time Magazine recently said: "The Japanese success in Hong Kong, Singapore and Burma, was due in a very large measure to the co-operation of the natives."

That these so-called traitors did not feel themselves part and parcel of the British Empire is the direct result of the policy of the Tory plutocrats that "natives" are subjects and not citizens. Does it not seem contradictory that a subject can be called a traitor in the sense of betrayal of citizenship?

United Nations Must Act

The people of the West Indies feel that they are not citizens and the British Government, along with their U.S. Allies, should counteract immediately this belief if they do not want a Hong Kong, Malaya, Singapore or Burma on their hands.

U.S. forces cannot properly defend their bases in the West Indies if they also have to worry about conditions brought about by internal politics in the islands.

Dual Standard

The government has not encouraged the full participation of the worker in order to prosecute the war effort. The worker is asked to give his money but not his ideas. He understands that the war concerns the total population and resents the attitude of the government in setting up a dual standard for blacks and whites.

Just before I left Trinidad, less than a month ago, the people were up in arms when they learned that the acting governor, Captain John Huggins, had refused to request from U.S. authorities priority rights for Aubrey Pankey, well-known concert singer, who had three war relief concerts scheduled in Trinidad.

The singer received the priority later after submitting to much official red tape.

Favoritism Charged

The government has acquired certain landed areas for the United States Army and Navy bases. The owners make claims for compensation. The "chosen" are paid at once—large and fabulous prices—but all others are made to await the consideration of a committee. The "chosen" represent the late Sir George F. Huggins, millionaire land owner.

Even in the armed forces there is discontent. There is no discrimination as practiced in the U.S. There is, however, an unwritten law that no colored person can rise above the rank of sergeant major. All commissioned officers are white and crack the whip with a vengeance. The rank and file soldier is defiant, but there is precious little he can do.

NEW YORK. —(ANP) — People of the West Indies believe that the war is one of the classes not of the masses and are therefore not supporting the war effort as the British government would have the outside world believe.

He understands that the war concerns the total population and resents the attitude of the government in setting up a dual standard for blacks and whites.

Take Trinidad for instance. By what right does Gov. Sir Hubert Winthrop Young patronize the bazaar given by Mrs. T. Gaddes Grant of Port-of-Spain's Park avenue to raise money for the "bomber fund," and deliberately stay away because of "the exigencies of the service," from the war benefit given by Miss Audrey Jeffers, M.B.E. a Negro long interested and actively participating in the social and civic life of the island.

Just before the writer left Trinidad, less than a month ago, the people were up in arms when they learned the acting governor, Capt. John Huggins, had refused to request from U. The singer received the priority later after submitting to much official red tape.

The worker in Trinidad is perturbed. He is beginning to wonder if he is to share in the peace after war is done or if he is to fight an even bloodier battle for economic freedom.

The government has acquired certain landed areas for the United States Army and Navy bases. The owners make claims for compensation. The "chosen" are paid at once—large and fabulous prices—but all others are made to await the consideration of a committee. The "chosen" represent the late Sir George F. A short while ago the writer was taking a walk by a field used by the cavalry unit of the local armed forces. A soldier, in putting a high spirited horse through his paces, was on the verge of being thrown. As he righted himself, the horse bolted and was off at breakneck speed. The soldier tugged at the bridle for all he was worth. More concerned about the horse than the rider, a white officer yelled: "What the hell are you doing to that horse? Stop it before I put you in the guard house?"

This soldier was brought up on charges. He was confined to barracks for 14 days and made to drill in the broiling sun at times of 100 degrees in the shade, one hour daily with a marching pack strapped to his back He later remarked:

"Is there any wonder Britian is getting her colonies tak her and her pants licked. This is the spirit of th in the West Indies.

groes in Cuba Fight the Axis

Cuba, like the United States and Brazil, is one of the several countries in the Western Hemisphere which has a relatively large Negro population. About one-third of its population is Negro. In the province (state) of Oriente of which Santiago de Cuba is the principal city, the majority of the population is Negro. In the province of Camaguey — the most important railroad center and agricultural region — the Negroes constitute a large portion of the population. Many of the outstanding patriots of Cuba's national struggles have been Negroes. Antonio Maceo, the great Negro liberator ranks among all Cubans along with Jose Marti. Among present-day leaders in the cultural and labor fields are Nicholas Guellen. outstanding poet and writer and Lazaro Pena, Secretary General of the National Confederation of Labor and Deputy. There are many cultural and civic organizations of Negroes in the island devoting their energies to the consolidation national unification of the country in the fight against the Nazis.

James W. Ford

The Communist Party of Cuba under the leadership of Blas Roca has always been the most dependable leader in behalf of colored citizens. Blas Roca is beloved among the Negroes as he is among Cubans as a whole.

DEC 19 [illegible]

On October 17-18, 1942 there took place at Havana, Cuba the second national convention of th [illegible] tion of Negro Societies o [illegible] was fully representative of all Negro organizations in the island. Over the last several years highly developed political activities against the Axis and for the rights of colored citizens have been conducted by the Federation of Negro Societies. On the other hand there have been unscruplous groups who have tried to demoralize the movement of colored citizens through a distortion of the fight against racial discrimination. Among these was one Juan Junco, Negro Trotzkyite, and his associates. It is notorious that recently Junco was killed by his own followers in a mix-up and provocation to disturb relations in teh country.

DEC 1

The second convention of Negro Societies took up as one of its main points the struggle against racial discrimination. It demanded the enforcement of complementary laws to effectively fulfill the constitutional rights of colored citizens. A broad program of action in which the Federation will collaborate was outlined to strengthen the "united social front" against disrupting schemers.

Among other points acted upon by the convention were the following:

A call to the Negro and to all the country to form the strongest national unity for the defeat of Nazi fascism;

Active participation of the Negro societies in the mobilization against speculators and profiteers;

Adherence to the act organizing Pedro Olivia Acosta, Ofelia Garcia Amable Zarate. It included an address by the president, Pedro Rojos Rodriguez, and by the directors, Manuel Vidal, Dr. Goyri, Dr. Olivia, Dr. Castellanos and others. They joined in implanting the idea of greater unity between the Societies of the Negro people, and all Cubans to win victory in this war against the Hitlerite barbarians and the urgent task demanded by the present critical moment. They gave special reference to those dealing with the fight against racial discrimination, in effectively fulfilling those constitutional precepts which guarantee the rights of the Negro people.

This brililant work by the Negro people of Cuba is heartening to the Negro people of the United States. It can be hailed by all people in the Western Hemisphere as a great step in strengthening Hemispheric solidarity against the Axis.

Also to be noted in strengthening of Hemispheric unity and solidarity is the announcement that Jacques Roman, internationally known and respected, Haitian writer, poet and statesman, has been appointed Haitian Minister to Mexico.

FEDERAL LAWS HUGE BARRIER

McNutt Reported As Favoring Puerto Ricans For Florida Harvest

By STEPHEN TRUMBULL
Herald Staff Writer

569

Importation of Bahama negroes for Florida's winter vegetable harvest is "out," but there is a possibility Puerto Rican laborers can be brought here, a spokesman for Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt told The Herald's Washington correspondent late Wednesday.

The announcement came at the end of a day during which the hard-pressed Florida growers had been led to believe that the importation from the Bahamas was receiving strong official consideration, and might come in time to banish their fears that they will be caught with thousands of acres of vegetables in the fields and only a fraction of the hands needed to harvest them.

The spokesman's statement was at variance with the assertion of Manpower Commissioner Fowler Harper in Washington that the commission neither discussed nor acted on the Bahama-Puerto Rico farm worker proposal.

NO WORD FROM CANNON

Even the Puerto Rican proposal, the spokesman indicated, had been "tabled for the present" after a late afternoon meeting of the manpower commission. The Bahama importation proposal evidently failed to secure even that much attention because, in the opinion of the spokesman, it would involve "red tape" under existing treaties and restrictions.

No word of hope for this Bahama plan could be obtained from the office of Rep. Pat Cannon of Miami, who placed the proposal before officials last June, or at the ofice of George Davis, public relations director for the United States Employment service.

The additional small hope for the Puerto Rican importations was based on the fact this is United States territory and the residents from that island could side-step many immigration restrictions which would have been imposed upon the Bahamians.

CALL MASS MEETING

Intervention of unnamed labor leaders against both plans was admitted by the spokesman. These, he said, were "convinced that imported laborers would work for lower wages than now prevail in this country." Ultimate decision was said to be in the hands of McNutt.

Meantime Dade county growers have called a mass meeting for 7:30 p. m. Friday at the Perrine school house at which they will urge a severance of all red tape and immediate action. Rep. Cannon has promised to be present and to carry their proposals back to Washington and before the necessary authorities.

Luther Chandler, of Goulds, farm consultant for the War Production board and spokesmen for farm groups in nine south Florida counties, is in the group calling the meeting. In a statement Wednesday he said that the Florida harvest could use 30,000 to 40,000 negroes as it reaches its peak. At the present time the harvest is on in only a few areas, other sections being occupied in plantings which require relatively fewer hands. Chandler estimated that the fear of the labor shortage at harvest time has resulted in a 50 per cent cut in tomato acreage and that the potato crop will be one-third off.

DENIES WAGE CUTTING

In Washington it was indicated that there still are differences in opinion as to the restrictions being placed on farm labor by the Farm Security administration. Farm operators fear that these differences combined with the aforementioned "red tape" and the objections of labor leaders, will bog down all plans until the not-so-distant time of simultaneous harvests.

Chandler denied that any wage-cutting was considered in the plan to import the Bahamians, which already has drawn strong support from the Duke of Windsor, governor general of the islands.

"They would be paid the prevailing wage rate in effect, and in no event less than 30 cents an hour," he said. This is the per-hour figure set by the F.S.A.

RIGHT OF ELECTING GOVERNOR PLANNED FOR PUERTO RICANS

JUL 4 1942

President Approves Move and Congress Leaders Favor Organic Law Change

PROPOSED BY TUGWELL

First Vote Would Be Held in 1944, or When Peace Comes if War Lasts Longer

By JAMES B. RESTON

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, July 3—President Roosevelt has approved a plan under which the people of Puerto Rico would elect their own Governors. At present the Governor is appointed by the President.

A responsible official said that because of the necessity of maintaining political stability near the important Puerto Rican naval base during the war, the date of the first election was set for 1944, the time of the regular insular vote. If the war lasts longer, he said, the first election of a Governor will be postponed until the close of hostilities.

56

The move is understood to have been proposed to the President by Rexford Guy Tugwell, the present Governor, who will continue in his post for the time being. Mr. Tugwell is in Washington and is believed to have obtained the full support of the State and Interior Departments for his plan.

Not only is the approval of Mr. Roosevelt required, but amendment by Congress of the Second Organic Act. It is understood that Congressional leaders have been approached and have advised Mr. Roosevelt that Congress would approve.

Second Historic Step

Such a step would be notable not only because it would rank with the grant of United States citizenship to the people as the second most important political development in the island since Puerto Rico was ceded by Spain in 1898 but because of its relation to the Atlantic Charter.

In the charter and in subsequent statements of foreign policy the United States and Great Britain reaffirmed the principle of freedom of peoples to their own form of government.

Among officials the conviction is held that the liberalization of colonial policy is a matter for discussion now rather than after the war. In this connection the reorganization of the government of India, giving a large majority on the Viceroy's Council and two posts in the British War Cabinet, was noted here with satisfaction.

Mr. Tugwell's proposal that the Puerto Ricans elect their Governor came at a time when he was being attacked as a "dictator" by the minority conservative party in the island.

It is expected to strengthen his hand not only on the island, where he has enjoyed the support of most members of the Legislature, but with the Resident Commissioner in Washington, Bolivar Pagan, who has opposed Mr. Tugwell ever since his appointment as Governor early this year.

If Congress approves amendment of the Second Organic Act, which stipulated in 1917 that the Governor of the island should remain in office as long as the President of the United States desired, it will bring about a change for which Puerto Ricans have been agitating for a long time.

From 1493, when Columbus discovered the island, until 1898 when the first Military Governor was appointed by the United States 142 men ruled the island for Spain, the first being Ponce de Leon, who conquered it. The United States gave the people the right to elect the nineteen Senators and thirty-nine Representatives of the island legislature and the right to elect the Resident Commissioner to the United States.

Under the Second Organic A

the United States kept the right to appoint not only the Governor of the island but the heads of the Departments of Education and Justice and the auditor and members of the Supreme Court. Under the Tugwell Plan the portfolios of Education and Justice will eventually be turned over to the people.

Arranging for Food Supplies

Secretary Ickes, who is charged with the administration of Puerto Rican afafirs in Washington, said Mr. Tugwell was in the capital "to make further arrangements for food and supplies for Puerto Rico," but he did not mention the proposed change the Interior Department's statement said:

"The Governor's trip was made at the suggestion of Secretary Ickes in order that Governor Tugwell might personally confer with various officials in Washington to make certain that Puerto Rico would receive the food and supplies necessary to take care of its requirements during the coming months. At the present time, war conditions in the Caribbean area have created stringent supply conditions in the island with respect to certain commodities.

"Secretary Ickes pointed out that in the present situation it is necessary to maintain the closest working relationship between Puerto Rico and Washington. He stated that he felt that Governor Tugwell would be able to resolve many problems which have been under consideration by various government agencies ocncerning supplies for Puerto Rico.

"Secretary Ickes said that Governor Tugwell will return to Puerto Rico at the earliest opportunity after the arrangements under discussion have been completed. Commissioner of Education Jose M. Gallardo has been designated Acting Governor pending the return of Governor Tugwell."

Haiti President Sees Equality

April 1942

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Declaring that "this war is an act of God and much good will come out of it," President Elie Lescot, of Haiti, predicted that the war will result in universal race equality, or at least unity and solidarity between members of all black races in every section of the world. President Lescot spoke at Howard University last Tuesday and was the guest of honor at a luncheon given by President Mordecai W. Johnson.

The Haitian President arrived by plane in the United States about two weeks ago for conferences with President Roosevelt and State Department officials regarding Haiti's role in the war in the Caribbean against Hitler. He is said to have informed Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles that his country is ready and willing to accept all the consequences in joining the U. S. in the war against Germany, Japan and Italy.

President Lescot was accompanied on his trip by M. Maurice Dartigue, minister of education; Colonel Philipe Cham, attorney-general; Lieutenant Roger R. Lescot, son of the President; and M. Daniel Hourtolou, private secretary.

Sees Hope of Rise for Lowest-Paid Workers, but Must Consult With Executive Council

U. S. TO BUY SISAL THERE

Fisheries Expected to Provide New Business—Duke Flies to Capital, Joins Duchess

JUN 24 1942

Before leaving for Nassau yesterday, via Washington and Miami, the Duke of Windsor summed up his accomplishments on his interrupted twenty-five day trip here at a press conference at the Hotel Waldorf-Astoria.

Laughing off questions that had to do with his future, the former King and "chief salesman of the British Empire" confined himself to the economy of the Bahamas, which he has governed for nearly two years. After outlining in a prepared statement his efforts in connection with the colony's sisal, fish, spice and shell jewelry possibilities, he was asked if he thought they would tangibly benefit the native population.

"I sincerely hope so," he said.

Sidney Farrington, a member of the Bahamas Economic Investigating Committee, which the Duke heads, interrupted to say that His Royal Highness was "too modest" and that he was sure the Governor's work would be "of very great benefit."

Another query grew out of the Duke's assertion in a radio broadcast on June 8 that the 80 cents a day wages on a big project in the Bahamas, which led to the rioting the week before, would be among the subjects he would discuss on his return to Washington. "I have good reason to believe," he told the natives over the air, "that I would not return empty-handed."

Sees Hope For Lowest Paid

Asked if his trip would lead to an increase in that rate of pay, he replied, "I'm afraid I cannot tell you that." He went on to say that aspects of the problem remained to be discussed with his executive council; and that in general, the wage situation was all part of the general one prevailing in the Caribbean area where Anglo-American work is being done, and where, apparently, the theory is that prevailing local rates must not be up set.

But, he assured interviewers "we have in mind" an increase at least for the lowest-paid unskilled workers, such as those who rebelled on June 1.

In his formal report the Duke disclosed:

"First, and perhaps foremost, we have reached a definite agreement on sisal. It has always been produced to some extent in the Bahamas and it can be produced in much greater quantities.

"Through the Defense Supply Corporation, one of your official agencies, the American and Bahaman Governments are about to conclude a definite agreement whereby grades are established, shipping conditions set up and a definite commitment arrived at whereby the United States will agree to buy all the sisal we can produce."

Regarding fisheries, the former monarch, who said he was trying to ignore the fact that it was his forty-eighth birthday, pointed out that Bahaman sponge growers, who were put out of business by a deadly sponge blight, were now turning to other types of marine life.

"The ingenuity of America's developers of the frozen food industry permits the building up of great new fisheries," he said,

DUKE DISCUSSES CRISIS IN ISLAND

Plan To Furnish Labor To Florida Farms Is Subject Of Talk

JUN 26 1942

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., June 25—(AP)—The Duke of Windsor Thursday discussed, with three Florida experts the possibility of sending 20,000 Bahamian laborers to the mainland to till fields and harvest crops.

The duke, governor of the Bahamas, was ready to leave for Nassau with his duchess after the talk, ending a visit to the United States which was interrupted June 1 by a labor riot on New Providence Island.

Luther L. Chandler, chairman of the Federal Agriculture War Board for Dade County and head of the County Defense Council's agriculture committee, told the duke that selective service and defense industries had depleted the labor supply to the point that some 200,000 acres of Florida citrus and truck-growing land would be dependent on outside labor by Fall.

JUN 26 1942

With Chandler were H. L. Cox, chairman of the American Farm Bureau Federation group for the county, and Cecil Barber, a Florida grower.

While Florida faces a labor shortage, the Bahamas are hard pressed because the war-induced collapse of the tourist business has thrown hundreds into unemployment. The duke's visit to the United States was concerned with the problem of greater use of Bahamian labor and products in this country's war effort.

Discussions here were tentative and entirely dependent on United States immigration regulations. At present a $500 bond would need be posted for each imported laborer, a factor called "prohibitive" by the duke.

JUN 26 1942

He asked that he be kept advised of developments of a plan to use Mexican labor in Western agriculture as a basis for discussing with crown authorities in London the use of Bahamian labor in Florida. London officials would handle negotiations with the State Department.

"thanks to which you will soon be enjoying some of our choicest delicacies—lobster tails and filets of various warm-water scale fish. Contracts covering this new industry have already been signed with one of the most important food-processing corporations in America.

Oil From Shark Livers

"Also, in the very near future, we have good reason to believe that the busines sof extracting oil from the livers of Bahaman sharks will soon be developed. Laboratory tests, just completed this past week, show that Bahaman shark livers contain sufficient essential vitamin content to make the extraction of the oil commercially worth while."

JUN 24 1942

The Duke was also optimistic on spices, pointing out, for example, that with the closing of the Dalmatian coast as a market for sage, the islands might well supply that commodity, among many related ones. He reported that the War Production Board had agreed to purchase "our very sizable stock of scrap metal." The Duke credited his American-born wife with having induced local stores to try Bahaman native jewelry.

Windsor announced that the Nassau Development Board, formerly primarily a tourist-promotion body, would henceforth be known as the Nassau Trade Development Board, and would represent the colony in all matters such as those he outlined.

He said he had been "flattered" by his three hours with President Roosevelt on June 14, but added nothing to what was known of their discussion.

JUN 24 1942

Shortly after the conference the Duke went to LaGuardia Field where he took a plane to Washington. The Duchess, with Mr. and Mrs. Herman Rogers, left Pennsylvania Station at 2:30 P. M. The Duke was scheduled to board the train at the capital.

West Indians Think Islands Are American

By ELLIS A. WILLIAMS

Special

Though the islanders have extended the glad hand to the Americans the jimcrow policies of the U. S. whites have occasioned many race riots which have not been permitted to reach the outside world. Many of the northerners, however, have taken down with them their broad and liberal viewpoints and have exhibited such by marrying the local and unmistakably Negro girls. The blame for the jimcro policy is laid at the door of both British and American officials and lies not so much with the personnel.

JUN 27 1942

•With the exception of one colored soldier who happens to be a native Trinidadian, there are no colored soldiers assigned to the island, and the natives are clamoring for Negro American soldiers to visit their shores.

Williams

Native leaders have expressed the thought that Negro American soldiers landing in Trinidad would serve as a means of knitting closer the race relationship between the two groups and create the much-needed better understanding between the American and West Indian Negro.

The pleas and requests have gone unheeded up to now by both the British and American governments.

They have heard and read of Negro officers, but have never had the opportunity of seeing one. With each landing of fresh troops from America, the natives swarm the wharves eagerly looking forward to the disembarkation of soldiers of their race, but have always been disappointed.

In the British Volunteer Force in the island there is a Chinese officer, but not a single Negro. That is much resented by the natives. They also resent the publicity propaganda circulated by the mother country of picking a Negro here and there in some military set-up in England and giving it world-wide coverage.

It was more than humorous when news reached the island that Negroes were being sent to Australia and whites to the West Indies.

Another Singapore, Burma

There is much concern in the "Land of the Humming Bird," as Trinidad is called by the higher-ups, about another Singapore and Burma being pulled in the event the enemy should invade this Caribbean isle.

The total indifference of the islanders to almost everything British has given great weight to American prestige with a native view of U. S. total occupation within the near future.

The large masses of the blacks and East Indians believe that the island is American already, signed away by the British, and that President Roosevelt is only waiting his time.

What the most politically advanced among them want is independence in a Pan-American Federation, and they would not mind Uncle Sam being Big Brother. But . . . and this is where they are united, if Uncle Sam does take over, let him leave his race prejudice behind.

There is a racial problem in the island, but there is no jimcrow to speak of, and blood is going to be shed if evil jimcrow accompanies Sam.

JUN 27 1942

The rich whites are pro-English. Apart from the economic disruption they do not resent the American naval entry, they are afraid of the blacks. They would much prefer the status quo.

With the Indians you have a curious situation. Nationalist sentiment on behalf of India is strong. Gandhi and Nehru are national idols and after all it is Britain who put Nehru in jail. Should America come out strong for Indian independence, the Indians in Trinidad would become violently pro-American overnight.

Plan Post-War Progress For West Indies

FDR Tells Of Aid To Poorer Islands In Carribean Area

NOV 7 - 1942

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Roosevelt disclosed on Tuesday of last week that plans are being considered for post-war improvement of economic and social conditions in the smaller West Indies Islands to enable them to take their proper place in world economics.

The President, at his press conference, said that something ought to be done about the smaller and poorer islands in ha Caribbean area and that as long as a year ago he had initiated discussions toward that end.

EXCEPT LARGE ISLANDS

Puerto Rico, Cuba, Haiti, and the Dominican Republic are excepted from rehabilitation plans being worked out for West Indies Islands because they are big islands and form separate problems.

President Roosevelt said he had talked again with Charles Tausig, United States chairman of the Anglo-American Caribbean Commission, and Sir George Gater, British colonial under secretary, on the subject, and found that the commission has drafted proposals looking toward the improvement of conditions.

NOV 7 - 1942

Briefly, they were extension of franchise, compulsory education and an effort to make the islands self-sustaining.

The islands under discussion are owned by several nations, Britain, France, Holland and Venezuela. The President said he hoped the French islands in the Caribbean would be included in the general picture.

On The Other Hand!

The return to New York en route home of the group of West Indian editors who were invited to London revived the story of their treatment by officials in the island of Bermuda. All of us deplore discrimination against Negroes, or any minority group, but anyone with the slightest knowledge of Bermuda who expected different was an optimist of the deepest dye. In the first place hotels in Bermuda are run either by Americans or for Americans, or both, which explains itself.

In the second place Bermuda is more of a white man's country than perhaps you can find anywhere. In the colonies of the Caribbean it is noticeable that the whites practice their subtle segregation by staying away from fields predominantly colored, which includes Sunday schools and even public schools. In Bermuda churches conduct Sunday school sessions for whites and other sessions for colored Up to a few years ago the Government maintained not one project for the edification or entertainment of its Negro populace. Of course there was the little schoolhouse here and there, mostly there,, one look at which convinced you just how much education was contained within its walls.

But the Bermudian Negro never worried about such conditions. To him and her "there is no place like BerMUda." Come to think of it they were right about that. The Negro Bermudian for the greatest part is a docile and ignorant individual whose height of ambition is to be a coachman or mason's helper and a chambermaid or salesgirl. One Negro postman and a civil service menial, two Negro doctors and not one Negro lawyer, in the city of Hamilton and everybody was quite satisfied. A vocation like printing, with good wages offered, received so scant consideration as to create a dearth for printers and necessitate the importation of other islanders.

The Bermudian Negro expends much of his energy disliking those who are known as West Indians, and an identity which he wants absolutely no part of. You work with them and be as friendly as possible but when they meet you on the street a Bermudian seldom "sees" the West Indian. These conditions existed to our knowledge some years ago and persons who have visited the Bermuda shores recently inform us that little change has taken place. Not long ago one of the younger generation emphatically reminded us that Bermudians resent being called West Indians. We told him that if he stayed here long enough he would discover it didn't make a damned bit of difference what he was called. He is back in Bermuda. Poor chap!

Unless the ideas of the Negro Bermudian have changed somewhat we can't see that the West Indian editors were in for much better courtesies at his hand than they received from the white officials.

Police Brutality In Virgin Islands Has Residents Indignant

JAN 1 7 1942

While plans were being perfected for a mass meeting of Virgin Island nat[illegible] St. Mark's Hall, 57 West 138th street, Sunday night, January 18, to protest against mistreatment of underprivileged classes and poor health facilities, a report was received about an unprovoked attack by the police at St. Thomas upon a native that has caused great indignation and a demand by relatives on the mainland that the matter be brought to the attention of the Interior Department, according to Ashley L. Totten, president.

Totten states that on New Year's morning the local "Gestapo" pounced upon Almero Jacobs with their clubs and beat him until one eye was knocked out and he has lost vision in the other.

Described as a quiet, unassuming young man who neither drank or smoked, Jacobs was on his way home when attacked. He is the sole support of an aged mother and a family, and the question arises whether or not the local authorities will compensate him, states Totten. JAN 1 7 1942

Speakers at the mass meeting will be Mrs. Mabel K. Staupers, R. N., and Dr. James L Wilson. Hulbert Finlay and his band will render a musical program.

Natives Used As Police

JAN 3 - 1942

West Indian Editor Says Southerners Were Not Sent

By EUSTACE GAY
Editor, The Phila. Tribune

Andre P. T. Ambard, Editor of the Port-of-Spain Gazette, published in Trinidad, British West Indies, has informed The Philadelphia TRIBUNE that a statement made by Drew Pearson and Robert S. Allen, in their nationally syndicated column under date of December 3, 1941, is "almost entirely, mischievously incorrect."

Pearson and Allen, in their column noted for its "inside information", had told their readers that the long, colorful career of Texas' famed Rangers was being capped by an assignment to keep order in Trinidad, where the United States has an air base.

The portion of the column for December 3 complained of reads as follows:

JAN 3 - 1942

"Texas' famed rangers have performed many unusual services in their long colorful careers, but none stranger than the one they are now tackling in the interest of national defense.

"A detail of 15 crack rangers have been borrowed by the Government to help keep order at the Trinidad island base loaned the United States by Britain as part of the deal for 50 over-age destroyers. JAN 3 - 1942

"Under construction in the jungles of the West Indies island is a $51,000,000 naval and air base. The terms of the agreement with Britain require the employment of native labor for the manual work, and because of the high wages paid by the two U. S. construction firms there has been considerable trouble among the natives competing for jobs. On several occasions there have been riots which the war-reduced constabulary could not handle.

"Because of Texas rangers' experience, Trinidad authorities decided to ask the State to lend a group to help the Trinidad constabulary maintain order. So far the rangers have been effective in preventing brawls among the natives, but if serious trouble should break out again, U. S. authorities are prepared to ask Britain for a change in the construction agreement to permit the importation of a certain percentage of American workers."

DENIAL AUTHORIZED

The article was sent to Ambard who was asked to state whether the statement was true, either in whole or in part; if not true as written, what were the facts; and what was the attitude of the Texas Rangers towards the natives? JAN 3 - 1942

"The matter is of such vital importance," Ambard wrote the TRIBUNE on December 24, "that I am mailing this letter by air, so that publicity may be given to it in the United States with as little delay as possible."

Stating that he had "the authority of the Trinidad Government for the facts contained" in his statement, Ambard wrote:

TEXAS RANGERS IN THE WEST INDIES

'It has been brought to my notice that statements have been published in certain United States newspapers that a group of Texas Rangers have been brought to this island (Trinidad) in order to help the local constabulary to maintain order.

"It has also been stated that 'so far the Rangers have been effective in preventing brawls among natives, but, if serious trouble should break out again, the United States authorities are prepared to ask Britain for a change in the construction agreement to permit the importation of a certain percentage of American workers.'

"The statement is, almost entirely, mischievously incorrect. The Trinidad Government has no reason to believe that any 'Texas Rangers' have been brought to the Colony, and, in fact, requires no help whatsoever in 'keeping order' in the colony.

"There is not, furthermore, a shred of truth in the paragraph relative to brawls or any desire of the United States authorities desiring to send any 'Rangers' to the island. JAN 3 - 1942

"As a matter of fact, the American authorities in the island are employing a certain number of local men as police over the natives, in order not to create difficulties, quite apart from their own Army and Navy Police who look after the soldiers and sailors, when ashore."

Battling Haiti

President Elie Lescot, president of Haiti, said this week that his country and his people were ready to die fighting for the cause of freedom rather than submit to the tyranny of Fascism. "We accepted in advance all the consequences of war," President Lescot said, "but we are certain that the victory of democracy is certain . . ." This expression is in accordance with that Haitian spirit which has been glowing for a long time and which was so magnificently personified in the little island republic's great revolutionary leader, Toussaint L'Ouverture.

Haitians Start Rubber Project; To Produce 30,000 Tons Yearly

JAN 28 1942

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(ANP)—According to Frank C. Magloire, chief of the division of agriculture in Haiti, the Haitian government in cooperation with the United States Department of Agriculture has set out vast rubber plantations in Haiti which will eventually employ 50,000 workers and produce 30,000 tons of rubber annually. This project was instituted to offset the present shortage of rubber.

Interviewed at Hotel Park Central here, Mr. Magloire explained that the project was under the management of a private company, the Societe Haiti Americaine de Development Agricule, with a capitalization of $5,000,000. Although begun recently, it is expected that the plantations will be in condition to export rubber to the United States by 1947.

According to Mr. Magloire, a special interest was taken in the development of the rubber plantations by Haiti's President Eli Lescot, who devoted considerable effort to its beginning, and last year sent samples of Haitian soil to the United States for examination.

"We owe everything to our president, Eli Lescot," said Mr. Magloire, "who in his desire to aid democracy has used every influence at his command to obtain satisfactory results in the great rubber experiment. It has definitely been established that rubber can be produced in Haiti."

The agriculture chief, who is also the owner of Haiti's largest radio station HHBM, and director of its biggest newspaper, Le Matin, said extensive plantings of the Hevea Brasiliensis variety had been made in the Cap Hatien and Jeremie districts. All seeds planted thus far have developed satisfactorily. At present no estimates are available concerning cost of producing rubber in the country but large quantities of cheap labor and quick transportations are on hand and it is held that the cost would be below that of synthetic rubber.

Marcus Garvey, Jr., Wins Scholarship At Age of 11

(Special Correspondence)

KINGSTON, Jamaica, B. W. I.—While the colonial government here refuses to heed the appeals of liberals throughout the island, and humane organizations in the United States, calling for the release of W. A. Domingo, militant labor leader, and continues its relentless policy of repression against native leaders who insist on practical demonstrations of democratic justice and fair play far the enslaved masses, before they go forth to die in defense of British imperialism, attention was sharply focused last week on a significant announcement of international importance.

From historic old Calabar College came the announcement that Marcus Garvey, Jr., the eldest of two sons of the late Marcus Garvey and Mrs. Amy Jacques-Garvey, his widow, has been granted a full scholarship to the college where he is pursuing higher studies at the age of 11.

The other son, Winston Garvey, 9 years old, is also displaying scholastic ability in the grammar school.

FATHER'S HEALTH FAILS

The world-famed father died of an asthmatic condition two years ago in London, England, where he was valiantly attempting to stage a comeback from his sumptuous retreat in the West Kensington District.

The stress of three years of imprisonment during his dramatic career (1917-1940), in the Tombs Prison, N. Y., 1922; at Atlanta Federal Pentientiary, 1925; and in St. Catherine's Prison here in 1930; plus blackout conditions and the foggy London climate proved too much for the rugged vitality of the founder and President General of the Universal Negro Improvement Association.

His body was cremated and placed in a vault to await interment in this his beloved island home after the war.

Mrs. Garvey and her two sons joined their husband and father in London but returned to Jamaica shortly before his death due to the boys' ill health.

The mother is an able speaker and competent writer and stenographer. Before her marriage to Garvey, she was his private secretary and adviser.

BUILDER AND ORGANIZER

Garvey's dynamic personality and ability as an organizer brought into being the U. N. I. A., popularly called the "Back-To-Africa" Movement which enrolled over 1,000,000 active members between 1917-1928, and influenced more than 3,000,000 in active followers and sympathizers.

The official organ, "The Negro World" reached a top circulation of 600,000 copies weekly, and was so influential in arousing natives of Africa and the West Indies against British imperialism, that special ordinances were passed in several colonies banning it as seditious and refusing admission of Gravey himself to these communities.

Garvey organized and financed two steamship lines; negotiated a colonization agreement with the Liberian Government through ex-president C. B. King on which the association spent over $150,000 in machinery and equipment; sent three delegations to the League of Nations; and operated factories, hotels, newspapers and other business enterprises in the United States and abroad—all of which gave employment to over 5,000 persons.

Hope Dies For W. Indian 'Political Prisoners'

APR 10 1942

NEW YORK—(A N P)—In a belated reply to a letter taken to London during the recent visit there of a part of West Indian journalists, the British embassy at Washington, D. C., sent the following communication this week:

"The ambassador has asked me to inform you that he has been requested by the secretary of state for foreign affairs to reply to your letter of October 20, 1941, addressed to Lord Moyne, at that time secretary of state for the colonies, concerning the imprisonment of certain persons in the British West Indies.

"Enquiries have been made as to the reasons for which these people were detained and I have been asked to pass the information on to you.

"Of the eight persons mentioned in your letter, one, Mr. Ulric Grant, was sentenced to a term of imprisonment under the ordinary law in 1938. The government of Barbados has now decided to exercise the prerogative of pardon and has ordered his release. Another, Mr. Williams, has been released on the recommendation of the local advisory committee, constituted in accordance with the local defense regulation under which his detention was ordered.

"The remainder was detained under local defense regulations equivalent to those existing in the United Kingdom; with the exception of Mr. A. Bustamente and Mr. U. Butler, all have exercised their right to make an objection to the advisory committee but in no case the committee recommended release. Both in Jamaica and in Trinidad, the chairman of the advisory committee is a judge of the supreme court.

"All these persons have been detailed under powers which also exist in Great Britain, and in these circumstances the secretary of state sees no jurisdiction for the enquiry which you suggest.

"As regards the letter addressed to Mr. Churchill by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, a copy of which was enclosed in your letter, you may be interested to know that after careful investigation of the points raised a full reply has been prepared and is now on its way to the association."

Passing the Duck

JUN 1 - 1942

Patos (Spanish for ducks) Island, a 170-acre dot in the Caribbean 3 miles off Venezuela, used to be one of the tiniest bits of the British Empire. The Foreign Office kept a retired Negro policeman from nearby Trinidad there as caretaker. All he had to do was run up the Union Jack daily. His family and his goats were the sole inhabitants. There weren't even ducks.

Britain originally claimed the islet under the 1802 Treaty of Amiens, which gave it Trinidad. But since 1904 Venezuela has disputed its ownership, and the squabble threatened the otherwise friendly relations between the nations.

On May 21 Britain did the noble thing: King George signed a bill ceding Patos to Venezuela free of charge.

TWO DIE IN LABOR RIOT AT NASSAU

Workers On U.S. Project In Bahamas On Strike For Higher Wages

LOOTERS SMASH STORE WINDOWS

Duke Of Windsor Rushes Home From Official Trip To Washington

NASSAU, Bahamas, June 2—(AP)—(Delayed By Censor)—Unskilled laborers on a large American project staged a demonstration in Nassau Monday, smashing show windows and looting fashionable stores, and two of the rioters were killed and others wounded before police and troops restored partial order.

JUN 3 - 1942

While the Duke of Windsor interrupted a business trip in Washington to hasten back, conditions remained unsettled.

A curfew from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. was established by the acting governor, Social Secretary W. L. Heape.

The demonstrators were protesting against wages of four shillings (about 80 cents) a day for unskilled labor on the project.

Laborers began marching into the city Monday morning. Their numbers increased as they approached the shops of fashionable Bay Street, which skirts the harbor and contains most of this tourist city's swank stores.

Show windows were smashed and widespread looting of liquors, expensive English fabrics and rare perfumes was reported.

British garrison troops were summoned, when local police were unable to control the situation.

By Monday afternoon order was partly restored in the downtown streets of this town of 22,000 population, which is capital of the Bahama Islands, but rioting continued in the suburbs into the night.

In the outskirts, a police station, fire engine and ambulance were burned.

There were several casualties among police and troops, but the government did not immediately make public their number.

Before the riot, the government had informed protesting labor leaders that the wage for unskilled labor had been fixed by agreement of British and American governments.

JUN 3 - 1942

Nevertheless, negotiations still were in progress when the demonstration started.

The Duke and Duchess had only just arrived in Washington when the incident occurred. When fully informed of the details, the Duke arranged to fly back here to his post as royal governor of the colony. The Duchess remained in Washington and continued her schedule.

The Duke's visit to the United States chiefly concerned economic conditions in the islands, over which he has been governor since August, 1940.

His term started during the time when the European war had not yet seriously disturbed the rich tourist trade of the Bahamas and spanned the period of United States entry into the war, which caused the native economy collapse.

Under his direction, an economic committee already had developed a program for relieving unemployment. He had planned for production of foodstuffs and sisal for rope-making along with other industries, so that the islands might continue to support themselves even though tourist trade no longer existed.

JUN 3 - 1942

These plans he brought to the United States, seeking help in marketing the products that could be exported. He also hoped to fit his people more closely into the wartime plans of the United States.

The Bahamas, with a population of about 70,000, stretch between the Atlantic and the Straits of Florida from a point about 180 miles east of Florida's lower tourist area to the eastern tip of Cuba.

The department's advices said that "the rioters smashed automobiles and shop windows and looted freely on Bay Street," the main thoroughfare of the island capital. The department issued the following statement:

"The American consul at Nassau, John W[illegible] reported to the State Department that on [illegible]1, laborers from the local air field struck for higher wages and rioted. The rioters smashed automobiles and shop windows and looted freely on Bay Street.

JUN 3 - 1942

"The consul reported at noon Tuesday that there still were some disturbances this morning, but by noon the military police had arrived and no further rioting was anticipated."

80 Face Trial In Nassau Riots That Killed Three

JUN 5 1942

Nassau, Bahamas, June 4 (AP).—Eighty persons will be tried for participating in widespread riots that cost three lives and extensive property damage here Monday, government authorities disclosed today.

The riots flared after unskilled laborers on a big American project started a demonstration against their 4 shillings (about 80 cents) a day wages.

The Duke of Windsor, who hurried back from Washington to occupy his post as royal governor, already h[illegible]rted negotiations in connecti[illegible] with the wage rate, which was fixed by agreement of the British and American governments.

About 1500 workers on the American project returned to work today, and except for the 8 p. m. to 6 a. m. curfew regulation which remained in effect, life in the colony appeared normal.

West Indians Lukewarm To British War Effort

56L

JUN 6 1942

By ELLIS A. WILLIAMS

Special

"The people of the West Indies are not supporting the war effort," is the consensus of opinion of this correspondent, who has just returned to the United States after spending seven-and-a-half months in the Caribbean. Interviews with the rank and file as well as high officials revealed that such reasons were due to local governmental indifference in regards to race discrimination; and the general anti-democraic attitude of the British Government in the full participation of the Negro in the struggle for human existence.

Williams

After having visited most of the islands, the writer sojourned in Trinidad, one of the largest and most modern of the group, long enough to have made an extensive survey.

This lovely and important island lies at the north-eastern and strategic corner of Venezuela and is destined to become the Gibraltar of the Western Hemisphere.

Its innumerable air bases command a vantage point to the entire Caribbean as well as stepping-off point to the European and African continents.

JUN 6 1942

Negroes Dissatisfied

Trinidad is British and is the largest oil and pitch-producing source in the Empire. Its production is 30,000 barrels a day and has made millionaires of Englishmen, but has kept the Negro in a state of dire poverty. They are dissatisfied and are today desirous of rallying to the Stars and Stripes and ready to divorce everything British.

A recent survey by the medical officer of health showed that out of 3,924 pupils examined, 2,798 suffered from some sort of ailment (from anaemia to yaws, a nutritional disease).

It was because of this condition that breakfast sheds were erected all over the island by a group of Negro social workers to serve school children and even adults free milk and hot lunches.

The coming of the Americans has brought to the island prosperity, the like of which has been unknown since 1530.

With a population of approximately a half million Negroes to a handful of whites who have been the exploiters heretofore, the Negroes of Trinidad are today enjoying the benefits derived from higher wages, better sanitation and faster inter-island transportation.

The workers in the several bases, the American sailors and soldiers along with the many civilians from the mainland who have taken up residence have transformed Trinidad from the pent-up aristocratic little British dependency to a flourishing and progressive colored mecca, lending the appearance of another Harlem.

Jimcro Landed Too

But with the coming of the Americans have also come Mr. Jimcro, who has been unwelcome and is now a source for much displeasure. While John Bull has always practiced the same kind of discrimination in a more subtle manner, Uncle Sam with his usual blunt form of administering it, is meeting with much opposition in this respect from Trinidadians.

Hotels, restaurants and other public places that have catered to all before the American semi-occupation, have glaringly refused to serve colored and are now endeavoring to be lily-white.

NASSAU RIOT

CAUSED BY HIGH FOOD PRICES AND NOT LOW WAGES

BY HORACE R. CAYTON

JUN 13 1942

SO, the Duke of Windsor had to interrupt his vacation and fly back to the Bahamas to quiet the blacks who were breaking out all over the place in labor riots. Now, isn't that just too bad. And to think, he could have gone on to Maryland and visited the Duchess' uncle, General Henry Warfield of Timonium. How those blacks can mess up a person's vacation.

Mr. Cayton

Of course, I don't know anything but what I read in the papers and they are notoriously unreliable when it comes to facts. However, from such papers as the New York Times, the Chicago Sun and a few others, I have been able to piece out this story. It seems that when the Americans took over the construction of some of the bases on the islands, American workers were paid a white man's wage of from one dollar to one dollar and sixty cents an hour. The Negro workers on the project were, according to one private source, receiving eighty-one cents a day. Both of these wages were for unskilled workers, so that an unskilled white earned say eight dollars for an eight-hour day in contrast to the blacks eighty-one cents.

HIGH PRICES CAUSE RIOT

Well, the natives didn't start to riot about that. Being good British subjects they were accustomed to bearing the burden of the white man. What got them confused and eventually hungry was the fact that prices began to go up. Shop keepers raised prices to take advantage of the high wages paid Americans and eventually it became impossible for the natives to even buy the absolute necessities of life with their eighty-one cents a day.

THE former Prince of Wales, who was at one time ruler of the mighty British Empire, was no Franklin Roosevelt and didn't have a Leon Henderson, so there were no ceiling put on prices—or if there was the price controls didn't work. At least we can say for sure they didn't work out to the satisfaction of the natives. When their bellies got as empty as their heads, the blacks started to break up things. Before the smoke had cleared away (or the smokes had been cleared away) two Negroes were killed, a native and a British soldier were seriously injured and about 30 others were treated for minor wounds.

LIST MORAL

The Duke of Windsor, apparently unaware of the disastrous effect this racial wage differential and rise in prices, was having on the native population of a few thousand and on a tiny island, had gone on a jaunt with the Duchess to the United States and had to fly back. That, I believe, is where I started three paragraphs ago.

WHAT'S the moral my friends? Well, I am telling you, not asking you. In the first place, England should thank the United States for producing the former Wallis Warfield. If the Duke can't run the Bahamas any better than he is doing where would the British Empire have come off. Moral number two is that the British Empire and America and all of the United Nations should begin to clean up these wage differentials. It looks bad and gives ammunition to the Japanese propagandist. Black people all over the world react unfavorably to these instances.

TIMES HINTS AT AXIS AGENTS

JUN 13 1942

But the payoff is the treatment of the story by the New York Times. The Chicago Sun seemed to realize that the eighty-one cents a day wage with rising prices could finally drive the natives to desperation. Not so the Times. They, my friends, discovered or hinted strongly that they had discovered, the presence of Axis agents. That's a mentality that has to be watched. Here these poor devils could not buy the bare necessities of life and finally rioted.

Instead of seeing and attempting to deal with that problem a certain mentality, like that of the New York Times in this instance, begins a witch hunt for Axis agents. Remember that the natives were not rioting for the principal of equal pay—they didn't move until increased prices made it impossible to eat. But still this can't be explained in terms of human want and human suffering—a certain mentality must discover Axis agents.

WHAT the Bahamas need is a good CIO union. What the New York Times needs, along with a lot of jittery people in this country, is a little common sense. They can't solve pressing social and economic problems and instances of rank injustice by discovering Axis agents. Sometimes a guy just wants a square meal and a decent place to live.

Duke Seeks Pay Rise for Native Labor—Will Go to Capital

MIAMI, Fla., June 12 (AP)—The Duke of Windsor arrived in the United States today to discuss with Anglo-American authorities a higher pay rate for unskilled Nassau native laborers who rioted June 1 in protest against wages of 80 cents a day.

The Duke and Duchess were in Washington when the disorders caused him to speed back to the Bahamas, of which he is Governor. His arrival there brought an end to the disturbances in which three rioters died, police and troops were injured and widespread damage occurred.

"Everything is fine in Nassau now," he said. "Otherwise I would not be here. The spirit of the men who are working on the project is very good."

He attributed the trouble to "many small things" whose cumulative effect caused the outburst, and said he was convinced there would be no recurrence. While there he arranged for the contractor on the large project employing the men to give them their midday meal free.

JUN 13 1942

The Duke will remain at Miami Beach until Sunday, then proceed to Washington to discuss workers' pay and other matters governing the Bahamas economy. He has made it clear that he does not seek a loan, but greater use of island labor and products.

He will join the Duchess after completing business in Washington, possibly meeting her in Baltimore.

Bahama Journalist Exposes Conditions Leading to Riots

JUN 13 1942

The Caribbean labor problem which was climaxed last week in Nassau, largest settlement in the Bahamas, with the deaths of at least two natives and scores wounded by guns in the hands of the colonial constabulary, was the direct result of the importation of white American labor, according to a statement to the Star-News by N. A. Meallet of the Nassau Guardian.

The British Government announced on Thursday that 80 persons will be tried for participating in the widespread outbreaks that cost lives and extensive property damage. The charge to be placed against the alleged rioters, all understood to be natives, was not disclosed.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in a telegram to President Roosevelt, urged that Negroes be paid the same wage as whites on West Indian defense projects. The telegram said, in part:

"Wage differentials based on race or color which caused the rioting at Nassau should be immediately abolished. These and other discriminations are creating unrest and bitterness throughout the West Indian islands on which our defense of the Panama Canal depends."

In explaining the riots which brought the speedy return of the Governor of the islands, the Duke of Windsor, from his proposed vacation in the United States, Mr. Meallet said:

"The matter definitely is a question settled only by consideration of the maladjustment of labor. The standards of living in the islands is far below that in America. Labor has been greatly underpaid. It has not been able to meet the rising cost of commodities brought about by importing into the islands defense projects unskilled white American labor which commands wages per day in excess of the standard weekly stipend paid the native workers."

JUN 13 1942

Several months ago, when many of these projects designed to bolster American defenses in the islands of the Caribbean were still in the blueprint stage, that the British labor procurement officials banned American Negroes from employment. The excuse offered was that the natives would resent the wages paid the American Negroes if their own pay was not proportionately raised.

Conditions in the islands since the war cut off the lucrative tourist and export trade with the result that conditions have become steadily worse. Hence, the British authorities welcomed the American defense projects but made it mandatory that although native labor was to be employed as far as possible, the prevailing wage for the natives must be maintained lest the economy of the islands be completely disrupted.

"It has been understood," Mr. Meallet said, "that unskilled labor has a per diem minimum of five shillings. In American money that's about 96 cents. When the American contractors began to swarm over the islands they sought to have the minimum eliminated in favor of the same 96 cents as a standard wage.

"This brought on greater discontent among the natives. A few weeks ago a commission was set up to investigate labor conditions and make the necessary recommendations. For some unknown reason nothing was done and it became increasingly clear that riots and reprisals were imminent.

"Jealousy between the American laborers and the native workers increased, but it was natural because the Americans, in the minority, had been receiving more than $1 an hour. Shopkeepers, anxious to take advantage of the face that American workers had taken the place of the lost tourist trade, raised their prices to exhorbitant levels. Naturally, it was impossible for the majority of the natives to get many of the things that they had previously enjoyed."

Mr. Meallet, who has been employed in almost every department of the Nassau Guardian for the past 30 years, said that there is no compulsory military service laws in the islands. Several Negroes from Nassau have enlisted and have been accepted in the R. A. F., he said.

HAITI'S FRENCH PRIESTS

The recent visit of the highly esteemed Haitian President Elie Lescot to the United States brought to light a dangerous situation that has plagued the Caribbean republic since its declaration of war against the Axis.

French Catholic priests in Haiti, it appears, have not hesitated to use their influence to undermine Haitian loyalty to the United States. They have made themselves willing tools of the Vichy government by spreading subversive propaganda in schools and churches under their parochial supervision.

MAY 2 1942

For years Haiti's best schools have been under unchecked authority of the French priests whose influence over the minds of young Haitians has been incomparable. Since Catholicism from the early days of this black republic has been the dominant religion, it is not difficult to understand the widespread and deep-rooted social and religious discipline exercised by the Catholic church. This discipline does not limit itself to prescribed areas of traditional religious authority, but invades without opposition the civic and political life of the Haitian masses. Thus after years of uninterrupted orientation of the thinking of the native population, the Catholic clergy of Haiti has become a moral as well as political force capable of challenging the authority of the state.

MAY 2 - 1942

This situation coupled with the gravity of the international crisis makes it imperative that Haiti rid herself of the insidious power of the French priests and replace them with Catholic clergy from the United States. This, among other matters of territorial security, was the mission that brought President Lescot to America last week.

Himself an ardent friend of the United States, having been the most popular Haitian minister to represent his country in Washington prior to his election last July to the presidency, Lescot experienced no difficulty in convincing the American State department of the necessity for fortifying the Caribbean outpost against internal and external attacks.

MAY 2 - 1942

Haiti is very important to our hemisphere defense. For, she guards one entrance to the Caribbean and Panama. But Haiti's internal lot will not materially improve if the State department allows American priests of the stamp and stripe of the incorrigible Father Coughlin to replace unscrupulous French priests.

Sees No Hope For Domingo

MAR 28 1942

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Hope for the relase of W. A. Domingo, New York West Indian nationalist leader, now in concentration camp in Jamaica, grew dimmer this week and it is likely that it will be abandoned altogether.

The British Government clarified its position regarding political prisoners held in concentration camps in the West Indies through the British Embassy in a report issued here this week.

The Government's action was taken as a result of representations made to the Secretary of State for the Colonies through prominent members of the West Indian delegation of newspapermen who visited London last Fall.

"Of the eight persons mentioned," the Government's statement said, "one, Mr. Ulric Grant, was sentenced to a term of imprisonment under the ordinary law in 1938. The Governor of Barbados has now decided to exercise the prerogative of pardon and has ordered his release. Another, Mr. Williams, has been released on the recommendation of the local advisory committee, constituted in accordance with the local defense regulations under which his detention was ordered.

"The remainder were detained under local defense regulations equivalent to those existing in the United Kingdom. All have exercised their right to make objections to the advisory committee, but in no case the committee recommended release. Both in chairman of the advisory committee is a judge of the Supreme Court.

MAR 28 1942

"All these persons have been detained under powers which also exist in Great Britain, and in these circumstances the Secretary of State sees no justification for an inquiry."

In the meantime, while Alexander Bustamente, Jamaica's aggressive labor leader, has been released, Domingo, self-government advocate, who was sent to concentration camp about two years ago while on his way on a ship back to Jamaica, is still behind bars.

General Trujillo Is Elected President Of Dominican Republic

MAY 23 1942

By HENRI Ch. ROSEMOND
U.S. Representative, Haitian Press

As a result of the national petition of the early part of this year, General Raphaelo Leonidas Trujillo-y-Molina was elected by an overwhelming majority of votes as President of the Dominican Republic, on Saturday, May 16.

President Eli Lescot, of Haiti, and General Batista, President of Cuba, were among the first to cable their congratulations to General Trujillo.

May 16 is undoubtedly a lucky date for General Trujillo for most of his outstanding adventures and endeavors either started or ended on May 16 from his early political venture to date. On May 16, 1934, he was re-elected by a huge majority of votes as President of the Dominican Republic. In August, 1938, at the expiration of his second term, the General decided not to run again but to devote his time to buildirg up his country.

Since May 15, 1941, the inauguration of President Elie Lescot of Haiti, General Trujillo has made two trips to the sister republic seeking mutual and good neighbor understanding which ended in March with a new trade treaty between the two republics as well as a cementing of friendly relationships.

There are one and a half million subjects in San Domingo.

Duke's Return To Bahamas Halts Rioting

Business Resumed; Governor's Action Not Yet Decided.

JUN 4 - 1942

NASSAU, Bahamas, June 3.—(AP)—The swift return of the Duke of Windsor to the island he governs so soothed tempers which flared to the point of rioting that quiet returned and business was resumed today.

Soldiers still patrolled New Providence island and a curfew remained in effect after Monday's civil disorders that resulted in smashed windows and looting in Nassau's Bay street, the capital's principal shopping center.

Two rioters were killed, gunfire and casualties were reported among police and troops called into action when the situation got out of hand.

JUN 4 - 1942

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor were in Washington when protests over a pay rate of four shillings, or 81 cents, a day brought rioting. The Duke flew back and began a round of conferences which continued today. What measures he will take had not been revealed.

Bay street looked as though a hurricane has swept through as storm shutters covered gaping windows and doors.

Windsors Separated on Wedding Anniversary

NASSAU, Bahamas, June 3.—(AP)—Today is the fifth wedding anniversary of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, but they can't celebrate it together.

The Duchess remained behind at Washington yesterday when the Duke was called back from a trip to the United States because of the labor riot in this British colony of which he is governor.

It is one of the few times the former king and "the woman I love" have been apart since their marriage in France climaxed one of history's great romances.

LABOR RIOTS CALL WINDSOR TO NASSAU

He Flies Back to Post as Wage Protest Leads to Pillaging Quelled by Troops

JUN 3 - 1942

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, June 2—An outbreak of rioting at Nassau in the Bahamas, which assumed the proportions of a labor revolt and led the Duke of Windsor to fly back to his post, was suppressed as of noon today, according to reports received by the State Departmen.

The rioting, which began Sunday night or Monday morning, according to varying reports, and ended at noon today, at least in Nassau, led to pillaging and oher acts of violence in which at least two laborers were killed and many wounded. Strict censorship prevailed and all reports emanating from the Bahamas were delayed.

Late his evening he State Deparment issued the following report:

JUN 3 - 1942

"The American consul at Nassau, Mr. John W. Dye, has reported to the Department of State that on June 1 laborers from the local air field struck for higher wages and rioted.

"The rioters smashed automobiles, shop windows and looted freely on Bay Street (where the principal department stores and shops are located).

"The consul reported at noon today that there were still some disturbances this morning but by noon military police had arrived and no further rioting was anticipated."

It was presumed that the statement about further rioting applied to Nassau, since official circles feared an outbreak of riots on other islands in the Bahama group of 2,000. Most labor in the islands is Negro and the Negroes far outnumber the whites.

Axis Influence Scoffed At

Officials in Washington denied reports current that Axis agents had paid agitators to create disturbances or that Axel Wrenner Gren, Swedish industrialist and friend of Reich Marshal Hermann Goering, who has interests in Nassau, was involved.

The Duke decided to fly to his post by special plane after a luncheon with President Roosevelt at the White House yesterday. The Duchess remained here, but this afternoon went to Maryland. She will consult physicians at Johns Hopkins Hospital while a guest of her uncle, General Henry Warfield, at suburban Timonium.

JUN 3 - 1942

The former King, governing now over a very small part of the empire over which he once reigned, landed at Nassau about noon, uncertain whether he would find the revolters or the authorities in control, but determined to re-establish peace. A peculiar aspect of the long-pending result was that it occurred only a short time after he left the islands for a brief visit to the United States.

Although reports from Nassau, passed by the censorship there and approved for publication by censorship authorities in Washington indicated that the rioting occurred at an American air base, it seemed that this told only part of the story.

Under the treaty with Britain, by which the United States obtained bases on this and other British islands, it was provided that the United States should pay the highest prevailing wages.

A high authority insisted, however, that the United States was paying much bigger wages, $1.04 to $1.60 an hour in Puerto Rico. The top wage in Nassau for unskilled labor is 81 cents an hour.

It was believed in some diplomatic quarters, despite denials here, that Axis agents were seeking to take advantage of American and British wage differentials to create disorders.

JUN 3 - 1942

British Troops Aid Police

NASSAU, Bahamas, June 2 (Deayed by Censor)—Monday morning laborers on vast American projects marched into the city of Nassau to demonstrate and protest the wages of 4 shillings a day being paid to unskilled labor. The demonstrators were joined by a rabble and swept Bay Street, smashing show windows and lotting stores catering to the tourist trade of liquors, expensive English fabrics and rare French perfumes.

British garrison troops were summoned and the Riot Act read when the situation got beyond control of the police. Some order was restored Monday afternoon, but the rioting continued in the suburbs at night.

JUN 3 - 1942

Two rioters were shot dead and others wounded, and there were several casualties among the troops and police. A police station and fire engine and ambulance were burned in the suburbs.

Governor W. L. Heape declared curfew from 8 to 6 o'clock nightly.

Prior to the riots government officials had informed labor leaders that the wages were fixed by agreement between the British and American Governments. Negotiations were in progress when the riots started.

FORESIGHT IN HAITI NOW YIELDING RUBBER

Old Trees Give 350 Pounds Monthly—Million More Planted

MAY 26 1942

WASHINGTON (Science Service)—Rich, verdant Haiti, where once the tom-toms of horrid Voodoo rites boomed, has settled down to hard work among her once-abandoned rubber trees, and in cooperation with this country is producing the precious stuff at the rate of 350 pounds per month.

Some 2,500,000 new rubber plants have been set out, and estimates reveal at least 100,000 acres which could give the United States a large near-by supply. Haiti is tapping her old trees with newest, proved techniques, experimenting with splitting Hevea seeds to get two plants from one seed, growing rubber seedlings.

MAY 26 1942

Behind this forward-looking enterprise is a unique organization, begun well before the war in the Pacific. It is called the Societe Haitiano-Americaine de Developement Agricole — or the Haiti-American Society for Development of Agriculture. Popularly known as SHADA, it was formed last year and is a cooperative venture between this country and the South American Republic which a few years ago faced economic disaster from wartime loss of trade.

Foreseeing the Pacific tragedy, SHADA began preparing itself to supply rubber, fibers, drugs, now cut off from the Netherlands Indies, Philippines, Malaya and India. Today SHADA rubber plantations have a head start on the big job of increasing rubber planting in the Americas; her rubber enterprise is surpassed only by the Ford plantations in the Amazon valley.

Major operations, as reported by SHADA's youthful president and general manager, Thomas A. Fennell, are:

Bayeux Division—This plantation has nearly a million growing rubber plants and about 2,500,000 rubber seeds. Tapping of old rubber trees at Bayeux has started.

Forests Division—A sawmill at Morne de Commissaires has been turned over to SHADA for operation. In the last three months of 1941 the mill cut about 100,000 board feet of pine lumber. A second and larger mill is being installed.

Grand'Anse Division—A state-owned tract of 30,000 acres under preparation. About 1,000,000 Hevea seeds planted in nurseries.

SHADA also is attempting to develop handicrafts for Haiti's large labor supply. Samples have been sent to New York importers.

SHADA hopes the battle of production may be won in the American Hemisphere through just such cooperative ventures among the Americas as itself.

The Duke Gets a Sample

JUN 15 1942

One of the world's stubbornest problems had to be faced, in sample form, last week by the once debonair Prince Edward, Duke of Windsor. He had given up the throne of Britain, and as Governor of the tiny Bahamas he might have been expected to escape grave political difficulties. At the beginning of the week, indeed, he was not even in the Bahamas. He was in the U.S. preparing to celebrate the fifth anniversary of his marriage to his chic Duchess, and he had just lunched at the White House with Franklin Delano Roosevelt. But, with the persistence of a bad conscience, the problem pursued him to his Washington ease, and presently the Duke had left his Duchess and was flying back to the Bahamas.

What had happened was that some 2,500 Bahamian natives had rioted down Nassau's swank Bay Street, smashing shop windows, helping themselves to expensive liquors, French perfumes, fine English fabrics. Said one excited spectator: "It was just like Pearl Harbor—it came so suddenly." Panicky merchants lowered their hurricane shutters and the British garrison police bore down on the mob. There was wild street fighting. Three of the rioters were killed, 40 arrested. The mob gradually retreated, with its stolen liquor, to native Grant's Town. But peace was not restored until the Duke returned and promised that something would be done about his problem:

What had started the riot was a wage differential, on a U.S. defense job, between native, colored Bahamians (81¢ a day) and imported, white Americans ($1.00 an hour). Promised the Duke: he would return to Washington and take up the matter with the proper Anglo-American authorities, with "a strong feeling that I will not return empty-handed."

WEST INDIAN REVOLT

The brief but violent labor revolt in Nassau, Bahamas, last week was to be expected.

Both United States and West Indian Negroes protested from the very beginning against the unholy agreement between British and American authorities establishing a sharp wage differential between white and black workers employed on U.S. bases. They were unheeded.

JUN 13 1942

In Brmuda, Jamaica, Trinidad, Nassau and at other places where American installations are being established in accordance with the Lease-Lend Agreement, black workers are receiving less than white workers both on skilled and unskilled work, although both must pay the same for the necessaries of life.

In Nassau, black workers revolted against a daily wage of only 81 cents for unskilled labor and probably not much more for skilled labor, which also is the average black wage elsewhere in the British West Indies paid by U.S. contractors.

Local planters [illegible] employers in all the islands violently protested against black workers receiving more than the highest Negro prevailing wage, and American authorities agreed with them.

At most the skilled black workers got no more than $2 or $3 a day, when they are employed at all, while alongside them are white men getting three times that much or more, and often these white men are aliens—Americans.

Skilled Negro workers from the United States who would have to be paid the same salary as white skilled Americans, have not been engaged for work in the West Indies, thanks to an "understanding" between the British and American authorities, which both sides deny.

With the cost of living skyrocketing in the Caribbean, thanks to the traditional importation of certain staple foodstuffs and the increasing severity of submarine warfare, a living wage is imperative, and should either be increased with each rise in the cost of living or the latter should be frozen.

In any event, there [illegible] excuse whatever for the United States catering to the whims of local island exploiters and maintaining this wage differential based on color.

JUN 13 1942

Black labor in the West Indies and elsewhere should receive the same wages and the same opportunities as white labor, if this is to be regarded as a war for democracy.

---

Nation
New York, N. Y.

THE STRIKE OF NEGRO WORKERS AT NASSAU in the Bahamas received little attention in the American press, which noted chiefly its effect in cutting short the Duke of Windsor's official visit to Washington. But we ought not to ignore the fact that the strike and the rioting that followed were the result of long-standing dissatisfaction with the conditions of work on American defense projects on the island. In accordance with our customary practice, local unskilled workers, most of whom are Negroes, have been receiving the island's prevailing wage of four shillings—about 81 cents—a day. In contrast, imported American workers, mainly whites, have received a dollar an hour and up. The local workers naturally resented such an unreasonable disparity in wages, and they were further angered by the tendency of local shopkeepers to take advantage of the high wages paid the Americans by raising their prices. These facts, which are bad enough, have been allowed to leak through the censorship. What has not been told is the degree to which the situation was made worse by American treatment of the proud, sensitive Negroes of the Bahamas. Our military authorities appear to be trying to hush up the entire matter lest unpleasant issues be raised; but it is far too serious for that. For the sake of racial harmony here at home, as well as of good relations with our allies, in the Caribbean, the whole affair should be promptly investigated by a Congressional committee.

BULLETIN

JUN 13 1942

NASSAU, Bahamas.—Conditions returned to normal here Wednesday following two days of rioting by native laborers in protest against wages paid on a large U.S. project.

NASSAU, Bahamas— Workers numbering from 2,000 to 3,000 smashed shops along Bay Street, the city's principal thoroughfare, on June 1 in rioting that followed their march to protest wages of four shillings (about eighty cents) per day paid natives employed at unskilled tasks at an American airfield project near here.

The Duke of Windsor, governor of the Bahamas, arrived here by plane the following day from Washington, where he had gone, accompanied by the Duchess, on business said to include discussion of the native wage scale on American project. Local government officials advised natives that the low wage scale had been set by an agreement between the British and American Governments.

Keep News Quiet

Two natives were killed when fired upon by British soldiers. Casualties included a native and soldier, seriously wounded, and thirty white men, including some soldiers, who were treated for minor injuries. Rioters reportedly carried sticks and a few cutlasses.

JUN 13 1942

News of the conflict was not made known until the day of arrival of the Duke, who went immediately to work and was without comment to make. Disturbances were reported as continuing on the second evening in Grants Town, colored suburban section, where a police station, fire station and ambulance were burned.

W. L. Heape, acting governor in the Duke's absence, decreed a curfew until restoration of order. The Duke has been governor of the island colony since late in 1940.

Trouble in Nassau

The Duke of Windsor and his American Duchess arrived in Washington on June 1. His Royal Highness, now Governor of the Bahamas, was on a business trip in behalf of his tropic bailiwick: since Pearl Harbor had cut off the tourist trade, he sought markets for sisal and other island products.

JUN 15 1942

Bad news from home spoiled his plans. Windsor stayed only for a "family" lunch at the White House, then, leaving his wife behind, flew back to Nassau. In his absence, some 2,000 natives working on American defense projects had struck for higher wages and marched on Nassau. Riffraff joined them. Brandishing sticks, knives, and bottles grabbed from a parked truck, the mob swept down Bay Street, the capital's main thoroughfare along the waterfront, smashing and looting liquor shops and other stores.

The garrison was called out, the Riot Act read, and in the melee two natives were killed. Later another was shot to death by a sentry during the nightly curfew. To the returning Duke, Nassau looked like a hurricane's target. Only one merchant had taken out riot insurance; his shop was one of the [illegible] unscathed.

The Bahamas contain one of the bases the United States obtained from the British in its swap of 50 destroyers in 1940. That is the root of the trouble; unskilled native labor is paid only 81 cents a day, while imported American workers earn more than $1 an hour. Moreover, shopkeepers have boosted their prices to take advantage of the high wages paid Americans. And in Nassau 81 cents doesn't go very far, even for a native. Food is scarce and costs more than anywhere in the United States. Traditionally indolent by nature, the islanders keep hunger away by tilling a bit of land, fishing, or picking up mangoes and coconuts. In recent years, however, they have displayed an increasing tendency to follow leaders, politically and economically conscious, who have goaded them to revolt.

'The Four Freedoms in Bahamas

JUN 18 1942

• Such terror and violence as was used against the Negro population on the Bahamas was not only disgracefully unjust but a blow against international unity to destroy Hitler.

According to reports, Bahaman workers, most of whom are Negroes, receive a wage rate of eighty-five cents a day for laboring on American bases; while American common laborers receive one dollar an hour. Such a discrepancy is not only to divide Negro and white workers; it is a miserable, starvation wage for the Negroes, ill-befitting any civilized nation.

When the Negro workers sought to improve their wage, and were provoked into a strike by the recalcitrance of the employers, they were set upon by the Bahaman police, four of them killed and several wounded. This contravenes the most elementary rights of labor.

Responsibility for this shame falls upon America, Britain and upon the latter's representative, the Duke of Windsor. When America turned over destroyers to Britain, in return for bases on Bahamas and elsewhere in the Western hemisphere, America assumed responsibility for conditions which would, at least, facilitate building of these bases. For the bases are to defend the United States in particular, as well as the interest of the rest of the United Nations.

It appears, however, that certain big employers and corporations which control construction on the Bahamas are far more interested in whipping up terror and hatred against the Bahaman people, and in keeping them on coolie rations, than they are in defending America and defeating Hitler. At the cost of criminally shooting down Negro workers, they insist upon depressing labor standards on the Bahamas to the lowest possible levels.

Wages and working conditions on the Bahamas clearly flout "freedom from want"—one of the four freedoms enunciated by President Roosevelt. Workers cannot produce most effectively to beat Hitler where they do not have a living wage. Such conditions and the terror used against the Negro workers, only plays into the hands of Hitler and his agents, who will try to use it to split anti-Axis unity.

THE STRIKE OF NEGRO WORKERS AT NASSAU in the Bahamas received little attention in the American press, which noted chiefly its effect in cutting short the Duke of Windsor's official visit to Washington. But we ought not to ignore the fact that the strike and the rioting that followed were the result of long-standing dissatisfaction with the conditions of work on American defense projects on the island. In accordance with our customary practice, local unskilled workers, most of whom are Negroes, have been receiving the island's prevailing wage of four shillings—about 81 cents—a day. In contrast, imported American workers, mainly whites, have received a dollar an hour and up. The local workers naturally resented such an unreasonable disparity in wages, and they were further angered by the tendency of local shopkeepers to take advantage of the high wages paid the Americans by raising their prices. These facts, which are bad enough, have been allowed to leak through the censorship. What has not been told is the degree to which the situation was made worse by American treatment of the proud, sensitive Negroes of the Bahamas. Our military authorities appear to be trying to hush up the entire matter lest unpleasant issues be raised; but it is far too serious for that. For the sake of racial harmony here at home, as well as of good relations with our allies, in the Caribbean, the whole affair should be promptly investigated by a Congressional committee.

Duke of Windsor Seeks Higher Pay For Natives

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Following a three-hour luncheon conference with President Roosevelt on Monday, the Duke of Windsor, Governor of the Bahamas, said that American troops did guard duty during the recent riots of native workmen in the Bahamas.

It was said that the Duke was here to seek a new deal for laborers who rioted because they are receiving 81 cents a day for working on an American project, while Americans employed on the same project and doing the same work are being paid $1 an hour.

Toote Returns To Assembly

Brother of Bishop Elected After 7 Years' Absence

564

NASSAU, Bahamas—Thaddeus Agustus Toote, prominent barrister, justice of the peace and former attorney general, was among the successful candidates for seats in the House of Assembly in the recent elections. Mr. Toote was elected senior representative for the Southern District of New Providence.

An old and respected member of the House, Mr. Toote returns to the island Legislature after an absence of seven years and with a previous experience of 20 years as a member of the House of Assembly. He has been a member of many civic boards and organizations and is now a member of the Board of Education. Mr. Toote is a brother of Bishop Frederick Agustus Toote of the African Orthodox Church with his headquarters in New York City.

Other candidates elected to seats in the House included: Bertram Cambridge, a new personality in politics, who will represent the Eastern District as senior member; Wilfred G. Cash and R. W. Symonette. Mr. Cash has served in the House from 1925 to 1935, and Mr. Symonette has served in the House since 1935. Some months ago, he was appointed a member of the Governor's Economic Advisory Committee by the Duke of Windsor, Governor of the Bahamas.

The Puerto Ricans Gain Their Point

"The Courier Journal"
Louisville, Ky.

JUL 1 1942

5-64

Puerto Rican agitators will have gained one definite step if, as Washington reports, the expected resignation of Governor Rexford Tugwell is followed by the appointment of a Puerto Rican to the post. Judge Martin Travieso, of the territorial supreme court, is mentioned as Tugwell's probable successor.

Scholarly Dr. Jose Miguel Gallardo, World War veteran and Commissioner of Education, held the position temporarily when Admiral Leahy retired two years ago to accept the Vichy assignment. At that time, a Presidential year, political agitation ran high in Puerto Rico, with the turbulent Nationalists demanding independence, a coalition party asking for statehood.

All factions naturally desired one of their own people in the chief executive office. No doubt, aiming at a "political truce" in the islands, as the Washington dispatch relates, President Roosevelt is selecting a man who can begin his administration with the respect and confidence of all elements. He will need temperament and capacity to retain them; for 1,700,000 souls inhabit mountainous Puerto Rico's 3,500 square miles and most of them are poverty-stricken beyond our comprehension. The population has practically doubled since we took the island from Spain 44 years ago. No use to review Tugwell's stormy tenure; political unrest can't be allayed so long as economic distress exists, and education only aggravates it.

Whatever the future has in store for them, Puerto Ricans are well within their rights in demanding a Puerto Rican for Governor. He will share their viewpoint, and such an appointment would not merely be a concession to their pride, it would be in keeping with American traditions. Our policy toward dependencies has been territorial, not colonial, directed to the extension of self-government.

Puerto Rico, on the rim of the Caribbean, is too important to the defense of the Panama Canal for us to consider the relinquishment of sovereignty, as the coalition party recognized; but that enjoins upon us the duty of adopting a permanent progressive policy for improving the living conditions of the masses there. They are about as miserable as the poorest of the inhabitants were when Ponce de Leon dropped anchor in the harbor of San Juan in 1508 and exclaimed, Que Rico Puerto. Maybe, a native Governor can impress us with our duty and his countrymen with the necessity of cooperative unity.

American Race Prejudice Rears Ugly Head In Islands

Pittsburg Courier
Pittsburg, Penn.

FEB 28 1942

KINGSTON, Jamaica, Feb. 26.—American authorities in Kingston have issued an order placing the Bournemouth Bath premises out of bounds for Americans in the island of Jamaica in connection with work on the air and naval base under construction at Portland Bight. This decree came from those responsible for the project, stated the organ "Public Opinion," progressive Jamaican weekly.

The order was promulgated as reports multiplied that American and Jamaican users of the club and its amenities were coming into frequent and often acrimonious differences. Some American patrons at the club are said to be specially restive about the bar being used by Jamaicans at the same time as themselves. It is reported that many, in defining their position, have used language of an offensive character.

GRAVE STATE OF AFFAIRS

Incidents at Bournemouth are only one aspect of the situation brought about by large numbers of Americans settling in the island for a long period. At May Pen in Clarendon, another and even graver state of affairs is developing.

According to well-informed sources, certain refreshment and saloon keepers and luxury-traders are becoming pointedly reluctant to serve Jamaican custmoers. The reason is that their American patronage is said to have expressed a desire to have the place more or less exclusively to themselves.

Vichy Forces West Indies to Change Street Names

FEB 28 1942

ATLANTA, Ga.—Even the "Rues" in the French West Indies now have reason to rue the defeat of France, for street names in those colonies must be in keeping with the philosophy of the Petain regime.

Town after town in Guadeloupe is seeing its traditional signposts changed. In fact the movement is so widespread that it obviously springs from administrative coercion, although a semblance of democratic procedure is maintained by reporting that the changes have been recommended by municipal councils.

No More Liberty Street

First to fall under this ax are streets bearing the now discarded names of Republique, Liberte, Egalite and Fraternite. These are giving way to Marshal Petain, Admiral Darlan, and General Huntziger Streets.

Toussaint L'Ouverture Street in Grand Bourg now bears the name of the little-known Docteur Clede; and Toussaint's betrayer, Napoleon, has seen the street named for him in Goyave become Rue Marechal Petain.

As an indication of what the Vichy authorities think of the United States, the Rue Wilson in Moule, named after our war President, is now Admiral Darlan Street.

Lescot Says War Will Aid Black Race

FEB 28 1942

WASHINGTON, D. C.—One of the most powerful voices in South America speaking for unity of Negro people today in support of the United Nations' war against Hitler and his Axis partners, Italy and Japan, is the voice of Elie Lescot, president of Haiti.

Speaking in Port-Au-Prince at a celebration marking the 138th anniversary of the island republic's independence, President Lescot said:

"The cause with which we have associated ourselves is also, and let us not forget it, the cause of the black race of which Haiti is the elder sister in this hemisphere . . . In the concept of the Fuhrer, the black man is only destined for slavery and extermination. One should then understand why this people of three millions of Negroes, joins hands with the millions of other men of the same race who inhabit this earth . . . our order of the day is to perish together or to have ourselves together."

"We have faith in the triumph of the United States of North America. We have faith in the triumph of the British arms. We have faith in the Soviet arms which God animates to crush the cowardly barbarians."

Hastie Named to Caribbean Advisory Committee By FDR

MAR 14 1942

WASHINGTON, D. C.—At the same time the American and British governments set up a Caribbean Commission, President Roosevelt named an American Caribbean Advisory Committee with Judge William H. Hastie, civilian aide to the Secretary of War, as a member.

Creation of the commission was announced in a joint communique released simultaneously in Washington and London last Monday. The purposes of the Anglo-American Caribbean Commission will be to encourage and strengthen social and economic co-operation among the possessions of the two nations in the Caribbean area. It will consist of six members, three British and three Americans.

JUDGE HASTIE

MAR 14 1942

President Roosevelt made it clear that this country will not seek sovereignty over British Western Hemisphere islands or colonies. He said that this government has no intention of requesting any modification of the 99-year lease granted by the British government to the United States for bases acquired in certain of the British colonies in the Western Hemisphere.

OTHER MEMBERS

MAR 14 1942

The President appointed Charles W. Taussig, president of the American Molasses Company, as American co-chairman of the commission. Sir Frank Stockdale will be the British co-chairman. The other American members are Governor Rexford G. Tugwell of Puerto Rico and Coert duBois, chief of the Caribbean office of the State Department.

Members of the commission, the White House announcement said, will concern themselves primarily with "matters pertaining to labor, agriculture, housing, health, education, social welfare, finance economics and related subjects in the territories under the British and United States flags within this territory, and on these matters will advise their respective governments.

MAR 14 1942

Selected as members of the Caribbean Advisory Committee were, in addition to Judge Hastie, Governor Tugwell, Judge Martin Travieso of the Puerto Rican Supreme Court, Carl Robins, formerly president of the Commodity Credit Corporation, and Mr. Taussig as chairman.

"The study to be undertaken by the Caribbean Advisory Commission relates to the economic and social problems of the very large number of human beings in the British and American islands," the White House announcement said.

Robert Quillen

The Indians, as you know, used wampum as money.

The negro genius who made himself ruler of Haiti, having no means of coining metal or printing paper, commandeered the island's gourds and used them as money. They had more actual value than most money, for they were used to make necessary household utensils.

Money, whether metal or paper, has value only because we think it has. Its true "base" is psychological. A man will pay $500 for a small piece of pure carbon called a diamond because he knows other people place a similar value upon it. So he trusts money because he knows others trust it equally and will accept it in exchange for goods or services.

Having used money all our lives, we regard it as actual wealth and think it necessary to civilization. We have made it a sacred cow, and we feel bound by the rules that govern its use, as though these rules were natural laws.

Because of these rules, our great wealth may bankrupt us. We have already accepted a debt of 150 billions, and officials tell us this is only a beginning. If the war goes on and on, the debt may rise to 500 billion or 1,000 billion—sums without meaning—and then we cannot hope ever to pay the principal or even bear the interest without endless impoverishment. We shall have strangled ourselves with an idea.

We must disregard the rules, as our enemies have done, or let our system master and break us.

It won't be easy, but we can make a start by paying no profit on war orders.

We now give corporations orders for weapons, allow them millions of profit, and then make tax laws to recover the money. If we could recover all of it, at great cost of time and labor, we should have achieved only what we could easily do by allowing no profit in the first place.

If the government paid only wages and salaries and other costs, as in its own shipyards, labor would not feel cheated of its share of the loot, for there would be none.

Why tax ourselves to raise billions; spend the money extravagantly; tax ourselves to get it back; force the cost of living higher and higher, and burden ourselves and our children's children with ruinous debt, when we could avoid it all by drafting everything and everybody for national service till the job is finished?

Anglo-American Commission To Investigate Apathy Of West Indies Towards War Effort

MAR 28 1942

On Advisory Commission

Judge WILLIAM HASTIE

Meeting at the Braithwaite Business School on Sunday, a committee of naturalized foreign born Negroes discussed the newly-created Anglo-American Caribbean Commission and delegated Attorney Lester A. Taylor to leave for Washington, D. C., in an effort to interview President Roosevelt and give expression to their views.

The Commission, composed of six persons, three from the United States and three from England, is expected to leave on a tour of the West Indian islands to investigate the apathy of West Indian Negroes to the war effort. The Commission will be accompanied by an advisory commission of three, one of whose members will be former Federal Judge William Hastie, Negro civilian aide to the Secretary of War.

Sunday's meeting was called by I. Newton Braithwaite as secretary of the Negro Foreign Born Citizens Alliance and was presided over by Dr. Charles A. Petioni, prominent physician and one-time editor of a daily newspaper in Trinidad.

The group expressed disappointment that no Negro was named as a member of the Anglo-American Commission and that the only Negro representation was on the advisory Committee. It was voted that Attorney Lester Taylor leave immediately for Washington to see President Roosevelt in an effort to persuade the President that there should be a Negro member of the Commission itself and the advisory committee should also have more than one Negro member.

MAR 28 1942

Attorney Taylor was also instructed to arrange for a conference with the President at which the following persons would appear: Attorneys Lucille Chance, Richard E. Carey, Thomas B. Dyett, Herman Stoute, Horace I. Gordon and Hope Stevens, Dr. Charles A. Petioni and Dennis A. Edwards.

American members of the Anglo-American Commission named by President Roosevelt, are Charles W. Taussig, chairman; Rexford Guy Tugwell and Coert DuBois. The British members were not named other than Sir Frank Stockdale who is co-chairman of the Commission.

Nassau Riots . . . Still Flame; Center Fired

Duke of Windsor Is Accused Of Confusing Issues

By ELLIS WILLIAMS

NEW YORK—(A N P) — The worst fire in 20 years raged for nine hours in Nassau on June 28, destroying an entire city block in which were situated the Bahamas Red Cross Center (a lily-white organization) which has been damaged previously in the riots of May 31, the Hotel Charlotte, four private homes, a pharmacy, a grocery, and seven dry-goods stores.

Damages were estimated at more than 250,000 pounds (equal to $1,000,000). The property damaged was owned primarily by white Bahamians. The origin of the fire was undetermined. It was discovered about 1:30 a.m. and in an hour the total block was enveloped in flames. Significantly enough on July 1, gasoline rationing became effective in Nassau.

The new catastrophe is but a sustained continuation of the struggle for a living wage by the black laborers at the U. S. Naval bases, under construction on the south side of the island on New Providence on which Nassau is located. That the riots and fire are interlinked is abundantly clear from the recent history of events there.

WAGE PROBLEM BACKGROUND

Without developing, at this time, the general social background which caused these disturbances to become the expression of mass contiment, the riot of May 31 was the direct result of the government's shilly-shallying with the wage problem.

Athough the daily press does not make the issue clear, the conference of the Bahamas Federation of Labor on May 30 with the government officials was but one of a long series of conferences in which the federation had been put off again and again, being told the question of wage increases was "under consideration." However, on May 30 the federation, at its wits' end, delivered an ultimatum and threatened a strike for the next day. The Duke of Windsor made clear in a later radio address that the government did not intend to move beyond giving further "consideration."

The threat was not taken seriously and the government was surprised the next day to find that instead of returning to work the black laborers had formed a parade to march down Bay street, Nassau's main thoroughfare. To a person acquainted with the peaceful mild Bahamian black man it is inconceivable that this could have caused trouble; but the government, frightened by this show of determination, commissioned Nassau's black police to break up the parade.

MAMMOTH RIOT

What began as a show of the people's right to assemble became in the words of the Nassau Daily Tribune, edited by Etienne Dupuch who gave a much more detailed picture of the riots than reached the outside world, "Bay Street was a shambles late this afternoon, with Nassau's main thoroughfare deserted except for detachments of armed troops and policemen patrolling the city. It was the aftermath of the most disastrous riot in the history of the colony. Numbers had swelled to thousands, every plate-glass window in George St., including the Red Cross center (lily-white organization), was smashed. Terrified white shopkeepers barricaded themselves in their stores and Bay street was a mass of seething black humanity. The white city was under a reign of terror.
